"In adoratione Sacramenti, ad limitem ipsum turpiter impingit. Sacramenti ait, id est Christi Domini in Sacramento, miro, sed vero modo presentis. Apage vero. Quis ei hoc dederit? Sacramenti, id est, Christi in Sacramento. Imo, Christus ipse Sacramenti res, in, et cum Sacramento; extra, et sine Sacramento, ubi ubi est adorandus est. Rex autem Christum in Eucharistia vere presentem, vere et adorandum statuit, rem scilicet Sacramenti, at non Sacramentum, terrenam scilicet partem, ut Irenæus, visibilem, ut Augustinus Nos vero et in mysteriis carnem Christi adoramus, cum Ambrosio, et non, id, sed Eum qui super altare colitur. Male enim, quid ibi colatur, querit Cardinalis, cum quis, debuit, cum Nazianzenus, Eum dicat, non id. Nec carnem manducamus, quin adoremus prius, cum Augustino, et Sacramentum tamen nullo modo adoramus."—Ad Card. Bellarmine. Apolog., pp. 266, 267.

Still more emphatic is the language of Bishop Taylor:—

"Place thyself upon thy knees in the devoutest and humblest posture of worshippers, and think not much in the lowest manner to worship the King of men and angels, the Lord of heaven and earth, the great Lover of souls, and the Saviour of the body, Him whom all the angels of God worship, Him whom thou confessest worthy of all, and whom all the world shall adore, and before whom they shall tremble at the day of judgment. For if Christ be not there after a peculiar manner, whom or whose body do we receive? But if He be present, not in mystery only, but in blessing also, why do we not worship? But all the Christians always did so from time immemorial. 'No man eats this flesh unless he first adores,' said St. Austin, 'for the wise men and barbarians did worship this body in the manger, with very much fear and reverence. Let us, therefore, who are citizens of heaven, at least not fall short of the barbarians. But thou seest Him not in the manger, but on the altar. And thou beholdest Him not in the Virgin's arms, but represented by the priest, and brought to thee in sacrifice by the Holy Spirit of God.' So St. Chrysostom argues, and accordingly this reverence is practised by the Churches of the East, and West, and South, by the Christians of India, by all the Greeks, as appears in their answer to the Cardinal of Guise, by all the Lutheran Churches, by all the world, says Erasmus, only now of late some have excepted themselves. But the Church of England chooses to follow the reason and piety of the thing itself, the example of the primitive Church, and the consenting voice of Christendom."—Worthy Commu- micant, chap. vii. sect. 1, par. 10, vol. viii., pp. 224, 225; Eden's edit.

And again :—

"One thing I desire to warn you of, that is, that these phrases (scil. in the Fathers) of 'Adorato Altari,' and 'προσκύνησεν τῇ θυσιαστροφῇ,' must be understood warily, and as they were meant; not that any divine adoration was given to the altars either relatively or transitively; but they are the metonymical expressions of the subject. For the adjuncts, adoratis altaribus, that is, adorato Christo presenti in altaribus, inclinato capite ad altare, that is, inclinato capite ad Deum ibidem atque in sacris residentem, we have good warrant to authorise this expression."—Taylor's Works, vol. v., p. 315.

I conclude my extracts from English divines with the following passage from Mr. Keble's work on Eucharistical Adoration, published in 1857 :—

"Thus we seem to have evidence irresistible that down to the beginning of the ninth century, i. e. through all the ages of comparatively unbroken unity in the Church, the body and blood of the Man Christ Jesus, of Him who is God and Man, was adored as present after consecration in the Eucharist; i. e. Christ Himself was adored as present by the presence of His body and blood. Neither the depravers of the faith on the one hand, nor the maintainers of purity of worship on the other, ever seem to have found any difficulty in that point. Who can help concluding that it came down direct from the Apostles, especially considering what I will venture to call the strong presumption made out in favour of it from Holy Scripture and natural piety? It will have been seen that both St. Ambrose and St. Augustine use expressions and arguments which would be quite unwarrantable, unless they knew the practice to be a real apostolical tradition. St. Ambrose's 'hodieque,' and St. Augustine's 'Nemo manducat, nisi qui prius adoraverit,' would be neither of them honest sayings, were they not uttered under that conviction; and their arguments, grounded as they are on the two great and simple verities of the incarnation and the real presence, are of course good for all times as well as for their own."—Pp. 112, 113.

I have noticed the historical fact that Cramer's tendencies became strongly Lutheran before he died, and that the Council of Augsburg very materially influenced the language of our Articles (Archbishop Laurence, Bampton Lectures, Lecture I.). Chemnitz, a very stout Lutheran, wrote an examination of the Council of Trent, in which examination, while he strongly condemned Transubstantiation, he defended the worship of our Lord in the holy elements. The passage is not unimportant; it is as follows :—(11).

(11) Chemnitz or Chemnitius, born 1522, died 1586. In 1554 he wrote, among other works,

"First, it must be shewn, what in this fifth chapter and sixth canon is the matter of controversy. For some things, I readily admit, are uncontroversed. For that Christ, God and Man, is to be adored, no one but an Arian denies. And that His human nature also, on account of its union with his Godhead, is to be adored, no one but a Nestorian questions. For when the Eternal Father brought the only begotten Son into the world, He saith, let all the Angels worship Him. As Matthew also plainly beareth witness (c. xxviii.) that the Apostles in Galilee worshipped Christ. It is certain, moreover, that the adoration of God is not tied to place or time (John iv., 1 Tim. ii.) Christ then at all times, and in all places, is to be adored. If then we believe, that Christ, God and Man, is, in a peculiar mode of presence and of grace, present at the celebration of His Supper, so that He there, truly and substantially, exhibits to communicants His own body and blood, whereby He willeth so to unite Himself to us, that to each who receives with faith, He, by this most precious pledge, applies and seals the gifts of the New Testament, which, through the giving up of His blood, He obtained for His Church :—if, I say, we believe these things truly, from our heart, it neither can nor ought to be but that faith should venerate and adore Christ present in that action. So Jacob (Gen. xviii.), Moses (Exod. xxxiv.), Elijah (1 Kings xix.), had no special command to worship God in those places; but since they had a general command to worship God everywhere, and were certain that God was truly present under outward and visible symbols, and that He was revealing Himself there in a special and gracious manner, they assuredly worshipped God Himself there, whom they believed to be present there. Nor would their faith have been true, if invocation or adoration, i. e. the honour due to God, had not been followed" (12).

Conclusions of fact.

I am happy to arrive at the close of the premisses from which my legal conclusion is to be drawn.

I am conscious of the great length at which these premisses have been stated, and of the charge of prolixity to which so full a statement may expose me.

But while I have had a very arduous duty to discharge, I have not had that measure of assistance which a Court of justice usually receives.

Mr. Bennett, who has caused all this litigation upon the subject of all others which ought not to be litigated, has not appeared Repetitio sana doctrina de verâ præsentia corporis et sanguinis Domini in cænâ sacrâ, Leipzig, 1554; and in 1585, Examen Concilii Tridentini, Frankfurt, 1585, which has been translated into English. This work had a great reputation.

(12) Cited in The Real Presence, by the Rev. Dr. Pusey (Oxford, 1857), pp. 334-5.

before the Court of his metropolitan to justify or defend himself.

The case has been argued on one side only.

This prosecution, it has been said, is directed against Mr. Bennett alone. But I cannot shut my eyes to the fact that I am not trying Mr. Bennett alone, but also divines eminent for piety, learning, and eloquence, whose opinions Mr. Bennett has borrowed, and in some respects caricatured, but does not allow, by the course which he has taken, to be vindicated or explained.

I have, therefore, thought myself obliged, not only to investigate according to the utmost of my power all the authorities which could throw light on the subject in dispute, but to express the result of my research with a fulness of detail which, if the case had been defended, would have been unnecessary for the purposes of justice.

I have thought it right that those who have to consider my judgment should be in possession of the authorities which have influenced it.

Being compelled to speak judicially as to the law of our Church relative to this great mystery, I hope, at least, that I have said nothing respecting the Supper of our Lord, which, in the words of our old divine and poet, may yet further tend to—

A Sacrament of war, and not of love” (13).

By the expressions, “The real, actual, and visible presence of our Lord upon the altars of our churches,” and “Who myself adore, and teach the people to adore, the consecrated elements, believing Christ to be in them—believing that under their veil is the sacred body and blood of my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ”—I have no doubt that Mr. Bennett has contravened the plain meaning and clear intent of the formularies of the Church. But he has, in a later edition, withdrawn these words, and substituted others for them:—for “the real, actual, and visible presence of our Lord upon the altars of our churches,” he substitutes, “the real, actual presence of our Lord, under the form of bread and wine, upon the altars of our churches;” and for the words, “Who myself adore, and teach the people to adore, the consecrated elements, believing Christ to be in them,” he substitutes the words, “Who myself adore, and teach the people to adore, Christ present in the Sacrament under the form of bread and wine.”

It is to be regretted that these material alterations are unaccompanied by any expressions of regret or self-reproach for the mischief which his crude and rash expressions have caused.

Mr. Bennett says—

“My meaning, and that which passed through my mind in writing the original passages, was precisely the same as that which is now conveyed in the words substituted, but as the original words were liable to a different construction from that in which I used them, I therefore most willingly in this edition adopt another formula to express my meaning. The formula now adopted, and which, without any doubt, will convey the doctrine of the real presence, as the Church would teach it, has been suggested to me by him whose name stands at the head of this pamphlet” (that is to say, the Rev. E. B. Pusey, D.D.); “one to whom the whole Church would implicitly bow and all revere. I have no hesitation in adopting his words as my own, fully and completely.”

I do not, however, sit here as a critic of style, or an arbiter of taste, or a censor of logic. I have not to try Mr. Bennett for careless language, for feeble reasoning, or superficial knowledge. It is my duty to decide whether the words in which he now expresses himself, and which he professes to have since borrowed from a profound theologian, occupying one of the highest positions in the University of Oxford, do or do not contravene the formularies of our faith.

If I were to pronounce that they did so, I should be passing sentence, in my opinion, upon a long roll of illustrious divines, who have adorned our universities and fought the good fight of our Church, from Ridley to Keble,—from the divine whose martyrdom the cross at Oxford commemorates, to the divine in whose honour that university has just founded her last college. Moreover, I could not pronounce such a sentence without disregarding judicial authority of the gravest kind.

For, as I have already observed, in Mr. Gorham's case the judge said—

“The writers whom we have cited are not always consistent with themselves, nor are the reasons upon which they found their positions always valid; and other writers of great eminence, and worthy of great respect, have expressed very different opinions. But the mere fact that such opinions have been propounded and maintained by persons so eminent, and so much respected, as well as by very many others, appears to us sufficiently to prove that the liberty which was left by the Articles and Formularies has been actually enjoyed and exercised by the members and ministers of the Church of England.”

And in Mr. Heath's case the judge said:—

“If the doctrine in question has been held without offence by eminent divines of the Church,

(13) Vide ante, note to page 75.

then, though perhaps difficult to be reconciled with the plain meaning of the Articles of Religion, still a Judge in my position ought not to impute blame to those who hold it. That which has been allowed or tolerated in the Church ought not to be questioned by this Court."

In the case of Essays and Reviews the Privy Council held that even the words "everlasting fire" might be treated by a clergyman as not denoting the eternity of punishment, regard being had to the absence of any interpretation of the words in the Formularies, to the opinion of learned men respecting the words, and to a liberty of opinion exercised on the subject by certain divines without restraint.

Now I have shown that no mode of the presence is defined by the Formularies, and by a large induction of instances that the present opinions for which Mr. Bennett is articulated are not, however loosely expressed, distinguishable in substance from those which have been maintained for many years by many great divines of our Church, and by many learned men.

Conclusions of Law—Sentence.

The conclusions of law at which I have arrived are the following:—

With respect to the first and uncorrected edition of his pamphlet, I pronounce that Mr. Bennett, by his language respecting the visible presence of our Lord, and the adoration of the consecrated elements, has contravened the law of the Church.

If Mr. Bennett had not renounced this language and substituted other for it, I must have considered whether I ought not to pass a sentence of suspension upon him, accompanied by a monition to abstain from such language.

The question is not now before me whether this retraction of Mr. Bennett would have sufficed to satisfy the severe provisions of the statute of Elizabeth (13 Eliz. c. 12), but whether this retraction, however ungraciously made, be not sufficient under the general law to indicate that he has finally abandoned the unlawful expressions which he had used.

I think on the whole they are sufficient for this purpose.

With respect to the second and corrected edition of his pamphlet, and the other work for which he is articulated, I say that the objective, actual, and real presence, or the spiritual, real presence, a presence external to the act of the communicant, appears to me to be the doctrine which the Formularies of our Church, duly considered and construed so as to be harmonious, intended to maintain. But I do not lay down this as a position of law, nor do I say that what is called the receptionist doctrine is inadmissible; nor do I pronounce on any other teaching with respect to the mode of presence. I mean to do no such thing by this judgment. I mean by it to pronounce only that to describe the mode of presence as objective, real, actual, and spiritual, is certainly not contrary to law.

With respect to the other charges, namely those relating to Sacrifice and Worship, I pronounce that Mr. Bennett has not exceeded the liberty which the law allows upon these subjects.

I make no order as to costs.

Ecclesiastical Law — Practice — Church Discipline Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 86) — Promoter, Death of.

In a proceeding under the Church Discipline Act at the suit of a promoter, judgment was given in the Arches Court, and the promoter appealed to Her Majesty in Council. After the appeal was filed and before hearing, the promoter died. On motion to substitute a parishioner in the place of the original promotor:—Held, that it is the duty of the Court before which proceedings are pending, when a promotor dies, to allow a proper promotor to be substituted in the place of the original promotor.

This was a motion arising upon an appeal from a decree of the Dean of the Arches Court of Canterbury, in a cause of the office of the Judge depending in the said Court, promoted by Charles James Elphinstone, of Brighton, in the county of Sussex, deceased, against the Rev. John Purchas, clerk, the perpetual curate of the church of St. James at Brighton.

The cause was promoted in the Arches Court by letters of request from the Right Rev. Ashurst Turner, late Lord

* Present, the Archbishop of York (Dr. Thomson), Lord Cairns, Sir J. Collville, and Sir R. Phillimore.

Bishop of Chichester; and by the articles admitted in the said cause the said John Purchas was charged with various offences against the laws ecclesiastical.

The said John Purchas did not appear in the said cause, and the proceedings were carried on by default; and afterwards the judge of the said Court of Arches duly pronounced that the said John Purchas had offended in certain particulars against the laws ecclesiastical, and admonished him accordingly, and condemned him in the costs.

The promoter, the said Charles James Elphinstone, appealed from this decree upon certain matters in the petition of appeal particularly alleged, and upon which the judge of the said Court of Arches omitted or declined to pronounce that the said John Purchas had offended against the laws ecclesiastical.

The appeal was duly filed on the 16th of February, 1870, and the usual citation was served on the Rev. John Purchas and on the registrar of the Arches Court.

The appellant, Charles James Elphinstone, died on the 30th March, 1870.

Henry Hebbert, Esq., of Brighton, now moved to be admitted and substituted as promoter of the office of the Judge in the said appeal in the place and stead of the said Charles James Elphinstone, deceased.

An affidavit was filed in support of the motion by the solicitor of the said Charles James Elphinstone, the original promoter, stating, that the representatives of the said Charles James Elphinstone were unwilling themselves to continue the suit, and that it was their desire that the said Hebbert should be substituted as promoter in the place of the said Charles James Elphinstone, deceased.

Mr. A. J. Stephens and Dr. Tristram in support of the motion.—It is necessary for the prosecution of this appeal that a promoter of the office of the judge should be substituted in the place of the original promoter. The proceedings have abated by the death of the promoter. It is the duty of all Courts before which proceedings of a criminal character are pending to substitute a fit person to carry on such proceedings. This has been laid down in purely criminal proceedings, where the prosecutor dies pending the proceedings—Chitty's Criminal Law (1), Regina v. Ellers (2), Regina v. Quayle (3). These proceedings were in the nature of criminal proceedings. The practice must, therefore, be the same as in proceedings in which the Crown is the prosecutor. This is not a question for the discretion of those before whom proceedings are pending. Any person interested may require debito justitie to be allowed to continue the suit. The case of Sherwood v. Ray (4), relied upon by the respondent, is no doubt an authority that the question whether the office of the judge should be promoted is a matter for the discretion of the bishop; but the bishop has exercised discretion and has sanctioned proceedings. The case of Sherwood v. Ray (4) was decided previous to the passing of the Church Discipline Act. Regina v. The Archbishop of Canterbury (5) is an authority that the bishop having exercised his discretion and permitted his office to be promoted, cannot afterwards refuse to allow his office to be further continued. In this case, however, the bishop thought the suit ought to be instituted, and that the original promoter was a proper person to promote the proceedings. Proceedings having been permitted by the bishop, it was not competent for him to withdraw his assent; besides the proceedings are now before this tribunal; at all events it is a matter for the discretion of this committee. The applicant is a proper person to continue the proceedings.

(They referred to a collection of Ecclesiastical Appeals by Mr. Rothery; Ayliffes Parergon, The Dean of Jersey v. The Rector of — (6), Liddell v. Beal (7), Sumner v. Wix (8), Cousin's Ecclesiastical Law.)

The Solicitor General (Sir J. Coleridge) and Mr. Charles for the respondent.—The suit was finally determined by the death of the promoter. No doubt the suit may be revived by the substitution of another person to promote the office of the judge; but it cannot be contended that the applicant or any other person is entitled to be substituted "debito justitie," as contended by the counsel for the applicant; on the contrary we contend that the suit ought to be finally determined by the decease of the original promoter. The applicant is a perfect stranger to the suit. He cannot be said to have any locus standi whatever. The present bishop is a total stranger to the suit. It may be that the present bishop might decline to allow the office of the judge to be promoted in this suit, and even if the present ordinary thought fit to sanction the proceedings, he might not consider the present applicant a proper person to promote the suit. It might be contended that the executors of a promoter ought to be allowed to come in and proceed in the suit, because there is no other way of obtaining costs for the estate of the original promoter. It is said that this is a criminal proceeding, and that by analogy to proceedings in which the Crown is the prosecutor, the suit ought to be continued notwithstanding the death of the promoter. The proceedings under the Church Discipline Act are only criminal in their consequences to the person charged. The public are not directly interested in the prosecution. The office of the judge does not appear on the record. Whenever a person is separately authorised in the first instance to take proceedings, those proceedings must terminate on the death of the person authorised. The argument upon the merits in this case is clearly against this application. The respondent's chapel is a mere proprietary chapel. It is not a parish church or a chapel of ease. The applicant is only a volunteer. He need not attend the services of the respondent.

Mr. Stephens in reply.

Cur. adv. vult.

SIR ROBERT PHILLIMORE delivered the judgment of their Lordships.

This was a cause of the office of the Judge promoted by Colonel Charles James Elphinstone, a parishioner of Brighton, against the Rev. John Purchas, perpetual curate of the chapel of St. James in that borough. The Lord Bishop of Chichester sent the case, in the first instance, by letters of request, to be tried in the Court of Arches. Mr. Purchas was charged with having offended against the laws ecclesiastical by the use of certain rites and ceremonies which were set forth in the criminal articles exhibited against him. Mr. Purchas did not appear in that Court, and the cause was heard in pœnam. The Dean of the Arches pronounced that Mr. Purchas had offended against the law with respect to some of the charges, admonished him to abstain from the use of certain rites and ceremonies which were the subject of those charges, decreed a monition to issue against him, and condemned him in the costs incurred by the proof of those charges. But with respect to the charges contained in other articles, the Court held that they were not proved, and declined to admonish Mr. Purchas, or issue any monition with respect to them.

From this sentence the promoter appealed on the 16th of February, 1870; and, having extracted the usual inhibition and citation, served them on Mr. Purchas on the 26th of February, and on the Registrar of the Arches Court on the 28th of February.

On the 22nd of March the inhibition and citation were returned, and the Process of the Arches Court was filed in the registry of this Court. On the 30th of March the promoter died.

On the 20th of April Mr. Henry Hebbert, a parishioner of Brighton, executed a proxy authorizing the proctors of the late promoter to carry on the proceedings in his name and on his behalf; and they now pray their Lordships that Mr. Hebbert may be admitted and substituted as a promoter in the place of the late Charles James Elphinstone.

Mr. Purchas, being served with a notice of this motion, has appeared by counsel before their Lordships and contended that the suit was determined by the death of the promoter and ought not to be revived, and that Mr. Hebbert ought not to be substituted as a promoter.

It was admitted, on the one hand, by the prayer of Mr. Hebbert, what indeed could not be disputed, that the criminal suit had abated by the death of the promoter; and it was admitted, on the other hand, by the counsel for Mr. Purchas, that the suit could be revived by the substitution of a promoter of a particular character. The principal question which has arisen for their Lordships' consideration is, whether the substituted promoter must be clothed with that particular character, or whether it be not ex debito justitiæ to admit any proper person who applies to the Court for permission to carry on the suit; and, if this be so, there remains the subordinate question whether Mr. Hebbert be a proper person.

In order to give a satisfactory answer to the first question, it becomes necessary to make some observations as to the nature of the suit. All criminal proceedings in the Ecclesiastical Courts are carried on in a certain sense by the exercise of the office of the Judge: it may be exercised in two ways by the Ordinary—that is, by the Judge himself, ex officio mero, or by the Judge at the instance of another party, ex officio promoto. The proceedings in this case belong to the latter category.

It was decided by their Lordships in the case of Sherwood v. Ray (4), which was one of great importance, and very carefully considered by the eminent judges who sat upon it, among whom was Sir John Nicholl, perfectly acquainted with the practice of the Ecclesiastical Courts, that the promotion of the office of the Judge, though generally permitted as a matter of course, cannot be demanded ex debito justitiæ.

Subsequently to this decision, the statute 3 and 4 Vict. c. 87, was passed. By the 13th section it was enacted "that it shall be lawful for the bishop, if he shall think fit," either to issue a commission of inquiry, or, in the first instance, to send the case by letters of request to the Superior Court.

In the case of Regina v. Archbishop of Canterbury (5), the Queen's Bench held that, when the bishop had once issued a commission at the instance of a promoter, the bishop could not refuse to allow his office to be further promoted.

In the case of Regina v. Bishop of Chester (9), the Queen's Bench refused to compel by mandamus the issue of a commission of inquiry, at the instance of a person who was unconnected with the parish or diocese; and Mr. Justice Wightman expressed a strong opinion that, under the general law, and under the words of the statute, the bishop had an absolute discretion to allow or refuse his office to be promoted in the first instance.

In the present instance, however, it appears that the local Ordinary, the Bishop of Chichester, thought both that the cause was one which, on the ground of public interest, ought to be instituted, and also that a proper person had applied for leave to promote the office of Judge. He, moreover, availed himself of the provision of the statute to send the case by letters of request to be tried in the superior court of the province.

Having taken this course, it was not competent to his Lordship, according to the decision to which we have referred, to stay or prevent the further prosecution of the suit. The Court of the province had alone jurisdiction over the matter, while the trial was pending before it; and this Appellate Court having duly inhibited the Court below, and duly cited the defendant to appear before it, has now exclusive jurisdiction over the suit. To this Court, therefore, the application has been properly made.

The precedents on the subject are not numerous; they are principally furnished from the records of the Court of Delegates, whose authority has been transferred to this tribunal. It was not the habit of the Delegates to deliver reasons for their judgment; and there are no printed reports of the cases which they decided, or of the arguments of counsel which were addressed to them. It is, however, to be collected from the records with which their Lordships have been furnished by the industry and research of the registrar of ecclesiastical and maritime appeals, that suits which have abated by reason of the death of the promoter have been revived by the appointment of a new promoter in several cases in which the promoter was respondent and died pending the appeal. In these cases the executor of the original promoter appears to have been substituted as a new promoter, on the ground probably of his having an interest in the costs which the testator promotor had obtained by the judgment appealed from; and on the same principle the executors of the promotor have been allowed to take out a monition to enforce a decree for costs already obtained.

There are also cases, both in the Delegates and in the Court of Arches, in which an appellant promotor, who was an official person, a churchwarden in one case and a mayor in the other, having died pending the appeal, a new official promotor was appointed by the Court. It is true that in the year 1781, on an appeal from the Consistory of York before the Delegates, the promotor having died pending the appeal, the Delegates assigned the cause for hearing (ad informandum in jure) on the legal question, "whether by law the office of the Ordinary has not such a concern in all prosecutions of a spiritual nature that a proper promotor may be permitted on any emergency to carry on the cause either in the first instance or the appeal?" Eventually they dismissed the appeal, but on the special ground that the promotor had died before the inhibition and citation were returned; in other words, the jurisdiction of the Court appealed from remained, and the jurisdiction of the Appellate Court was never founded, as it has been in the case which is being now considered.

Their Lordships are unable to discover any sound distinction in principle between these precedents and the case which is now before us. There seems no good ground for the proposition that the power of the Court to appoint a new promotor is limited to the two categories of a deceased promotor whose representative has a pecuniary interest, or of a deceased promotor who was clothed with an official character.

The cases of the Dean of Jersey v. the Rector of—(6), and Liddell v. Beal (7), decided in this Court, and that of Sumner v. Wis (8), decided in the Court of Arches, though in some respects distinguishable from the present, tend to support the principle of the substitution of a new promotor where the former one has died during the progress of the suit.

Criminal ecclesiastical suits ought not to be, and, it must be presumed, would not be allowed to be instituted in the first instance by the Ordinary, who has full control in limine over the subject, unless the public interest requires their institution. But it would be a great evil if, after the due institution, under proper authority, of such suits, the course of justice with respect to them could be arrested on any technical or formal ground.

If this were the legal doctrine, an immoral or heretical clerk in holy orders might escape a sentence against him which the welfare of the Church demanded, because the promotor of the office, happening to be a private person, had died before the cause was tried. We are satisfied that such a doctrine is contrary to the analogy to be derived from other systems of law in this country, and is not founded on the practice or principle of ecclesiastical law, when thoroughly examined and properly understood.

We are of opinion, therefore, that it is the duty of the Court before which proceedings are pending when the promotor dies, to allow a proper promotor to be substituted in his place.

The subordinate question only remains, whether Mr. Hebbert, who is proposed as the new promotor, be a proper person to discharge that office.

In deciding this point we are not embarrassed by the consideration whether the personal representative of Colonel Elphinstone might not have a prior claim, if he desired it, to this office. No such personal representative is before us, or has made any application to this Court. Indeed, it would appear that he has no intention of doing so.

It appears to their Lordships that Mr. Hebbert, a parishioner of Brighton, is a proper person to be substituted as a promotor in this case. And they will humbly tender to Her Majesty, in a proper form, their advice to this effect.

ABATEMENT OF SUIT—office of Judge voluntarily promoted by Bishop of diocese: resignation of see by Bishop: amendment of title—The Bishop of the diocese in which the accused clerk held preferment sent the cause in the first instance, by letters of request, to the Court of Arches. The Court accepted the letters of request, and issued a decree calling upon the defendant to appear. The defendant appeared, and after the articles had been brought in and admitted, the Bishop, who was the promoter of the cause, resigned his see:—Held, that the cause had not abated by reason of such resignation, and leave was granted to amend the title of the cause by altering the designation of the promoter. The Bishop of Winchester v. Wis, 22

ARTICLES—charging heresy by contravening the formularies of the Church and the homilies—Articles exhibited against a clergyman for maintaining, &c., doctrine contrary to that of the Church of England, after charging that the doctrine complained of was contrary to certain Articles of Religion, and certain parts of the Book of Common Prayer and of the Homilies, set out the particular Articles and portions of the Prayer Book, and proceeded as follows: "the doctrines, positions, or teachings, declared and taught in which said Articles of Religion, parts of the Book of Common Prayer, and Formularies of the said Church, are also more largely expressed in the godly and wholesome doctrine necessary for these times, contained in the following passages from the 1st and 2nd Book of the Homilies, namely, &c.":—Held, that the articles might be admitted to proof in the above form. Noble v. Voysey, 21

DOCTRINE—of the Holy Eucharist: real presence: Eucharistic sacrifice: adoration—The doctrine of a visible presence of our Lord in the Holy Eucharist is at variance with all the formularies of the Church of England upon the subject, at variance with the language of the service of the Holy Communion, of the 28th Article of Religion, and of the Catechism; but to describe the mode of presence as "objective, real, actual, and spiritual" is not contrary to the law. Sheppard v. Bennett, 68

It is lawful for a clergyman to speak in some sense of the "Eucharistic Sacrifice," and therefore in some sense also of the "sacrifice offered by the priest," and the "sacrificial character" of the holy table. And where, when treating of the doctrine of sacrifice, a clerk in holy orders used language which was consistent with the doctrine of a sacrament of commemoration, and did not necessarily imply a sacrifice of propitiation, it was held that he had not exceeded the liberty of expression which the law allows upon the subject. Ibid.

The adoration of the spiritual presence of Christ in the Eucharist may lawfully be maintained. And a clerk in holy orders does not contravene the law of the Church in thus speaking of the Eucharist: "Who myself adore and teach the people to adore Christ present in the sacrament, under the form of bread and wine, believing that under their veil is the sacred body and blood of my Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ." Ibid.

HOMILIES—Contravening. See Articles.

LETTERS OF REQUEST—jurisdiction of Arches Court: articles: additional charge of heresy not specified in the letters of citation—In a proceeding under the Church Discipline Act against a clerk in holy orders, for publishing and maintaining certain heretical doctrines, a commission issued and reported that there was sufficient prima facie ground for further inquiry. The Bishop of the diocese in which the defendant held preferment sent the case by letters of request to the Court of Arches. The letters of request recited the proceedings before the Commissioners, and set out several extracts from works published by the defendant which in substance comprised the heretical doctrine which he was charged with maintaining, namely, "The actual presence of Our Lord in the Sacrament of the Lord's Supper; the visible presence of Our Lord upon the Altar or Table of the Holy Communion; that there is a sacrifice at the time of the celebration of the Eucharist; and that adoration or worship is due to the consecrated elements of the Lord's Supper." A citation (limited to the charges set forth in the letters of request) having being served upon the defendant, the promoter brought in articles which in addition to the charges which had been the subject of inquiry before the Commissioners, further charged the defendant with maintaining and promulgating the heretical doctrine, "that the wicked eat the Body of Christ in the use of the Lord's Supper":—Held, firstly, that the jurisdiction of the Court was founded on and limited by the charges laid before the Commissioners, and that it had no authority to deal with any charges which were not laid before them. Secondly, that the charge of maintaining the doctrine of the "reception by the wicked" was a distinct and separate charge; and as such charge had not been preferred before the Commissioners, nor specified in the letters of request or citation, the articles were ordered to be reformed by striking out all that related to it. Sheppard v. Bennett, 1

And on appeal to the Privy Council, it was held that the Commission is a preliminary step for the purpose of advising the bishop whether there is a prima facie case; that the letters of request are for the purpose of founding jurisdiction in the higher Court. That the citation must state generically the offence charged so that the accused may know the nature of the offence he is called upon to answer, and that the citation was sufficient to enable the promoter to introduce into the articles a charge of impugning the 29th Article of religion.

Also that when in support of a charge of heresy, articles filed in the Arches Court set out passages from the works of the accused, in which he expressed approval of the works of certain other writers alleged to contain heretical doctrine, the articles must set forth passages from the works of the accused in which he has maintained heretical doctrine; that it is not sufficient to set out passages in which the accused has expressed a general approval of other works, but which he has not approved in their totality. Sheppard v. Bennett (P.C.), 59

MONITION—disobedience to: elevation of cup and paten and kneeling or prostration during Holy Communion—On appeal from the Arches Court in a proceeding under the Church Discipline Act, the respondent, a clerk in orders, was monished to abstain from the elevation of the cup and paten, during the administration of the Holy Communion, and from kneeling or prostrating himself before the consecrated elements during the prayer of consecration. On a motion to enforce obedience to such monition, it appeared that the sentence of the Arches Court, which was affirmed by the Judicial Committee of the Privy Council, monished the respondent not to elevate the elements "above the head of the respondent," and that the respondent had literally obeyed that monition. Their Lordships intimated, that any elevation as distinguished from the mere act of removing the elements from the table, and taking them into the hands of the minister, is not sanctioned by law. Martin v. Mackonochie (P.C.), 11

It further appeared, that the respondent bowed one knee at certain parts of the prayer of consecration, to an extent that it, occasionally, touched the ground:—Held, that such a bowing of the knee was a breach of the monition, and that it is not necessary that a person should touch the ground, in order to perform an act of reverence. Ibid.

PRACTICE—death of promoter of proceedings under Church Discipline Act—In a proceeding under the Church Discipline Act at the suit of a promoter, judgment was given in the Arches Court, and the promoter appealed to Her Majesty in Council. After the appeal was filed and before hearing, the promoter died. On motion to substitute a parishioner in the place of the original promoter:—Held, that it is the duty of the Court before which proceedings are pending, when a promoter dies, to allow a proper promoter to be substituted in the place of the original promoter. Elphinstone v. Purchas, P.C. 124

UTES AND CEREMONIES—"gospel lights:" use of lighted candles on "re-table" during celebration of Holy Communion: incense—In a proceeding under the Church Discipline Act, the defendant, a clerk in orders, was charged with having caused or permitted two lighted candles to be held, one on each side of the priest, when reading the Gospel, such lighted candles not being then required for the purposes of giving light:—Held, an addition to the rites or ceremonies prescribed by the law, and therefore unlawful. Sumner v. Wir, 25

It was proved in a proceeding under the Church Discipline Act, that the defendant, a clerk in orders, during the celebration of the Holy Communion, used lighted candles which were placed on a "re-table," being a piece of furniture distinct from and standing behind the Holy Table, when such lighted candles were not wanted for the purpose of giving light; and that he also used incense for censuring persons and things immediately before and after the celebration of the Eucharist:—Held, that the use of the lighted candles was illegal, whether regarded as falling under the category of "ceremonies" or "ornaments;" and that the use of the incense was also unlawful, as being subsidiary and preparatory to the celebration of the Holy Communion. Ibid.

County Court Jurisdiction—Costs—31 & 32 Vict. c. 71. s. 9—Damage exceeding 300l.—Limited liability less than 300l.

A vessel was arrested in the Court of Admiralty, in a cause of damage for losses exceeding 300l. The defendants admitted their liability, and paid into Court 252l., the amount of their statutory liability at 8l. per ton:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of proceeding in the Admiralty Court.

This was a cause of damage by the owners of a vessel called the Redjacket, against the owners of the Young James. The defendants paid into Court 252l., the amount of their statutory liability at 8l. per ton. The plaintiffs had accepted this tender, reserving the question of costs, and now moved the Court to decree that the money be paid out to them, with costs, and to give them a certificate under section 9 of the County Court Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, 31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, if one was necessary to entitle them to costs. The action was originally commenced in the sum of 1,000l., and it was admitted that the plaintiffs' actual loss exceeded 300l., which is the limit of the jurisdiction of the County Court. The section above referred to enacts that, "If any person shall take any proceedings in the Court of Admiralty which he might have taken in a County Court, and shall not recover a sum exceeding the amount to which the jurisdiction of the County Court is limited, he shall not be entitled to costs, unless the judge of the Court of Admiralty, or of a Superior Court before whom the cause is tried or heard, certifies it was proper to be tried in the Court of Admiralty or Superior Court."

E. C. Clarkson for the plaintiffs.—The plaintiffs' claim exceeded the amount over which the County Court had jurisdiction, and had they brought their action in a County Court they would have been estopped from getting more than the amount for which they could have entered their action. They were entitled to sue for the whole amount of damage; it was for the defendants to prove the value of their ship and their right to limited liability, and they could do so only in this Court.

E. G. Gibson.—The true construction of the section is that the sum recovered is the test to determine whether proceedings might have been taken in a County Court, and this has always been held to be the rule in construing similar enactments—Woodhams v. Newman (1), Emery v. Binns (2). Otherwise a plaintiff would only have to exaggerate his claim in order to oust the jurisdiction of the inferior Court. The plaintiffs' legal claim has never exceeded the sum to which alone they now admit they are entitled; and as the Court has not heard the case, or tried it, it has no power to grant a certificate, and the circumstances do not entitle the plaintiffs to have one—Waylett v. Wyndham (3).

Cour. adv. vult.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE (on Nov. 9, after stating the facts) said.—These proceedings might, it is argued, have been taken in a County Court, and therefore the plaintiffs are not entitled to costs, and are liable to be condemned in costs; and it is further contended that it is not competent to the Court to certify for costs in this case, inasmuch as the cause has not been "tried or heard."

Upon the first question, I was referred to an analogous enactment as to costs contained in the 129th section of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, which relates to actions for small debts brought in the Superior Courts; and there the words are, "for which a plaint might have been entered, etc.," and for the construction of these words I was referred to two cases, Woodhams v. Newman (1); and Emery v. Binns (2), on the interpretation of a similar clause in a Jamaica Act. I entirely assent to the principle of both these decisions, which is in effect that the words, "for which a plaint might have been entered," must refer to an amount justly or properly claimed, and that it is not competent to a plaintiff to release himself from the restraint of the Act, by entering an exorbitant claim, and so ousting the jurisdiction of the County Court, and then, after the claim has been so ousted, reducing the amount to a sum which, if it had been originally claimed, would have brought it within the jurisdiction of the County Court. But it was contended on behalf of the plaintiffs by Mr. Clarkson, in a clear and able argument, that neither the words of the statute nor the principle of these cases were hostile to the claim of his client,—not the words of the statute, because in this case the proceedings might not have been taken in a County Court, inasmuch as the damage done to the Redjacket amounted to 800*l.*, and by the Common Law the Young James was liable for that sum; the amount of claim, therefore, exceeded the jurisdiction of the County Court.

After the suit was instituted in this Court, however, the defendants availed themselves of the provision contained in the 34th section of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63 (the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862), and limited their liability to 8*l.* per ton, in order to do which it was necessary, according to the practice of this Court, that they should make an affidavit that the damage had occurred without the actual fault or privity of the owners, so as to bring them within the protection of the Act; and it was not till after this limitation of liability had been claimed, which limitation could not in this case have been claimed in the County Court, that the claim was reduced below the amount of 300*l.*; and in fact it is analogous to the case of a demand reduced by a set-off, to which it was held, in Woodhams v. Newman (1), the statute did not apply. In Emery v. Binns (2) no question of set-off or of limitation of liability subsequent to the institution of the suit arose.

I am of opinion that this cause was properly instituted in this Court; it becomes, therefore, unnecessary to consider that part of the argument which relates to my inability to certify for costs, inasmuch as the case has not been "heard or tried" before me, and to the authority cited Waylett v. Wyndham (3). I pronounce for the prayer of the plaintiffs in this case, including thereby the condemnation of the defendants in costs.

Damage—Limitation of Liability—Date from which Interest is to be computed.

In all cases of limitation of liability for damage done by any ship, interest will be given upon the limited amount from the date of the collision.

This was a suit by the owners of the steamship Northumbria, the wrong-doing vessel, to limit their liability to the amount fixed by statute. The owners of the Hesperia, the vessel damaged, and the owners of the cargo on board the Hesperia, applied to the Court for costs, and interest upon the limited amount from the time of the collision, and the following questions were raised:—1. Whether any interest should be paid? 2. If so, from what period it should be reckoned?

Butt and Stevenson for the plaintiffs.—No interest is payable in matters of collision until the amount of the damages has been assessed. No Court can award damages in cases of tort, except upon the authority of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42, and that statute does not apply to cases of collision at sea; but, even if the statute does apply, interest cannot be awarded, because interest is damages. The 28th section of 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42. only deals with actions on matters of contract. The 29th section only refers to cases of tort, and there are but two classes of tort in which interest can be given, viz. trespass in trover and trespass de bonis asportatis—Mayne on Damages, 69; i. Chitty on Pleading, 412; and see Sedgwick on Damages, 443, for the difference between English and American cases. By the Common Law of England, apart from the statute, no Court can give interest. Interest, if payable at all, can only be recovered as damages, and the Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862, s. 54, by the words “shall not be answerable in damages,” defines the extent of the liability—Mayne, p. 69; Sedgwick, 433, 446. What is the authority for giving damages in this Court? In The Amalia (1), Dr. Lushington based his judgment on the Dundee (2). The Dundee is no authority in such a case as the Amalia. The Dundee turns on the statute 53 Geo. 3. c. 159. s. 1. If, however, interest can be given, then the question will arise, from what time it is to be reckoned—Mayne on Damages, c. iv. p. 69; Higgins v. Sargent (3); i. Chitty on Pleading, 412. The decision in The Amalia is that limited liability has nothing to do with the question of interest, and that interest is not payable from the date of the collision, but from the time when the ship would, in all probability, have arrived at her port of destination—Nixon v. Roberts (4), Straker v. Hartland (5).

Even if the interest is payable for the ship there can be no interest upon freight, which is interest upon the ship-owner's capital—the ship. Interest upon interest cannot be paid—Attwood v. Taylor (6). In The Amalia (2) and Straker v. Hartland (5) there was delay, in this case there was none—The Minna (7). In equity the defendants are not damaged by the non-payment of money into Court; because it is the practice not to pay interest upon money paid into Court. The owners of cargo are paid by bills at three or four months' date, which could be discounted; and in the ordinary course they would get no money until the ship arrived at her port of destination.

E. O. Clarkson for the ship.—The question is not as to the practice at Common Law, but what has been done in this Court. In every case in this Court interest has been given from the date of collision, when it has been demanded. The practice of the Court proceeds out of the nature of the suit, and interest springs from the lien which comes into existence at the moment of the collision—Harmar v. Bell (8), The Dundee (3); The General Iron Screw Colliery Company v. Schurmanns (9); The African Steamship Company v. Swanzy (10); The Bold Buccleugh (11); Nixon v. Roberts (12). It is true that the Acts limiting the liability do not give damages in express terms, but they do not withhold them; and the legislature, when the last acts were passed, must have been aware that interest had been given in the Courts of Chancery and in this Court. Some interest is therefore payable. But from what date? Ordinarily from the end of the voyage; but that is because the freight is not earned until then. Those are cases not of limited liability but in which the plaintiff gets the whole of his claim. In a suit for limitation the amount for which the wrong-doer is liable does not represent the whole damage but only that for which he is liable. The statutory liability is at once due, and ought to be paid at the moment of the collision, from which time the interest on the limited amount should be paid—Spirit of the Ocean (13). The duration of the voyage has nothing to do with regard to the effects of the passengers or crew; and the owners of cargo lose the use of the cargo from the time of the collision; interest is given in the Courts of Chancery from the date of the collision—Saemy v. Briggs; and Bustin v. Glasebrook (14).

Gainsford Bruce for the owners of cargo. —The Common Law is always very restricted in the payment of interest—Lindley's translation of Thibaut, s. 171. Interest is payable in every case of delay—Eagleton v. East India Company (15); The Tyne Commissioners v. The General Steam Navigation Company (16). Interest is a claim of damage for not getting the £l. per ton at the moment of the collision, when the wrong was done. But even if the ship should get interest only from the date of her probable arrival at her port of destination this rule cannot apply to the owners of cargo.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE (on Nov. 23).—It is not disputed that the practice of this Court has been invariable as to allowing interest; but it is contended that this practice is erroneous, at variance with the Common Law, both before and since the passing of the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42, and, moreover, opposed to the enactments of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63 (Merchant Shipping Act Amendment Act, 1862). I was referred to the case of Higgins v. Sargeant (1), and to Chitty on Pleading, to shew that, with certain exceptions, no interest was allowed at Common Law in cases of contract nor in cases of tort; and that it was not until the passing of 3 & 4 Will. 4. c. 42, (an Act for the further Amendment of the Law and the better advancement of Justice,) that in certain actions the jury could give damages in the nature of interest (s. 29), and that in these instances the wrong-doer had not destroyed but taken possession of the goods, and, therefore, the legislature allowed interest to be recovered.

If it were necessary to examine this proposition I should find it difficult to reconcile it with the recent case of The British Columbia Saw Mill Company v. Nettleship (17). But it appears to me quite a sufficient answer to these authorities to say, that the Admiralty Court, in the exercise of an equitable jurisdiction, has proceeded upon another and a different principle from that on which the Common Law authorities appear to be founded. The principle adopted by the Admiralty Court has been that of the civil law,—that interest was always due to the obligee, when payment was not made ex mora of the obligor, and that whether the obligation arose ex contractu or ex delicto. The American common law has been more liberal than the English. Mr. Sedgwick in his work on Damages (4th edition), p. 443, remarks, "There is considerable conflict and contradiction between the English and American cases on this subject. But, as a general thing, it may be said that while the tribunals of the former country restrict themselves generally to those cases where an agreement to pay interest can be proved or inferred, the courts of the United States, on the other hand, have shewn themselves more liberally disposed, making the allowance of interest more nearly to depend on the equity of the case, and not requiring either an express or implied promise to sustain the claim." I have now to consider whether the practice of this Court has been affected on this point by the limitation of liability Acts. In the case of The Dundee (3), Lord Stowell decided that the statute 53 Geo. 3. c. 159. s. 1, limiting the liability of owners to the value of the ship, and appurtenances and freight, applies only to the original claim for damage, and does not extend to costs and interest. The words of the statute on which Lord Stowell gave his decision were substantially, and for the purposes of this case, the same as those of 25 & 26 Vict. c. 63 (the statute invoked on this occasion) unless the words in the 54th section, "shall not be answerable in damages" (which are identical with those of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104. s. 504) constitute a difference. The contention is, that interest is part of the damages, and that therefore the Court is precluded by the statute from giving it, in addition to the statutory limitation of 8l. per ton. The answer to this contention appears to me conclusive. First, if it were necessary, I should be inclined to dispute the proposition; but, in truth, the application of it is at variance both with the decided cases in the Court of Chancery as well as in the Court of Admiralty, and with the principle on which they are founded; that principle being that the lien attaches from the moment when the injury has been inflicted — The Bold Buccleugh (11).

(17) 37 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) C.P. 235.

The cases in the Court of Chancery of The African Steamship Company v. Swanzy (10), The General Iron Screw Colliery Company v. Schurmanns (9), and Nixon v. Roberts (12) were decided upon the provisions of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104. s. 504, and I think it was well remarked by Mr. Clarkson that the legislature, when it passed the subsequent and last Merchant Shipping Act, must be taken to have been aware of these decisions; and in this last Merchant Shipping Act the words of the former act, "shall not be answerable for damages," are repeated, without any provision that they shall be deemed to include interest. The cases under this last act are Straker v. Hartland (5), in the Court of Chancery, and The Amalia (2), in the Court of Admiralty, the best report of which appears to be contained in a note at p. 164 of 5 New Rep. In all these cases in the Court of Chancery it is to be observed that they have avowedly followed the practice of the Court of Admiralty.

I arrive, therefore, without hesitation at the conclusion that, notwithstanding the statutes of limitation, some interest is payable on the limited amount, and I entirely agree with the observations of Wood, V.C., in Straker v. Hartland (5): "It was quite clear that justice required that a debt which was due, but the payment of which was delayed, shall carry interest."

The important question remains to be considered, as to which, perhaps, there may be more doubt, namely, the period from which the interest is to be reckoned. In order to arrive at a clear understanding on this point it is necessary to consider the practice under the old law and the practice since the statutes of limitation. The practice under the old law, which decreed a restitutio in integrum, by the wrong-doer to the sufferer, was as follows:—In the case of a vessel sunk with a cargo on board, the restitutio in integrum was effected by a calculation of the probable value of the ship at the end of her voyage, and of the freight which she would have earned, making at the same time certain deductions as to the expenses which the owner must have incurred in order to complete the voyage, such as the wages of the crew, &c., and also making a deduction for discount, if the value found were paid before the probable end of the voyage; and a converso giving interest on the value, if not paid at the probable end of the voyage. In the event of the vessel sunk having no cargo, then interest upon the value of the ship from the day of the collision was given, the reason being that, in the former case, by giving freight you had really given the interest on the use of the vessel during the interval between the collision and her arrival in port, whereas in the case of there being no cargo, there was no freight to represent the interest, and it was therefore expressly given. So that, in the first case, to have given interest as well as freight would have been to place the sufferer in a better position than he would have been but for the collision; and, in the second case, to have refused him interest would be to place him in a worse position on account of the collision than he would otherwise have been in; whereas the principle of restitutio in integrum is to replace the sufferer in the condition in which he was at the time when the wrong was done to him.

The question is how are these principles affected by the statutes which limit the liability of the wrong-doer. In these statutes the legislature introduced a new principle, the object of which was to give some protection to the owner against the wrong doing of his servant, the master of the vessel.

They preserved the principle of restitutio in integrum in cases where, "with his actual fault and privity," the damage had been inflicted on the sufferer; but, with this exception, they limited his liability for the act of his servant to a certain definite sum. In the latter case, therefore, this limited amount took the place of the restitutio in integrum; but the principle still remains that the liability to this amount attaches from the time of the collision; and there seems no reason why interest should not accrue on the delay to pay that limited amount as well as in the case where the amount was unlimited. Indeed, the equity of the thing is the other way; for to refuse this interest would be to diminish still further the natural right of the sufferer to full compensation for the injury which he has sustained. It is to be observed that the sufferer does not, when interest is awarded, obtain interest on the amount of his damage but on the limited amount to which the statute has restricted the liability of the wrong-doer. Therefore, in the case of a vessel without cargo, it is clear that the interest would date from the time when the liability attached, that is, from the moment of the collision. Nor, when the case is examined, does it appear that a different rule ought to apply when the vessel carries cargo. Under the rule of restitutio in integrum the cargo-carrying vessel did not obtain interest from the date of the collision, because she received it in the shape of freight at the port of delivery; but where the amount of the liability is limited, and the sufferer does not receive full compensation, the reason which fixes the date of interest from the port of delivery does not apply. In the case of The Amalia (2), Dr. Lushington remarked (18): "Upon what grounds, then, was interest given? Interest was not given by reason of indemnification for the loss, for the loss was the damage which had accrued; but interest was given for this reason, namely, that the loss was not paid at the proper time. If a man is kept out of his money, it is a loss in the common sense of the word, but a loss of a totally different description and clearly to be distinguished from a loss which has occurred by damage done at the moment of a collision." This case was cited as an authority for the opposite opinion, but, in truth, it is not so; the Judge in that case gave all that was prayed; and no decision on this point was involved in his judgment. With respect to some of the earlier cases in Chancery, it would seem, from the form of the decree, that a distinction was taken between vessels with or without cargo, but the point seems never to have been formally raised or adjudicated upon; and in the later cases the practice of the Court of Admiralty appears to have been followed; and that practice, I learn from the Registrar, has for some time been to treat the date of collision as the period from which interest accrues, without discriminating whether the vessel has or has not carried cargo. No such discrimination was attempted to be made either in the case of The Spirit of the Ocean (13), or in the more recent case of The City of Buenos Ayres (19).

I am of opinion that, in all cases where the liability of the owner is limited, interest should be given upon the limited amount from the date of the collision; and I decree in this case accordingly.

Salvage—Award under 300l.—Tender—Certificate for Costs.

In a cause of salvage the defendants tendered 282l. together with such costs (if any) as shall be due by law. The Court at the hearing of the cause pronounced for the tender:—Held, that though the amount recovered was less than 300l. the plaintiffs were entitled to costs up to the tender.

Held also, that, when a tender is made in a salvage suit, it should state that it is a tender for salvage and costs, or should specify the ground upon which costs are not tendered, and refer the question of costs to the consideration of the Court.

This was a cause of salvage, in which the defendants had tendered the sum of 282l., "together with such costs (if any) as shall be due by law." The Court pronounced the tender to be sufficient, and took time to consider whether the Court ought to certify for costs, first, because the sum awarded was under 300l.; and secondly, because the Court had pronounced for the sufficiency of the tender.

Deane and D. G. Gibson for the plaintiffs.—A sum so nearly approaching to the limit of the County Court jurisdiction had been awarded that the plaintiffs were entitled to receive a certificate. The tender was invalid, because it was conditional as to costs: the ancient rule of the Court being, that a tender of costs was essential in order to make the tender good. Here the defendant was trying to get all the advantages of having tendered costs, and yet retain the right to dispute the plaintiffs' title to them.

Milward and F. O. Clarkson for the defendants.—A tender of costs is not essential; the old practice of the Court was formed prior to the enactments which deprive plaintiffs of the right to costs in certain cases. If defendants could not tender in the form adopted, they would have to consent to give costs in cases where plaintiffs were not entitled to them. The tender sufficiently expressed what was meant, and plaintiffs could not be prejudiced by its terms.

Cur. adv. vult.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE (on Nov. 23).—This is a case of salvage, in which I pronounced the tender, or, rather, the two tenders taken together, to be sufficient. They amounted to the sum of 282l. Two questions were reserved for the further consideration of the Court—first, whether, the sum awarded being under 300l., the Court having regard to sections 3 and 9 of 31 & 32 Vict., c. 71 (the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act), ought to certify for costs. I have considered all the circumstances of this case, and especially, though not solely, the small difference between the sum awarded and that which limits the jurisdiction of the County Court, and I am of opinion that I ought to certify for costs.

The second question is whether, although the suit has been properly instituted in this court, the plaintiffs ought to have their costs, inasmuch as I have pronounced for the sufficiency of the tender. The form of the tender was as follows: "Take notice, that we have this day paid to the account of the Registrar at the Bank of England the sum of 282l., which we tender, together with such costs (if any) as may be due by law." Cases were cited to me with respect to the Chancery and Common Law Courts on questions of tender, but I cannot consider them as furnishing precedents for the practice of this Court. Various cases on the subject of tender decided in this Court were also referred to in the course of the argument. They will all be found collected in chap. v. of Williams & Bruce's Admiralty Practice, which also contains in the notes some valuable remarks upon the principle of tender in this Court. The first decision of any importance is that laid down by Lord Stowell in The Vrow Margaretta (1). The rule which Lord Stowell intended to lay down in that case was that the parties ought to know "what is proposed to them for their reward, and what for costs," and that, inasmuch as verbal offers had led to misunderstanding and uncertainty, a more regular and legal form should be adopted for the future. Since that time the matter has been several times discussed before my predecessor in this chair. But, upon the whole, I am of opinion that the practice upon this point has been somewhat wavering and uncertain, and I agree with the observations made at the bar, that it is expedient to take this opportunity to lay down a rule on this subject.

With respect to the present case, I am of opinion that it was competent to the defendants to tender the reward for salvage, and reserve the question of costs, and such was clearly the intention of the tender; and I think it would have been competent to the plaintiffs to have accepted the tender, so far as it related to the reward, and to have reserved the question of costs for the consideration of the Court. I shall give the plaintiffs their costs up to the time when the tender was made; but, having regard to the uncertainty as to the practice, and to the correspondence between the solicitors of the parties, which has been put in evidence, I shall make no order as to costs subsequent to the tender, but leave each party to pay his own costs.

For the future I must direct that when a tender is made it shall either state that it is a tender for salvage reward and costs, or it shall specify the ground upon which costs are not tendered, and refer the question of costs to the consideration of the Court.

Damage — Responsibility of owners of wrong-doing Vessel for acts of their Agent—Special Defence—Pleading—Costs.

In a cause of damage, the plaintiffs alleged the damage to be imputable solely to the acts of the owners of the O. and their servants, which averment the defendants, the owners, traversed. At the hearing it was proved that the damage was caused by one acting not within the scope of his authority from the owners:—Held, that such a defence should have been specifically pleaded, and that, therefore, though the petition was dismissed, the defendants were not entitled to their costs.

This was a cause of damage, in which the plaintiffs, the owners of a brigantine called the Georgiana, sued the brig Orient and her owners for damage to the brigantine.

The Georgiana put into the port of Bideford to repair, and was beached at a place called Appledore, on the 6th day of April, 1867, and the Orient was subsequently moored alongside the Georgiana outside of her, with chains and hawsers passed from the bow and stern of the Orient and hauled tight, so that as the tide rose the Georgiana was on the one side strained by the Orient, and on the other chafed and ground by the quay wall. The fourth article of the petition alleged that the damage was imputable solely to the acts of the owners of the Orient and their servants.

The defendants, in the first article of the answer, denied the averments in the petition, and in the second article alleged that the plaintiffs had obtained judgment and satisfaction at common law for the same cause of action. To which the plaintiffs replied that they had recovered damages only for the trespass and wrongful detention, and not for the injury to the vessel.

At the hearing it appeared from the evidence that at the time when the Orient was placed against the Georgiana she had no master or crew, but had been placed there by a person who was not the agent of the owners for any such purpose.

Deane and Cottingham for the plaintiffs.—Upon these pleadings it is not competent to the defendants to rely upon this defence. It should have been specifically alleged. The owners of the Orient are before the Court, and have only denied that their vessel has done the damage. The objection is in the nature of a protest, and should have been pleaded as such—The Ida (1); or at all events, such a defence should have been expressly alleged—The Thetis (2).

Cohen, E. U. Bullen, and Wood Hill, for the defendants.—The petition distinctly states that “the damage was imputable solely to the owners of the Orient or their servants," and that averment is traversed in the answer.

Deane in reply.

(Some discussion ensued as to amendment, and his Lordship reserved his judgment until all the evidence had been given.)

Sir R. J. PHILLIMORE.—This is a case in which the Court has no doubt whatever as to the law which is applicable to it; but it raises a point of some importance with respect to the pleadings in this Court, which will induce me to make some remarks which otherwise would have been unnecessary.

His Lordship then stated the pleadings, and said,—In the course of the trial Mr. Yeo was called for the defendants, when it appeared that he was agent for the owners of the Orient for the purpose only of the sale and completion of the vessel; that is, the vessel had been sent from Prince Edward's Island in an incomplete state, and he was to sell it if he could unfinished, and if not, when it was finished; and he said he put the Orient into the position in which she did the damage to the Georgiana for the purpose of asserting his right to the fore-shore. The counsel for the defendant also put into Court a bill of sale, which shewed that Mr. Yeo was an agent to sell the ship for a sum not less than 2,400*l.* That was the limit and the scope of his agency.

The question then arose whether this case could proceed any further, inasmuch as the act of damage really had been done by a person who, in putting the Orient in a position to cause the damage, had acted without the scope and beyond the limit of his authority altogether? and two things appeared to me: first, that I could not refuse either to consider the evidence so taken before me, or the conclusion of law to which that evidence must lead; and, secondly, that the pleadings had not sufficiently raised the first defence intended to be relied upon at the hearing. I then suggested, or I think Mr. Cohen himself suggested, that the answer might be amended, and he proposed the following amendment:—"The aforesaid damage was imputable only to persons who were not servants of the defendants acting at the time in the service of the defendants, and was not occasioned by any person acting in the service of the defendants." Nothing was said at that time about amending the plea upon condition that the costs were paid; nothing was said about costs. When the Admiralty advocate replied, he said that he could not sustain the suit which his clients had instituted after the evidence which had been given before the Court, and which shewed that the wrong-doer in this case was not the servant of the owners; and he alleged that if this had been brought to his notice in the regular and proper manner, and at an earlier period, he should have advised his clients to discontinue the suit, and the expense of hearing would not have been incurred. Mr. Cohen thereupon retracted his amendment, and contended that by the general denial he had sufficiently raised this specific issue, the onus probandi of which was upon the plaintiffs.

There can be no doubt that under the old rules it would have been necessary, not only to state this part of the case, but any other questions which were likely to arise. Those rules were, I think, very properly altered under the authority of the Privy Council. The 65th rule says: "The modes of pleading hitherto used, as well in causes by act on petition as by plea and proof, are hereby abolished," and then the 67th is: "Every pleading shall be divided into short paragraphs numbered consecutively, which shall be called the articles of the pleadings, and shall contain brief statements of the facts material to the issue." And the 76th provides, "Any petition or other pleading may be altered or amended by consent of proctors, or by permission of the Judge." In the case of The Why Not (1), I laid down to a certain extent my opinion with regard to pleadings in these cases, and I said, "the rule of pleading ought to be adapted to the nature of the case which it is their object to bring before the Court. They are not to be considered as constituting a game of skill between the advocates, but ought to be so framed as to assist not only the party in the statement of his case, but the Court in its investigation of the truth between the litigants." And the pleadings should be such as to apprise the Court, and the opponent, of the principal points upon which the party intends to rely, that neither should be taken by surprise. Of course, I cannot put myself in this case into the position of the advocate for the plaintiff; but I can say truly, that, as far as the Court is concerned, it was entirely taken by surprise when it received the evidence to which I have adverted.

In such a state of things, the Court must not reject the evidence, but should apply it to the general averments of denial, and if necessary, give the other party leave to answer that which is raised so generally in the petition and so specifically by the evidence, and under the special circumstances of this case, I think that defendant was not the agent of the owner for the wrong-doing which caused the collision in question, and I must therefore dismiss the defendants from further observance of justice in this case. It only remains to be considered what it is the duty of the Court to do with respect to the costs.

I am aware that these proceedings have in substance been already instituted before another Court, and that it was quite impossible that the plaintiff could have been ignorant that Mr. Yeo, the person whose evidence was taken, was only an agent for the owners of this vessel, the Orient, for the purpose of sale, or may be of completion and then of sale. Nevertheless, I am of opinion that they ought to have had notice of that fact by the pleadings in this cause, and I think I arrive at a fair conclusion when I determine not to reject the evidence and to dismiss this case, and leave each party to pay his own costs.

[Cohen.—Do I understand that your lordship declines to decide the legal question entered on the record?

The COURT.—I have no necessity to do so; the preliminary objection is fatal to the suit.

Cohen.—Your lordship will allow me leave to appeal if such leave be necessary.

Deane.—If my friend is going to appeal on the question of costs, leave would not be necessary.

Cohen.—Not on the question of costs, but I propose to appeal on the question of the judgment.

Decree—Error—Amendment.

To entitle a party to amend an error in a decree, the mistake should be brought to the notice of the Court with the utmost possible diligence.

Application to alter a decree five months after the decree was made, rejected.

This was a cause of damage, the facts of which are reported in the preceding case, in which the Court made the following decree.

"July 7th, 1869. The judge, having heard counsel on both sides, gave leave to the defendants to amend their answer if they should think fit to do so.

"Counsel for the plaintiffs then consented to the cause being dismissed, and the judge, having heard counsel on both sides on the question of costs, dismissed the defendants and their bail from this cause and all further observance of justice therein, but made no order as to the costs of this cause.

"Defendants' proctors, with permission of the judge, protested of a grievance and of appealing, and instantly appealed."

The defendants appealed from this decree, but before the appeal was heard, and on the 7th day of December, counsel on behalf of the defendants moved the Court to alter the decree as follows, namely, The judge, having heard counsel on both sides, ruled that the pleadings did not raise the defence, that the collision was occasioned by persons who were not servants of the defendants, but gave leave to the defendants to amend their answer if they should think fit so to do. Counsel for the defendants declined so to do, whereupon counsel for the plaintiff consented to the cause being dismissed, but counsel for the defendants prayed the judge before pronouncing judgment to hear and determine the ground of defence raised by the second article of the answer. The judge, having heard counsel &c., refused to hear and determine the said ground of defence, and dismissed the defendants and their bail.

Cohen for the defendants.—The present decree is erroneous, as the defendants at the hearing did not avail themselves of the permission to amend, when that amendment was coupled with the condition of losing the costs of the suit. The defendants had upon their second plea a good defence to the action, and it was therefore unnecessary for them to amend. The decree ought also to state the judgment as to the insufficiency of the first article of the answer to raise the first defence.

Deane for the plaintiffs.

Cur. adv. vult.

Sir R. J. PHILLIMORE (on Dec. 21).—In this case an application has been made to the Court to alter the minute of a decree.

The decree was made on the 7th of July last, the application to alter it was made on the 7th of this month, December.

It has been the general practice of this Court to draw up, with the aid of the proper officers, its own decrees and minutes. If any circumstances of difficulty or peculiarity occur, the registrar has generally shown to the proctors of both parties the minute of the decree which he proposes to enter; he has also, when it appeared to him necessary, consulted the judge. In any case, the decree is entered within a day or two of the delivery of the judgment, and can be seen by either party whom it affects, and if either party object to the wording of the minute, and the matter is not adjusted in the Registry, it is competent to either party to make application to the Court upon the subject, but it is important to observe that, according to the practice of this Court, any such application must be made with the utmost expedition. To borrow the language of Dr. Lushington, in the case of The Monarch (1), "It must be an error instantly noticed and brought to the attention of the Court with the utmost possible diligence."

The practice of the Court of Chancery with respect to minutes has been referred to. It has been recently much discussed before the Judicature Commission, of which

(1) Robin. 27.

I am a member, and I am not disposed to alter the practice of this Court by adopting that of a Court of equity upon this subject.

Now as to the circumstances of the case before me, it appeared that during the course of the trial a witness was put into the box by the defendant for the purpose, as I understood, of proving the nature of the damage inflicted by the Orient upon the Georgiana, but he also proved incidentally that he was not the agent of the owner of the Orient for the purpose of placing her in the dock, from her improper position in which the damage to the Georgiana ensued. It was obvious therefore to the Court, and to the counsel for the Georgiana, that if the evidence was admissible, the suit of the Georgiana against the owners of the Orient must fail. A question arose as to whether the pleadings of the defendant sufficiently raised the defence. Upon the whole, I was of opinion that, having regard to the practice of the Court, as explained in the recent case of The Why Not (2), the defence was not properly raised. Though, as I have said, this is a question to be decided according to the practice of this Court, I may observe that this practice does not seem to be at variance with the rules of pleading at common law, as laid down in the 16th of the Regulæ Generales of Trinity Term, 1853, and the examples there given (3). I, however, also thought that I ought not to reject the evidence which had actually been given, and gave leave to the defendant to amend his plea. The plea was amended; but afterwards, when it appeared that this amendment would affect the question of costs, it was withdrawn on the ground that the defendant would not have consented to amend if he had understood that to do so would affect the question of costs, and also that he could succeed upon another defence which was properly raised by his plea.

Much discussion ensued upon this matter, reported not altogether correctly, but I dare say with as much accuracy as the rapidity with which the conversation was carried on, and a certain amount of confusion which prevailed at the time, would permit, in the notes of the shorthand-writer which have been sent to me.

(2) 38 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) Adm. 26.

(3) See Day, C.P. Acts, p. 432.

The upshot was that I acted upon the evidence which had been tendered, and which disproved the agency on behalf of the owners of the Orient of the person who had placed her in dangerous proximity to the Georgiana, and who turned out to be the real wrong doer. Having come to this conclusion, I thought the time of the Court ought not to be occupied by considering the other points raised in the case. I dismissed the suit of the Georgiana, but inasmuch as the defence being within the knowledge of the defendant alone, had not been properly raised on the pleadings, and as, if it had been, the suit would, as the counsel for the plaintiff alleged, have been discontinued, I thought it right to make no order as to costs.

The minute of the decree was taken down very soon after the judgment, and was, as the registrar informed me, and as appears from his note, shewn to the proctors of both parties. Some objection to it was taken by the proctor for the defendant, and an alteration was made in it. The matter was not brought to the notice of the Court till the 7th of this month, December, the minute having been entered very soon after the judgment, which was on the 7th of July. I am now asked by the defendant's counsel to direct it to be further altered.

But having regard not only to the interval of time which has elapsed, but also to the merits of the question, and inasmuch as it appears to me that this minute does, on the whole, accurately record the decree of the Court, I must decline to make any order for the alterations of the minute.

Bottomry—Advances—Subsequent Bottomry Bond.

A. & Co. agreed to purchase at Akyab cargoes of rice for F. & Co., A. & Co. to be secured by hypothecation of the bills of lading and a fixed freight of 5s. per ton.

Whilst the ship E. P. was loading one of the cargoes, A. & Co. advanced about 540l. for ship's disbursements, but upon hearing that F. & Co. had stopped payment, induced the master to execute a bottomry bond both for the advances already made and also for a further sum of small amount:—Held, that the first advances were made partly upon personal security and partly upon the margin of freight, and could not therefore be secured by a subsequent bottomry.

Held also, that the further advances were too trivial to render the bond valid with respect to them.

This was a cause of bottomry. The bond was dated June 14, 1866, and was executed by the master, when the Empire of Peace was lying at the port of Akyab, in British Burmah, bound to Queenstown for orders, and was to secure the sum of 540l. odd (together with 30 per cent. maritime premium), advanced by Paul Henri Pierre Anschitzky. It appeared that at the time of the arrival of the Empire of Peace at Akyab, Messrs. Anschitzky & Co., of which firm P. H. P. Anschitzky was a member, had agreed with Fernie Brothers, of Liverpool, the owners of the Empire of Peace, to supply the vessel with a cargo of rice at 6l. per ton, at a freight of 5s. a ton only, and that Anschitzky & Co. should hold the bills of lading as security for payment of their draughts on Fernie Brothers for the price of the rice, and for the amount of any disbursements they might make for the Empire of Peace. Anschitzky & Co., before any express agreement for bottomry was made, had advanced money for necessary disbursements for the ship; and on the 6th of June, 1866, being informed that Fernie Brothers had stopped payment, thereupon refused to make any further advances without the security of a bottomry bond for past and future advances, and the bond was given accordingly.

Butt and E. C. Clarkson, for plaintiffs, the bondholders.—The question is whether a bottomry bond is valid if given for an amount which had been previously advanced with a view to another security? In this case the money was advanced upon the hypothecation of the cargo, which takes it out of the category of cases where money is advanced on the personal security of the owner. As the plaintiffs' security failed there was no breach of faith in asking for a bond. The plaintiffs, by the law of Akyab, already had a lien upon the ship, at all events upon her anchors, chains, and surplus stores, and why should they waive their rights? They were not disqualified from taking the bond any more than a stranger. A bond was the only mode of escape for the ship, and there was nothing inequitable in the plaintiffs availing themselves of the right given by the law of the place—The Karnak (1), The Hebe (2), The North Star (3).

Milward and Cohen, for defendants.—If the money was advanced on the security of the margin of freight, that security still existed, untouched by Fernies' failure; therefore, when the bond was executed, the security had not failed. If money is advanced upon personal security, and that security fails, a bond cannot be taken, unless the money is advanced upon an implied contract that a bond will be given. The bills of lading were in the possession of the plaintiffs when the bond was given. It may be true that the money realised by the bills of lading had not yet reached the plaintiffs, and that they might never get it, but the validity of a bond does not depend upon events which have happened after its execution. A bond, given to the agent of the owner, is invalid if the agent has other moneys, the funds of the owner.

Cur. adv. vult.

Sir R. J. PHILLIMORE (on Dec. 6).—This is a cause of bottomry, instituted by the holders of a bottomry bond against the ship Empire of Peace, and against the Merchants Trading Co. of Liverpool (Limited), the present owners of the ship. The bond is dated the 14th of June, 1866, and was given by the master of the ship to Auschitzky & Co., of Akyab, in British Burmah, for the sum of 540*l.* 1*s.* 7*d.* and 30 per cent. interest. On the same day, and at the same place, another bond was given by the master of the ship to Joseph Charriol, for the sum of 890*l.* and 30 per cent. interest. The latter bond has been discharged; the former bond is the one the validity of which has been argued before me. It appears from the evidence that an agreement was made between Messrs. Fernie Brothers of Liverpool, and Auschitzky & Co. with respect to the navigation of four vessels, one of which was The Empire of Peace, belonging to Fernie Brothers, and that that agreement was as follows:—

“18, Hackin's Hey, Liverpool,
29th August, 1865.

“Messrs. Fernie Brothers, Liverpool.

“Gentlemen,—We hereby agree to load the ship Empire of Peace, of 1,540 tons register, and the Edward Oliver, 1,166 tons register, at the port of Akyab, with full cargoes of Necransie rice, of fair average quality, of the crop of 1866 (with the option to load about one-fourth with Larong rice), at 6*s.*—say 6*s.* per cwt. nett, free on board. The ships to commence loading as soon as ready after arrival, provided new rice is being shipped at that time.

“In consideration of the above, you undertake to send the following ships to us to be loaded on commission: viz., the Prince of Wales, 924 tons register; the Green Jacket, 1,055 tons register; and the Scottish Chief, 1,052 tons register, or other vessels of about the same tonnage, all of which ships to be ready to load before the 15th of April, 1866, at the port of Akyab.

“We are to reimburse ourselves for each separate cargo by drafts at six months' sight, drawing for two-thirds of the amount at the time of purchase, and for the remainder on completion of cargo.

“Bills of lading to be signed with a freight of 5*s.* per ton, and are to be attached to the drafts; and should delivery of the rice purchased not be taken before the 15th of April, 1866, we are to be at liberty to draw for the balance of purchase money. Same to be placed in the Godowns, and specially held for the ship's arrival.

“The ships to have the fair average despatch of other vessels loading at Akyab at the same time by other persons.”

With respect to this contract Auschitzky says:—

(2) 2 W. Robin. 146.

(3) 1 Lush. 45.

"I made a contract with Messrs. Fernie Brothers & Co. in August, 1865, for the loading by my Akyab firm of their ship Empire of Peace during the season, 1866.

"To place me in funds for the purchase of these five cargoes, Messrs. Fernie Brothers & Co. offered to furnish me with credit from Barned's Bank, but I declined the proposal, and insisted on having the bills of lading of the cargoes, with a nominal rate of freight, 5s. per ton, hypothecated as security for the value of the cargoes.

"I made this contract in person at Liverpool. No agreement whatever was made by me with Messrs. Fernie Brothers & Co. to furnish the ships with funds for ship's disbursements, as we had merely to supply the ships with cargo. The subject was not mentioned. Captain Clark, of the Empire of Peace, whilst at Akyab, asked me for money for ship's disbursements. Though I was not bound to give any, understanding that he could not get the money elsewhere, and the margin of the freight appearing more than sufficient to fully secure both the contract price of the cargo and ordinary ship's disbursements, I let him have what he required, intending, as I had done with the other vessels, to include the amount in our draft, and thus secure it by the 5s. bill of lading; but later on, when my firm learnt the failure of Messrs. Fernie Brothers & Co., they refused to advance any more, and as they knew no bank would negotiate their drafts on Messrs. Fernie Brothers & Co.—more especially for money advanced without any authority—we called on him to refund what he had received (rs. 4,891 4 9). Verbally and by letter on the 9th of June, '66, Captain Clark sent tenders for a loan on bottomry of 14,000 rs. On this we offered, as agents of Joseph Alexander Charriol, to lend that sum on the express condition that he repaid our firm therefrom the rs. 4,891 4 9 already advanced, but it was eventually thus arranged: We accepted a bottomry bond for the equivalent of the rs. 4,891 4 9 (540l. 1s. 7d.), and advanced him rs. 8,060 6 for a bottomry bond accepted by us for J. A. Charriol. The equivalent was 890l. No one else tendered to advance the money, so, unless he had acceded to our terms, he could not have raised it, and the ship could not have proceeded to sea.

"The money was not against Captain Clark's or the owner's credit—I mean the first advance of rs. 4,891 4 9—but against the margin of the freight; it was never intended to be otherwise. When I made the contract with Fernie Brothers & Co., vessels were being chartered to load at Akyab and other free ports during the season of 1866, at 3l. 5s. to 3l. 10s.

"When I made the contract, I considered that when the cargo should be hypothecated, the margin would cover the value of the cargo without any other credit. The cargo was hypothecated. The cargo cost 6l. 5s., including freight."

Anschitzky says that Charriol has repaid him for this bond which is in suit, as well as for the other; and here I may as well dispose of one point made in favour of this bond, namely, that Anschitzky must be considered as the agent of Charriol, and therefore that whatever legal objections apply to the former as a bottomry bondholder do not apply to the latter. Charriol's name, however, does not appear in the bond; it is said that this was because the master insisted on the bond being in the name of Anschitzky; but however this may be I am of opinion that I must consider Anschitzky as the principal with respect to this bond, and not as the agent of Charriol; it is therefore not necessary that I should consider the case of The Hebe (2), to which I have been referred. It appears that in pursuance of the agreement that has been mentioned, the Empire of Peace had been loaded with a cargo of rice by Anschitzky & Co., that they obtained from the master the usual bills of lading at the nominal freight of 5s. per ton before mentioned, that they advanced money for the necessary disbursements of the ship, which disbursements were not included in the bills drawn by them on Messrs. Fernie. It appears also that these bills of exchange with the bills of lading annexed were subsequently negotiated by Anschitzky & Co. with a house at Calcutta. Anschitzky left Burmah on the 26th of May, 1866, and was absent from that place during the whole time, when the business of the bottomry bond was transacted. The business was carried on in his absence by Mr. Archard, and his evidence shews that the bills of lading at the nominal freight were to be handed to Auschitzky & Co. as a security for the price of the rice and the disbursements and advances, although he says the amount of disbursements was not included in the bills of exchange drawn on Messrs. Fernie. During the absence of Auschitzky Messrs. Fernie stopped payment, and the date of the time when this intelligence reached the firm at Akyab appears to have been the 1st of June, and according to the evidence of Archard, "the greater part or the whole" of the advances which the bottomry bond was to cover were made before the 6th of June, the date of the bond being, as I have said, the 14th. It is said that the evidence shews that some of the advances were made subsequently to the date of the bottomry bond; but if so, they were certainly of a very trifling character, and would not be sufficient to bring this bond within the category of those cases in which the bond has been pronounced for as being partly good and partly bad. This was also a point raised, or rather glanced at, in the argument before me.

The evidence satisfies me that the advances made by Auschitzky & Co. on this occasion to the master of the Empire of Peace were made partly on the personal security of Messrs. Fernie, and partly on what Mr. Auschitzky calls "the margin of the freight" on this cargo; and being satisfied of this, I am of opinion, that, according to the law which regulates contracts of this description, it was not competent to Auschitzky & Co. to convert their security, partly personal and partly on the freight, into the security of a bottomry bond. It is not necessary to enter into any explanation of what that law is. It is well known to us, and has been very fully examined and discussed in my recent judgment in The Karnak (1).

It was further contended by the holders of the bottomry bond that, at all events, that instrument was legal, inasmuch as the vessel, or the principal parts of her apparel, were liable to arrest for the advances which had been made; and there were no other means of raising the money, except by bottomrying the ship. I am referred by counsel on either side to Lloyd v. Guibert, in the Exchequer Chamber (4), to The Hamburg (5), and to Cammell v. Sewell (6). There is certainly not adequate proof before me that by the law of Akyab this vessel could have been arrested. It is said that in the absence of proof I am to presume that the English law generally is in force, and that, under the recent Admiralty Court Act, a vessel may be arrested by material men, but I know no authority for carrying that presumption to the extent that not only the Common Law is in force, but that a particular power recently given by a particular statute to a particular Court can be exercised in a country where I have no evidence that any such Court exists. And, lastly, there is no authority that I am aware of for the position that a vessel could be arrested in the Court of Admiralty by those who have made advances upon a security other than that of the ship itself, as Auschitzky & Co. have done in this case. I must pronounce against this bond with costs.

THE HEART OF OAK.

Mortgage—Fraudulent Preference.

An insolvent debtor must not assign all or nearly all his effects to one creditor, so as to put it out of the debtor's power to carry on his trade. But an assignment is not necessarily fraudulent when it does not include the whole of the trade effects, or when the debtor gets a present equivalent for his goods.

The assignment of a security to a particular creditor, even when bankruptcy is inevitable, if the assignment be not made voluntarily, is not necessarily a fraudulent preference.

A debtor mortgaged a ship to one creditor, leaving himself scarcely any assets, and at the time of the mortgage both the mortgagor and creditor knew that the mortgagor was practically bankrupt:—Held, that such mortgage was executed by way of fraudulent preference, and therefore void.

This was a cause of mortgage instituted on behalf of William Frederick Watts, mortgagee of the sloop Heart of Oak, against the said sloop, her tackle, apparel, and furniture, and against William Peter Vosper Wallis, the assignee in bankruptcy of Julius Arnoldus Ryke Vandenberg, the registered owner of the said sloop intervening. This suit was brought under section 11th of the Admiralty Court Jurisdiction Act, 1861 (24 Vict. c. 10).

The plaintiff's petition alleged the execution of a mortgage of the sloop on the 4th day of January, 1869, for the sum of 110*l.*, and the registration of the mortgage on the 29th day of March following. It also alleged the execution of a second mortgage on the 8th day of January, 1869, for the sum of 60*l.*, and the registration of that mortgage on the 3rd day of August following, and that the moneys secured by the mortgages are now due and owing to the plaintiff. The answer alleged the bankruptcy of the mortgagor on the 18th day of May, 1869, and the appointment of the defendant as assignee on the 3rd day of June following. That the mortgages were not executed for the purpose of securing the repayment of any moneys due to the plaintiff, and that if they were executed for such purpose, they were so executed by way of fraudulent preference, with intent to delay and defeat the mortgagor's creditors.

A preliminary objection on behalf of the plaintiff was taken that the defendant had not, as assignee, obtained leave to appear in the suit. Lee v. Sangster (1) was cited, and the objection was overruled.

Giffard and Cohen for the defendant. —The evidence shews that an act of bankruptcy had been committed within twelve months of the actual bankruptcy, and therefore the second mortgage would be inoperative, as the ship was at the time of the execution of that mortgage within the order and disposition of the bankrupt —12 & 13 Vict. c. 106. s. 125, see also the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), ss. 37, 43, 55, 66 & 70. Besides, it is not proved that the second mortgage was executed before the bankruptcy. The second mortgage was antedated. It is acknowledged that it was not registered, and it is clear also that it was not executed till after the bankruptcy. As to the first mortgage, it is fraudulent, independent of any considerations as to bankruptcy, and it is a fraudulent preference. It is per se fraudulent, because the facts shew a secret trust in favour of the bankrupt—13 Eliz. c. 5; Twine's Case (Smith's Leading Cases, vol. i. p. 1). It is a fraudulent preference inasmuch as by the mortgage the mortgagor conveyed all his available assets—Ex parte Foxley, in re Nurse (2), Woodhouse v. Murray (3), Graham v. Chapman (4).

Butt and Pritchard for the plaintiff. —The objection that the ship was in the order and disposition of the mortgagor at the time of the bankruptcy should have been specifically pleaded. But the ship by the first mortgage was out of the control of the bankrupt, and he was not the owner at the time of the second mortgage, Griffiths on Bankruptcy, p. 450; Joye v. Campbell (5). As to the fraud independent of bankruptcy, none of the tests mentioned in Twine's Case hold good in this. The gift was not general but only of part of the mortgagor's property. The mortgagor did not continue in possession. The mortgage was not secret, but registered in the usual way, nor was it executed pending any legal proceedings in bankruptcy or elsewhere—Van Castelle v. Booker (6), Brown v. Kempton (7). As to the fraudulent preference, the mortgagor was not really bankrupt until April, 1869, after the execution of both mortgages, for although he had committed an act of bankruptcy in 1866 by "keeping house," no one attempted then or at any other time to make him a bankrupt, and it was not until April that he himself considered his case hopeless, and petitioned the Court. Even if the bankrupt had by the mortgages assigned all his property, the assignments would not alone constitute a fraudulent preference, nor would mere pressure by a creditor; but the Court, acting as a jury, must decide that question upon a consideration of all the facts of the case—Smith v. Timms (8), Johnson v. Fesemeyer (9), Balme v. Hutton (10). In this case the first mortgage did not convey all the mortgagor's interest in the ship, for after that had been given it was still worth the plaintiff's while to advance money on a second mortgage, and that he did spend the money (secured by that mortgage) on repairs of the ship shews the good faith with regard to the first mortgage, as the ship was worthless without the repairs, and he evidently advanced the money under the first mortgage.

Our. adv. vult.

Sir R. J. PHILLIMORE (on December 21st). — This Court is required, and I believe for the first time, to administer the law of bankruptcy as between an assignee and a creditor mortgagee.

The present Lord Chancellor observed in the case of Ex parte Foxley (11), speaking of the assignment of property by a bankrupt, "there cannot be any difference in the mode of judging of such an assignment in the Courts of Common Law and Equity," neither can there be, I may add, any difference in the mode of judging of such a case in the High Court of Admiralty, which is both a Court of Law and Equity, and I must endeavour to decide the matter now before me upon the same principles as those which have governed the decisions in those Courts. The industry of counsel has furnished me with reference to all the principal cases, and to some of them I will presently refer.

NEW SERIES, 39.—ADMIRALTY.

The material facts to which the law has to be applied are the following:—There was a shipping firm at Portsmouth, of Vandenberg & Son, and to this firm Watts, the plaintiff, before the year 1866 (the exact date I think has not been given) became a clerk, for a twelvemonth without any salary, and afterwards at a salary of 10s. a week, but with no obligation to a fixed or regular attendance, and with liberty to carry on a sort of business of his own with masters of ships, for the sale, exchange and transfer of their private adventures. His chief duty to the firm was to enter ships at the Custom House and clear them out. In June, 1866, he entered into an engagement with Mr. Julius Vandenberg, the mortgagor, who appears not to have been a member of the firm, but who carried on business in another room of the same house in which the firm carried on their business. Julius Vandenberg was a ship owner and a commission agent, and Watts was engaged, according to his own statement, "to do his work generally," for which he was to receive 30l. per annum, but of that he never did receive a farthing. Almost his first act appears to have been to assist his new master in endeavouring to obtain the assent of creditors to a deed of composition at 5s. in the pound. This attempt failed, and Julius Vandenberg was obliged in the year 1866 to do what is technically called "keep his house," which it is admitted constituted an act of bankruptcy, but no creditor chose to make him a bankrupt; and he appears to have remained unmolested until the year 1869, and was therefore, under the 88th section of 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, not liable at that time for an act of bankruptcy committed more than twelve months before. The Heart of Oak, which belonged to Julius Vandenberg, sailed upon what is called the principle of thirds. The master paid the crew their wages and food, deducted two-thirds for himself from the earnings of the ship, and paid the other third to the owner. Watts received this and paid it over to Vandenberg. Watts kept a sort of diary with an account of moneys he had paid for Vandenberg from June, 1866, but he never kept any account of moneys received from him, and took no receipt and made no entry of moneys which he paid over to him; he received from 90*l.* to 100*l.*; he kept no account, but tied the vouchers together; he kept no books at all for himself, and Vandenberg had no banking account.

It appears that receiving no salary or repayments of any kind for his disbursements, Watts pressed Vandenberg for a security and obtained the equity of redemption of some houses; but in January, 1869, there being some considerable sum (about 100*l.*) due to him he pressed for further security, and Vandenberg being satisfied with his accounts, which he says he went through with him, gave to Watts the security of the first mortgage dated the 4th of January, 1869 (which was registered on the 26th of March, 1869), for 110*l.*; Watts prepared this mortgage, as he did the subsequent one, himself. In the early part of the same month—between the 5th and 10th—the Heart of Oak got upon the rocks at Lyme Cobb and suffered severe damage. Watts called upon Vandenberg to repair this damage, but Vandenberg declined on the ground that he had no money. Watts undertook to make the repairs and asked for a further mortgage as a security, and he has given some evidence that he expended upwards of 60*l.* for this purpose.

The second mortgage was pleaded, and I am afraid sworn to have been executed on the 8th of January, 1869; it purported to secure the repayment of the sum of 60*l.* It is admitted, however, upon the evidence, that it certainly was not executed until after the 29th of March. The admission is inevitable, because, purporting to be executed on the 8th of January, it recites the registration of the former mortgage on the 29th of March following. This is sought to be explained by reference to an agreement which bears date the 8th of January, 1869, and it is said that the second mortgage was merely an amplification of the agreement which it is urged is contemporaneous with the repair of the vessel. This agreement, I must observe, was not put in evidence till after the cross-examination of Watts. The bankruptcy took place on the 10th of May, and the second mortgage was not registered till the August following. It further appears that in December, 1868, or thereabouts, another attempt at composition with his creditors was made by Vandenberg, in which Watts took an active part, and which it is said failed on account of the refusal of a single creditor. In January, 1869, the debts were between 1,400*l.* and 1,500*l.*, and it is admitted by Vandenberg, that there are now no available assets for creditors.

I think it unnecessary to go into further detail. I am satisfied upon the whole evidence as to two material points: First, that after the assignment of the equity of redemption in the houses and the mortgage of the Heart of Oak, there remained scarcely any, and if any, the most inconsiderable assets in the hands of Vandenberg; secondly, that at the time when these assignments were made, both Vandenberg and Watts were aware that the former was practically bankrupt.

It was said that I had no evidence that the ship was not of greater value than both the mortgages, and that perhaps the property not assigned was therefore considerable, but Watts, in answer to this question put to him by the counsel for the assignee, "How was the composition" (that is the proposed composition of five shillings in the pound) "with the creditors to be paid; you had the equity of redemption of the houses and the mortgage of the Heart of Oak," answered after a considerable pause, "I don't know." Nor did he or Vandenberg, in his examination before me, ever pretend or suggest, that there was any margin of property to be derived from the ship after the mortgages had been satisfied. Some furniture said to have been possessed by Vandenberg, but apparently of the most trifling value, was the only property which could be suggested as not being covered by the assignment.

Having arrived at these conclusions of fact, I forbear to dwell upon the various circumstances of suspicion which surround the case of the plaintiff: but I will add, that with respect to the demeanour of the witnesses, while there was obviously much in the broken health and spirits of the bankrupt (who was most humanely cross-examined) to excite compassion, there was apparently no want of candour in his evidence, or in the manner in which he gave it—a remark which, I regret to say, is in my judgment inapplicable to the testimony of the plaintiff.

It remains for me to state briefly the law which is applicable to this state of facts. Before I consider the general law, I will deal with an argument founded upon the Merchant Shipping and Bankruptcy Acts. The 125th section of the 12 & 13 Vict. c. 106, enacts “that if any bankrupt, at the time he becomes bankrupt, shall by the consent and permission of the true owner thereof, have in his possession, order, or disposition, any goods or chattels whereof he was reputed owner,” &c., such goods or chattels shall be deemed to be the property of the bankrupt, and it was contended that the effect of the sections 37, 43, 55, 66 and 70 of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104), shewed that this vessel, the second mortgage of which was not registered till after the bankruptcy, was still in the “order and disposition” of the bankrupt, and therefore passed to his assignee. To this, I incline to think, though a decision upon this point is not necessary to the view which I take of the case, that it was effectually replied that the words in the 125th section of the first statute, “true owner,” applied to third persons, and that the fact of the registration of the first mortgage before the date of the bankruptcy was sufficient to shew that the vessel could not have been sold by the bankrupt, a position which was further supported by a reference to the 70th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 104). It was also contended that, apart from the Bankruptcy laws, these mortgages were under the authority of Twine's case (Smith's Leading Cases, vol. i. p. 2), fraudulent and invalid, inasmuch as the circumstances shewed that there was a secret trust between the parties, and only a colourable disposition of the property. While I am not prepared to say that this argument is not sound, I shall not decide the case upon this ground, but upon the Bankruptcy laws and the judgments which expound them. I was referred, during the course of the argument, to a great many cases; those which I have principally consulted are—I state them in the chronological order—Graham

v. Chapman (12), Smith v. Cannan (13), Smith v. Timms (8), Johnson v. Fesemeyer (9), Woodhouse v. Murray (14), and ex parte Foxley re Nurse (15). From these and other cases, I extract the following principles as applicable to the present case: that a fraud on the Bankruptcy law is not necessarily an intentional fraud; that the cardinal principle of the bankrupt law is that there shall be equal distribution of the bankrupt's effects among his creditors; that among the corollary principles are these:—that a debtor may not assign all or nearly all his effects to one creditor, so as to put it out of his power to carry on his trade; such an assignment is not necessarily fraudulent where it does not include his trade effects, for the test is whether the necessary effect of the deed is to defeat and delay the creditors of the trader, and not whether it stops his trade; an assignment of the whole or an assignment, with a colorable exception of a part only, which is in effect an assignment of the whole, is fraudulent in the eye of the law; the sale of the whole of a trader's effects to a bona fide purchaser is not necessarily fraudulent if the trader gets a present equivalent for his goods, but where the payment of an old debt is taken as part of the price, the trader gets no such equivalent, but his transfer has the effect of defeating and delaying his creditors; the assignment of a security to a particular creditor even when bankruptcy is inevitable, if the assignment be not made voluntarily, but at the demand of the creditor, is not necessarily a fraudulent preference.

Applying these principles to the circumstances of the case before me, I am of opinion that these mortgages fall under the category of a fraudulent preference to a particular creditor, inasmuch as by means of these an assignment was made in contemplation of bankruptcy by the trader of all his effects with only a colourable exception; and because such an assignment was made without any present equivalent, and the effect of the assignment was to delay and defeat the equal distribution of his assets among all his creditors, I must pronounce against the validity of these mortgages, and dismiss the petition of the mortgagee with costs.

1869. { THE GENERAL STEAM NAVIGATION
Dec. 6. { COMPANY, appellants, v. THOMAS
 { HEDLEY AND OTHERS, respon-
 { "THE VELOCITY."

Collision—Sailing Rules, No. 14—Construction—Ships crossing.

Rule 14 of the sailing and steering rules provides that "If two ships under steam are crossing, so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side, shall keep out of the way of the other." The appellants' ship, in proceeding down a river, and intending to keep her course; in order to round a bend in the river, had her head slightly inclined so as to exhibit her masthead and portlight only to the respondents' ship, which was proceeding up the river:—Held (reversing the judgment of the Admiralty Court), that the vessels were not crossing within the meaning of the above rule. That the fact that the portlight only of the appellants' ship was seen by the respondents was not conclusive evidence that the vessels were crossing; that the relative position of the vessels was not only to be regarded but also the place in which the vessels were situated.

This was an appeal from a decree of the High Court of Admiralty of England.

The suit in the Court below was a cause of damage promoted by the respondents against the appellants, in consequence of a collision which occurred between the steam vessel Velocity and the steam vessel Carbon.

The facts of the case were as follows:—Early in the morning of the 5th day of September, 1868, the Velocity, a steamship of about 179 tons register, left London, bound for Calais, with a light cargo, and with twelve passengers on board. After passing Cuckold's Point, up to which point the Velocity had been proceeding along the south shore of the river, she crossed the river, and then kept along the north shore, passing Millwall Pier at a distance not greater than a ship's length. She rounded Millwall Pier under her starboard helm, and continued under the starboard helm so as to hug the north shore. The river there takes a considerable bend, necessitating a vessel going down the river using her starboard helm. When the Velocity was off the Millwall Pier as aforesaid, a vessel shewing a green light, which afterwards proved to be the Carbon, was observed by the master of the Velocity about the distance of a quarter of a mile, bearing two points on the starboard bow, and to the south of mid-channel. When the master of the Velocity observed the Carbon as aforesaid, there appeared to him to be, and there was in fact, no risk of collision; and, accordingly, he did nothing but starboard his helm a little, for the purpose of keeping as near to the north shore as the depth of water would allow.

Very shortly afterwards, however, the helm of the Carbon was ported, so as to make her come right across the river. It was then impossible for the Velocity to avoid a collision with the Carbon, whereupon the master of the Velocity put his vessel's helm hard-a-starboard, in order to run her ashore, and thereby save the lives of the passengers. The collision, which had thus become inevitable, took place close to the north shore, the stem of the Carbon striking the starboard bow of the Velocity, and both vessels taking the ground.

On the 22nd day of October, 1868, the appellants brought an action in her Majesty's Court of Exchequer against the respondents to recover damages in respect of this collision; the respondents pleaded that they were not guilty, and issue was joined on this plea. The issue came on for trial on the 11th and 12th days of December, 1868, before the Lord Chief Baron and a special jury, and resulted in a verdict for the appellants.

On the 22nd day of December, 1868, the cause came on for hearing in the Admiralty Court, and at such hearing the contention on behalf of the respondents was that the Carbon was right in porting, that the two steamships were crossing ships within the meaning of the 14th of the sailing and steering rules.

The learned Judge and Trinity Masters were of opinion that the two steamers were crossing each other within the meaning of the 14th of the steering and sailing rules, and that the Velocity was solely to blame for the collision, and the learned Judge decreed accordingly.

From this judgment the present appeal was brought.

Milward, Butt, and Cohen.—The two steamers were not crossing each other so as to involve risk of collision within the meaning of rule 14 of the steering and sailing rules. The Velocity was in a proper position in the river, and those who were on board the Carbon had no reason to expect her to cross the river. The Carbon's helm was improperly ported, and this caused the collision. No collision would have taken place if each steamer had kept her course.

Dr. Deane and Clarkson for the respondents.—The judgment of the Court below was right. It is admitted that this is not a case of steamers' meeting end on, within the meaning of the steering rule No. 13, but the case comes exactly within rule 14. The appellants' and the respondents' ships were certainly crossing within the meaning of that rule. The fact that the masthead and port light of the Velocity were alone visible to those on board the Carbon, is conclusive evidence of the relative position of the two ships. If it were otherwise, how would those on board know how to steer so as to avoid a collision? It is very important that these sailing and steering regulations should be strictly construed. On such a construction all safe navigation depends. Besides, Rule 18 required the appellant's ship to keep her course.

This is an appeal from a decree of the High Court of Admiralty in a cause of damage instituted by the owners of a steam-vessel, the Carbon, against the owners of a steam-vessel, the Velocity, for the damage done to the Carbon in a collision between the two vessels, for which collision the learned Judge held that the Velocity was alone to blame, and decreed accordingly.

In the course of the argument of the appeal their Lordships were informed by the counsel for the appellants, that the owners of the Velocity had brought an action-at-law against the owners of the Carbon, and had obtained a verdict with damages. That upon an application to the Court of Exchequer for a new trial, the Chief Baron (who tried the cause) expressed his entire satisfaction with the verdict, that the Court would not grant even a rule nisi to set it aside, and afterwards refused to give the defendants leave to appeal.

This verdict must have proceeded upon the ground of the Carbon having been solely in the wrong; because, if there had been any fault contributing to the collision on the part of the Velocity, although there was even a greater degree of blame imputable to the Carbon, the owners of the Velocity would not have been entitled to succeed at law.

It is, perhaps, difficult to resist the influence arising from the successful issue of this proceeding-at-law by the appellants, but their Lordships have endeavoured to confine their minds entirely to that which alone is properly before them, the evidence given in the Court of Admiralty, and the reasons stated by the learned Judge for the decree which he pronounced.

The collision took place in the river Thames a little below Millwall Pier, at about 3.45 a.m., 5th September, 1868.

It was a fine moonlight morning, and the tide was about high water, and slack.

The Velocity, a steam-ship of 179 tons, was going down the river on her way to Calais.

The Carbon, a screw-steamer of 399 tons, was proceeding up the river to London with a cargo of coals.

The Velocity had been on the south side of the river until she arrived at Cuckold's Point, when she crossed over to the north shore, and just before the collision was rounding Millwall Pier and making her way along the north shore under a starboard helm.

The Carbon was going up the river in mid-channel, and, at about a quarter of a mile distance, saw the red or port light of the Velocity bearing a little on her starboard bow.

The helm of the Carbon was immediately ported, which carried her towards the Velocity. The captain of the Velocity, seeing the danger of a collision, first starboarded the helm and afterwards ordered it to be put hard-a-starboard, so as to get his vessel ashore, and save the lives of those on board, and the Carbon ran into her starboard bow and cut her from the deck down to the keel.

It was admitted on both sides that this was not a case of two steam-vessels meeting end on, or nearly end on, so as to require each of them to put the helm to port in obedience to the 13th article of the regulations for preventing collisions at sea. But it was considered by the learned Judge of the Court of Admiralty that the 14th article applied, and that the two vessels were "crossing so as to involve the risk of collision," and that it was therefore the duty of the vessel which had the other on her starboard side to keep out of the way.

The learned Judge in delivering his judgment said, "We" (that is, himself and the Elder Brethren of the Trinity House by whom he was assisted) "think that the evidence establishes that the Carbon saw the mast-head and port light of the Velocity alone. The vessels were therefore crossing under the rule to which I have referred" (the 14th), "and it was therefore the duty of the Carbon to get out of the way of the Velocity. The course which the Carbon adopted was to port, and the Elder Brethren think that this was the only mode of getting out of the way in the circumstances." But the fact of the Carbon having seen the port light of the Velocity does not necessarily prove that the Velocity was crossing the river, as the learned Judge and his assessors seem to have thought. The relative position of the two vessels when they first came in sight of each other must not alone be regarded, but also the bend of the river in the part where the collision took place. A vessel rounding the curve of the north shore would necessarily, during some part of her course, have her head slightly inclined towards the south shore, so as to exhibit her port light to a vessel in mid-channel coming in a contrary direction; and, in fact, the Velocity was not crossing or intending to cross, the river when she was seen by the Carbon but was pursuing her regular course along the north shore; keeping as near to that shore as was convenient under a starboard helm. The appellants alleged that this was the well-known customary track for vessels going down the river, and to establish their case in this respect they called Captain James, the principal harbour-master of the river, who said, "It is the custom that vessels going down, whatever be their tonnage or their cargo, and whether at flood or ebb tide, invariably keep on the north side, and vessels coming up invariably keep on the south side." The quartermaster of the Dreadnought hospital ship, which is moored not far from the place where the collision occurred, also stated that the regular course of steamers going down the river is to keep on the north side; and the captain of the Velocity, who has been thirty-three years in command of vessels belonging to the Steam Navigation Company, said that for twenty years he had always in going down the river gone as close as he could to the north shore, as his usual track and the shortest way.

That there has been a practice for vessels going down the river to prefer the north to the south shore is proved by the above evidence, but that there was any custom of this kind in the strict sense of the word, to which all vessels would be bound to conform, is certainly not the fact. On the contrary, from the year 1854 down to the year 1862, the rule laid down by Act of Parliament required vessels going down the river to keep towards the south shore. By the 297th section of the Merchant Shipping Act of 1854, it was enacted that "every steam-ship when navigating any narrow channel shall, whenever it is safe and practicable, keep to that side of the fair way or mid-channel which lies on the starboard side of such steam-ship." Therefore, the captain of the Velocity in running down the river on the north shore, which he stated to have been his invariable practice for twenty years, was, for some of those years, acting in direct disobedience to the Act of Parliament. But, in 1862, by the Merchant Shipping Acts Amendment Act the 297th section of the former act was repealed, and vessels navigating the river were left at liberty to go on whichever side of it they pleased, taking care, of course, to observe the regulations for preventing collisions. The Velocity, at the time when she was seen by the Carbon, was where, under the existing law, she had an undoubted right to be, and was pursuing her regular course along the north shore, when her red light presented itself to the Carbon's view. Now, if the persons in charge of the Carbon knew, as they ought to have known, the bend of the river in that part, and also knew that it was usual for vessels going down the river, to steer their course along the north shore, they had no more right to assume that the Velocity was in the act of crossing the river than that she was pursuing an ordinary course in her way down the river. The learned Judge of the Court of Admiralty held that, as the vessels were crossing, the Carbon ought to have kept out of the Velocity's way. And the counsel for the respondents argued that, if this were the case, the Velocity, by the 18th article of the regulations, ought to have kept her course,—which they interpreted to mean, that she should have followed the direction in which her head happened to be turned at the time when she was seen by the Carbon. But such an interpretation of the rule would lead to constant uncertainty and perplexity, as the course of a vessel would be continually varying whenever she had to turn out of the way to avoid any other vessel, or might be compelled to follow the turns and windings of a river.

If the 18th article applies, the Velocity was bound to keep her course down the river on the north shore, and this course she kept till collision with the Carbon was imminent, when she put her helm hard-a-starboard to run herself on shore. Their Lordships are of opinion, however, that this was not a case in which either the 13th or the 14th article of the regulations was applicable. It was admitted that this was not a case of two ships under steam meeting end on, or nearly end on, under the 13th article, and in their Lordships' judgment the Velocity and the Carbon were not "crossing" within the 14th article. But putting the regulations aside, they are at a loss to discover what possible blame can be imputed to the Velocity. She had a perfect right to be where she was, and she was pursuing an usual course of navigation down the river, from which she never deviated until forced to do so by the peril of a collision into which she was brought by the sudden change of course of the Carbon. On the other hand, the Carbon appears to their Lordships to be wholly to blame. She knew, or ought to have known, that a vessel going down the river had a right to run down on the north shore, and that in the position in which she was the appearance to her of the red light of a vessel on that side of the mid-channel was no indication that the vessel was in the act of crossing the river; and yet there being nothing else to justify the belief, she acts at once upon her hasty and erroneous conclusion and so occasions the collision. Even supposing the Carbon to have excusably mistaken the course of the Velocity, how can she recover unless she shews that the Velocity was in fault?

Their Lordships (as already observed) are unable to discover that any degree of blame can be attributed to the Velocity either by her having pursued a course which she was not at liberty to pursue, or having been handled in any way which the course down the north shore did not prescribe.

They will therefore recommend to Her Majesty to reverse the decree appealed from, to dismiss the appellants from the suit, and to condemn the respondents in the costs in the Court below, and also in the costs of this appeal.

Jurisdiction—Limited Liability—Vessel not under Arrest.

In suits for limiting the liability of the owners of a wrong-doing vessel the Court has jurisdiction if bail has been given by her owners, even though no arrest has actually taken place.

This was a question as to the jurisdiction of the Court, and arose out of a suit to limit the liability of the owners of the Northumbria in respect of a collision with the Hesperia.

The case had been before the Court on a previous occasion as to the period from which interest should accrue from the wrongdoer (1); and since then a question was raised as to the jurisdiction of the Court, inasmuch as the vessel was not technically under arrest at the time of the institution of the suit for limitation of liability (2).

Butt and Steavenson for the Northumbria.—Those who have appeared have not, either by plea or otherwise, objected to the jurisdiction, which is therefore conclusive, except against those not before the Court—The Kalamazoo (3).

E. C. Clarkson, for the Hesperia, and Gainsford Bruce, for the owners of the cargo of the Hesperia, supported the application.

Cour. adv. vult.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE (on December 21st).—In the present case the vessel has not been under arrest, because the owners, under rule 55 of this Court, took out a caveat warrant, and offered to give bail.

(1) See The Northumbria, p. 3.

(2) The section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, which gives the Court jurisdiction, is as follows:—Section 13. Whenever any ship or vessel, or the proceeds thereof, are under the arrest of the High Court of Admiralty, the said Court shall have the same powers as are conferred upon the High Court of Chancery in England by the ninth part of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854.

(3) 16 Jurist, 885.

Bail having been given, the formal warrant of arrest became unnecessary. Stripped of these technicalities, the plain meaning of this language is this: The defendant says to the plaintiff, "Don't arrest my ship; I will consent to give that bail which would have released my ship if the warrant had been served upon her." There can be no doubt, I think, what was the intention of the legislature in the section to which I have referred—namely, that whenever the Court was seized of the "res," the jurisdiction as to limitation of liability should attach. The bail is the representative of the "res," and to all intents and purposes the Court is as much seized of the possession as if the "res" itself had been under warrant of arrest and released. According to the old practice, the jurisdiction of the Queen's Bench was in certain cases only founded on the fact of the defendant being in the custody of its marshal; but this principle was holden to be satisfied by the defendant's appearance, or by his putting in bail, "for," as Mr. Smith, in his Action at Law, ed. 1857, p. 7, observes, "in those cases, though not in the real, he was in the constructive custody of the marshal." And surely, in the case before me, the "res" is in the constructive, though not in the real custody of the marshal of the Court. But even if this analogy be unsound, which it does not appear to me to be, I should still be of opinion that, looking to the whole scope and tenor of the Act, the jurisdiction of this Court was intended to be founded in suits of this description, when it is in possession of the bail which represents the "res" whether the "res" has been released in the giving of bail after the arrest, or whether the arrest has been prevented, as in this instance, by such a caveat as has been issued in this case.

Decree accordingly.

THE ENERGY.

Damage—Action against Steam-tug for Collision whilst Towing.

The L. A., in charge of a pilot and in tow of the steam-tug, E., was coming up the river Thames, and the M. under full sail, was crossing. The E. attempted to tow the L. A. ahead of the M., but the L. A. and M. came into collision:—Held, that the steam-tug was to blame for attempting to tow across the bows of the M., and the pilot of the L. A. for not ordering the E. to slip the tow-rope in time to avoid the collision. And a suit by the owners of the L. A. to condemn the steam-tug E. in the damage done to both the M. and L. A., was dismissed, but without costs.

This was a cause of damage by the owners of the barque Lizzie Aisbitt against the steam-tug Energy to recover damages and losses occasioned by a collision between a brig called the Mary and the Lizzie Aisbitt while the latter was in tow of the Energy.

On the 1st day of April, 1867, the Energy took the Lizzie Aisbitt in tow off Southend for London, and when in Clement's Reach, the Mary was standing over to the northward and westward beating up the river. The steam-tug endeavoured to tow the Lizzie Aisbitt ahead of the Mary, and herself just passed clear, but although attempts were made to cast off the tow-rope, the stem of the Lizzie Aisbitt struck the Mary amidships, and did her considerable damage. The Lizzie Aisbitt was in charge of a duly licensed pilot, whom the owners were compelled to employ. For this collision an action was brought by the owners of the Mary against the Lizzie Aisbitt in the High Court of Admiralty, and on the 23rd of November, 1867, the Court condemned the Lizzie Aisbitt in the damage to the Mary; and the owners of the Lizzie Aisbitt now sought to recover from the Energy the amount of the damage done both to the Mary and the Lizzie Aisbitt.

Cur. adv. vult.

NEW SERIES, 39.—ADMIRALTY.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE.—After a lapse of more than two years, no cause being assigned for the delay, the Lizzie Aisbitt has brought an action against the Energy, praying that she may be condemned in all the damages and losses occasioned to the plaintiff by reason of the said collision, or the negligence or want of skill of those on board the steam-tug Energy.

Two questions of law have been suggested in argument in this case, first, whether the Court has jurisdiction in this matter; second, whether the Energy has broken her contract with the Lizzie Aisbitt, and thereby become responsible to her for the damages incurred by the collision.

The question as to jurisdiction does not come before the Court for the first time. The jurisdiction of the Court was recognised to a certain extent in the case of the Julia, to which I will presently more fully refer. In the Nightwatch (1) it was directly affirmed, a case precisely similar in its circumstances to the present, while in the Robert Pow (2), the limits within which the jurisdiction must be exercised were laid down. I pronounce, therefore, in favour of the jurisdiction of the Court.

I have next to consider whether the Energy has, by reason of a breach of contract with the Lizzie Aisbitt, become liable for the damage occasioned by the collision of that vessel with the Mary. In the year 1841, Dr. Lushington decided in the Duke of Sussex (3) that a steam-tug employed in towing a vessel in the river Medway was not responsible for a damage occasioned by the vessel in tow coming in contact with another vessel, the vessel in tow having a licensed pilot on board at the time, and no error or negligence being established on the part of the crew of the steam-tug. In the course of his judgment he observed: "Does, then, the circumstance of a vessel, being in tow at the time, in any degree alter the liability of parties? I apprehend not. What would be the consequence of taking the responsibility from the pilot on board a vessel in tow, and casting it upon the steamer? Its immediate effect would be a conflict of authorities which would lead to inextricable confusion, and be highly prejudicial to the owners of vessels. Under the existing law, if a licensed pilot is on board and his orders are obeyed, the owners are absolved from responsibility for damage occasioned by the vessel; but if the pilot was to be deprived of his authority, and the steamer was not bound to follow his directions, and a collision ensued, the steamer would be the agent of the owners of the vessel in tow, and the owners of that vessel would no longer be protected by the Act of Parliament.

In 1848 the same learned judge decided in the case of the Christina(4) that steam-tugs employed in an ordinary service of towing merchant vessels, are bound to be subservient to the orders of the pilot on board the vessel in tow. In delivering his judgment Dr. Lushington said: "The action in this case is brought by the owners of a steam-tug, alleging that, in pursuance of a contract with the owners of the vessel proceeded against, they duly fulfilled that contract in towing her from Gravesend to the Surrey Canal Docks. This averment is denied by the owners of the Christina, and it is alleged in their behalf that a collision with a brig called the Mary Clarke was occasioned by the misconduct of the persons on board the steam-tug, and that the owners of the barque having incurred heavy expenses in repairing the brig as well as their own vessel, were entitled to keep back the 8*l.* claimed by the steam-tug by way of a set-off. The true question, I conceive, which I have to determine is, not whether there is anything in this case in the nature of a set-off, but whether the owners of the steam-tug have fulfilled the contract which they allege themselves to have entered into with the owners of the vessel proceeded against. In a former decision, I have had occasion to observe, that in all ordinary cases of this kind, I consider it to be a part of the contract itself, that the steam-tug should be subservient to the pilot on board the vessel in tow, and that it is the duty of the persons on board the steam-tug implicitly to obey and carry out his orders. I am speaking now of a steam-tug in the performance of an ordinary towage service. There may, indeed, be cases in which this duty ought to be relaxed, and where the rule could not possibly be applied, as, for example, in cases of salvage, where the master of the steam-tug is called in to remedy the errors or misfortunes of the pilot, or where he sees a pilot acting in such a manner as to threaten the certain destruction of his own vessel, and to endanger the lives and property of others. In such cases, the master of the steam-tug would unquestionably be justified in exercising his own discretion, and in acting upon his own knowledge independently of the pilot. But these cases, it is to be observed, form the exceptions to a general rule, and where such exceptions are alleged, they must be proved by the fullest and most satisfactory evidence. In delivering my judgment in the case of the Duke of Sussex, I expressed my strong opinion upon the necessity of adhering rigidly to this rule, and I see no reason to depart from that opinion in the present instance."

In 1861, in the case of the Julia, 1 Lush. 231, the Privy Council dealt with this question of contract as follows:—"The tug was hired off Folkestone, and the contract was, that she should take the Julia in tow when required, and tow her as far as Gravesend. Their lordships think it quite immaterial whether this hiring took place on the importunity of the crew of the tug, or on the spontaneous suggestion of the master of the Julia. When the contract was made, the law would imply an engagement that each vessel would perform its duty in completing it; that proper skill and diligence would be used on board of each, and that neither vessel, by neglect or misconduct, would create unnecessary risk to the other, or increase any risk which might be incidental to the service undertaken. If, in the course of the performance of this contract, any inevitable accident happened to the one without any default on the part of the other, no cause of action could arise. Such an accident would be one of the necessary risks of the engagement to which each party was subject, and could create no liability on the part of the other. If, on the other hand, the wrongful act of either occasioned any damage to the other, such wrongful act would create a responsibility on the party committing it, if the sufferer had not by any misconduct or unskilfulness on his part contributed to the accident. These are the plain rules of law by which their lordships think that the case is to be governed."

The conditions of the contract, therefore, between the tug and the vessel towed under the charge of a pilot, are, so far as they affect this case, that on the one hand the tug shall be competent to tow the ship and shall obey the orders of the pilot, and that on the other hand the pilot shall give proper directions to the tug and superintend her navigation as well as that of the ship on which he is aboard. The defence of the tug Energy in this present action is two-fold: first, that she acted rightly in porting and crossing the bows of the Mary, and that the Lizzie Aisbitt acted wrongly in starboarding and trying to pass under the stern of the Mary; secondly, that the pilot did not give the proper directions to the Energy.

The facts of the case, so far as it is necessary to state them, are as follows:—

[His Lordship stated the facts of the case and proceeded.]

The master of the Lizzie Aisbitt says that the river was thronged with vessels, and that the tug ought not to have gone, as she did, up mid-channel, but on one or the other side of the river. The Trinity masters do not think the tug was wrong in the course which she took; if she were wrong the pilot was to blame for not giving her orders to alter her course. There were 150 feet of tow rope out. The Lizzie Aisbitt had passed two vessels lying in the stream, one by starboarding, the other by porting, just before the collision, and the Mary was particularly noticed by the pilot at a distance of 250 feet, when the tug and the Lizzie Aisbitt were straight up the reach. The Mary was standing across the river on the port tack, and the tug ported and cleared the Mary, the Lizzie Aisbitt starboarded under the direction of the pilot and ran into her amidships on the starboard side. The pilot had previously run to let go the rope, which was wound round the starboard bitt-head, but he found no one, he says, to help him in doing this.

The Trinity masters advise me that when the Mary was seen, it must have been apparent that she was not backing and filling, but under full sail standing to the north on the port tack, and of course with headway upon her, and it was an error in judgment on the part of the tug to attempt to tow the Lizzie Aisbitt across the bows of the Mary. The Lizzie Aisbitt would probably have come into collision if she had followed the tug, although the tug herself just succeeded in clearing the Mary.

The first defence, therefore, set up on behalf of the tug in this cause fails.

I have now to consider the second defence, viz., that the pilot did not give proper directions to the tug. It was the duty of the pilot, when the tug ported, to hail her to let go the tow rope. The tow rope on board the tug is attached by a simple slip, an eye over a hook, so fastened that it can be let go immediately. The pilot, according to his own evidence, gave no order at all to the tug, but ran himself to cast the rope off from the starboard bitts round which it was belayed; in doing which, he was, as I have said, unassisted. The tug, if the proper order had been given to her, could have cast off her rope in a much shorter time. And if that order had been given, in all probability the barque would have gone under the stern of the Mary, and the collision would not have taken place. If the tug had disobeyed the order of the pilot, she would have been guilty of a breach of contract, and have been responsible for the collision. As it was, the tug committed an error which was not corrected, as it ought to have been, by an order from the pilot. I must, therefore, dismiss the suit against the tug; but, having regard to all the circumstances, I shall make no order as to costs.

Damage—Reference to Registrar—Claim by Underwriters—Evidence.

On a reference to the registrar in a cause of damage the plaintiffs, who were underwriters of the cargo, and had paid as for a total loss, produced in support of their title as owners of the cargo lost, the policies of insurance of the cargo, the bills of lading, and the invoice and copy manifest;—Held, that the plaintiffs must give further evidence of the value of the goods, and of a discharge from the owners of the cargo.

This was a special case for the opinion of the Court upon the questions of law arising from the following facts:—The ship John Bellamy had been pronounced solely to blame in certain causes of damage instituted against her in the High Court of Admiralty, and had been condemned in damages and costs. On the reference to the registrar and merchants, it appeared that one of the causes had been instituted on behalf of Richard Rhod Swan and others, "owners of cargo, now or lately laden on board the brigantine or vessel Eureka." But these plaintiffs turned out to be not the owners of the cargo at the time of shipping it, but underwriters upon the cargo who had paid for a total loss upon it before the institution of the suit. They produced the policies of insurance, which had been given up to them, and the bills of lading, and also the invoice, and a copy of the manifest.

Deane and Clarkson, for plaintiffs.—As holders of the bills of lading of the cargo, and having paid for a total loss, the plaintiffs are the absolute owners; they are the only proper persons able to give a discharge, and cannot be compelled to discover the owners of the cargo at the time of shipment otherwise than as appears by the bills of lading, or shew that the insurance moneys were paid to them, or on their account, further than is shewn by the delivery up of the policies and bills of lading. The plaintiffs are not bound to obtain their discharge.

Butt and Cohen, for the defendants.—The plaintiffs should prove who were the true owners of the cargo, and to whom, and on what account, the insurance moneys were paid. They should also procure a discharge from the persons on whose behalf the cargo was shipped, as, until this is done, the defendants are unable to investigate and settle the proper value of the cargo which they would have to pay.

Cur. adv. vult.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE.—That the underwriters must sue in this Court in the name of the owner is a position admitted by the counsel on both sides. It is an equally incontrovertible position that where, as in this case, an abandonment by the shippers to the underwriters is proved, all that the shippers can give is passed to the underwriters. The question is, have the shippers given such a title to the underwriters as enables them to claim from the defendants the damages and costs due to the owners of cargo on board the Eureka, or, in other words, have the shippers proved that they were, or that they represent, the owners of the cargo, who are indemnified by the party condemned in those damages? The defendants, the obligati ex delicto, have certainly a right to be secured against the liability of a future demand from the possessors of a better title than that which has been furnished by the shippers to the underwriters.

The defendants contend that they would not have this security if they paid the compensation awarded to the underwriters on the present evidence, and that they are entitled to insist on the production of a discharge from the original owners, which the underwriters cannot or will not obtain from the shippers.

The underwriters maintain that they have produced all the requisite evidence; they rely on the fact of the shipment of the goods by the shippers, proved by the bills of lading, on the fact of the insurance of the goods by the shippers, proved by the return of the policies and receipt for the money paid upon the insurances, and upon the proposition of law that the shipper is the agent of the owner so as to bind him in this matter, and to secure the defendant against any future demand from him. I have to consider whether this evidence of title to the property be adequate, and such as the defendant must accept.

First, as to the bill of lading. This instrument is not per se incontrovertible evidence that the property specified in it has passed to the holder.

A bill of lading is a contract of carriage, disclosing the names of shipper and consignee only, and does not prove that the shipper is the owner. These bills are usually drawn out in triplicate; in the present instance I observe that the bill of lading has these words: "In witness whereof, the master, or purser, of the said ship has affirmed to four bills of lading, all of this tenor and date, the one of which bills being accomplished, the other three to stand void." It may be that one of these bills of lading has been delivered at an earlier date to some persons other than the underwriters, which other persons would, on the ground of earlier possession of the bill of lading, have a prior title to the goods—Barber and others v. Myerstein (1), Couturier and others v. Hastie and others (2).

With respect to the fact of insuring, the insured may have done so as agents, or have had an insurable interest of their own in the goods, distinguishable from property in them.

With respect to the receipt of the money paid on the insurance, the insurer is only concerned in ascertaining that the money is paid to the person who insured, who, as I have already said, is not necessarily the owner of the goods.

With respect to the contention that the shipper is the agent of the owner and would bind him by his act in this matter, and therefore secure the defendant from future liability, no authority has been cited which satisfies me that this proposition of law is sound. The shipper is the agent of the owner to put the goods on board, but I am not satisfied that the insurance of the goods is within the ordinary scope of his agency; and no special circumstance is suggested in the case before me. It has also been contended by the counsel for the defendant that he is entitled to the best evidence as to the value of the goods which he is to pay. The underwriters, of course, do not know the value of the goods, and the invoice does not necessarily furnish it. The real value may be, and often is, from various causes, not represented in the invoice, and it is urged that if the owners were disclosed the defendant would have the means of ascertaining the true value of which he is now deprived, and that the underwriters ought not to be allowed to stand in a more favourable position than the owner whom they represent.

After some consideration, I am of opinion that the defendant is entitled to require evidence of a discharge from the original owners before the underwriters can enter upon the investigation of the amount of compensation for which he is liable.

I do not mean, however, to decide that sufficient evidence of the value of the goods may not be obtained without a personal examination of the owners, and incurring an expense which such an examination in the case of foreign owners must entail. No order as to costs.

Decree accordingly.

THE PRINCESS ROYAL.

Amendment—Mistake in the Præcipe to institute Cause.

In the præcipe to institute the cause the plaintiffs stated the suit as one of "damage to cargo," and the affidavit to lead warrant alleged that plaintiffs had sustained damage by breach of duty and breach of contract. After the arrest of the ship and appearance entered on behalf of her owners' motion to amend by striking out of the præcipe to institute the words "damage to cargo," and substituting the words "breach of duty and breach of contract on the part of the master and crew," granted on payment of the costs occasioned by the mis-statement in the præcipe.

On the 24th of November, 1869, a cause was instituted on behalf of the owners of the cargo of the Princess Royal against the Princess Royal and her freight. In the præcipe to institute, the cause was stated to be "a cause of damage to cargo." At the time the cause was instituted, an affidavit to lead warrant was filed. The affidavit stated, that the plaintiffs had sustained considerable damages by the breach of duty and breach of contract on the part of the master and crew of the Princess Royal, and that no owner or part owner of the vessel was domiciled in England or Wales. A warrant was forthwith issued, and the ship was arrested on the 25th of November. On the 29th of November an appearance was entered on behalf of the owner of the Princess Royal.

H. H. Shephard, on behalf of the plaintiffs, now moved to amend the præcipe to institute by striking out the words "damage to cargo."

If necessary, it is proposed to substitute the words "breach of duty or breach of contract on the part of the owner, master or crew of the ship." Those are words used in the 6th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861.

Mr. G. F. Phillimore, for the defendants. The original motion, as it stood, was wholly improper, but if the application in the form in which it is now put by counsel be granted the plaintiffs should pay the costs of the cause up to the present time. Until now the whole proceedings have been irregular. A suitor cannot avail himself of the process of this Court to arrest a ship unless in the præcipe to institute he states the nature of the cause of action in respect of which he arrests her. The Court of Chancery has laid down very stringent rules with reference to the writ of ne exeat regno, and this Court should not be less careful to prevent the abuse of its process. Daniell's Chancery Practice, 4th ed. p. 1536. If the plaintiff in a cause arrests property he does so at his peril. The ship proceeded against has been arrested in a cause of damage to cargo, and now it is practically admitted that there is no cause of action in respect of damage to cargo.

SIR ROBERT PHILLIMORE.—The cause of action has been properly stated in the affidavit which is called the affidavit "to lead warrant," and all that the plaintiffs now by their motion as amended ask leave to do is to amend "the præcipe to institute," so as to make it correspond with the affidavit to lead warrant. I grant leave to the plaintiff to amend the præcipe by striking out the words "damage to cargo" and substituting the words "breach of duty or breach of contract on the part of the owner, master or crew of the ship." The plaintiffs must pay the costs occasioned by the mis-statement of the cause of action in the præcipe to institute.

Amendment accordingly.

1870. } THE HERMAN WEDEL.

Salvage—Jurisdiction under 1,000l.—Agreement.

Where a vessel had been arrested in two causes of salvage, which upon motion by consent of all parties had been consolidated, and a petition was afterwards filed, a motion by defendants to dismiss the suit with costs and damages, as the value of the property saved was under 1,000l., was rejected with costs.

Semble—Under the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, the High Court of Admiralty may in its discretion take cognizance of salvage suits when the value of the property saved is under 1,000l.

On the 2nd of February, 1870, the brig Herman Wedel, of Holmestrand, in Norway, having been found derelict, was brought into Dartmouth, and on the 3rd and 5th of the same month two causes of salvage, one in the sum of 1,800l. and the other in the sum of 2,500l., were instituted against the vessel, and, the master being unable to obtain bail, the vessel remained under arrest. The defendants appeared absolutely, and on the 11th of March the two suits were upon motion on behalf of the defendants consolidated.

Pritchard moved to dismiss the suits, and to condemn the plaintiffs in costs and damages.—It is clear, from the valuation of the person appointed by the receiver (under the 50th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1862), that the value of the property saved is only 950*l.*, and this valuation is confirmed by the affidavits on behalf of the defendants. The Court's jurisdiction is ousted immediately proof is given that the value is under 1,000*l.*—The Merchant Shipping Act (Amendment Act), 1862, s. 49; The William and John (1); The Louisa (2). The County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71) does not affect this case. This is not a cause transferred from the County Court under section 6, nor is section 9 (3) applicable, as there has been no agreement to take proceedings in this Court. That section cannot be construed to confer jurisdiction, otherwise it must give a similar jurisdiction in all salvage cases to every superior Court. As to damages he cited The Eleonore (4); The Margaret and Jane (5).

Deane and Cohen, for plaintiffs.—The affidavits filed by the defendants do not conclusively shew the value to be under 1,000*l.*, and the plaintiffs' affidavits contradict the fact, and prove a larger value. The consolidation of the causes amounts to an agreement that the causes should be tried in this Court, and under such circumstances the 9th section of the County Courts Act gives this Court jurisdiction.

(5) 38 Law J. Rep. (n.s.) Adm. 38.

Sir R. J. PHILLIMORE.—This is a cause of salvage, instituted in the High Court of Admiralty. The plaintiffs, having filed their petition, move the Court to order the defendants to file their answer, and to appoint an early day for an examination of a portion of the crew, and there is a counter motion on behalf of the defendants to this effect: That I will dismiss the suit for want of jurisdiction, and condemn the plaintiffs in the costs of the suit.

Now if the law compelled me to comply with the prayer of the defendants I should be very sorry, because I should feel that this Court had been made the instrument of doing considerable injustice. However, if the law be, as has been pressed upon me by the counsel for the defendants, that whenever it is disclosed to this Court that the sum is under the value specified in the 3rd section of the County Court Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, the jurisdiction of this Court is absolutely ousted, I should have no alternative but to make the order which the defendants pray.

The dates of proceedings in the cause are of some importance with respect to the application of the law to the facts of the case which I am about to mention.

This vessel, a derelict foreign vessel, was salvaged about the 2nd of February, and was brought into Plymouth on the 2nd or 3rd of February, and on the 9th of February the salvors instituted a cause in this Court.

On the 14th of February, the present defendants instituted an absolute appearance, and on the 25th of February, I find that the salvors having pressed the defendants to file affidavits as to the value of the ship were opposed by the defendants, and at the requisition of the defendants their application was rejected with costs. I mention that circumstance because it goes to shew that there was certainly on the part of the plaintiffs in this case a bona fide desire not to place a foreign vessel in a wrong position with respect to bail, but an earnest wish on their part apparently to ascertain what was the real value of the ship, and that bail should be given for that, and not for a fictitious amount.

On the 4th of March, I find there were affidavits filed by the defendants, one by a

Mr. Philip, another by a Mr. Ashford; making the value of the vessel 1,273*l.*, and of the cargo 677*l.* 9*s.* 6*d.*, therefore somewhat under the sum of 1,000*l.*; and on the 15th of March, at the request of the defendants, as well as the plaintiffs, the two causes of salvage which had been brought were consolidated, and it is not till the defendants are pressed for their answer in the plaintiffs' motion of to-day, that they set up for the first time that the Court has no jurisdiction by reason of the value of the vessel, and the cargo being under 1,000*l.*

Various cases have been cited to me, The William and John (1), and The Louisa (2) (which were principally relied upon to prove that under the Merchant Shipping Acts, which absolutely and in express terms took away the jurisdiction of this Court where the value was under 1,000*l.*), objection might be taken to the jurisdiction of the Court at any time, and in the opinion of my learned predecessor, was fatal to whatever extent proceedings had previously gone.

I do not find myself at all pressed with the authority of those cases; if I did I should certainly think it my duty to follow them, but since those cases were decided, the Statute 31 & 32 Vict., chapter 71, which was passed in 1868, has become the law of the land, and has made a most material difference (according to the language of the enactment) in the jurisdiction of this Court with respect to suits instituted for a value under 1,000*l.* Under the 6th section the Court may, although the case be one for a value of under the sum of 1,000*l.*, and pending in a County Court, in the exercise of its discretion, order it to be tried here. There is an entire change in the law since the decisions to which I have been referred, and since the passing of the Merchant Shipping Acts, on the language of which these decisions were entirely founded, and it is no longer the case, as it was when those decisions were given, that this Court has no discretion to exercise as to whether it will entertain cases in which the value is under 1,000*l.* The Court has that discretion, and therefore, as I have already said, those cases, as it appears to me, become inapplicable altogether as affording any guide to the Court in the present state of the law.

The 9th section says:—[His Lordship read the section, and proceeded.] It would suffice, perhaps, to have read those words of the statute to shew how entirely inapplicable the decisions under the Merchant Shipping Acts must be to the present state of the law. I agree with the argument of Mr. Cohen entirely, that looking to the dates which I have mentioned, and the proceedings of the defendants in this case, they must be construed as an agreement on their part that the case should be tried in the High Court of Admiralty, and if it were not so, I should hold that the Court having a discretion to exercise as to whether it would entertain this suit or not, the objection to its jurisdiction is taken at much too late a period, and I should not hesitate, if it were necessary, to make an order under the 9th section, that the case should proceed in this Court.

I should also observe that, if it were necessary to go into that part of the case, I am not satisfied upon the affidavits before me that (to use the words of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act) "the value of the property saved does not exceed 1,000*l.*" I think the fair deduction from the statements in the affidavits made (and in that I include the affidavits on both sides) would be that it did exceed, though not by a very large amount, 1,000*l.* But I do not rest my judgment upon that fact. I rest it on the question of law, that in my judgment, taking into consideration the sections to which I have referred, this Court has jurisdiction in this matter; and looking to the conduct of the defendants in this case, I think I should not do justice unless I rejected their motion with costs, and granted the motion of the plaintiff.

The Foreign Enlistment Act (59 Geo. 3. c. 69, s. 7) provides, that if any person shall, without the leave, &c., equip, furnish, or fit out, any ship or vessel with intent or in order that such ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of any foreign prince, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign state, as a transport, &c., every such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and every such ship shall be forfeited. The respondent's ship was fitted out as a transport for the service of certain persons in the island of Cuba, who had revolted from Spain, and had assumed to exercise government, and were conducting hostilities against Spain. It did not appear who the persons were or over what part of Cuba they assumed to exercise government:—Held, that inasmuch as the persons in whose service the ship was employed assumed to exercise government, there was a breach of the provisions of the Act, and the respondent's ship was liable to forfeiture.

This was an appeal from the Vice-Admiralty Court of the Bahamas dated the 13th of August, 1869, restoring a vessel called the Salvador, which had been seized by the Receiver General for a breach of the Foreign Enlistment Act, 59 Geo. 3. c. 69. s. 7 (1) under a warrant issued by His Excellency the Governor of the Bahama Islands.

NEW SERIES, 39.—ADMIRALTY.

The cause commenced in the Vice-Admiralty Court on the 22nd of May, 1869, and on the 29th of May, 1869, an appearance, under protest, was entered for James Carlin, and a claim filed in his name for the vessel. These proceedings were followed by a protest, which raised the question, amongst others, whether a cause of forfeiture could be sustained under the sixth section of the Act, and the Judge ultimately decided that the causes of forfeiture must be confined to alleged breaches foreign state, colony, province or part of any province or people, as a transport or store ship, or with intent to cruise or commit hostilities against any prince, state or potentate, or against the subjects or citizens of any prince, state or potentate, or against the persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in any colony, province or part of any province or country, or against the inhabitants of any colony, province or part of any province or country, with whom His Majesty shall not then be at war; or shall, within the United Kingdom, or any of His Majesty's dominions, or in any settlement, colony, territory, island or place belonging or subject to His Majesty, issue or deliver any commission for any ship or vessel, to the intent that such ship or vessel shall be employed as aforesaid, every such person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanour, and shall, upon conviction thereof, upon any information or indictment, be punished by fine and imprisonment, or either of them, at the discretion of the Court in which such offender shall be convicted; and every such ship or vessel, with the tackle, apparel and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition and stores, which may belong to or be on board of any such ship or vessel, shall be forfeited; and it shall be lawful for any officer of His Majesty's customs or excise, or any officer of His Majesty's navy, who is by law empowered to make seizures, for any forfeiture incurred under any of the laws of customs or excise, or the laws of trade and navigation, to seize such ships and vessels aforesaid, and in such places and in such manner in which the officers of His Majesty's customs or excise and the officers of His Majesty's navy are empowered respectively to make seizures under the laws of customs and excise, or under the laws of trade and navigation; and that every such ship and vessel, with the tackle, apparel, and furniture, together with all the materials, arms, ammunition, and stores which may belong to or be on board of such ship or vessel, may be prosecuted and condemned in the like manner, and in such Courts as ships or vessels may be prosecuted and condemned for any breach of the laws made for the protection of the revenues of customs and excise, or of the laws of trade and navigation.

of the seventh section, and the protest was overruled so far as related to those causes of forfeiture, to which the claimant was ordered to appear absolutely.

On the 22nd of June an information on the part of the Crown was filed, claiming the forfeiture of the vessel, for a breach of the seventh section of the Foreign Enlistment Act, and witnesses were examined.

On the 6th of July, the said James Carlin, by his proctor, filed a plea denying the said allegations of the Advocate General, and alleging that neither he nor any other person or persons did, within Her Majesty's dominions, equip, furnish, or fit out, or aid or assist, nor was he or they concerned in the equipping, furnishing, or fitting out of the said steam ship Salvador, with intent or in order that the said ship should be employed as a transport or store ship in the service and for the purposes in the said information alleged, and he prayed restitution of the said ship.

No evidence was adduced on the part of the respondent.

The circumstances under which the Salvador was seized were as follows:—

The Salvador sailed from the port of Havanna, in the island of Cuba, on the 22nd of February, 1869, for Jacksonville.

On the 24th day of March, 1869, the administrator of the Government of the Bahama Islands issued a proclamation under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act.

The Salvador, instead of going to Jacksonville, put into Key-West for repairs, and stayed there for about two months. She then sailed for Nassau, without any cargo, but having forty-two passengers on board, all Cubans. She arrived in the harbour of Nassau in the afternoon of the 7th day of May, and on the 8th of May the Receiver General went on board, and searched her. She had then nothing in her hold but coal, but he found some packages which had been sent on board without his permission, which contained coarse brown holland shirts and trousers, boots and gaiters, and one contained hat-bands and cockades; there were also seven rifles, and empty flannel cartridge bags for a six-pounder field piece. In another box two flags, one an English ensign and the other blue and white stripes with a red triangle at the head, and a star in the centre. The hat-bands contained the same device as the flag.

The vessel was on the 10th of May cleared for St. Thomas, and she broke ground and left the harbour of Nassau at about 5 o'clock p.m.

It further appeared that after she had passed Fort Montague a short distance she again cast anchor, and that between her doing so and 6 o'clock on the morning of the 11th she received on board about eighty passengers from the shore, who were described as Cubans.

On the Receiver General proceeding in the cutter belonging to Her Majesty's ship Royalist, to detain the Salvador, and when within about 100 yards of her, the anchor was hove up, and the Salvador at the same time moved ahead; a shot was then fired across her bows to stop her, but she paid no attention to the signal and proceeded on her voyage, her decks apparently crowded with men.

The Salvador then went direct to Cuba, arriving there early on Friday morning, remaining there two days without making any attempt to go into port, some of the cases containing clothes, shoes, and boots were opened on board and the rifles taken ashore, and landed on the quays. All the passengers with the rest of the cargo were also landed, and some ten hours afterwards they had erected a battery and had thrown out skirmishers. The respondent himself stated this, and also that while they were at the quays seeing a Spanish man-of-war passing, they abandoned the vessel and were about to set her on fire, but as the man-of-war passed without seeing them, they again took charge of her.

The Salvador then sailed from the quays and arrived at Nassau on the following evening where she was immediately seized.

The cause was heard on the merits, and on the 13th of August, 1869, the acting Judge of the Vice Admiralty Court made a decree restoring the Salvador.

From this judgment the present appeal was brought.

The Attorney General (Sir R. Collier), the Queen's Advocate (Sir Travers Twiss), and Mr. Archibald, for the Crown.—It was proved by the evidence that there was justifiable cause of seizure and forfeiture. If it be necessary that the vessel employed be in the service of a body of persons assuming to exercise the powers of government, the offence is still complete because the insurgents in Cuba not only assumed, but did in fact exercise government in Cuba or in a portion of that island. There was an offence under the provisions of the Foreign Enlistment Act, if the vessel was fitted out with the intention that she should be used either as a ship of war or as a transport against a power with whom the Queen is at peace. It is immaterial that the vessel is in the service of a body of persons. If she is employed for any of the forbidden purposes by a private person, the person who fits her out is guilty of a misdemeanour under the Act, and the vessel is liable to forfeiture.

They referred to the declaration of the King of Spain (14 Jan. 1819) (2), Proclamation, 1801 (3), and to Vattel (4).

No appearance was entered on behalf of the respondent.

LORD CAIRNS delivered the judgment of their Lordships.

This is an appeal from the decision of the Vice-Admiralty Court of the Bahamas, upon an information filed on behalf of the Crown before that Court under the Foreign Enlistment Act, with regard to the ship Salvador, and seeking her confiscation.

The clause in the Foreign Enlistment Act which has to be considered is the seventh. It has frequently been remarked that the interpretation of that clause is attended with some difficulty, mainly owing to the great quantity of words which are used in the clause; but endeavouring for the moment to set aside the verbiage of the clause, it is obvious that, in order to constitute an offence under it, five propositions must be established. In the first place, the ship, which in other respects is found to be acting within the meaning of the clause, must be acting without the leave and licence of the Sovereign of this country. That is the first element of the charge under the clause. The second is this: The ship must be equipped, furnished, fitted out or armed, or there must be a procuring, or an attempt or endeavour to equip, furnish, fit out, or arm the ship. The third is, that the equipping, furnishing, fitting out, or arming of the ship must be done with the intent or in order that the ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of some "foreign prince, state, or potentate, or some foreign colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign state, colony, province, or part of any province or people."

Then the fourth element in the charge is this: There must be an intent to employ the ship in one of two capacities, either "as a transport or store-ship against any prince, state, or potentate;" or "with intent to cruise or commit hostilities against any prince, state, or potentate." I pause for the purpose of observing that the words are not very happily chosen which represent her as being employed "as a transport or store-ship against any prince, state, or potentate;" but it is clear, open as the words may be to criticism, that the intent is that the ship should be employed in one of the two capacities I have mentioned, and not only so, but employed "against," that is in the way of aggression against some foreign prince, potentate, or state. This should be done, as I have already said, against some prince, state, or potentate, "or against the subjects or citizens of any prince, state, or potentate, or against the persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in any colony, province, or part of any province or country, or against the inhabitants of any foreign colony, province, or part of any province or country."

And the fifth element is, that this foreign state or potentate, and so on, should be one with whom the sovereign of this country should not then be at war.

Those are the five elements which go to make up the whole charge under the seventh clause.

Now, with regard to the first which I have mentioned, the absence of leave and

(2) 6 State Papers, p. 1,134.

(3) 4 State Papers, p. 488.

(4) B. iii. c. 8.

license on the part of her Majesty, no question arises.

With regard to the second, namely, that there must be an equipping, furnishing, fitting up, or arming, or a procuring, or an attempt to do so, no question can arise in this case when we read the evidence of Mr. Dumaresq, the Receiver General and Treasurer of the Island, who states the condition in which he found the ship, and the preparations made on board of her, which seem to their Lordships to amount to a fitting out or arming, or an attempt to do so, within the meaning of this clause. The learned Judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court seems to have entertained no doubt himself upon this part of the case.

I pass over the third element which I mentioned, for the moment, in order to say that upon the fourth and fifth heads to which I have referred there can also be no doubt entertained, as it seems to their Lordships; and here again, no doubt was entertained by the learned Judge of the Court below. It is quite clear that the ship was intended to be used as a transport or store-ship against a prince, state, or potentate with whom her Majesty is not now at war. She was to be used obviously as a transport or store-ship for the purpose of conveying to Cuba men and materials; and in that way to do the duty of a transport ship, and so to inflict injury upon the Spanish Government, who at that time were, and are now, the lawful authority having the dominion over Cuba. Here, again, no doubt was entertained by the learned Judge in the Court below, and no doubt could be entertained by any one who looks at the evidence of Mr. Dumaresq, to which I have already adverted, and also the evidence of Mr. Butler, both of whom state what the report was which was made to themselves by Carlin, the master of this vessel, as to her conduct when she went to the coast of Cuba—how she landed all the men she had on board, plainly for the purpose of taking part in the insurrection which was going on in Cuba—how they abandoned the ship when they saw a Spanish ship of war in sight—how they were prepared to set fire to their ship if the Spanish ship approached them—and how afterwards, when they found that they were unnoticed, they took possession of the Salvador again, and brought her back to Nassau.

That leaves uncovered only the third element of charge in this clause, and it is upon that alone that the learned Judge of the Vice-Admiralty Court entertained any doubt.

The third element is, that the ship must be employed in this way in the service of some "foreign prince, state, or potentate, or of any foreign colony, province, or part of any province or people, or of any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign state, colony, province, or part of any province or people." It is to be observed that this part of the section is in the alternative. The ship may be employed in the service of a foreign prince, state, or potentate, or foreign state, colony, province, or part of any province or people; that is to say, if you find any consolidated body in the foreign state, whether it be the potentate, who has the absolute dominion, or the Government, or a part of the province or of the people, or the whole of the province or the people acting for themselves, that is sufficient. But by way of alternative, it is suggested that there may be a case where, although you cannot say that the province or the people, or a part of the province or people are employing the ship, there yet may be some person or persons who may be exercising or assuming to exercise powers of government in the foreign colony or state, drawing the whole of the material aid for the hostile proceedings from abroad; and therefore, by way of alternative, it is stated to be sufficient if you find the ship prepared or acting in the service of "any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign state, colony, province, or part of any province or people;" but that alternative need not be resorted to if you find the ship is fitted out and armed for the purpose of being employed in the service of any foreign state or people, or part of any province or people.

Upon that the observation of the learned Judge was this: "We have no evidence of the object of the insurrection, who are the leaders, what portion of Cuba they have possession of, in what manner this insurrection is controlled or supported, or in what manner they govern themselves. How, therefore, can I say that they are assuming the powers of government in or over any part of the island of Cuba?"

Now, it appears to their Lordships that the error into which the learned Judge below fell, was in confining his attention to what I have termed the second alternative of this part of the clause, and in disregarding the first part of the alternative. It may be (it is not necessary to decide whether it is so or not) that you could not state who were the person or persons, or that there were any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise powers of government in Cuba, in opposition to the Spanish authorities. That may be so: their Lordships express no opinion upon that subject, but they will assume that there might be a difficulty in bringing the case within that second alternative of the clause; but their Lordships are clearly of opinion that there is no difficulty in bringing the case under the first alternative of the clause, because their Lordships find these propositions established beyond all doubt: there was an insurrection in the island of Cuba; there were insurgents who had formed themselves into a body of people acting together, undertaking and conducting hostilities; these insurgents, beyond all doubt, formed part of the province or people of Cuba; and beyond all doubt the ship in question was to be employed, and was employed, in connexion with and in the service of this body of insurgents.

Those propositions being established, as their Lordships think they clearly are established, both by the evidence of Mr. Dumaresq and Mr. Butler, to which I have already referred, and further, by the evidence of the three witnesses, Loinaz Wells, and Mama, their Lordships think that the requisitions of the 7th clause in this respect are entirely fulfilled, and that the case is made out under this head as it is upon all other heads of the clause.

Their Lordships, therefore, will humbly recommend to Her Majesty that the decision of the Vice-Admiralty Court should be reversed, and that judgment should be pronounced for the Crown, according to the prayer of the information.

It has been intimated to their Lordships, that on the 7th of February, there was a decree by their Lordships for the appraisement and sale of the vessel. She has been sold, and the net proceeds, 163*l.* 4*s.* 8*d.*, paid into Her Majesty's Commissariat chest in the Bahamas. The Colonial Government, it appears, have incurred expenses to the amount of 145*l.* 5*s.* 10*d.* in keeping the vessel while she was under arrest, and they claim to be reimbursed those expenses out of the proceeds of the sale. That, of course, will be proper, and if it is necessary to make that part of this order, it will be done.

Bottomry—Notice—Owner—Insolvency—Assignees.

In no case can notice of the intention to raise money by bottomry be dispensed with.

Until an owner has been judicially declared insolvent, he is entitled to notice. But if an owner has been judicially declared insolvent, the assignees are entitled to notice.

This was an appeal from a judgment of the Judge of the High Court of Admiralty of England.

The cause in which the appeal arose was instituted to obtain payment of two bottomry bonds indorsed to the appellants, and dated, respectively, the 9th of October, 1868, and the 2nd of December, 1868. The facts were as follows—

On the 14th of April, 1868, the appellants chartered the Panama, belonging to Edwin Fincham, and commanded by John Mantle, for a voyage from Liverpool to Cuba and back. By the terms of the charter party, freight was to be paid only on the homeward cargo, and a sum of 500*l.* was to be advanced on sailing from Liverpool, and a further sum not exceeding 250*l.* at Cuba for ship's disbursements, if required.

The Panama, with a cargo of coals belonging to the appellants, sailed from Liverpool on the 14th of May following; but having met with bad weather, the master, after throwing overboard about thirty-five tons of coals, put into Queens-town, and there sold about forty tons more, and remitted the proceeds of sale to the owner, but the amount was not paid over by him to the charterers, the appellants. On the 27th of May the Panama left Queenstown and arrived at Cardenas on the 27th of July following, consigned to the appellants' agents, Messrs. Finlay & Co., of Havanna, by whom the vessel was chartered to go round to Trinidad de Cuba, a port on the south side of Havanna, and there take in a cargo of timber for England. At Cardenas and Trinidad de Cuba divers sums of money for disbursements, amounting together to about 500*l.*, were advanced by Messrs. Finlay & Co., on behalf of the appellants, for the use of the ship. 250*l.*, part of the said sum of 500*l.*, were advanced in pursuance of the stipulation in the charter party, and for the further sum of 250*l.* the first bottomry bond was given at Trinidad de Cuba, and amounted with maritime premium and other expenses to the sum of 318*l.* 16*s.* 0*d.* On the 12th of October following, the Panama left Trinidad de Cuba for London, but meeting with tempestuous weather, and having lost some of her sails and damaged some of her stores, put into Cardenas. She was there surveyed, and the master, being without funds or credit, threatened to sell a portion of the cargo, and thereupon Messrs. Finlay & Co., as agents for the appellants, and under an agreement for bottomry, displaced the master, appointed a new master, and advanced the necessary disbursements and expenses for the Panama. The disbursements and other expenses amounted to the sum of 378*l.* 3*s.* 0*d.*, and on the 2nd of December, 1868, a bottomry bond was accordingly signed by the master for that amount, together with 113*l.* 9*s.* 0*d.* maritime premium, and the sum of 250*l.* previously advanced to the master. The Panama, under the command of the new master, sailed from Cardenas on the 6th day of December following, and arrived at London on the 4th of January, 1869.

The owner of the Panama did not dispute the validity of the bonds, but the validity of the bonds was contested by the respondent, a mortgagee, and the bonds were referred to the Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty, to report the amount due upon the bonds, but without reference to any question as to their validity.

The Registrar reported that all the charges were quite proper, that the bottomry premium was not excessive, and that he was not aware that any of the items could have been struck out. He also reported that the second bond was invalid by reason that the bondholder had given the owner no previous notice of the execution of the bond.

Against this report the appellants appealed to the Judge, and it was agreed between the parties that the Judge should decide the question of the validity of the bond.

The appeal was heard, and on the 30th of July, 1869, the learned Judge of the Admiralty Court pronounced against the validity of the bond, on the ground that the appellants had not communicated with the owner of the vessel before the bonds were executed.

From this judgment the present appeal was brought.

The case in the Court below is reported 30 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) Adm. 67.

Mr. Butt and Mr. Pritchard, for the appellants.—The question of communication with the owner is one which goes only to the authority of the master to execute the bonds, and the evidence in this case shews that the circumstances in which the master was placed authorised him to contract a loan on bottomry. Under the circumstances, the execution of the bonds, without waiting for communication with the owner, was the right course for the master to take, regard being had to the interests of his owner. The conduct of the owner amounted to a ratification of the master's act in executing the bonds. But the owner in this case was insolvent; it was therefore useless to give notice to the owner.

Mr. Milward and Mr. Clarkson, for the respondent.—Notice to the owner must, under any circumstances, be given before bottomry. The master did not communicate with the owner before resorting to bottomry in this case. It is said that it was unnecessary, because the owner was insolvent. If that was the case, the assignees should have been communicated with. At all events, the appellants ought to have communicated with the respondent before directing their agents to take a bond of bottomry. The bond was therefore invalid. It is, however, denied that the owner was insolvent; an owner cannot be said to be insolvent till he is adjudicated bankrupt.

LORD ROMILLY delivered the judgment of their Lordships.—The short statement of the case is this: The appellants chartered a vessel; she got into difficulties and was obliged to go to Cardenas, in Cuba, on the 12th of October, 1868. When she got there, the master attempted to raise money and found that he could not do it, and the agents of the charterers in Cuba telegraphed to Liverpool on the 24th of November to ask what they were to do in the matter. The telegraphic message which they sent is striking, upon the only point on which their lordships' opinion is asked, for it is to this effect: "*Panama wants 200*l.* to clear; also 160*l.* claimed by Mantle for wages; are ready to advance all, but he must leave vessel to captain appointed by consul. See owner. Answer.*" Well, there is an express direction by the agents at Cardenas to the charterers to see the owner, and to take care what answer shall be given. The telegraphic message in answer is sent on the following day:—"Do best—our interest; appoint new master; secure advance; bottomry." The agents were quite ready to advance the money; but, nevertheless, the charterers informed them that they must appoint a new master and raise the money by bottomry. Instead of complying with the request, made by the agents at Cuba, to see the owner, the appellants do nothing of the sort, although the owner was in the same town, and apparently attending his office every day, and they might perfectly well have seen him.

Now, their Lordships do not intend to lay down that it is necessary, if the owner cannot be served with notice, that notice must be given to a mortgagee; that question does not arise; but what they wish to express is, that it was absolutely necessary in this case to give notice to the owner. The excuse given here is that the owner was insolvent. Their Lordships think that this is not technicality, but a matter of substance, and that it is important that the owner should receive notice, in order to enable him to raise money for the purpose of rescuing his vessel from its difficulties at a smaller amount of premium than the maritime premium would necessarily entail.

The excuse alleged is that he was insolvent. Their Lordships think this excuse fails. In the first place, either he had been insolvent and declared so judicially, or he had not. If he had been declared so judicially, the ownership in the vessel is transferred to other persons, and those persons are the persons who ought to receive notice; and the assignees would be the persons who might think it for the benefit of the creditors of the estate that they themselves should supply or obtain the money required.

Neither do their Lordships think that the question raised respecting the demurrage and the expense afford any excuse in this case; because, if the money were obtained in Liverpool, a telegraphic message sent to Cardenas would have caused the money to be paid in twenty-four hours.

It resolves itself, therefore, solely into a question of insolvency, and whether insolvency excuses the giving of notice, there having been no judicial insolvency. Their Lordships are of opinion that if they were to lay down this as a principle, it would produce a serious evil. In the first place, it is very difficult to tell whether a person is insolvent. Is it to depend on the ultimate result of whether he was actually insolvent at the time, and that the opinion of the charterer was correct?

The fact of whether a man is insolvent or not may depend upon the result of a single item in a contested account, which may involve a question of difficult legal decision. Insolvency finally may depend upon the expense of legal proceedings, and the time and manner of realising the assets. These would have to be taken into account.

Their Lordships are of opinion that until a person has been judicially declared insolvent, the owner is the person to receive notice, that he may be able to extricate himself from these difficulties, and that he should duly receive notice of the intention to raise money by bottomry. In case he is judicially declared insolvent, the ownership rests in other persons; but that in no case can a communication of notice be dispensed with.

Their Lordships, therefore, think that the judgment of the Court below is correct, affirming that of the Registrar; and their Lordships are of opinion that this appeal ought to be dismissed, with costs.

Account—Co-owners—Right to sue after ceasing to be Owner.

One who has parted with his shares in a vessel may nevertheless sue for the accounts as to her earnings while he was a co-owner. Motion to reject the petition dismissed, but without costs.

The petition in this case alleged (amongst other things) that on the 18th day of July, 1868, the plaintiff being then sole owner of The Lady of the Lake, sold to the defendant thirty-two sixty-fourth shares of the vessel, and that the vessel afterwards sailed under command of the defendant on a foreign voyage, and returned on the 9th day of August, 1869. That the plaintiff on the 31st day of August following sold the other thirty-two sixty-fourth shares to another person. The petition prayed for a reference of the accounts between the parties, a sale of the defendant's shares, and payment to the plaintiff of the amount due to him, with costs.

E. C. Clarkson, for the defendant, moved the Court to reject the petition. The plaintiff has no persona standi, inasmuch as the statute confers jurisdiction only in the case of persons who are co-owners at the time of the institution of the suit; and if it should appear that the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant, there would be no shares in Court to answer a decree in favour of the defendant. In proceedings of this kind there must be mutuality—Seton on Decrees, 3rd edition by Harrison and Leach, c. 2. s. 1. page 97.

Cohen, contra.—A master may sue for wages after he has ceased to be master, and resigned his authority over the vessel, and the owner of damaged goods may institute a suit for damage to cargo after he has parted with the damaged goods. One part-owner therefore may maintain an action against another part-owner for account, in respect of matters which took place while the relationship of co-owners existed between them.

Clarkson, in reply.

Our. adv. vult.

Judgment was given as follows on Jan. 18—

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE.—This is a motion by the defendant to reject the plaintiff's petition.

The petition states that the plaintiff was the sole owner of The Lady of the Lake; that he sold half the shares in the vessel to the defendant on the 18th of July, 1868; that the defendant sailed the vessel under his command on a voyage from Sunderland to Brazil; that she returned with a homeward cargo on the 9th of August, 1869. The plaintiff prays that the 8th section of 24 Vict. c. 10 may be put in force on his behalf, and that this Court will decide the questions and settle the accounts outstanding between him and the defendant as co-owners. But the plaintiff in his petition also states that on the 31st of August, 1869, he sold all his shares; that is, the other half of the vessel, to one William Snowball, and it is upon this averment that the defendant contends that the whole petition ought to be rejected, inasmuch as the plaintiff had no locus standi under the statute, which, it is contended, only confers jurisdiction upon the Court in the case of persons who are co-owners at the institution of the suit.

The 8th section is as follows:—"The High Court of Admiralty shall have a jurisdiction to decide all questions arising between the co-owners, or any of them, touching the ownership, possession, employment, and earnings of any ship registered at any port in England or Wales, or any share thereof, and may settle all accounts outstanding and unsettled between the parties in relation thereto, and may direct the said ship, or any share thereof, to be sold, and may make such order in the premises as to it shall seem fit."

It was argued on behalf of the defendant that neither according to the letter, nor according to the spirit of this enactment, had the Court jurisdiction in this case; not according to the letter, because the plaintiff had ceased to be a co-owner; not according to the spirit, because it was the duty of the Court to adjust the accounts between the co-owners; and that if it should turn out in this case that the plaintiff was indebted to the defendant there were no shares of the plaintiff brought into Court to answer a decree in favour of the defendant, and the practice of the Court of Chancery upon questions of this kind was referred to. To this it was replied that the jurisdiction of the Court was not determined by the status of the plaintiff at the time when the suit was instituted, but by his status at the time when the cause of action accrued. Thus under the 6th section, the owner or consignee of the cargo at the time when the damage was done to it might bring this suit, though he had subsequently parted with his interest in it; and the mariner might bring his claim for his wages as master, though he had ceased to discharge the duties of, or had been discharged from that office. In the other sections of the Act, the 4th, 5th, and 6th, the words "at the time of the institution of the cause," are inserted, which are wanted in the 8th section, and were inserted in these other sections for the protection of the defendant.

In the case of the Idas (2), my learned predecessor decided that, under the 8th section, this Court might order an account to be taken between co-owners relating to matters which occurred before the date assigned for the Act to come into operation, and also relating to a ship lost before the institution of the cause; and it will be difficult to maintain, according to the argument of the defendant in this case, that there were any co-owners after the ship was lost. I am of opinion that I am not prevented by the letter of the statute from taking cognizance of this cause; nor will my exercise of jurisdiction be at variance with the spirit of the enactment, for if the defendant in his answer should claim a balance in his favour, I shall, in pursuance of the provision in the section, make the order in the premises which I think fit, and which in this case will be, that bail to the amount of the other moiety of the shares be given by the plaintiff before the accounts are referred to the registrar for his investigation and report. As this is the first time in which this question has been raised before me, I shall make no order as to the costs of this motion.

SIR R. Appeals from County Courts—Further Appeal to the Privy Council—General Rules.

In appeals from County Courts, the High Court of Admiralty will not generally allow further appeals except:—1. When the law applicable is doubtful or novel; 2. When the Court has doubts as to the correctness of its decision; 3. When the pecuniary interests at stake are large.

This was an appeal from the decision of the judge of the City of London Court, in a cause of damage in respect of a collision between the sailing vessel Moneta and the screw steamship Samuel Laing, in the river Medway, in the month of March, 1870. The learned judge of the Court below held that the Samuel Laing was to blame for the collision, and decreed accordingly. From this decision the owners of the Samuel Laing appealed, and the Court reversed the decision, with costs. The respondents applied for leave to appeal to the Privy Council.

Cur. adv. vult.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE.—In this case I was asked by the respondents to allow an appeal to the Privy Council from my judgment. I declined to do so, and, on reflection, I adhere to that determination; but as the appeals to this Court appear likely to increase, I have thought it expedient to state the general principles which, in my opinion, ought to govern the exercise of the discretion confided to this Court by the legislature. It appears to me, in the first place, that the legislature intended the granting of an appeal to be the exception and not the rule. The object of the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Acts (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, and 32 & 33 Vict. c. 51) and similar statutes, is to prevent long and costly litigation upon questions where the pecuniary interest at stake is small. They carry the principle of interest Reipublicæ ut sit finis litium to a considerable extent. The statute which I am now considering, by confining the appeal ex debito justitiæ to one Court, and giving the judge of that Court a discretion as to allowing a further appeal, contemplated that he would keep this principle in view. I have considered the class of exceptional cases as to which I ought to exercise this discretion in favour of a further appeal, and without binding myself to an invincible adherence to the opinion which I am about to express, I think that in the following cases only I ought to allow an appeal:—Where the law is doubtful or novel in its application; where the facts are such as to leave a substantial doubt on the mind of the Court whether the conclusion at which it has arrived be right; and where the pecuniary interest—a case which may happen under the provisions of the statute—is large. In all other cases I think that, in accordance with the principle on which the County Court Jurisdiction Act is founded, and with the presumable intention of the legislature, I ought not to allow a further appeal.

24 Vict. c. 10. s. 6.

The petition alleged that a master who was also owner of a vessel had wilfully, improperly and fraudulently injured and abandoned her. She was subsequently taken into port by salvors, and the plaintiffs, the owners of cargo, were compelled to pay salvage to get possession of their cargo, and its delivery was consequently delayed. The master and vessel were both foreign:—Held, that the allegation “fraudulently” should be struck out of the petition, that the Court had jurisdiction over the cause under 24 Vict. c. 10. s. 6, and that the plaintiffs might sue the ship in the Admiralty Court for constructive damage to cargo.

It was alleged in certain articles of the petition in this cause that the defendant was owner and master of the Princess Royal, and whilst on a voyage from Elsinore to Hartlepool, had wilfully and fraudulently cut down and injured parts of the said vessel, and abandoned her upon the high seas. That she was taken possession of as a derelict by the John and Alice Brown, of Whitby, and that the plaintiffs as owners of cargo had to pay a large sum for salvage services before they could get possession of their cargo.

Phillimore, for the defendant, moved the rejection of the articles.

1. There is no jurisdiction under 24 Vict. c. 10. s. 6, under which, if at all, the Court would have jurisdiction. The “breach of contract and breach of duty” must relate to actual damage of goods—The Kasan (1), The Norway (2), The Tigris (3), The Santa Anna (4).

2. This is a matter of felony, and therefore not the subject of a civil suit—7 Will. 4. and 1 Vict. c. 89. s. 6—Cox v. Paxton (5), Stone v. Marsh (6).

3. In any case the property is not liable—The Ida (7), The Waldo (8).

E. C. Clarkson, for the plaintiffs.

1. There has been breach of duty or contract, or both, and damage, and therefore the Court has jurisdiction—The Dantzic (9), The Bahia (10), The Felix (11).

2. The defendant is not amenable to the criminal law of this country. The ship is Swedish, and the offence took place on the high seas—The Queen v. Anderson (12).

SIR R. PHILLIMORE.—In this case I have to consider certain objections which are taken to portions of a petition in a cause instituted under the 6th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861.

The petition states in substance that on the 3rd of September, 1869, Christian Hansen shipped a cargo of battens on board a vessel, which it appears was Swedish, lying in the port of Hernösand; they were to be carried according to the terms specified in a bill of lading to Elsinore for orders. The vessel arrived at Elsinore on the 26th of September, where she received orders to sail to West Hartlepool, to which place she sailed on the 28th of September. The vessel has been sold under the authority of this Court, and the proceeds of the sale are now in the registry.

What befell the vessel on her voyage to West Hartlepool is stated in the following articles of the petition, which were those objected to:—

The 8th article states that “whilst in the prosecution of the said voyage from Elsinore to West Hartlepool, the defendant and the crew on board the said vessel wilfully, improperly and fraudulently cut down, destroyed, injured, and endangered parts of the said vessel, her tackle, apparel, and furniture.”

The 9th article states that “having damaged and injured the said ship as aforesaid, the defendant and his crew wilfully, improperly, and fraudulently abandoned the vessel and cargo on the high seas.”

The 10th article states “that about 9 A.M. of the 4th of October, 1869, the said vessel and cargo, having been abandoned as aforesaid, were found on the high seas and taken possession of as a derelict by the master and crew of The John and Alice Brown, of Whitby, and by them towed into the port of Middlesborough, on the 9th day of the same month.”

The 11th article states that “by reason of the premises, the plaintiffs were compelled to pay and did pay a large sum to the owners, master, and crew of the said ship or vessel John and Alice Brown, for and in respect of their salvage services, before they could get possession of the said cargo of battens; the delivery whereof to the plaintiffs was also by reason of the premises aforementioned considerably delayed, whereby the plaintiffs sustained great loss and damage.”

The first objection taken to the admissibility of these articles is, that the Court has no jurisdiction under the statute 24 Vict. c. 10. s. 6, inasmuch as there is no allegation that there has been actual damage to cargo, nor that the cargo has been lost, nor that the master has refused to deliver the cargo. And moreover, that in this case the alleged detention of the cargo was a detention by third parties claiming by title of possession in a derelict, and not a detention by the master or his agent. And in support of this objection, the cases of The Tigris (3) and The Norway (2) were cited to shew the utmost extent to which the Court had gone; and The Santa Anna (4), as marking the limit which the Court had set to its jurisdiction in cases of “breach of duty or contract” under the statute. But to these, cases were added in reply, and it may be convenient to mention them now: The Dantzic (9), in which the Court exercised jurisdiction over a claim for short delivery of cargo, as per bill of lading, in a British port, though the goods not delivered were not in fact carried into port. The Bahia (10), in which the plaintiffs were the owners of certain corn which was laden on board The Bahia at New York, under a bill of lading to be delivered at Dunkirk in France; that on the voyage the master put into Ramsgate, and landed the cargo, and refused either to carry on to Dunkirk or to give delivery at Ramsgate. The Wilhelm, in which the plaintiff complained that the master delayed the prosecution of his voyage, and that owing to his negligence the cargo did not reach the port of destination until an unduly late period, and in which the Court pronounced for the damage, and made the usual reference to the registrar and merchants, July 25th, 1865. This case has not been reported. The Felix (13), decided by myself, in which the plaintiffs obtained damages because the master did not obey the order of the consignee to discharge his cargo in a particular dock.

A second objection to these articles is that the matters pleaded in them amount to a charge of felony, and that a Court of civil judicature must refuse to entertain such a cause until a criminal Court has adjudicated that a felony cannot be the foundation for a civil action. For this last position reliance was placed upon Cox v. Paxton (5) and Stone and Marsh (6), and Ex parte Wm. Elliott (14), and the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. s. 43, re-enacting s. 6 of Will. 4. and 1 Vict. c. 89 (repealed by 24 & 25 Vict. c. 95), was cited to shew that the charges contained in the articles were barratrous and felonious.

The third and last objection was that this being a proceeding in rem, and not in personam, the ship, or res, was not liable for acts of the master done without the scope of his duty—The Waldo (8), and that this position was not affected by the fact that the master was (as pleaded in the 2nd article) the sole owner; and that this Court had refused to allow a cargo to be arrested in a case in which the same person was owner of the ship and of the cargo—The Victor (15). It was also urged that innocent liens on the ship, not at present opposed, might be injured by these proceedings against the ship.

These various points in the case have been well argued on both sides, but inasmuch as I am about to say why I think the articles are substantially admissible in their present form, it is not necessary to state the arguments in reply to which I in great measure accede, as fully as, in a case somewhat novel, I have thought it right to state the objections. The real ground of an action in this suit is stated in the 12th article of the petition, which is as follows:—"The said cargo was never delivered by the defendant to the plaintiffs in accordance with the terms of the said bill of lading, although such non-delivery was not occasioned by any of the perils in the said bill of lading excepted." Assuming, as I am bound to do at present, the facts to be correctly stated in the other article, there is no doubt that the averment contained in this article is true. The owners have gotten the goods at a port other than that specified in the contract, and not from the master, but from third parties, namely, the salvors. Here, then, is a breach of contract relating to the goods, whereby the owners have been damnified. I am of opinion that it is not necessary that the damage should be actual, in order to found the jurisdiction of the Court. It may be of that constructive character resulting from wrong or improper delivery or detention, or the like causes; and in this opinion I am fortified as well by the precedents to which I have referred as by the natural construction of the language of the statute; and it appears from the articles objected to, that, although the detention of the cargo was not immediately the act of the master, inasmuch as it had passed out of his hands into those of third parties who had a lien upon it, yet that the detention was the consequence of previous misconduct on the part of the master, through which it passed into the possession of these third parties. The articles which plead these facts are admissible according to the rules of this Court, as shewing the history of the transaction and the continuing liability of the master. I will now deal with the objection that the action ought to have been in personam, and not in rem, that the master acted beyond the scope of his duty, and that in condemning the res, I may be injuring innocent lienors which do not appear. I am of opinion that the petitioners have a right under the statute to institute this suit in rem, and that the owner of the ship is responsible to the shipper for the loss or damage alleged in this case. I do not think that the objection that the act of the master did not bind the owner is well founded, nor does the case of The Waldo (8), which is well deserving of study, support that proposition. The master in that case had been made by the shipper the consignee of the cargo. The case of The Ida (7) was of a more peculiar character; the judgment in it was founded on a want of jurisdiction in the Court, and in the judgments no reference is made to the argument that the owner was not liable because the master exceeded the scope of his duty; as to the possible existence of secret liens on this ship, the answer is that, if there be such, the possessor of them is apprised by the forms of this Court that he may come in and defend his interest, and obtain for his claims their due priority.

With respect to the objection that they contain a charge of felony, in which the action for the civil wrong is merged, I felt at first some difficulty upon this point, and I am certainly not inclined unnecessarily to entangle myself in this question of merger, which is, perhaps, not in principle always very satisfactorily explained, or in practice always very consistently applied by the authorities at common law. It is true that, although the master be sole owner, the acts alleged would probably render a British subject guilty of felony under the statute 24 & 25 Vict. c. 97, and it has been suggested that although the vessel be a foreign vessel, and the master a foreigner, yet as the offence was committed super altum mare, this Court of maritime international law ought to hold itself less fettered as to criminal jurisdiction in this matter than a common law Court, which would in these circumstances be competent to take cognizance of this offence—The Queen v. Lopez and Others (16); The Queen v. Anderson (12). I must not be understood as assenting to this argument, but I shall direct the word “fraudulently” to be struck out in both the articles. It is not necessary for the case of the petitioner in this Court, and it introduces an issue which might unnecessarily complicate and increase the costs of the suits. With this alteration I admit the petition.

THE DOWSE.

County Court—Admiralty Jurisdiction—Necessaries.

County Courts exercising Admiralty jurisdiction cannot, as such, entertain a claim for necessaries supplied either to a vessel in her own port, or when an owner of the vessel is domiciled in this country.

Semble, that the High Court of Admiralty may exercise an appellate jurisdiction in a matter over which it has no original jurisdiction.

Semble also, that it has an appellate jurisdiction over the Court of Passage at Liverpool.

This was an appeal from the decision of the Judge of the Court of Passage in the borough of Liverpool.

In that Court a cause of necessaries had been instituted on behalf of the Muntz Metal Company against the vessel Dowse for necessaries supplied, to the value of 146l. 12s. 7d. The answer of the defendants pleaded amongst other pleas:—

1. At the time when the alleged necessaries (the subject matter of this suit) were supplied to the said vessel, the said vessel belonged to the port of Liverpool.

2. At the time of the institution of this suit, there was domiciled in England a certain person who was, at the time when the said alleged necessaries were supplied, an owner or part owner of the said vessel.

3. At the time when the said order was given, the defendants and Stewart, a mortgagee of the vessel, were resident and carrying on business at Liverpool aforesaid.

These articles were objected to as irrelevant, and the objection was sustained by the Judge of the Court of Passage, who decided that the Court had jurisdiction on the subject matter of the claim; from this decision the plaintiffs appealed.

Cur. adv. vult.

SIR R. PHILLIMORE.—The question is as to the true construction of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, the title of which statute is, “An Act for conferring Admiralty Jurisdiction upon the County Courts.” I shall observe that no question has been raised before me as to whether, under the 26th section of that statute, an appeal lies from the Court of Passage to the High Court of Admiralty. I am inclined, however, to think that the appeal does lie; and that the Court of Passage is in this respect in the same category as County Courts having Admiralty jurisdiction.

It has been contended that there is no limitation which narrows the construction of the words "any claim" (1), and though it is admitted that the High Court of Admiralty would have no original jurisdiction in this matter, that it has an appellate jurisdiction, and also that it might, under the authority of the 6th section (2), order the cause to be at once transferred to this Court, and so, in fact, exercise original jurisdiction.

There is no doubt that the High Court of Admiralty has exercised, and may exercise, an appellate jurisdiction in a matter over which it has no original jurisdiction. The High Court of Admiralty was formerly the Court of Appeal from revenue cases decided in the Colonial Admiralty Courts; and under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 51, it has an appellate jurisdiction as to claims arising out of agreements for the use or hire of a ship, and the carriage of goods in a ship, as to which there was no original jurisdiction.

But I think I must construe the 31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, independently of these considerations. That statute only professes to confer, both by its preamble and its 2nd section, Admiralty jurisdiction upon certain Courts; and then by the 3rd section enacts that a "Court having Admiralty jurisdiction" shall try and determine any claim for necessities—that is to say, in my opinion, any claim for necessities triable by a Court having Admiralty jurisdiction.

Under the old law—previously to the statutes 3 & 4 Vict. c. 65 and 24 Vict. c. 10—the Court had no jurisdiction over a claim for necessities—The Neptune (3). By the 6th section of the former statute such jurisdiction was conferred on it in cases of claims for necessities supplied to any foreign ship or sea-going vessel; and by the 5th section of the latter statute further jurisdiction was conferred on it over any claim for necessities, subject to two limitations—first, that they should have been supplied elsewhere than at the port to which the ship belonged; and, secondly, that at the time of the institution of the cause no owner or part owner of the ship was domiciled in England or Wales. I think the term "Admiralty jurisdiction" in 31 & 32 Vict. c. 71, must be construed with reference to these limitations; and the correctness of this construction is confirmed by a reference to the title of the last County Court Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 32 & 33 Vict. c. 51—"An Act to amend the County Courts (Admiralty Jurisdiction) Act, 1868, and to give Jurisdiction in certain Maritime Causes."

I am glad to find that the Court of Common Pleas has put the same construction upon the statute in question in the case of Everard v. Kendall (4).

I must decide, therefore, that the articles in the answer which took objection to the jurisdiction of the Court were rightly pleaded, and I must reverse the decision of the learned Judge of the Court below, which ordered them to be struck out.

Attorneys—Chester & Urquhart, agents for I. H. E. Gill, Liverpool, for appellants; Gregory, Rowcliffes & Rawle, agents for Duncan Squarey & Co., Liverpool, for respondents.

(1) The 3rd section enacts that—

"Any County Court having Admiralty jurisdiction shall have jurisdiction, and all powers and authorities relating thereto, to try and determine, subject and according to the provisions of this Act, the following causes (in this Act referred to as Admiralty causes):—

"1. As to any Claim for Salvage.—Any cause in which the value of the property saved does not exceed one thousand pounds, or in which the amount claimed does not exceed three hundred pounds;

"2. As to any Claim for Towage, Necessaries, or Wages.—Any cause in which the amount claimed does not exceed one hundred and fifty pounds."

(2) "The High Court of Admiralty of England on motion by any party to an admiralty cause in a County Court may, if it shall think fit, with previous notice to the other party, transfer the cause to the High Court of Admiralty," &c.

THE NORMANDY.

Damage — Limitation of Liability — Vessel not under Arrest — Injunction to restrain Actions at Common Law—24 Vict. c. 10. s. 13.

The N. and M. came into collision, and the M. was sunk. Cross causes of damage were instituted, but had not been heard, nor the liability for the collision determined, but the owners of the N. paid into Court the amount of their liability as limited by statute:—Held, that the Court had jurisdiction in a suit for limitation of liability, even though the N. had been sunk, and therefore could not be arrested, notwithstanding 24 Vict. c. 10. s. 13; that the Court could grant an injunction to restrain actions at common law in respect of the same collision; and that actions at common law for the loss of goods damaged by the collision might be restrained, even though the goods were to be carried partly by sea and partly by land.

This was a cause of limitation of liability. Cross causes had been instituted by the London and South Western Railway Company, the owners of the steam vessel Normandy, and by the owners of the steam ship Mary, in respect of a collision between the vessels on the 17th day of March, 1870. The suit No. 5,347 by the owners of the Normandy, was commenced on the 7th day of May, and on the 21st following an appearance was entered, and on the same day the cause No. 5,359 by the owners of the Mary was also instituted. Various actions at common law were also begun against the London and South Western Railway Company, by owners of goods put on board the Normandy. Petitions had not yet been filed in the Admiralty Court.

Cohen, on behalf of the London and South Western Railway Company, the plaintiffs in the suit for limitation of liability, moved, that the plaintiffs in cause No. 5,359, brought by the owners of the Mary, their proctors, solicitors, or agents, and all other persons interested in the Normandy or Mary, or having any right, title or interest in respect of the said collision, might be restrained from further prosecuting any other proceedings against the plaintiffs, in respect of the loss or damage caused by the said collision. His clients were willing to pay into Court the sum of 3,060*l.*, the value of the Normandy, calculated at 15*l.* for each ton of the gross registered tonnage of the vessel, together with interest.

E. C. Clarkson, for the owners of the Mary, and for the owners of her cargo.—The Court has no jurisdiction to entertain a suit of limitation of liability, except in cases where the “ship, or vessel, or the proceeds thereof, are under arrest”—The Admiralty Court Act, 1861, s. 13. Neither the Normandy nor the proceeds thereof are under arrest or constructive arrest, as the Normandy is at the bottom of the sea, and the money paid into Court is not the proceeds of the vessel. Nor can it be treated as money paid to prevent the arrest of the Normandy as in the Northumbria (1). The plaintiffs in the present suit must at least admit their liability in respect of the collision. Unless the plaintiffs are to blame for the collision, there is no liability to admit—Hill v. Audus (2). In the Amalia (3), all the claimants were persons who had a right to bring actions in this Court, but in the present case the owners of the Normandy are domiciled in England, and many of the persons preferring claims against them for damage to cargo, cannot sue the Normandy in this Court.

Cohen, in reply.—The plaintiffs are willing that the collision suit, No. 5,359, should be proceeded with, in order to determine the question of liability, and they undertake that if in that suit the Normandy should be found to be solely to blame, or if the Court should find the Normandy and Mary to blame for the collision, the plaintiffs will in the other actions and suits admit their liability to such plaintiffs as may prove their title to sue.

SIR ROBERT PHILLIMORE.—This is an application to the Court to exercise the power conferred upon it by the 13th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861. Various objections have been taken by the owners of the Mary. It is contended by them that as the Normandy was sunk in the collision, and could not be arrested, the Court has no jurisdiction to grant the relief asked for. I should be sorry to allow such an objection to prevail, and when the words of the 13th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, are carefully considered in connection with the 34th section of the same Act, and the state of the law prior to the time of the passing of the Act, I think it may be gathered that it was the intention of the legislature to confer upon this Court jurisdiction to entertain a cause of limitation of liability in all cases where the jurisdiction of the Court over the principal question of damage was well founded. In the case of The Northumbria, where a præcipe for a caveat warrant had been filed by the owners of the vessel in order to prevent her arrest, and they had given bail, in pursuance of the undertaking contained in the præcipe, I held that the vessel was constructively under the arrest of the Court. In the present case, I am asked to go a step further. No præcipe for a caveat warrant has been filed by the owners of the Normandy, and the Normandy has not been, and could not have been, arrested. But although I cannot consider the question free from doubt, after careful consideration I have arrived at the opinion that I ought to entertain the present application. The jurisdiction of the Court over the principal question of damage is well founded, and that, I think, is sufficient to give me jurisdiction to entertain the suit of limitation of liability.

In the case of Hill v. Audus (2), which was decided in 1855, Lord Hatherley, who was then Vice Chancellor, held that the Court of Chancery having no jurisdiction over the principal question of damage could not entertain a suit of limitation of liability unless the liability were admitted. But my learned predecessor, in the case of The Amalia (3), decided in the year 1863, that the rule laid down in the case of Hill v. Audus (2) did not apply to suits of limitation of liability instituted in this Court, because this Court has jurisdiction to decide the principal question of damage. I am certainly not disposed to question the propriety of the decision in the case of The Amalia (3). It is true that in the case of The Amalia (3) this Court was not asked to stay actions pending in any other Court, and I learn from the Registrar that now for the first time the Court is asked to stay actions pending in the Courts of Common Law. But if this Court has jurisdiction to entertain the suit of limitation of liability, I think there can be little doubt that it has power to stop all actions relating to the same subject-matter wherever pending, for the 514th section of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, expressly refers to actions "pending in any other Court."

In the course of the argument there has been considerable discussion about the terms upon which I should grant the relief asked. The plaintiffs offer to pay into court the full value of the Normandy calculated at 15*l.* per ton and interest. They also undertake if, on the hearing of the collision suits, the Court should find the Normandy to blame, that they will admit their liability in the other actions. Upon these conditions I shall make an order to stay all actions and suits pending in any other Court relating to the subject-matter. The terms of the order must be carefully considered. The plaintiffs must file their petition in this cause within three days.

The order was drawn up in the following form:—

NORMANDY (5,366).

The judge having heard counsel for the plaintiffs and the several defendants, ordered that all actions and suits pending in any other court in relation to the subject-matter in the suit, to wit, the liability of the owners of the vessel Normandy, the plaintiffs in this suit, in respect of loss of life, or personal injury, or loss or damage to ships, goods, merchandise, or other things, on the occasion of a collision which occurred on or about the 17th day of March, 1870, between the said vessel Normandy and a vessel called the Mary, be stopped, the plaintiffs by their counsel undertaking to admit their liability in all such actions and suits as soon as this Court shall have pronounced for the damage proceeded for in the cause pending in this Court entitled The Normandy (5,359), or for a moiety of such damage.

Willis (on July 12th) moved to dissolve the injunction so far as it affected Messrs. Milburn, Beeston, and Co., who had brought an action in the Court of Exchequer against the London and South Western Railway Company for the non-delivery of certain goods destined for Jersey, and lost in the Normandy. He contended that the action was brought against the company, not as shipowners but as common carriers. The goods had been delivered at the receiving house of the company in London for transport to Jersey, without any agreement as to their mode of transmission. The consignors had not selected the ship in which the sea part of the transportation was to be made, and there was no privity between them and the company as shipowners. The company might have sent them by a ship not their own property, in which case no rights would accrue to the plaintiffs against the shipowner; their remedy would lie against the company alone. Besides, before an injunction should have issued proof ought to have been given that the goods in question were actually on board the Normandy. Plaintiffs had delivered them in London, there was no bill of lading, and no proof before the Court that these goods had been lost on this particular occasion.

Shepherd, for the defendants, argued that the plaintiffs were of course aware that part of the transmission must be by sea, and therefore, as the contract was indivisible, that the plaintiffs must have been taken to have contracted with the defendants as shipowners—Le Couteur v. London and South Western Railway Company (4).

Sir ROBERT PHILLIMORE.—I am satisfied I ought not to dissolve the injunction.

THE CLARA KILLAM.

Damage—Electric Cable cut—Liability of ship.

A ship's anchor got entangled with an electric cable, and the cable was cut by order of the master:—Held, that under the circumstances the master was guilty of a want of nautical skill, and that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain a suit against the ship. Ship condemned in damages and costs.

This was a suit instituted by the managers of the Submarine Telegraph Company between England and France against the ship Clara Killam to obtain compensation for injury done by the ship to the telegraph cable.

The Clara Killam, from Boston, United States, arrived in the Downs on the 19th of March, 1869, and bore up off Old Stairs buoy, where she remained until four o'clock the next day, when the wind blew heavily from the westward and she began to drive. She was with difficulty brought up to the south of the Deal Bank Buoy, when it was discovered that the port anchor was gone. A spare anchor of smaller size was then bent on the port chain, and some time afterwards let go. The wind went round to the north-east, and the vessel drove in the direction of the Varne Sands, but was brought up about nine in the morning of the next day. Early on the following morning the crew began to heave in both anchors and found an extraordinary strain upon them, and about eleven o'clock the anchors were brought to the water's edge, when it was seen that one or both were entangled with the telegraph cable.

(5) On the 8th of November the Court of Exchequer refused a rule for stay of proceedings in the action at Common Law above referred to. See Law J. Rep. Weekly Notes (Nov. 11th, 1870), p. 220.

The plaintiffs in their petition alleged (amongst other things) as follows:—

"The said telegraph cable, with ordinary care and proper management, might have easily been got clear of the said anchor without any damage being done to the said cable or anchor, but the said master on seeing the said cable lying over the anchor stock, ordered the mate of the said vessel to go over the bows of the said vessel and to cut the cable, and the mate upon receiving such orders went over the bows of the said vessel and commenced to cut the said cable with a hatchet, and after cutting and hacking at the said cable, with the sanction and under the directions of the said master, for about three-quarters of an hour, he succeeded in severing the said telegraph cable in two, thereby doing much damage to the said telegraph cable."

"The damage done to the said telegraph cable, and the loss consequent thereupon, were solely and entirely caused by the improper conduct and by the want of care and proper management on the part of the said master of the said ship."

The defendants in their answer alleged (amongst other things) as follows:—

"This Court has not jurisdiction to entertain this suit.

"At about five A.M. on the morning of the 21st of March, the crew of the Clara Killam commenced heaving in her chains, and continued so doing until about eleven A.M., by which time they succeeded in heaving up both her anchors, but as the Clara Killam still rode, it was concluded that the anchors of the Clara Killam were foul of something.

"The anchors of the Clara Killam were with great labour and difficulty got to the water's edge, and it was then found that both the anchors of the Clara Killam had become and were entangled with the cable mentioned in the petition, in such a manner as to render it impossible to extricate the same therefrom before the lapse of a considerable time, save by severing the said cable. The said cable was then already stranded and injured at the part of it with which the anchors of the Clara Killam were entangled, and the weight and strain of the Clara Killam on it was further damaging it, and before it would have been possible to have disentangled it from the said anchors further damage would have been done to the said cable, and it would most probably have parted, and in the meantime the Clara Killam herself was lying exposed to danger; and, under the circumstances, the master of the Clara Killam, acting reasonably and justifiably, caused the said cable to be severed, and it was thereby cleared from the said anchors.

"Before the said cable was severed, as aforesaid, it had received such an amount of injury as would have necessitated its being raised and repaired, and renewed, and by the said act of severing the said cable no damage was occasioned to the plaintiffs or the owners of the said cable.

"The injury to the cable was the result of inevitable accident."

Huddleston, Dr. Spinks, Butt, and Dr. Tristram for the plaintiffs.

Milward and E. C. Clarkson for defendants.

At the conclusion of the evidence,

Butt for plaintiffs.—The defendants are clearly responsible for the damage—The Submarine Telegraph Company v. Dickson (1). The evidence shews that the cable might easily have been slipped without damage to itself or risk to the ship. The master was guilty of want of skill and negligence in ordering the cable to be cut, and for this the ship is responsible.

Milward.—The Court has no jurisdiction. Its powers, if any, are conferred by the 7th section of the Admiralty Court Act, 1861, under the words "jurisdiction over any claim for damage done by any ship." In this case the injury was committed by the master, and the ship was not even in motion. The ship was in peril by being entangled with the cable, and the master, under the circumstances, was justified in ordering the cable to be cut.

Butt, in reply.

(1) 15 Com. B. Rep. N.S. 759; s.c. 33 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) C.P. 139.

SIR ROBERT PHILLIMORE. — This is a suit instituted by the managers of the Submarine Telegraph Company between England* and France against the ship Clara Killam, to obtain compensation for the injury done by those on board her to the telegraph cable.

The Clara Killam, a vessel of 838 tons register, with a crew of 17 hands all told, sailed from London on the 16th of March, 1869, laden with a general cargo bound for Boston, in America.

She arrived on the 19th in the Downs; the weather became very bad, and she bore up off Old Stairs, where she remained till 4 p.m. the next day, when the wind blew heavily from the W., and she began to drive. She was brought up with difficulty to the S. of the Deal Bank buoy, when it was discovered that the port anchor was gone. A spare anchor of smaller size was then bent on the port chain, and some time afterwards let go. The wind flew to the N.E., and the vessel drove in the direction of the Varne Sands; but was brought up about 9 a.m. of the next day. Early in the next morning, between 3 and 4, the crew began to heave on both anchors, using their utmost exertions, but found an extraordinary strain upon the anchors, and it was not until nearly 11 o'clock that they succeeded in bringing the anchors to the water's edge. It was then discovered that one, if not both of the anchors (upon this point there may be some doubt), had become entangled with the telegraph cable, a circumstance which would appear to have preserved the vessel from destruction, inasmuch as it had prevented her from driving on the sands.

Up to this point in the history of this case, no charge is preferred against the defendants, no blame is ascribed to the Clara Killam for improperly fouling the telegraph cable. The course which in these circumstances the captain (having consulted, it is said, with the mate) ordered to be pursued was as follows: The mate, having put a bow line round him, was lowered down into the sea, his feet rested upon the starboard anchor's stock, and sometimes he was quite under water; in this condition he chopped, with an axe, at the telegraph cable for about fifteen minutes or more.

The cable was by this means cut in two; and the ship, the wind being then favourable, proceeded immediately on her voyage to America. For this damage, so inflicted, the present action is brought, and as it is the first of the kind submitted to the jurisdiction of this Court, I thought it expedient to take a little time to examine the principles of law applicable to these novel circumstances, and I have derived assistance, in the execution of this task, from a perusal of the judgment of the Court of Common Pleas, delivered in 1864, in the case of The Submarine Telegraph Company v. Dickson (1).

I must consider that this telegraph cable was lawfully placed at the bottom of the sea, and in the spot where it received the injury. I must also consider that the vessel which did the injury to it was in the exercise of her right both in navigating the surface of the sea, and in dropping her anchors where and when she had let them go. The law requires that each party should exercise his right so as, if possible, to avoid a conflict with the right of the other. It was the duty, therefore, of the ship to disentangle, if possible, her anchor from the cable without injuring it. She was bound to apply ordinary skill, and to take the time necessary for this purpose, unless she thereby exposed herself to present or imminent peril—the suggestion in the ninth paragraph of the answer, that it was impossible to extricate her anchors “before the lapse of a considerable time, save by severing the said cable,” cannot be admitted as a justification of the act. It has been contended that the cable when brought up was in so injured a condition as to render the cutting of it practically immaterial. I should be disposed to admit this defence if it were supported by the evidence. But I am satisfied that it is not; but that, on the contrary, both the oral evidence, and that derived from an inspection of the parts of the cable produced in court, prove that the copper wire in the centre, through which the fluid passes, was wholly unimpaired; the insulating material was not rubbed off, though one of the protecting wires had been injured, but all these wires might have been removed without destroying the working property of the electric wire, would remain still defended by the gutta percha, and the yarn or tow. The cable, though not a deep-sea cable, was a very strong one, and the injury done to it, apart from that caused by the cutting with the axe, was very trivial.

The elder brethren of the Trinity House advise me that, by ordinary nautical skill, the damage to the wire might have been avoided, and the anchor or anchors extricated. If a slip rope had been passed under the telegraph cable, and hove taut, the anchor might have been easily cleared, the slip rope then let go, and the cable dropped in its place; if both anchors were entangled the same course should have been adopted as to both. The ship has not the excuse of present or imminent danger to allege—the facts shew that she was under no pressure of this kind—reasonable skill, patience, and labour, would have been sufficient to extricate the anchor, without cutting the cable, an expedient which, in my judgment, assisted by that of my assessors, was recklessly and wrongfully had recourse to. The technical objection that this suit is instituted in rem and not in personam, and that the ship herself did not do the damage, but those on board of her, is untenable.

I pronounce the Clara Killam to blame for the injury done to the wire, the property of the Submarine Telegraph Company, and make the usual order of reference to the registrar, and condemn the ship in damages and costs.

THE ELIZABETH.

Damage—Cross-suits in County Court—Appeal—Claim under 50l.—31 & 32 Vict. c. 7. s. 33.

Cross causes of damage heard together in a County Court are, as to the right of appeal, to be considered distinct.

Plaintiffs in a cause of damage in the County Court claimed 100l., and recovered an amount under 50l.:—Held, that no appeal lay from the County Court to the High Court of Admiralty.

These were cross causes brought in the city of London Court, by the owners of the Adalia and Elizabeth, and were heard together under order 37 of the general orders for regulating the Admiralty jurisdiction of the County Courts. The causes were each instituted in the sum of 100l. The Court found the Elizabeth alone to blame, and consequently dismissed the suit in which her owners were plaintiffs, and condemned them in the damages in the cause in which they were defendants. The owners of the Elizabeth appealed in both suits.

Webster, for the owners of the Adalia, moved the Court to dismiss the appeal in which the Elizabeth had been condemned in damages. The damages do not amount to 50l., and by the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, "No appeal shall be allowed unless the amount decreed or ordered to be due exceeds the sum of 50l." It is true the nautical assessors, who it was agreed between the parties should find the amount due, have not yet made an assessment, but there are affidavits proving that the damage amounts to 29l. 10s. 1d. only, and those affidavits afford sufficient proof of the fact.

Edwyn Jones, for the owners of the Elizabeth.—The plaintiffs in the County Court having claimed 100l. cannot, without the defendants' consent, reduce their claim so as to oust the jurisdiction of this Court—North v. Holroyd (1).

Cur. adv. vult.

SIR R. J. PHILLIMORE.—This is a cause of appeal from the City of London Court, and is instituted by the owners of the Elizabeth against the owners of the Adalia in the sum of 300l. There were cross suits in the Court below, which, under the 37th order of the general orders issued under the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, were heard "at the same time and upon the same evidence."

(1) 37 Law J. Rep. (N.S.) Exch. 42; s.c. Law Rep. 3 Exch. 69.

Under the 31st section of the Act referred to (31 & 32 Vict. c. 71), "no appeal shall be allowed unless the amount decreed or ordered to be due, exceeds the sum of 50*l*." In the suit in which the Elizabeth was plaintiff the cause was dismissed, and in the suit in which the Elizabeth was defendant, she was pronounced solely to blame; and the amount was referred by consent to the nautical assessors. The report of the assessors I have not before me; but I have two affidavits, one from the proctor for the Adalia, stating that he verily believes the damage sustained by the Adalia to be the sum of 29*l*. 10*s*. 1*d*., and no more; and another affidavit by the managing clerk of the owners of the Adalia, to the effect that the damage sustained by her does not exceed 50*l*. It appears from the affidavit of the solicitor for the Elizabeth, that both the suits were instituted for the sum of 100*l*. in the Court below. The Elizabeth has appealed in both causes.

The Adalia prays that the appeal in the case in which she was the plaintiff in the Court below, may be dismissed with costs on account of the damage received by her being under the sum of 50*l*. The Elizabeth, on the other hand, prays that the two suits may be consolidated, and that an order may be made as to the amount of security for costs, and all further proceedings in the Court below stayed.

Upon this statement of facts, two questions have been mooted before me—first, whether the two suits having been heard together in the Court below, should not be considered as one suit, in which case as the Elizabeth claims upwards of 50*l*., and has received nothing, the section of the statute would not apply, according to my ruling in a former case? secondly, whether

I have proper evidence before me, that in the case in which the Elizabeth is the defendant, the amount decreed or ordered to be due does not exceed 50*l*.?

As to the first question, I am of opinion that the two suits cannot be considered as one any more than if they had been respectively instituted in different County Courts. This position is further confirmed by the practice on appeals from the High Court of Admiralty, in which cross suits which have been heard together are treated as separate with respect to the institution of the appeal. I must therefore dismiss this appeal when I have proper evidence before me that the amount decreed or ordered to be due does not exceed 50*l*. The second question is, whether I have or not the requisite evidence on this point, and I am of opinion that I have not. I have considered the case cited of North v. Holroyd (1).

The finding of the assessors as to the amount will, I presume, be made part of the decree nunc pro tunc, and on an affidavit being filed that that finding places the amount under 50*l*., I shall direct that the appeal in the suit in which the Adalia is plaintiff be dismissed. The motion will stand over for the filing of the affidavit (2).

Attorneys—Cattarns & Jehu, for appellants.
Proctor—H. G. Stokes, for respondents.

(2) The appeal in the suit against the Adalia was heard on the 9th of February, when the Court, assisted by Trinity Masters, was of opinion that the Adalia was alone to blame, and decreed accordingly. In the result, therefore, the owners of the Elizabeth would recover in the High Court of Admiralty, and the owners of the Adalia in the City of London Court.

TO THE REPORTS OF CASES

DECIDED BY THE

HIGH COURT OF ADMIRALTY.

MICHAELMAS TERM, 1869, TO MICHAELMAS TERM, 1870.

ACCOUNT—Co-owners: right to sue after ceasing to be owner—One who has parted with his shares in a vessel may nevertheless sue for the accounts as to her earnings while he was a co-owner. Motion to reject the petition dismissed, but without costs. The Lady of the Lake, 40

AMENDMENT—of error in a decree—To entitle a party to amend an error in a decree, the mistake should be brought to the notice of the Court with the utmost possible diligence. Application to alter a decree five months after the decree was made was rejected. The Orient, 10 mistake in præcipe to institute costs—In the præcipe to institute the cause the plaintiffs stated the suit as one of "damage to cargo," and the affidavit to lead warrant alleged that plaintiffs had sustained damage by breach of duty and breach of contract. After the arrest of the ship, and appearance entered on behalf of her owners' motion to amend by striking out of the præcipe to institute the words "damage to cargo," and substituting the words "breach of duty and breach of contract on the part of the master and crew," granted on payment of the costs occasioned by the mis-statement in the præcipe. The Princess Royal, 29

APPEAL—damage: cross-suits in County Court: claim under 50*l.*—Cross causes of damage heard together in a County Court, are, as to the right of appeal, to be considered distinct. The Elisabeth, 53

Plaintiffs in a cause of damage in a County Court claimed 100*l.*, and recovered an amount under 50*l.*—Held, that no appeal lay from the County Court to the High Court of Admiralty. Ibid.

from County Courts: further appeal to the Privy Council—In appeals from County Courts, the High Court of Admiralty will not generally allow further appeals, except—1. When the law applicable is doubtful or novel; 2. When the Court has doubts as to the correctness of its decision; 3. When the pecuniary interests at stake are large. The Samuel Laing, 42

goes of rice for F. & Co., A. & Co. to be secured by hypothecation of the bills of lading and a fixed freight of 5*s.* per ton. Whilst the ship E. P. was loading one of the cargoes, A. & Co. advanced about 540*l.* for ship's disbursements, but upon hearing that F. & Co. had stopped payment, induced the master to execute a bottomry bond both for the advances already made and also for a further sum of small amount:—Held, that the first advances were made partly upon personal security and partly upon the margin of freight, and could not therefore be secured by a subsequent bottomry. Held also, that the further advances were too trivial to render the bond valid with respect to them. The Empire of Peace, 12 notice: insolvent owner: assignee—In no case can notice of the intention to raise money by bottomry be dispensed with. Barron v. Stewart; "The Panama" (P.C.), 37

Until an owner has been judicially declared insolvent, he is entitled to notice. But if an owner has been judicially declared insolvent, the assignees are entitled to notice. Ibid.

COLLISION—sailing rules, No. 14: construction of "ships crossing"—Rule 14 of the sailing and steering rules provides that "If two ships under steam are crossing, so as to involve risk of collision, the ship which has the other on her own starboard side shall keep out of the way of the other." The appellants' ship, in proceeding down a river, and intending to keep her course, in order to round a bend in the river, had her head slightly inclined so as to exhibit her mast-head and portlight only to the respondents' ship, which was proceeding up the river:—Held (reversing the judgment of the Admiralty Court), that the vessels were not crossing within the meaning of the above rule. That the fact that the portlight only of the appellants' ship was seen by the respondents was not conclusive evidence that the vessels were crossing; that the relative position of the vessels was not only to be regarded but also the place in which the vessels were situated. General Steam Navigation Company v. Hedley; The Velocity (P.C.), 20

COLLISION. See Damage.

COSTS—when the liability is under 300*l*. See Damage. Salvage.

COUNTY COURT. See Jurisdiction.

DAMAGE—limitation of defendants' liability: costs]

—A vessel was arrested in the Court of Admiralty, in a cause of damage for losses exceeding 300*l*. Defendants admitted their liability, and paid into Court 252*l*., the amount of their statutory liability at 8*l*. per ton:—Held, that plaintiffs were entitled to the costs of proceeding in the Admiralty Court. The Young James, 1

— limitation of defendants' liability: date from which interest is to be computed]—In all cases of limitation of liability for damage done by any ship, interest will be given upon the limited amount from the date of the collision. The Northumbria, 3

— limitation of defendants' liability: vessel not under arrest]—In suits for limiting the liability of the owners of a wrongdoing vessel the Court has jurisdiction if bail has been given by her owners, even though no arrest has actually taken place. The Northumbria, 24

— responsibility of wrongdoing vessel for acts of their agent: special defence: costs]—In a cause of damage, plaintiffs alleged the damage to be imputable solely to the acts of the owners of the O. and their servants, which averment defendants, the owners, traversed. At the hearing it was proved that the damage was caused by one acting not within the scope of his authority from the owners:—Held, that such a defence should have been specifically pleaded, and that, therefore, though the petition was dismissed, defendants were not entitled to their costs. The Orient, 8

— action against steam-tug for collision whilst towing]—The L. A., in charge of a pilot and in tow of the steam-tug, E., was coming up the river Thames, and the M., under full sail, was crossing. The E. attempted to tow the L. A. ahead of the M., but the L. A. and M. came into collision:—Held, that the steam-tug was to blame for attempting to tow across the bows of the M., and the pilot of the L. A. for not ordering the E. to slip the tow-rope in time to avoid the collision. And a suit by the owners of the L. A. to condemn the steam-tug E. in the damage done to both the M. and L. A., was dismissed, but without costs. The Energy, 25

— reference to registrar: evidence to support claim by underwriters]—On a reference to the registrar in a cause of damage the plaintiffs, who were underwriters of the cargo, and had paid as for a total loss, produced in support of their title as owners of the cargo lost, the policies of insurance of the cargo, the bills of lading, and the invoice and copy manifest:—Held, that the plaintiffs must give further evidence of the value of the goods, and of a discharge from the owners of the cargo. The John Bellamy, 28

— to cargo: fraud and misconduct of master: right to sue the ship]—A petition alleged that a master who was also owner of a vessel had wilfully, improperly and fraudulently injured and abandoned her on the high seas. She was subsequently taken into port by salvors, and plaintiffs, the owners of cargo, were compelled to pay salvage to get possession of their cargo, and its delivery was consequently delayed. The master and vessel were both foreign:—Held, that the allegation "fraudulently" might be struck out of the petition, that the Court had jurisdiction over the cause, and that the plaintiffs might sue the ship in the Admiralty Court for the constructive damage. The Princess Royal, 43

— increase of amount of action]—In a cause of damage defendants having admitted their liability, and before the reference to ascertain the amount of damage had taken place plaintiffs having moved to amend the præcipe to institute the cause by increasing the amount of the action, the Court granted the motion on payment of defendant's costs. The Johannes, 41

— limitation of liability: vessel not under arrest: injunction to restrain actions at common law]—The N. and M. came into collision, and the M. was sunk. Cross causes of damage were instituted, but had not been heard, nor the liability for the collision determined, but the owners of the N. paid into Court the amount of their liability, as limited by statute:—Held, 1. That the Court had jurisdiction in a suit for limitation of liability, even though the N. had been sunk, and therefore could not be arrested. 2. That the Court could grant an injunction to restrain actions at common law in respect of the same collision. 3. That actions at common law for the loss of goods damaged by the collision might be restrained, even though the goods were to be carried partly by sea and partly by land. The Normandy, 48

— electric cable cut: liability of ship]—A ship's anchor got entangled with an electric cable, and the cable was cut by order of the master:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the master was guilty of a want of nautical skill, and that the Court had jurisdiction to entertain a suit against the ship. Ship condemned in damages and costs. The Clara Killam, 50

DECREE. See Amendment.

EVIDENCE. See Damage.

FOREIGN ENLISTMENT ACT—construction: forfeiture of ship]—The Foreign Enlistment Act (59 Geo. 3. c. 89. s. 7) provides, that if any person shall, without the leave, &c., equip, furnish, or fit out, any ship or vessel with intent or in order that such ship or vessel shall be employed in the service of any foreign prince, or if any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise any powers of government in or over any foreign state, as a transport, &c., every such person shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and every such ship shall be forfeited. The respondent's ship was fitted out as a transport for the service of certain persons in the island of Cuba, who had revolted from Spain, and had assumed to exercise government, and were conducting hostilities against Spain. It did not appear who the persons were or over what part of Cuba they assumed to exercise government:—Held, that inasmuch as the persons in whose service the ship was employed assumed to exercise government, there was a breach of the provisions of the Act, and the respondent's ship was liable to forfeiture. R. v. Carlin—The Salvador (P.C.), 33.

INTEREST—in cases of limitation of liability. See Damage.

JURISDICTION—necessaries supplied to vessel in her own port: owner domiciled in England—County Courts exercising Admiralty jurisdiction cannot, as such, entertain a claim for necessaries supplied either to a vessel in her own port, or when an owner of the vessel is domiciled in this country. The Douse, 46

Seem, that the High Court of Admiralty may exercise an appellate jurisdiction in a matter over which it has no original jurisdiction. Ibid.

Seem also, that it has an appellate jurisdiction over the Court of Passage at Liverpool. Ibid.

— See Salvage.

MORTGAGE—fraudulent preference—An insolvent debtor must not assign all or nearly all his effects to one creditor, so as to put it out of the debtor's power to carry on his trade. But an assignment is not necessarily fraudulent when it does not include the whole of the trade effects, or when the debtor gets a present equivalent for his goods. The Heart of Oak, 15

The assignment of a security to a particular creditor, even when bankruptcy is inevitable, if the assignment be not made voluntarily, is not necessarily a fraudulent preference. Ibid.

NEGIGENCE. See Damage.

PRACTICE. See Amendment. Principal and Agent. See Damage.

SALVAGE—award under 300l.: tender: costs—In a cause of salvage the defendants tendered 282l. together with such costs (if any), as shall be due by law. The Court at the hearing of the cause pronounced for the tender:—Held, that though the amount recovered was less than 300l. the plaintiffs were entitled to costs up to the tender. Held also, that, when a tender is made in a salvage suit, it should state that it is a tender for salvage and costs, or should specify the ground upon which costs are not tendered, and refer the question of costs to the consideration of the Court. The Hickman, 7

— jurisdiction where value under 1,000l.—Where a vessel had been arrested in two causes of salvage, which upon motion by consent of all parties had been consolidated, and a petition was afterwards filed, a motion by defendants to dismiss the suit with costs and damages, as the value of the property saved was under 1,000l., was rejected with costs. The Herman Wedel, 30

Seem—Under the County Courts Admiralty Jurisdiction Act, 1868, the High Court of Admiralty may in its discretion take cognizance of salvage suits when the value of the property saved is under 1,000l. Ibid.

An Act to empower Committees on Bills confirming Provisional Orders to award Costs and examine Witnesses on Oath.
(25th March 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to empower Committees of both Houses of Parliament to award costs in certain cases, and also to empower Committees of the House of Commons to administer oaths to witnesses in certain cases not already provided for :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. Any Select Committee of either House of Parliament to which any Bill for confirming Provisional Orders has been referred in relation to any Provisional Order therein contained may award costs in like manner and subject to the same conditions as costs may be awarded by any Select Committee empowered to award costs by the Act of the twenty-eighth Victoria, chapter twenty-eight, and the provisions of the said Act so far as they are applicable shall apply to such Select Committees and to the matters so referred to them.

2. Any Select Committee of the House of Commons to which any Bill for confirming Provisional Orders has been referred in relation to any Provisional Order therein contained may examine witnesses upon oath in like manner as any Select Committee to which any Private Bill has been referred may administer oaths under the Act of the twenty-second Victoria, chapter seventy-eight, and the provisions of the said Act so far as they are applicable shall apply to any Select Committee to which any such Bill has been referred as aforesaid and to the oaths administered by such Committee.

14. Short title.

An Act to make provision for the proceedings of Boards of Management and Boards of Guardians upon the dissolution of Districts and Unions or the annexation of Parishes to Unions.

WHEREAS it is expedient that better provision should be made for the proceedings of boards of management and boards of guardians when the districts or unions for which they have acted respectively are dissolved, or the parish for which any such board of guardians have acted shall be added to a union or to another parish:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. When the Poor Law Board shall have dissolved or shall dissolve any district the component parts whereof shall not have been formed into one union, or shall have dissolved or shall dissolve any union, or shall have added or shall add any parish in which the relief to the poor shall be or shall have been administered by a board of guardians to a union or to another parish, the persons who were acting as managers or guardians at the time of the dissolution or addition, and the survivors of them, shall continue in office for the purpose of paying and discharging the debts and liabilities of such district, union, or parish, and of receiving and recovering moneys or other property due to the said district, union, or parish, as the case may be, in like manner as the board of management or board of guardians could have done if no dissolution or addition had taken place; and the said managers or guardians shall be empowered to make all necessary orders for contributions upon the unions and parishes comprised within the district or union so dissolved, or upon the proper authorities of the parish so added, as the case may require, and to enforce the same as the board of management or board of guardians could have done previous to the dissolution or addition respectively; provided that the limitation of time for the payment of debts imposed by the statute of the twenty-second and twenty-third Victoria, chapter forty-nine, shall not apply to the cases of districts or unions dissolved or of parishes added to a union before the passing of this Act, where such limitation had not taken effect previous to the dissolution or addition thereof as aforesaid; and provided that no such managers or guardians shall be empowered to act in the manner aforesaid for a longer period than twelve months from the date of the dissolution or addition, unless the Poor Law Board by their order shall authorize them to continue to act for some special purpose.

2. The said managers or guardians may retain the services of such of the officers of the board of management or board of guardians respectively as they shall deem requisite to enable them to complete the liquidation and discharge of the debts and liabilities of the union, district, or parish, or appoint others to assist them, with such remuneration and for such time only as the Poor Law Board shall approve.

3. All actions, suits, or other proceedings commenced by or against the board of management or board of guardians prior to the dissolution or addition aforesaid, may be continued by or against the said last acting managers or guardians in the name of the board of management or board of guardians, as the case may be, except where the several parts of a district shall have been or shall be formed into one union, in the manner provided for by the second section of the Metropolitan Poor Amendment Act, 1869, and all the costs incurred by or adjudged against such managers or guardians in any such action, suit, or other proceeding, and not otherwise recovered, shall be chargeable to the same fund as if the action, suit, or proceeding had been determined before the dissolution or addition.

4. Upon notice from the managers or guardians, as the case may be, that all the current debts and liabilities of the district or union have been liquidated and discharged, or when the Poor Law Board shall otherwise deem it expedient, the said board shall proceed to make such adjustment of the rights and liabilities of the several unions or parishes contained in such district or union respectively as is provided for by the thirty-second section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, and the first section of the Metropolitan Poor Amendment Act, 1869.

5. Upon the issue of the order of the Poor Law Board forming a union of two or more parishes, in which the relief to the poor has been administered by a board of guardians, the last acting guardians or overseers respectively shall continue to administer such relief in the parish or parishes respectively until the guardians for the union shall be completely elected.

6. The accounts of the last acting managers or guardians and of their officers and of the overseers shall be audited in the like manner and for the like purpose and with the like effect and by the same auditor as if the dissolution or addition had not taken place.

7. If when a district or union has been or shall be dissolved there remain unpaid any instalment or instalments of a loan or loans contracted under the provisions of any Act of Parliament by the managers or guardians of such district or union, every such instalment and all interest on such loan or loans not discharged before the expiration of the time within which the said last managers or guardians respectively can act shall from time to time after the same shall severally have become due be paid by such board or boards of managers or guardians as the Poor Law Board by their order shall direct, and the amounts shall be charged against the same parishes and in the same proportions as they would have been had no such dissolution taken place; and if when a parish has been or shall be added to a union or to another parish there remain unpaid any such instalment or instalments of any such loan or loans as aforesaid contracted by the guardians of the poor of the said parish, every such instalment and all interest on such loan or loans not discharged within such time as aforesaid shall from time to time after the same shall severally become due be paid out of the poor rates of the said parish by the overseers or other body or persons who make and levy the said rates; and the parties to whom any such instalment or interest shall be due shall have in all respects the same remedies for the recovery thereof against the managers or guardians so directed as aforesaid to pay the same, or against the overseers or other body or persons as aforesaid, as the case may be, as they severally had against the managers or guardians who originally contracted the loan in respect of which such instalment or interest is payable: Provided that nothing herein contained shall prevent the instalments and interest or balance of any such loan from being discharged out of the produce of the sale of any property belonging to any district or union at the time of the dissolution, or to any parish at the time of its being added to the union.

8. All deeds, bonds, covenants, indentures, orders of justices, or other matters affecting any poor persons, apprentices, or officers, entered into by or made upon or in favour of any board of guardians of a parish which shall be added to a union, shall vest in and enure to the benefit of or shall be a charge upon the guardians of the union to which such parish shall have been added without any assignment, transfer, or other act; and all securities, deeds, orders, books of account, and other documents relating thereto, shall, when required by said guardians, be delivered to them by the persons having the custody thereof; and all such deeds (other than the title deeds to property), bonds, indentures, orders of justices, or other documents and matters as aforesaid belonging to any dissolved district or union shall be preserved in such custody and shall be open to inspection in such manner as the Poor Law Board shall by their order from time to time direct.

9. Every superannuation allowance granted by a board of guardians in conformity with the provisions of the statute applicable thereto, and every compensation ordered by the Poor Law Board to be paid to any officer by or on account of any parish, whether part of a dissolved union or not, shall, when such parish shall be added to or formed with another into a union, be paid by the guardians of such union to the person entitled thereto and charged by them to the account of such parish.

10. The provisions contained in the twentieth section of the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1867, relating to the period of service of officers and the allowance of compensations to persons deprived of their offices, shall extend to the case of a parish which shall be united to some one or more parishes to form a union, and to the officers of such parish.

11. When any district or union has been or shall be dissolved, or any parish has been or shall be added to or separated from a union, or any unions or parishes added to or separated from a district or part of it, or any parish has been or shall be added to another parish to form a union, and a valuation shall become requisite for the adjustment of the rights and liabilities of the districts, unions, or parishes affected thereby, such valuation shall be procured by the managers, guardians, or overseers of the districts, unions, or parishes respectively, in such manner as the parties interested shall mutually agree upon, or by the Poor Law Board in case of their not agreeing within such time as the board shall fix, which board shall direct the expenses incurred in procuring the same to be charged to the districts, unions, parishes, or parts thereof respectively, according as they shall be interested therein, in such proportions as to the said board shall seem to be equitable; and every person in whose favour such direction shall have been given shall be entitled to recover the amount from the persons directed to pay the same, by action in like manner as any debt recoverable at law.

12. Upon the dissolution of any district or union, or the addition of any parish in which the relief to the poor shall have been or shall be administered by a board of guardians to a union or to another parish, the real and personal estate vested in the managers or guardians of such district, union, or parish respectively shall be transferred to and vested in the persons who were acting as managers or guardians respectively at the time of such dissolution or addition, to be held by them as joint tenants, according to the nature of such property, in trust for the parishes comprised in such district or union, or for the parish, as the case may be, until the same shall be sold, let, or otherwise disposed of under the authority of the third section of the "Union and Parish Property Act, 1835," and any Act extending the same: Provided that nothing herein contained shall apply to any parish provided for by the fifth section of the Metropolitan Poor Amendment Act, 1869, or by a Local Act.

13. The words used in this Act shall be construed in like manner as in the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, and in the subsequent Acts amending and extending the same.

14. This Act may be cited and described for all purposes as "The Dissolved Boards of Management and Guardians Act, 1870."

CHAP. 3.

East India (Laws and Regulations).

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Power to Executive Government of British India to make regulations for certain parts thereof.
2. Copies of regulations to be sent to Secretary of State. Subsequent enactments to control regulations.
3. Lieutenant governors and chief commissioners to be members ex officio of the Governor General's Council for the purpose of making laws and regulations.
4. Sect. 49. of 3 & 4 W. 4. c. 85. repealed.
5. Procedure in case of difference between the Governor General and the majority of his council.
6. Power to appoint natives of India to certain offices without certificate from the Civil Service Commissioners.

An Act to make better provision for making laws and regulations for certain parts of India, and for certain other purposes relating thereto.

WHEREAS it is expedient that provision should be made to enable the Governor General of India in Council to make regulations for the peace and good government of certain territories in India, otherwise than at meetings for the purpose of making laws and regulations held under the provisions of The Indian Council's Act, 1861, and also for certain other purposes connected with the Government of India:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. Every governor of a Presidency in Council, lieutenant governor, or chief commissioner, whether the governorship, or lieutenant governorship, or chief commissionership be now in existence or may hereafter be established, shall have power to propose to the Governor General in Council drafts of any regulations, together with the reasons for proposing the same, for the peace and government of any part or parts of the territories under his government or administration to which the Secretary of State for India shall from time to time by resolution in council declare the provisions of this section to be applicable from any date to be fixed in such resolution.

And the Governor General in Council shall take such drafts and reasons into consideration; and when any such draft shall have been approved of by the Governor General in Council, and shall have received the Governor General's assent, it shall be published in the "Gazette of India" and in the local "Gazette," and shall thereupon have like force of law and be subject to the like disallowances as if it had been made by the Governor General of India in Council at a meeting for the purpose of making laws and regulations.

The Secretary of State for India in Council may from time to time withdraw such power from any governor, lieutenant governor, or chief commissioner, on whom it has been conferred, and may from time to time restore the same as he shall think fit.

2. The Governor General shall transmit to the Secretary of State for India in Council an authentic copy of every regulation which shall have been made under the provisions of this Act; and all laws or regulations hereafter made by the Governor General of India in Council, whether at a meeting for the purpose of making laws and regulations, or under the said provisions, shall control and supersede any regulation in anywise repugnant thereto which shall have been made under the same provisions.

3. Whenever the Governor General in Council shall hold a meeting for the purpose of making laws and regulations at any place within the limits of any territories now or hereafter placed under the administration of a lieutenant governor or a chief commissioner, the lieutenant governor or chief commissioner respectively shall be ex officio an additional member of the council of the Governor General for that purpose, in excess (if necessary) of the maximum number of twelve specified by the said Act.

4. Section forty-nine of the Act of the third and fourth years of King William the Fourth, chapter eighty-five, is hereby repealed.

5. Whenever any measure shall be proposed before the Governor General of India in Council whereby the safety, tranquillity, or interests of the British possessions in India, or any part thereof, are or may be, in the judgment of the said Governor General, essentially affected, and he shall be of opinion either that the measure proposed ought to be adopted and carried into execution, or that it ought to be suspended or rejected, and the majority in council then present shall dissent from such opinion, the Governor General may, on his own authority and responsibility, suspend or reject the measure in part or in whole, or adopt and carry it into execution, but in every such case any two members of the dissentient majority may require that the said suspension, rejection, or adoption, as well as the fact of their dissent, shall be notified to the Secretary of State for India, and such notification shall be accompanied by copies of the minutes (if any) which the members of the council shall have recorded on the subject.

6. Whereas it is expedient that additional facilities should be given for the employment of natives of India, of proved merit and ability, in the civil service of Her Majesty in India: Be it enacted, that nothing in the "Act for the government of India," twenty-one and twenty-two Victoria, chapter one hundred and six, or in the "Act to confirm certain appointments in India," and to amend the law concerning the civil "service there," twenty-four and twenty-five Victoria, chapter fifty-four, or in any other Act of Parliament or other law now in force in India, shall restrain the authorities in India by whom appointments are or may be made to offices, places, and employments in the civil service of Her Majesty in India from appointing any native of India to any such office, place, or employment, although such native shall not have been admitted to the said civil service of India in manner in section thirty-two of the first-mentioned Act provided, but subject to such rules as may be from time to time prescribed by the Governor General in Council, and sanctioned by the Secretary of State in Council, with the concurrence of a majority of members present; and that for the purpose of this Act the words "natives of India" shall include any person born and domiciled within the dominions of Her Majesty in India, of parents habitually resident in India, and not established there for temporary purposes only; and that it shall be lawful for the Governor General in Council to define and limit from time to time the qualification of natives of India thus expressed; provided that every resolution made by him for such purpose shall be subject to the sanction of the Secretary of State in Council, and shall not have force until it has been laid for thirty days before both Houses of Parliament.

The Income Tax Assessment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Application of existing Income Tax Acts to duties to be granted.
2. As to returns, &c. under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 67.
3. Commissioners for general purposes to execute Acts relating to house duties.
4. Short title.

An Act to make provision for the assessment of Income Tax, and to amend the law relating to Inland Revenue.

WHEREAS in order to ensure the collection in due time of any duties of income tax which may be granted for the year commencing the sixth day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy, it is expedient that the provisions of the Income Tax Acts relating to assessment should be applied to such duties before the same are granted:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. All such provisions contained in any Act of Parliament relating to the duties of income tax as are in force at the date of the passing of this Act shall have full force and effect with respect to any duties of income tax which may be granted for the year commencing the sixth day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy, in the same manner as if such duties had been actually granted, and the said provisions had been applied thereto; provided that nothing in this Act shall be deemed to continue or put in force sections six and seven of the Act of the session of the thirty-second and thirty-third years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fourteen, or to continue the rates of income tax granted by that Act.

2. The returns and statements made under the Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869, shall be deemed to be and shall be taken as returns and statements for the assessment of the duties under schedules A. and B. of the Income Tax Act.

3. The commissioners for the general purposes of the Income Tax Acts shall be commissioners for executing the Acts relating to the inhabited house duties, and all appeals against the said duties shall be determined in like manner as appeals under schedule A. of the Income Tax Acts.

4. This Act may be cited as "The Income Tax Assessment Act, 1870."

CHAP. 5.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. There may be applied for the service of the years ending 31st March 1869 and 1870, &c. the sum of 564,191l. 7s. 2d. out of the Consolidated Fund.
2. There may be applied for the service of the year ending 31st March 1871 the sum of 9,000,000l. out of the Consolidated Fund.
3. Treasury may borrow 9,564,191l. 7s. 2d. on the credit of this Act.
4. Interest on moneys borrowed.

An Act to apply certain sums out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the years ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and preceding years.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards making good the supply which we have cheerfully granted to Your Majesty in this session of Parliament, have resolved to grant unto Your Majesty the sum herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. There may be issued and applied, for or towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty for the service of the years ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and preceding years, the sum of five hundred and sixty-four thousand one hundred and ninety-one pounds seven shillings and twopence out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being are hereby authorized and empowered to issue and apply the same accordingly.

2. There may be issued and applied, for or towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty for the service of the year ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, the sum of nine million pounds out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being are hereby authorized and empowered to issue and apply the same accordingly.

3. The Commissioners of the Treasury may borrow upon the credit of the sums granted by this Act out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, an amount not exceeding in the whole the sum of nine million five hundred and sixty-four thousand one hundred and ninety-one pounds seven shillings and twopence, and such amount may be borrowed by the said Commissioners from time to time, in such sums as may be required for the public service, and shall be placed to the credit of the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, and be available to satisfy any orders for credits granted or to be granted on the said account, under the provisions of the "Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866."

4. The sums borrowed from time to time under the authority of this Act shall bear interest not exceeding the rate of five pounds per centum per annum, and the principal and interest of all such sums shall be paid out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund at any period not later than the next succeeding quarter to that in which the said sums shall have been borrowed.

The Judges Jurisdiction Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title of Act.
2. Chief Judge, &c. may request assistance.
3. Evidence of request by Chief Judge not required.
4. Two divisions of any Court may be sitting at one time in banc.
5. Any number of sittings may be held at Nisi Prius at one time.
6. Definition of Chief Judge.

An Act to extend the Jurisdiction of the Judges of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the jurisdiction of the Judges of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Judges Jurisdiction Act, 1870."

2. In case any one of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster shall require assistance in the despatch of business pending in such Court, and shall by the Chief Judge of such Court make request in writing to the Chief Judge of any other of the said Courts for the assistance of a Puisne Judge of such last-mentioned Court in the execution of the duties of the first-mentioned Court, either by sitting in Court or in any manner and for any purpose whatsoever, and such request may be either general or special, and for such time as may be therein specified; and the Chief Judge to whom such request is made shall thereupon refer such request to the Judges of the Court of which he is Chief Judge, and the Judges of such Court may (if the business pending in his Court do not peremptorily require the attendance of all the Puisne Judges) appoint one of such Puisne Judges to assist the first-mentioned Court, and the Puisne Judge so appointed shall in all matters of which he may take cognizance have the same jurisdiction in all respects as if he were a Puisne Judge of the Court to which the Chief Judge belongs who requests his assistance.

3. No evidence shall be required of such request by such Chief Judge in order to found the jurisdiction of such Puisne Judge.

4. Any of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Westminster may sit in two divisions at one time in banc; and each of such divisions shall exercise the same power and authority as might be exercised by the whole Court so sitting in banc; and where necessary any Puisne Judge of either of the other Superior Courts may, on such request as above mentioned of a Chief Judge, assist in holding such sitting in the same manner and with the same authority as if he were a judge of the Court sitting in banc.

5. Any number of judges may at one and the same time hold a sitting or sittings at Nisi Prius either in London or Westminster, as may be deemed expedient by the Court.

6. The expression "Chief Judge" for the purposes of this Act shall mean the Chief Justice of the Court of Queen's Bench, the Chief Justice of the Court of Common Pleas, and the Chief Baron of the Exchequer, and where the office of any such Chief Judge is for the time being vacant, the senior Puisne Judge of the Court in which such office may be vacant.

Schedules.

An Act for punishing Mutiny and Desertion, and for the better payment of the Army and their Quarters.

WHEREAS the raising or keeping a standing army within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in time of peace, unless it be with the consent of Parliament, is against law: And whereas it is adjudged necessary by Her Majesty and this present Parliament that a body of forces should be continued for the safety of the United Kingdom, and the defence of the possessions of Her Majesty's Crown, and that the whole number of such forces should consist of one hundred and fifteen thousand and thirty-seven men, including six thousand three hundred and ninety-four, all ranks, to be employed with the depôts in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland of regiments serving in Her Majesty's Indian possessions, but exclusive of the numbers actually serving within Her Majesty's Indian possessions: And whereas no man can be forejudged of life or limb, or subjected in time of peace to any kind of punishment within this realm by martial law, or in any other manner than by judgment of his peers, and according to the known and established laws of this realm; yet nevertheless it being requisite, for the retaining all the before-mentioned forces in their duty, that an exact discipline be observed, and that soldiers who shall mutiny or stir up sedition, or shall desert Her Majesty's service, or be guilty of crimes and offences to the prejudice of good order and military discipline, be brought to a more exemplary and speedy punishment than the usual forms of the law will allow:

1. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty to make Articles of War for the better government of Her Majesty's army, which articles shall be judicially taken notice of by all judges and in all courts whatsoever; and copies of the same, printed by the Queen's printer, shall, as soon as may be after the same shall have been made and established by Her Majesty, be transmitted by Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the War Department to the judges of Her Majesty's superior courts at Westminster, Dublin, and Edinburgh respectively, and also to the governors of Her Majesty's dominions abroad: Provided that no person within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or within the British Isles, shall by such Articles of War be subject to suffer any punishment extending to life or limb, or to be kept in penal servitude, except for crimes which are by this Act expressly made liable to such punishments as aforesaid, or shall be subject, with reference to any crimes made punishable by this Act, to be punished in any manner which shall not accord with the provisions of this Act: Provided also, that nothing in this Act contained shall in any manner prejudice or affect any Articles of War or other matters made, enacted, or in force, or which may hereafter be made, enacted, or in force, under the authority of the Government of India, respecting officers or soldiers or followers in Her Majesty's Indian army, being natives of India; and on the trial of all offences committed by any such native officer or soldier or follower, reference shall be had to the Articles of War framed by the Government of India for such native officers, soldiers, or followers, and to the established usages of the service.

2. All the provisions of this Act shall apply to all persons who are or shall be commissioned or in pay as an officer, or who are or shall be listed or in pay as a non-commissioned officer or soldier, and to all warrant officers, and to all persons employed on the recruiting service receiving pay, and all pensioners receiving allowances in respect of such service, and to persons who are or shall be hired to be employed in the royal artillery, royal engineers, and to master gunners, and to conductors of stores, and to the corps of royal military surveyors and draftsmen, and to all officers and persons who are or shall be serving on the commissariat staff, or soldiers in the commissariat staff corps, and to officers and soldiers serving in the corps to be hereafter organised and called the army service corps, or in the military store department, or in the military store staff corps, and to persons in the War Department, who are or shall be serving with any part of Her Majesty's army at home or abroad, under the command of any commissioned officer, and (subject to and in accordance with the provisions of an Act passed in the sixth and seventh years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter ninety-five,) to any out-pensioners of the Royal Hospital, Chelsea, who may be called out on duty in aid of the civil power, or for muster or inspection, or who having volunteered their services for that purpose shall be kept on duty in any fort, town, or garrison, and to all military store officers and other civil officers who are or shall be employed by or act under the Secretary of State for War at any of Her Majesty's establishments in the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Man, and the islands thereto belonging, or at foreign stations; and all the provisions of this Act shall apply to all persons belonging to Her Majesty's Indian forces who are or shall be commissioned or in pay as officers, or who shall be listed or in pay as non-commissioned officers or soldiers, or who are or shall be serving or hired to be employed in the artillery or any of the trains of artillery, or as master gunners or gunners, or as conductors of stores, or who are or shall be serving in the department of engineers, or in the corps of sappers and miners, or pioneers, or as military surveyors or draughtsmen, or in the ordnance or public works or commissariat departments, and to all storekeepers and other civil officers employed under the ordnance, and to all veterinary surgeons, medical storekeepers, apothecaries, hospital stewards, and others serving in the medical department of the said forces, and to all licensed sutlers, and all followers in or of any of the said forces; provided that nothing in this Act contained shall extend to affect any security which has been or shall be given by any military store officer, barrack master, or other officer, or their sureties, for the due performance of their respective offices, but that all such securities shall be and remain in full force and effect.

3. This Act shall extend to the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Man, and the islands thereto belonging, as to the provisions herein contained for enlisting of recruits, whether minors or of full age, and swearing and attesting such recruits, and for mustering and paying, and as to the provisions for the trial and punishment of officers and soldiers who shall be charged with mutiny and desertion, or any other of the offences which are by this Act declared to be punishable by the sentence of a court-martial, and also as to the provisions which relate to the punishment of persons who shall conceal deserters, or shall knowingly buy, exchange, or otherwise receive any arms, medals for good conduct or for distinguished or other service, clothes, military furniture, or regimental necessaries from any soldier or deserter, or who shall cause the colour of any such clothes to be changed, or who shall aid in the escape of a prisoner from a military prison, or who shall introduce forbidden articles into such prison, or shall carry out any such articles, or who shall assault any officer of such prison, and also as to the provisions for exempting soldiers from being taken out of Her Majesty's service for not supporting or for leaving chargeable to any parish any wife or child or children, or on account of any breach of contract to serve or work for any employer, or on account of any debts under thirty pounds in the said islands.

4. All officers and soldiers of any troops mustered and in pay which shall be raised and serving in any of Her Majesty's dominions abroad, or in places in possession of or occupied by Her Majesty's subjects under the command of any officer having any commission immediately from Her Majesty, shall be subject to the provisions of this Act and of Her Majesty's Articles of War, in like manner as Her Majesty's other forces are; and if such officers and soldiers, having been made prisoners, be sent into Great Britain or Ireland, although not allowed to serve therein, all the provisions of this Act in regard to billeting soldiers shall apply to such officers and soldiers.

5. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to extend to any militia forces or yeomanry or volunteer corps in Great Britain or Ireland, or to the reserve force provided for by "The Reserve Force Act, 1867," or to the reserve force provided for by "The Militia Reserve Act, 1867," excepting only where by any Act for regulating any of the said forces or corps the provisions contained in any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion are or shall be specifically made applicable to such forces or corps.

6. For the purpose of bringing offenders against this Act and against the Articles of War to justice, Her Majesty may from time to time, in like manner as has been heretofore used, grant commissions under the Royal Sign Manual for the holding of courts-martial within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and may grant commissions or warrants under the said Royal Sign Manual to the chief governor or governors of Ireland, the commander of the forces, or the person or persons commanding in chief, or commanding for the time being, any body of troops belonging to Her Majesty's army, as well within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and the British Isles as in any of Her Majesty's garrisons and dominions or elsewhere beyond seas, for convening courts-martial, and for authorising any officer under their respective commands to convene courts-martial, as occasion may require, for the trial of offences committed by any of the forces under the command of any such last-mentioned officer, whether the same shall have been committed before or after such officer shall have taken upon him such command: Provided that the officer so authorised be not below the degree of a field officer, except in detached situations beyond seas where a field officer is not in command, in which case a captain may be authorised to convene district or garrison courts-martial: Every officer so authorised to convene courts-martial may confirm the sentence of any court-martial convened by him according to the terms of his warrant.

7. Any person subject to this Act who shall, in any part of Her Majesty's dominions or elsewhere, commit any of the offences for which he may be liable to be tried by court-martial by virtue of this Act or of the Articles of War, may be tried and punished for the same in any part of Her Majesty's dominions or in any other place whereto he may have come or where he may be after the commission of the offence, as if the offence had been committed where such trial shall take place.

8. Every general court-martial convened within the United Kingdom or the British Isles shall consist of not less than nine commissioned officers, each of whom shall have held a commission for three years before the date of the assembly of the court. Every general court-martial shall have power to sentence any officer or soldier to suffer death, penal servitude, imprisonment, forfeiture of pay or pension, or any other punishment which shall accord with the usage of the service: No sentence of death by a court-martial shall pass unless two thirds at least of the officers present shall concur therein; no sentence of penal servitude shall be for a period of less than five years; and no sentence of imprisonment shall be for a period longer than two years.

9. Every district or garrison court-martial convened within the United Kingdom or the British Isles shall consist of not less than seven commissioned officers, and shall have the same power as a general court-martial to sentence any soldier to such punishments as shall accord with the provisions of this Act: Provided always, that no such district or garrison court-martial shall have power to try a commissioned officer, or to pass any sentence of death or penal servitude.

10. A regimental or detachment court-martial shall consist of not less than five commissioned officers, unless it is found to be impracticable to assemble that number, in which case three shall be sufficient, and shall have power to sentence any soldier to corporal punishment, or to imprisonment, and to forfeiture of pay, in such manner as shall accord with the provisions of this Act.

11. In cases of mutiny, and insubordination accompanied with personal violence, or other offences committed on the line of march, or on board any transport ship, convict ship, merchant vessel, or troop ship, not in commission, the offender may be tried by a regimental or detachment court-martial, and the sentence may be confirmed and carried into execution on the spot by the officer in the immediate command of the troops, provided that the sentence shall not exceed that which a regimental court-martial is competent to award.

12. It shall be lawful for any officer commanding any detachment or portion of troops serving in any place beyond seas where it may be found impracticable to assemble a general court-martial, upon complaint made to him of any offence committed against the property or person of any inhabitant of or resident in any country in which such troops are so serving by any person serving with or belonging to Her Majesty's armies, being under the immediate command of any such officer, to convene a detachment general court-martial, which shall consist of not less than three commissioned officers, for the purpose of trying any such person; and every such court-martial shall have the same powers in regard to sentence upon offenders as are granted by this Act to general courts-martial: Provided always, that no sentence of any such court-martial shall be executed until the general commanding the army of which such detachment or portion forms part shall have approved and confirmed the same.

13. All general and other courts-martial shall administer an oath to every witness or other person who shall be examined before such court in any matter relating to any proceeding before the same; and every person, as well civil as military, who may be required to give or produce evidence before a court-martial, shall, in the case of general courts-martial, be summoned by the judge advocate general, or his deputy, or the person officiating as judge advocate, and in the case of all other courts-martial by the president of the court; and all persons so summoned and attending as witnesses before any court-martial shall, during their necessary attendance in or on such courts, and in going to and returning from the same, be privileged from arrest, and shall, if unduly arrested, be discharged by the court out of which the writ or process issued by which such witness was arrested, or if such court be not sitting, then by any judge of the superior courts of Westminster or Dublin, or of the Court of Session in Scotland, or of the courts of law in the East or West Indies, or elsewhere, according as the case shall require, upon its being made to appear to such court or judge, by any affidavit in a summary way, that such witness was arrested in going to or attending upon or returning from such court-martial; and all witnesses so duly summoned as aforesaid who shall not attend on such courts, or attending shall refuse to be sworn, or being sworn shall refuse to give evidence, or not produce the documents under their power or control required to be produced by them, or to answer all such questions as the court may legally demand of them, shall be liable to be attached in the Court of Queen's Bench in London or Dublin, or in the Court of Session or Sheriff or Stewart Courts in Scotland, or in courts of law in the East or West Indies, or in any of Her Majesty's colonies, garrisons, or dominions in Europe or elsewhere respectively, upon complaint made, in like manner as if such witness, after having been duly summoned or subpoenaed, had neglected to attend upon a trial in any proceeding in the court in which such complaint shall be made: Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to render an oath necessary in any case where by law a solemn affirmation may be made instead thereof: It shall be lawful for the president of any court-martial to administer an oath to a shorthand writer to take down, according to the best of his power, the evidence to be given before the court.

14. No officer or soldier who shall be acquitted or convicted of any offence shall be liable to be tried a second time by the same or any other court-martial for the same offence; and no finding, opinion, or sentence given by any court-martial, and signed by the president thereof, shall be revised more than once, nor shall any additional evidence in respect of any charge on which the prisoner then stands arraigned be received by the court on any revision.

15. If any person subject to this Act shall at any time during the continuance of this Act begin, excite, cause, or join in any mutiny or sedition in any forces belonging to Her Majesty's army, or Her Majesty's royal marines, or shall not use his utmost endeavours to suppress the same, or shall conspire with any other person to cause a mutiny, or coming to the knowledge of any mutiny or intended mutiny shall not, without delay, give information thereof to his commanding officer; or shall hold correspondence with or give advice or intelligence to any rebel or enemy of Her Majesty, either by letters, messages, signs, or tokens, in any manner or way whatsoever; or shall treat or enter into any terms with such rebel or enemy without Her Majesty's licence, or licence of the general or chief commander; or shall misbehave himself before the enemy; or shall shamefully abandon or deliver up any garrison, fortress, post, or guard committed to his charge, or which he shall have been commanded to defend; or shall compel the governor or commanding officer of any garrison, fortress, or post to deliver up to the enemy or to abandon the same; or shall speak words or use any other means to induce such governor or commanding officer, or others, to misbehave before the enemy; or shamefully to abandon or deliver up any garrison, fortress, post, or guard committed to their respective charge, or which he or they shall be commanded to defend; or shall desert Her Majesty's service; or shall leave his post before being regularly relieved; or shall sleep on his post; or shall strike or shall use or offer any violence against his superior officer, being in the execution of his office, or shall disobey any lawful command of his superior officer; or who being confined in a military prison shall offer any violence against a visitor or other his superior military officer, being in the execution of his office; all and every person and persons so offending in any of the matters before mentioned, whether such offence be committed within this realm or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions, or in foreign parts, upon land or upon the sea, shall suffer death, or penal servitude, or such other punishment as by a court-martial shall be awarded: Provided always, that any non-commissioned officer or soldier attested for or in pay in any regiment or corps who shall, without having first obtained a regular discharge therefrom, enlist himself in any other regiment or corps, may be deemed to have deserted Her Majesty's service, and shall be liable to be punished accordingly.

16. In all cases where the punishment of death shall have been awarded by a general court-martial or detachment general court-martial it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or, if in any place out of the United Kingdom or British Isles, for the commanding officer having authority to confirm the sentence, instead of causing such sentence to be carried into execution, to order the offender to be kept in penal servitude for any term not less than five years, or to suffer such term of imprisonment, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, as shall seem meet to Her Majesty, or to the officer commanding as aforesaid.

17. Any officer or soldier of Her Majesty's army, or any person employed in the War Department, or in any way concerned in the care or distribution of any money, provisions, forage, arms, clothing, ammunition, or other stores belonging to Her Majesty's army or for Her Majesty's use, who shall embezzle, fraudulently misapply, wilfully damage, steal, or receive the same, knowing them to have been stolen, or shall be concerned therein or connive thereat, may be tried for the same by a general court-martial, and sentenced to be kept in penal servitude for any term not less than five years, or to suffer such punishment of fine, imprisonment with or without hard labour, dismissal from Her Majesty's service, reduction to the ranks if a warrant or non-commissioned officer, as such court shall think fit, according to the nature and degree of the offence; and every such offender shall, in addition to any other punishment, make good at his own expense the loss and damage sustained, and in every such case the court is required to ascertain by evidence the amount of such loss or damage, and to declare by their sentence that such amount shall be made good by such offender; and the loss and damage so ascertained as aforesaid shall be a debt to Her Majesty, and may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts at Westminster or in Dublin, or the Court of Exchequer in Scotland, or in any court in Her Majesty's colonies, or in India, where the person sentenced by such court-martial shall be resident, after the said judgment shall be confirmed and made known, or the offender, if he shall remain in the service, may be put under stoppages not exceeding one half of his pay and allowances until the amount so ascertained shall be recovered.

18. Whenever Her Majesty shall intend that any sentence of penal servitude heretofore or hereafter passed upon any offender by any court-martial shall be carried into execution for the term specified in such sentence or for any shorter term, or shall be graciously pleased to commute as aforesaid to penal servitude any sentence of death passed by any such court, the sentence, together with Her Majesty's pleasure thereupon, shall be notified in writing by the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's army in Great Britain and Ireland, or by the adjutant general, or by the Secretary of State for the War Department, to any judge of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer in England or Ireland, and thereupon such judge shall make an order for the penal servitude of such offender in conformity with such notification, and shall do all such other acts consequent upon such notification as such judge is authorised to do by any Act in force touching the penal servitude of other offenders; and it shall be lawful for any judge of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer in Ireland to make an order that any such offender convicted in Ireland shall be kept in penal servitude in England; and such order shall be in all respects as effectual in England as though such offender had been convicted in England, and the order had been made by any judge of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer in England; and the person in whose custody such offender shall at that time be, and all other persons whatsoever whom the said order may concern, shall be bound to obey and shall be assistant in the execution thereof, and shall be liable to the same punishment for disobedience to or for interrupting the execution of such order as if the order had been made under the authority of any such Act as aforesaid; and every person so ordered to be kept in penal servitude shall be subject to every provision made by law and in force concerning persons under sentence of penal servitude; and from the time when such order of penal servitude shall be made every Act in force touching the escape of felons, or their afterwards returning or being at large without leave, shall apply to such offender, and to all persons aiding and abetting, contriving or assisting in any escape or intended escape or returning without leave of any such offender; and the judge who shall make any order of penal servitude as aforesaid shall direct the notification of Her Majesty's pleasure, and his own order made thereupon, to be filed and kept of record in the office of the Clerk of the Crown of the Court of Queen's Bench; and the said clerk shall have a fee of two shillings and sixpence only for filing the same, and shall, on application, deliver a certificate in writing (not taking more than two shillings and sixpence for the same) to such offender or to any person applying in his or Her Majesty's behalf, showing the christian and surname of such offender, his offence, the place where the court was held before which he was convicted, and the conditions on which the order of penal servitude was made; which certificate shall be sufficient proof of the conviction and sentence of such offender, and also of the terms on which such order for his penal servitude was made, in any court and in any proceeding wherein it may be necessary to inquire into the same.

19. Whenever any sentence of penal servitude heretofore or hereafter passed upon any offender by any court-martial holden in any part of Her Majesty's foreign dominions, or elsewhere beyond the seas, is to be carried into execution for the term specified in such sentence or for any shorter term, or when sentence of death passed by any such court-martial has been or shall as aforesaid be commuted to penal servitude, the same shall be notified by the officer commanding Her Majesty's forces at the presidency or station where the offender may come or be, or in his absence by the adjutant general for the time being, if in India to the chief judge or any judge of the chief civil court of the presidency or province in which the court-martial shall have been held, and if in any other part of Her Majesty's dominions to the chief justice or some other judge therein, and such judge shall make order for the intermediate custody and penal servitude of such offender; and the offender shall, until handed over in pursuance of any such order to the civil authorities, be detained in military custody, and may be moved in such custody from place to place as circumstances may require; and upon any such order being made it shall be duly notified to the governor of the presidency if in India, or to the governor of the colony if in any of Her Majesty's colonies, or to the person who shall for the time being be exercising the office of governor of such presidency or colony, who, on receipt of such notification, shall cause such offender to be removed or sent to some other colony or place, or to undergo his sentence within the presidency or colony where the offender was so sentenced, or where he may come or be as aforesaid, in obedience to the directions for the removal and treatment of convicts which shall from time to time be transmitted from Her Majesty through one of Her Principal Secretaries of State to such presidency or colony; and such offender shall according to such directions undergo the sentence of penal servitude which shall have been passed upon him either in the presidency or colony in which he has been so sentenced, or in the colony or place to which he has been so removed or sent, and whilst such sentence shall remain in force shall be liable to be imprisoned, and kept to hard labour, and otherwise dealt with under such sentence, in the same manner as if he had been sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour during the term of his penal servitude by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction in such presidency or colony, or in the colony or place to which he has been so removed or sent respectively; and elsewhere out of Her Majesty's dominions the officer commanding shall have power to make an order in writing for the penal servitude or intermediate custody of such offender; and such offender shall be liable by virtue of such order to be imprisoned, and kept to hard labour, and otherwise dealt with under the sentence of the court, in the same manner as if he had been sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour during the term of his penal servitude by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction in the place where he may be ordered to be kept in such intermediate custody, or in the place to which he may be removed for the purpose of undergoing his sentence of penal servitude. If any prisoner shall be brought to any place in the United Kingdom there to undergo any sentence of penal servitude which has been passed upon him by a court-martial held elsewhere, and the judge's or officer's order herein-before prescribed for his penal servitude and intermediate custody shall not be forthcoming, and the judge advocate general, upon application for that purpose, shall certify that it appears from the original proceedings of the court-martial whereby the prisoner was tried that he has been duly sentenced to penal servitude, and that for anything that appears to the contrary thereon such sentence is still in force against the said prisoner for the period to be stated in such certificate, then it shall be lawful for one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, upon consideration of such certificate, to direct, in writing under his hand, that the said prisoner shall be at once removed to a convict prison, and be imprisoned and kept to hard labour according to the sentence stated in such certificate, and thereupon the prisoner shall be removed to such convict prison, and shall be liable to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, and be otherwise dealt with during the term of his sentence, as if he had been sentenced to a like term of penal servitude by a competent court in the United Kingdom.

20. In any case where a sentence of penal servitude shall have been awarded by a general or detachment general court-martial it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or, if in any place out of the United Kingdom or British Isles, for the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces there serving, instead of causing such sentence to be carried into execution, to order that the offender be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, for such term not exceeding two years as shall seem meet to Her Majesty, or to the officers commanding as aforesaid.

21. Where an award of any forfeiture, or of deprivation of pay or of stoppages of pay, shall have been added to any sentence of penal servitude, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or, if in any place out of the United Kingdom or British Isles, for the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces there serving, in the event of the sentence being commuted for imprisonment, to order such award of forfeiture, deprivation of pay, or stoppages of pay to be enforced, mitigated, or remitted, as may be deemed expedient.

22. No court-martial shall, for any offence whatever committed under this Act during the time of peace within the Queen's dominions, have power to sentence any soldier to corporal punishment; provided that any court-martial may sentence any soldier to corporal punishment while on active service in the field, or on board any ship not in commission, for mutiny, insubordination, desertion, drunkenness on duty or on the line of march, disgraceful conduct, or any breach of the Articles of War; and no sentence of corporal punishment shall exceed fifty lashes.

23. It shall be lawful for any general, district, or garrison court-martial, in addition to any sentence of corporal punishment, to award imprisonment, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, such confinement not exceeding the periods prescribed by the Articles of War.

24. In all cases in which corporal punishment shall form the whole or part of the sentence awarded by any court-martial it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or for the general or other officer authorised to confirm the sentences of courts-martial, to commute such corporal punishment to imprisonment for any period not exceeding forty-two days, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, or to mitigate such sentence, or instead of such sentence to award imprisonment for any period not exceeding twenty days, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement and corporal punishment, to be inflicted in the prison, not exceeding twenty-five lashes, and the solitary confinement herein-before mentioned shall in no case exceed seven days at a time, with intervals of not less than seven days between each period of such confinement.

25. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty in all cases whatsoever, instead of causing a sentence of cashiering to be put in execution, to order the offender to be reprimanded, or, in addition thereto, to suffer such loss of army or regimental rank, or both, as may be deemed expedient.

26. On the first and on every subsequent conviction for desertion the court-martial, in addition to any other punishment, may order the offender to be marked two inches below and one inch in rear of the nipple of the left breast with the letter D, such letter not to be less than an inch long, and to be marked upon the skin with some ink or gunpowder, or other preparation, so as to be clearly seen, and not liable to be obliterated; a court-martial may, upon sentencing any offender to be discharged with ignominy, also sentence him to be marked on the right breast with the letters B C; and the confirming officer may order such sentence, both in respect of the discharge and of the marking, to be carried into effect.

27. A general, garrison, or district court-martial may sentence any soldier to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, but such solitary confinement shall not exceed the periods prescribed by the Articles of War; and any regimental or detachment court-martial may sentence any soldier to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding forty-two days, and with or without solitary confinement not exceeding the periods prescribed by the Articles of War.

28. Whenever sentence shall be passed by a court-martial on an offender already under sentence either of imprisonment or of penal servitude, the court may award a sentence of imprisonment or penal servitude for the offence for which he is under trial, to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or penal servitude to which he shall have been so previously sentenced, although the aggregate of the terms of imprisonment or penal servitude respectively may exceed the term for which any of those punishments could be otherwise awarded. Whenever Her Majesty, or any general or other officer authorised to confirm the sentences of courts-martial, shall commute a sentence of penal servitude or corporal punishment to imprisonment, and the offender whose sentence shall be so commuted shall, at the time of such commutation, be under sentence of imprisonment or penal servitude, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or the general or other officer who shall so commute such sentence, to direct that such commuted sentence of imprisonment shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or penal servitude to which such prisoner shall have been so previously sentenced, although the aggregate of the term of imprisonment or penal servitude respectively may exceed the term for which any of those punishments could be otherwise awarded.

29. It shall be lawful for the Secretary of State for the War Department, and in India for the Governor General in Council, to set apart any buildings now erected or which may hereafter be erected, or any part or parts thereof, as military prisons, and to declare that any building or any two or more buildings shall be and thenceforth such building or buildings shall be deemed and taken to be a military prison; and every military prison which, under the provisions of any former Act of Parliament, has been or which shall be so as aforesaid set apart and declared, shall be deemed to be a public prison within the meaning of this Act; and all and every the powers and authorities with respect to county gaols or houses of correction which now are or which may hereafter be vested in any of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall, with respect to all such military prisons, belong to and may be exercised by the Secretary of State for the War Department, and in India by the Governor General in Council; and it shall be lawful for the said Secretary of State, and in India for the Governor General in Council, from time to time to make, alter, and repeal rules and regulations for the government and superintendence of any such military prison, and of the governor, provost marshal, officers, and servants thereof, and of the offenders confined therein, which said rules and regulations so made as aforesaid shall remain and continue to be in force until the same are altered or repealed by Her Majesty's said Secretary of State for War, or in India by the Governor General in Council; and it shall be lawful for the said Secretary of State, and in India for the Governor General in Council, from time to time to appoint an inspector general and inspectors of military prisons, and a governor, or provost marshal, and all other necessary officers and servants for any such military prison, and, as occasion may arise, to remove the governor or provost marshal, officer or servant of any such military prison; and the general or other officer commanding any district or station within which may be any such military prison, or such general or other officer, and such other person or persons as the said Secretary of State, and in India the Governor General in Council, may from time to time appoint, shall be a visitor or visitors of such prison; and the said Secretary of State, and in India the Governor General in Council, may authorise any general officer commanding to appoint periodically visitors to any military prison within his command; and the said Secretary of State, and in India the Governor General in Council or the general officer so appointing, shall transmit to the visitor or visitors of every military prison established by his authority a copy of the rules and regulations which are to be observed and enforced, and the same shall accordingly be observed and enforced, within such prison; and every inspector, visitor, and governor of any such military prison shall, subject to such rules and regulations as may from time to time be made by the said Secretary of State, or in India by the Governor General in Council, have and exercise in respect of such prison, and of the governor, officers, and servants thereof, and of the prisoners confined therein, all the powers and authorities, as well in respect of administering oaths as otherwise, which any inspector, visiting justice, or governor of a county gaol or house of correction may respectively exercise as such.

30. Every governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of any public prison or of any gaol or house of correction in any part of Her Majesty's dominions shall receive into his custody any military offender under sentence of imprisonment by a court-martial, upon delivery to him of an order in writing in that behalf from the general commanding in chief, or the adjutant general, or the officer who confirmed the proceedings of the court, or the officer commanding the regiment or corps to which the offender belongs or is attached, which order shall specify the offence of which he shall have been convicted, and the sentence of the court, and the period of imprisonment which he is to undergo, and the day and hour of the day on which he is to be released; and such governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper shall keep such offender in a proper place of confinement, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, according to the sentence of the court and during the time specified in the said order, or until he be discharged or delivered over to other custody before the expiration of that time under an order duly made for that purpose; and whenever troops are called out in aid of the civil power, or are stationed in billets, or are on the line of march, every governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement, shall receive into his custody any soldier for a period not exceeding seven days, upon delivery to him of an order in writing on that behalf from the officer commanding such troops.

31. In the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment under the sentence of a court-martial in any public prison other than the military prisons set apart by the authority of this Act, or in any gaol or house of correction in any part of the United Kingdom, it shall be lawful for the general commanding in chief, or the adjutant general, or the officer who confirmed the proceedings of the court, or the officer commanding the district or garrison in which such prisoner may be, to give, as often as occasion may arise, an order in writing directing that the prisoner be discharged, or be delivered over to military custody, whether for the purpose of being removed to some other prison or place in the United Kingdom, there to undergo the remainder or any part of his sentence, or for the purpose of being brought before a court-martial either as a witness or for trial; and in the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment or penal servitude under the sentence of a court-martial in any public prison other than such military prison as aforesaid, or in any gaol or house of correction in any part of Her Majesty's dominions other than the United Kingdom, it shall be lawful for the general commanding in chief or the adjutant general of Her Majesty's forces in the case of any such prisoner, and for the Commander-in-Chief in India in the case of any prisoner so confined in any part of Her Majesty's Indian dominions, and for the general commanding in chief in any presidency in India in the case of a prisoner so therein confined, and for the officer commanding in chief or the officer who confirmed the proceedings of the court at any foreign station in the case of a prisoner so there confined, to give as often as occasion may arise an order in writing directing that the prisoner be discharged or be delivered over to military custody, whether for the purpose of being removed to some other prison or place in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, there to undergo the remainder or any part of his sentence, or for the purpose of being brought before a court-martial either as a witness or for trial; and in the case of any prisoner who shall be removed by any such order from any such prison, gaol, or house of correction either within the United Kingdom or elsewhere to some other prison or place either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, the officer who gave such order shall also give an order in writing directing the governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of such other prison or place to receive such prisoner into his custody, and specifying the offence of which such prisoner shall have been convicted, and the sentence of the court, and the period of imprisonment which he is to undergo, and the day and the hour on which he is to be released; and such governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper shall keep such offender in a proper place of confinement, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, according to the sentence of the court, and during the time specified in the said order, or until he be duly discharged or delivered over to other custody before the expiration of that time under an order duly made for that purpose; and in the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment or penal servitude under the sentence of a court-martial in any military prison in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, the Secretary of State for the War Department, or the general officer commanding the district or station in which the prison may be situated, shall have the like powers in regard to the discharge and delivery over of such prisoners to military custody as may be lawfully exercised by any of the military authorities above mentioned in respect of any prisoners undergoing confinement as aforesaid in any public prison other than a military prison, or in any gaol or house of correction in any part of Her Majesty's dominions; and such prisoner in any of the cases herein-before mentioned shall accordingly, on the production of any such order as is herein-before mentioned, be discharged or delivered over, as the case may be: Provided always, that the time during which any prisoner under sentence of imprisonment by a court-martial shall be detained in such military custody under such order as aforesaid shall be reckoned as imprisonment under the sentence for whatever purpose such detention shall take place; and such prisoner may during such time, either when on board ship or otherwise, be subjected to such restraint as is necessary for his detention and removal.

32. The gaoler or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement in any part of Her Majesty's dominions shall diet and supply every soldier imprisoned therein under the sentence of a court-martial or as a deserter with fuel and other necessities according to the regulations of such place of confinement, and shall receive on account of every soldier, out of the subsistence of such soldier during the period of his imprisonment, in Great Britain and Ireland, one shilling per diem, and in other parts of Her Majesty's dominions sixpence per diem: Provided also, that in all cases where such soldier is sentenced to be discharged from the army on the completion of his term of imprisonment, the Secretary of State for the War Department may cause to be issued out of army votes, upon application in writing, signed by any justice within whose jurisdiction such place of confinement shall be locally situated, together with a copy of the order of commitment, a further sum not exceeding sixpence per diem, and which said sum of one shilling or of sixpence, and the further sum, if any, as the case may be, shall be carried to the credit of the fund from which the expense of such place of confinement is defrayed. In India the expenses incurred under the provisions of this section shall be paid in the same manner as the other expenses of such prison, or as may be provided by the laws or regulations to be made in that behalf.

33. Every gaoler or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, or other place of confinement, to whom any notice shall have been given, or who shall have reason to know or believe, that any person in his custody for any offence, civil or military, is a soldier liable to serve Her Majesty on the expiration of his imprisonment, shall forthwith, or as soon as may be, give, if in Great Britain, to the Secretary of State for the War Department, and if in Ireland to the general commanding Her Majesty's forces in Ireland, or if in India to the adjutant general of the army, or to the nearest military authority with whom it may be convenient to communicate, notice of the day and hour on which the imprisonment of such person will expire; and every such gaoler or keeper is hereby required to use his best endeavours to ascertain and report in all cases where practicable the particular regiment or corps, battalion of a regiment or battery of artillery, to which such soldier belongs, and also whether he belongs to the depot or the head quarters of his regiment; and in the event of his being a recruit who has not joined, that it may be so stated in his report, together with the name of the place where the man enlisted. In all cases where the soldier in custody is under sentence to be discharged from the service on the completion of his term of imprisonment, and the discharge document is in the hands of the gaoler, such gaoler shall not be required to make any report thereof to the Secretary of State for War, or to the military authorities herein-before referred to.

34. Upon reasonable suspicion that a person is a deserter it shall be lawful for any constable, or if no constable can be immediately met with, then for any officer or soldier in Her Majesty's service, or other person, to apprehend or cause to be apprehended such suspected person, and forthwith to bring him or cause him to be brought before any justice living in or near the place where he was so apprehended and acting for the county, city, district, place, or borough wherein such place is situate, or for the county adjoining such first-mentioned county or such borough; and such justice is hereby authorised and required to inquire whether such suspected person is a deserter, and from time to time to defer the said inquiry and to remand the said suspected person in the manner prescribed by an Act passed in the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter forty-two, section twenty-one, and subject to every provision therein contained; and if it shall appear to the satisfaction of such justice by the testimony of one or more witnesses taken upon oath, or by the confession of such suspected person, confirmed by some corroborative evidence upon oath or by the knowledge of such justice, that such suspected person is a deserter, such justice shall forthwith cause him to be conveyed in civil custody to the head quarters or depôt of the regiment or corps to which he belongs, if stationed within a convenient and easily accessible distance from the place of commitment, or if not so stationed then to the nearest or most convenient public prison (other than a military prison set apart under the authority of this Act) or police station legally provided as a lock-up house for temporary confinement of persons taken into custody, whether such prison or police station be in the county or borough in which such suspected person was apprehended or in which he was committed, or not; or if the deserter has been apprehended by a party of soldiers of his own regiment or corps in charge of a commissioned officer, such justice may deliver him up to such party, unless the officer shall deem it necessary to have the deserter committed to prison for safe custody; and such justice shall transmit an account of the proceedings, in the form prescribed in the schedule annexed to this Act, to the Secretary of State for the War Department, specifying therein whether such deserter was delivered to his regiment or corps, or to the party of his regiment or corps, in order to his being taken to the head quarters or depôt of his regiment or corps, or whether such deserter was committed to prison, to the end that the person so committed may be removed by an order from the office of the said Secretary of State, and proceeded against according to law; and such justice shall also send to the said Secretary of State a report stating the names of the persons by whom or by or through whose means the deserter was apprehended and secured; and the said Secretary of State shall transmit to such justice an order for the payment to such persons of such sum not exceeding forty shillings as the said Secretary of State shall be satisfied they are entitled to according to the true intent and meaning of this Act; and for such information, commitment, and report as aforesaid the clerk of the said justice shall be entitled to a fee of two shillings and no more; and every gaoler and other person into whose custody any person charged with desertion is committed shall immediately upon the receipt of the person so charged into his custody pay such fee of two shillings, and also upon the production of a receipt from the medical practitioner who, in the absence of a military medical officer, may have been required to examine such suspected person, a fee of two shillings and sixpence, and shall notify the fact to the Secretary of State for the War Department, and transmit also to the said Secretary of State a copy of the commitment, to the end that such Secretary of State may order repayment of such fees; and when any such person shall be apprehended and committed as a deserter in any part of Her Majesty's foreign dominions the justice shall forthwith cause him to be conveyed to some public prison, if the regiment or corps to which he is suspected to belong shall not be in such part, or, if the regiment or corps be in such part, the justice may deliver him into custody at the nearest military post if within reasonable distance, although the regiment to which such person is suspected to belong may not be stationed at such military post; and such justice shall in every case transmit to the general or other officer commanding a descriptive return in the form prescribed in the schedule to this Act annexed, to the end that such person may be removed by order of such officer, and proceeded against according to law; and such descriptive return purporting to be duly made and subscribed in accordance with the Act shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be deemed sufficient evidence of the facts and matters therein stated: Provided always, that any such person so committed as a deserter in any part of Her Majesty's dominions shall, subject to the provisions herein-after contained, be liable to be transferred by order of the general or other officer commanding to serve in any regiment or corps or depôt nearest to the place where he shall have been apprehended, or to any other regiment or corps to which it may be desirable that he should be transferred, and shall also be liable after such transfer of service to be tried and punished as a deserter.

35. Every gaoler or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement in any part of Her Majesty's dominions is hereby required to receive and confine therein every deserter who shall be delivered into his custody by any soldier or other person conveying such deserter under lawful authority, on production of the warrant of the justice of the peace on which such deserter shall have been taken, or some order from the office of the Secretary of State for the War Department, which order shall continue in force until the deserter shall have arrived at his destination; and such gaoler or keeper shall be entitled to one shilling for the safe custody of the said deserter while halted on the march, and to such subsistence for his maintenance as shall be directed by Her Majesty's regulations.

36. Any recruit for Her Majesty's army who, having been attested or received pay other than enlisting money, shall desert before joining the regiment or corps for which he has enlisted, shall, on being apprehended, and committed for such desertion by any justice of the peace upon the testimony of one or more witnesses upon oath, or upon his own confession, forfeit his personal bounty, and be liable to be transferred to any regiment or corps or depôt nearest to the place where he shall have been apprehended, or to any other regiment or corps to which Her Majesty may deem it more desirable that he should be transferred: Provided always, that such deserters thus transferred shall not be liable to other punishment for the offence, or to any other penalty except the forfeiture of their personal bounty.

37. Any person who shall confess himself to be a deserter from Her Majesty's forces, or from the embodied militia, shall be liable to be taken before any two justices of the peace acting for the county, district, city, burgh, or place where any such person shall at any time happen to be when he shall be brought before them, and on proof that any such confession as aforesaid was false shall by the said justices be adjudged to be punished, if in England, as a rogue and vagabond, and if elsewhere by commitment to some prison or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three calendar months; and if, when such person shall be brought before the said justices, it shall be proved to their satisfaction that such confession has been made, but evidence of the truth or falsehood of such confession shall not at that time be forthcoming, such justices within the United Kingdom are hereby required to remand such person in the manner herein-before mentioned, and to transmit a statement of the case and descriptive return to the Secretary of State for the War Department, with a request to be informed whether such person appears to belong or to have belonged to the regiment or corps from which he shall have so confessed himself to have deserted; and a letter from the War Office in reply thereto, referring to such statement, and purporting to be signed by or on behalf of the Secretary of State for the War Department, shall be admissible in evidence against such person, and shall be deemed to be legal evidence of the facts stated therein, and on the receipt thereof the said justices shall forthwith proceed to adjudicate upon the case. In India the authority herein given to two justices may be exercised by one European justice or magistrate.

38. When there shall not be any military officer of rank not inferior to captain, or any adjutant of regular militia, within convenient distance of the place where any non-commissioned officer or soldier on furlough shall be detained by sickness or other casualty rendering necessary any extension of such furlough, it shall be lawful for any justice who shall be satisfied of such necessity to grant an extension of furlough for a period not exceeding one month; and the said justice shall by letter immediately certify such extension and the cause thereof to the commanding officer of the corps or detachment to which such non-commissioned officer or soldier belongs, if known, and if not then to the agent of the regiment or corps, in order that the proper sum may be remitted to such non-commissioned officer or soldier, who shall not during the period of such extension of furlough be liable to be treated as a deserter: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to exempt any soldier from trial and punishment, according to the provisions of this Act, for any false representation made by him in that behalf to the said justice, or for any breach of discipline committed by him in applying for and obtaining the said extension of furlough.

39. No person subject to this Act, having been acquitted or convicted of any crime or offence by the civil magistrate, or by the verdict of a jury, shall be liable to be again convicted for the same crime or offence by a court-martial, or to be punished for the same otherwise than by cashiering in the case of a commissioned officer, or in the case of a warrant officer by reduction to an inferior class or to the rank of a private soldier by order of the Commander-in-Chief, or in the case of a non-commissioned officer by reduction to the ranks by order of the Commander-in-Chief or of the colonel, or in the militia by order of the appointed commandant of the regiment or corps; and whenever any officer or soldier shall have been tried by any court of ordinary criminal jurisdiction, the clerk of such court or other officer having the custody of the records of such court, or the deputy of such clerk, shall, if required by the officer commanding the regiment or corps to which such officer or soldier shall belong, transmit to him a certificate setting forth the offence of which the prisoner was convicted, together with the judgment of the court thereon if such officer or soldier shall have been convicted, or of the acquittal of such officer or soldier, and shall be allowed for such certificate a fee of three shillings.

40. Any person attested for Her Majesty's army, or serving on the permanent staff of the disembodied militia or volunteers other than as a commissioned officer, shall be liable to be taken out of Her Majesty's service only by process or execution on account of any charge of felony or of misdemeanor, or of any crime or offence other than the misdemeanor of absenting himself from his service, or neglecting to fulfil his contract, or otherwise misconducting himself respecting the same, or the misdemeanor of refusing to comply with an order of justices for the payment of money, or on account of an original debt proved by affidavit of the plaintiff or of some one on his behalf to amount to the value of thirty pounds at the least, over and above all costs of suit, such affidavit to be sworn, without payment of any fee, before some judge of the court out of which process or execution shall issue, or before some person authorised to take affidavits in such court, of which affidavit, when duly filed in such court, a memorandum shall, without fee, be endorsed upon the back of such process, stating the facts sworn to, and the day of filing such affidavit; but no soldier or other person as aforesaid shall be liable by any process whatever to appear before any justice of the peace or other authority whatever, or to be taken out of Her Majesty's service by any writ, summons, warrant, order, judgment, execution, or any process whatsoever issued by or by the authority of any court of law, or any magistrate, justice or justices of the peace, or any other authority whatsoever, for any original debt not amounting to thirty pounds, or for not supporting or maintaining, or for not having supported or maintained, or for leaving or having left chargeable to any parish, township, or place, or to the common fund of any union, any relation or child which such soldier or person might, if not in Her Majesty's service, be compellable by law to relieve or maintain, or for neglecting to pay to the mother of any bastard child, or to any person who may have been appointed to have the custody of such child, any sum to be paid in pursuance of an order on that behalf, or for the breach of any contract, covenant, agreement, or other engagement whatever by parol or in writing, or for having left or deserted his employer or master, or his contract, work, or labour, or misconducting himself respecting the same, except in the case of an apprentice, or of an indentured labourer, as herein-after described; and all summonses, warrants, commitments, indictments, convictions, judgments, and sentences on account of any of the matters for which it is herein declared that a soldier or other person as aforesaid is not liable to be taken out of Her Majesty's service shall be utterly illegal, and null and void, to all intents and purposes; and any judge of any such court may examine into any complaint made by a soldier or by his superior officer, and by warrant under his hand discharge such soldier, without fee, he being shown to have been arrested contrary to the intent of this Act, and shall award reasonable costs to such complainant, who shall have for the recovery thereof the like remedy as would have been applicable to the recovery of any costs which might have been awarded against the complainant in any judgment or execution as aforesaid, or a writ of habeas corpus ad subjiciendum shall be awarded or issued, and the discharge of any such soldier out of custody shall be ordered thereupon; provided that any plaintiff, upon notice of the cause of action first given in writing to any soldier, or left at his last quarters, may proceed in any action or suit to judgment, and have execution other than against the body or military necessities or equipments of such soldier; provided also, that nothing herein contained relating to the leaving or deserting a master or employer, or to the breach of any contract, agreement, or engagement, shall apply to persons who shall be really and bona fide apprentices, duly bound, under the age of twenty-one years, or to indentured labourers, as herein-after prescribed.

41. No person who shall be commissioned and in full pay as an officer shall be capable of being nominated or elected to be sheriff of any county, borough, or other place, or to be mayor, portreeve, alderman, or to hold any office in any municipal corporation in any city, borough, or place in Great Britain or Ireland.

42. Every person authorised to enlist recruits shall first ask the person offering to enlist whether he belongs to the militia, and also such other questions as the military authorities may direct to be put to recruits, and shall immediately after giving him enlisting money serve him with a notice in the form set forth in the schedule to this Act annexed.

43. Every person who shall receive enlisting money in manner aforesaid, knowing it to be such, shall, subject to the provisions herein-after contained, upon such receipt be deemed to be enlisted as a soldier in Her Majesty's service, and while he shall remain with the recruiting party shall be entitled to be billeted.

44. Every person so enlisted as aforesaid shall, within ninety-six hours (any intervening Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday not included), but not sooner than twenty-four hours after such enlistment, appear, together with some person employed in the recruiting service, before a justice of the peace, not being an officer of the army, for the purpose of being attested as a soldier, or of objecting to his enlistment.

45. When a recruit upon appearing before a justice for the purposes aforesaid shall dissent from or object to his enlistment, and shall satisfy the justice that the same was effected in any respect irregularly, he shall forthwith discharge the recruit absolutely, and shall report such discharge to the inspecting field officer of the district, or in the case of a recruit enlisted at the head quarters or depôt of a regiment to the officer commanding the same; but if the recruit so dissenting shall not allege or shall not satisfy the justice that the enlistment was effected irregularly, nevertheless, upon repayment of the enlisting money, and of any sum received by him in respect of pay, and of a further sum of twenty shillings as smart money, he will be entitled to be discharged, and the sum paid by such recruit upon his discharge shall be kept by the justice, and, after deducting therefrom one shilling as the fee for reporting the payment to the Secretary of State for the War Department and to the inspecting field officer of the district, shall be paid over to any person belonging to the recruiting party who may demand the same; and the justice who shall discharge any recruit shall in every case give a certificate thereof, signed with his hand, to the recruit, specifying the cause thereof.

46. Any person may be enlisted for some particular arm or branch of service, and if he shall enlist for cavalry or infantry he shall be at liberty to declare and state the particular regiment of cavalry or infantry into which he desires to enlist, and he shall be attested for the same, and be sent thereto with all convenient speed; but if no such statement or declaration be made by such person at the time of his attestation as aforesaid, then he shall be attested for general service, and it shall be lawful for the military authorities at any time within twelve months after his attestation to attach him to such arm or branch of service, or to such regiment of cavalry or infantry, excluding colonial corps, as to them shall seem to be most fitting and convenient for Her Majesty's service: Provided always, that after the recruit shall have been attached to any regiment he shall not be removed or transferred therefrom, save and except under the provisions of any statute for the time being in force.

If the recruit on appearing before a justice shall not dissent from his enlistment, or dissenting shall within twenty-four hours return and state that he is unable to pay the sums mentioned in the last section, he shall be attested as follows: the justice, or some person deputed by him, shall read to the recruit the questions set forth in the form contained in the schedule to this Act annexed, cautioning him that if he fraudulently make any false answer thereto he shall be liable to be punished as a rogue and a vagabond; and the answers of the recruits shall be recorded opposite to the said questions, and the justice shall require the recruit to make and sign the declaration in the said form, and shall then administer to him the oath of allegiance in the said form; and when the recruit shall have signed the said declaration, and taken the said oath, the justice shall attest the same by his signature, and shall deliver to the recruiting officer the declaration so signed and attested; and the fee for such attestation, including the declaration and oath, shall be one shilling and no more; and any recruit shall, if he so wish, be furnished with a certified copy of the above-mentioned declaration by the officer who finally approved of him for the service.

47. No recruit, unless he shall have been attested or shall have received pay other than enlisting money, shall be liable to be tried by court-martial; but if any recruit previously to his being attested shall by means of any false answer obtain enlistment money, or shall make any false statement in his declaration, or shall refuse to answer any question duly authorised to be put to recruits for the purpose of filling up such declaration, or shall refuse or neglect to go before a justice for the purposes aforesaid, or having dissented from his enlistment shall wilfully omit to return and pay such money as aforesaid, in any of such cases it shall be lawful for any two justices within the United Kingdom, or for any one justice out of the United Kingdom, acting for the county, district, city, burgh, or place where any such recruit shall at any time happen to be, to adjudge such recruit, when he shall be brought before them or him, if in England, to be a rogue and vagabond, and to sentence him to be punished accordingly, and if in Scotland or Ireland, or elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions, to be imprisoned with hard labour in any prison or house of correction for any period not exceeding three calendar months; and the declaration made by the recruit on his attestation purporting to be made and subscribed in accordance with the schedule to this Act annexed shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be deemed sufficient evidence of such recruit having represented the several particulars as stated in such declaration.

48. Any recruit who shall have been attested, and who shall afterwards be discovered to have given any wilfully false answer to any question directed to be put to recruits, or shall have made any wilfully false statement in the declaration herein-before mentioned, shall be liable, at the discretion of the proper military authorities, to be proceeded against before two justices in the manner herein-before mentioned, and by them sentenced accordingly, or to be tried by a district or garrison court-martial for the same, and punished in such manner as such court shall direct.

49. If any recruit shall abscond, so that it is not possible immediately to apprehend and bring him before a justice for attestation, the recruiting party shall produce to the justice before whom the recruit ought regularly to have been brought for that purpose a certificate of the name and place of residence and description of such recruit, and of his having absconded, and shall declare the same to be true; and the justice to whom such certificate shall be produced shall transmit a duplicate thereof to the Secretary of State for the War Department, in order that the same may appear in the "Police Gazette."

50. If any man while belonging to a militia regiment shall enlist in and be attested for Her Majesty's army, he shall be liable to be tried before a court-martial on a charge for desertion; but it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State for the War Department to give such general directions as may from time to time appear to him necessary for placing any man who confesses himself to be a militiaman under stoppage of one penny a day of his pay for eighteen calendar months, in lieu of his being tried by court-martial, and in case such militiaman shall have belonged to the Militia Reserve at the time of his attestation for placing him under a further stoppage of one penny a day for two hundred and forty days, and further to give general directions as to the manner in which such stoppages shall be applied, and whether, on making good the same, the man shall be returned to his militia regiment or be deemed to be a soldier in the same manner as if he had not been a militiaman at the time of his attestation: Provided that if the regiment of militia from which the man has deserted be within the United Kingdom, the Secretary of State for the War Department shall not make such latter order without the consent of the commanding officer of such regiment: Provided also, that every soldier who while belonging to a militia regiment enlisted in Her Majesty's army, whether such enlistment took place before or after the passing of the Mutiny Act, 1860, shall reckon service towards the performance of his limited engagement from the date of his attestation: Provided also, that any such soldier shall not reckon service for pension until the day on which his engagement for the militia would have expired; but if any such soldier shall subsequently to his enlistment have rendered long, faithful, or gallant service, the Secretary of State for War may, upon the special recommendation of the Commander-in-Chief, order that he may reckon service for pension from the date of his attestation. If any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff enlists in Her Majesty's army he may be tried and punished as a deserter, but if he confesses his desertion the Secretary of State for the War Department, instead of causing him to be tried and punished as a deserter, may cause him to be returned to his service on the volunteer permanent staff, to be there put under stoppages from his pay until he has repaid the amount of any bounty received by him and the expenses attending his enlistment, and also the value of any arms, &c. issued to him while on the volunteer permanent staff, and not duly delivered up by him; or may cause him to be held to his service in Her Majesty's army, with a direction, if it seems fit, that his time of service therein shall not be reckoned for pension until the time when his engagement on the volunteer permanent staff would have expired; and may further cause him to be put under stoppages of one penny a day of his pay until he has repaid the expense attending his engagement or attestation on the volunteer permanent staff, and also the value of any arms, clothing, or appointments issued to him while on the volunteer permanent staff, and not duly delivered up by him.

51. Every person subject to this Act who shall wilfully act contrary to any of its provisions in any matter relating to the enlisting or attesting of recruits for Her Majesty's army shall be liable to be tried for such offence before a general, district, or garrison court-martial, and to be sentenced to such punishments other than death or penal servitude as such courts may award.

52. It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace or person exercising the office of a magistrate within any of Her Majesty's dominions abroad, and in any colony for any other person duly authorised in that behalf by the governor or officer administering the government of such colony, and beyond the limits of Her Majesty's dominions for any British consul or person duly exercising the authority of a British consul, and in Her Majesty's dominions in India for any person duly authorised in that behalf by the governor general or lieutenant governor or other officer administering the government of any presidency, division, or province, and within the territories of any foreign state in India for the person performing the duties of the office of British resident therein, and for any other person duly authorised in that behalf by the governor general, to enlist and attest or to re-engage within the local limits of their several authorities any soldiers or persons desirous of enlisting or re-engaging in Her Majesty's army; and it shall be lawful, notwithstanding anything contained in the statute twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter one hundred, for any person so authorised in Her Majesty's dominions in India, or within the territories of any foreign state in India, to enlist and attest within the local limits of his authority any persons desirous of enlisting in Her Majesty's Indian forces. Any such magistrate or person as aforesaid shall have the same powers in that behalf as are by this or any other Act of Parliament given to justices in the United Kingdom for all such purposes of enlistment and attestation; but no such magistrate or other person authorised to enlist and attest as above mentioned shall be a general officer or hold any regimental commission; and all such appointments, past and future, and everything done or to be done under them, shall be valid and of full effect, notwithstanding the expiration of this Act or of any other Act of Parliament; and any person so attested shall be deemed to be an attested soldier.

53. When any corps shall be relieved or disbanded at any station beyond the seas it shall be lawful for any officers thereunto authorised by the officer commanding in chief at such station to receive as transfers as many of the soldiers belonging to the corps leaving the station as shall be willing and fit for service for any corps appointed to remain; and every soldier so transferred is hereby deemed to be discharged from his former corps, and an attested certificate of transfer shall be delivered to the soldier.

54. It shall be lawful for the Commander-in-Chief, and on any foreign station for the general or other officer commanding at such station, to direct that any soldier attested for any one branch of the service shall, on the application of his commanding officer, and with his own consent, be transferred to some other branch of the service or to some other regiment or corps in the same branch of the service, either within the United Kingdom or elsewhere; and every soldier so transferred shall be deemed to be discharged from his former corps, and shall have a certificate of transfer delivered to him: Provided always, that any soldier who may have volunteered for the corps of armourer sergeants, or for the army hospital corps, or military store staff corps, or the commissariat staff corps, or the corps to be hereafter organised and called the army service corps, shall be liable, by order of the military authorities above mentioned, to be re-transferred to his former corps, or to any other corps on the station on which he is serving at the time, for misconduct, unfitness, or any other reasonable cause: Provided also, that any staff clerk or other non-commissioned officer or soldier on the staff of the army may be transferred to any corps serving at the station at the time of his removal from staff employ: Provided also, that upon the conviction by court-martial of any soldier of the crime of desertion, the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces may, and if the court-martial has been held at a foreign station the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces at such foreign station may, order such soldier to serve in any regiment or corps.

55. Any person who now has or may hereafter have completed at least two thirds of the first term of his enlistment may at any time thereafter, with the approbation of his commanding officer, or other competent military authority, be re-engaged for such a period as shall complete a total period of twenty-one years in Her Majesty's service; and any person who has been a soldier, and who has received his discharge, may also be so re-engaged upon making a declaration, in the form given in the schedule annexed to this Act, before any one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace in Great Britain or Ireland, or if not in Great Britain or Ireland before any person duly appointed to enlist and attest out of Great Britain and Ireland any soldiers or persons desirous of enlisting or re-engaging in Her Majesty's service: Provided always, that in reckoning service under the original enlistment or re-engagement of a soldier the boon service granted by the general order of the Governor General of India, dated twelfth of October one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, shall be reckoned as actual service, and allowed towards pension and discharge: Provided also, that every soldier now serving who belonged to the garrison which defended Lucknow, or to the garrison which defended the Alumbagh, before the advance of any portion of the forces under the late Lord Clyde in one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, shall be allowed to reckon one year's service towards the performance of his limited engagement, and also towards pension on discharge: Provided also, that every soldier who volunteered into Her Majesty's army from any embodied regiment of militia between the thirty-first of December one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five and the twenty-first of March one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one inclusive, or from the disembodied militia during the last week of the training of his regiment in the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-eight, and who had rendered previous to volunteering six months embodied or disembodied militia service, shall be allowed to reckon towards good-conduct pay and pension, and towards the completion of his limited engagement of service in Her Majesty's army, half the embodied service which he had rendered in the militia after attaining the age of eighteen.

56. All negroes or persons of colour who, although not born in any of Her Majesty's colonies, territories, or possessions, shall have voluntarily enlisted into Her Majesty's service, shall, while serving, be deemed to be soldiers legally enlisted into Her Majesty's service, and be entitled to all the privileges of natural-born subjects; and all negroes who have been seized and condemned as prize under the Slave Trade Acts, and appointed to serve in Her Majesty's army, shall be deemed to be and shall be entitled to all the advantages of negroes or persons of colour voluntarily enlisted to serve as soldiers in any of Her Majesty's colonial forces.

57. Any person duly bound as an apprentice in Great Britain or Ireland, or as an indentured labourer in any of Her Majesty's colonies or possessions abroad, who shall enlist as a soldier in Her Majesty's army, and shall falsely state to the magistrate before whom he shall be carried and attested that he is not an apprentice or indentured labourer as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of obtaining money under false pretences, if in England or in Ireland, or in the colonies or possessions aforesaid, and of falsehood, fraud, and wilful imposition, if in Scotland, and shall after the expiration of his apprenticeship, or of his indenture as a labourer, whether he shall have been so convicted and punished or not, be liable to serve as a soldier in Her Majesty's army according to the terms of the enlistment, and if on the expiration of his apprenticeship, or of his indenture as a labourer, he shall not deliver himself up to some officer authorised to receive recruits, such person may be taken as a deserter from Her Majesty's army; and no master shall be entitled to claim an apprentice or an indentured labourer as aforesaid who shall enlist as a soldier in Her Majesty's army, or shall be serving in the embodied militia, unless he shall, within one calendar month after such apprentice or indentured labourer shall have left his service, go before some justice and take the oath mentioned in the schedule to this Act annexed, and shall produce the certificate of such justice of his having taken such oath, which certificate such justice is required to give in the form in the schedule to this Act annexed, and unless such apprentice shall have been bound, if in England, for the full term of five years, not having been above the age of fourteen when so bound, and, if in Ireland or in the British Isles, for the full term of five years at the least, not having been above the age of sixteen when so bound, and, if in Scotland, for the full term at least of four years, by a regular contract or indenture of apprenticeship, duly extended, signed, and tested, and binding on both parties by the law of Scotland, prior to the period of enlistment, and unless such contract or indenture in Scotland shall, within three months after the commencement of the apprenticeship, and before the period of enlistment, have been produced to a justice of the peace of the county in Scotland wherein the parties reside, and there shall have been indorsed thereon by such justice a certificate or declaration, signed by him, specifying the date when and the person by whom such contract or indenture was so produced, which certificate or declaration such justice of the peace is hereby required to indorse and sign, and unless such apprentice shall, when claimed by such master, be under twenty-one years of age: Provided always, that any master of an apprentice indentured for the sea service, or of any indentured labourer in Her Majesty's colonies or possessions abroad, shall be entitled to claim and recover him in the form and manner above directed, notwithstanding such apprentice or indentured labourer may have been bound for a less term than five or four years as aforesaid: Provided also, that any master who shall give up the indentures of his apprentice or of his labourer as aforesaid within one month after the enlisting of such apprentice or indentured labourer shall be entitled to receive to his own use so much of the bounty payable to such recruit as shall not have been paid to such recruit before notice given of his being an apprentice or an indentured labourer.

58. No apprentice or indentured labourer claimed by his master as aforesaid shall be taken from any corps or recruiting party, except under a warrant of a justice residing near, and within whose jurisdiction such apprentice or indentured labourer shall then happen to be, before whom he shall be carried; and such justice shall inquire into the matter upon oath, which oath he is hereby empowered to administer, and shall require the production and proof of the indenture, and that notice of the said warrant has been given to the commanding officer, and a copy thereof left with some officer or non-commissioned officer of the party, and that such person so enlisted declared that he was no apprentice or indentured labourer; and such justice, if required by such officer or non-commissioned officer, shall commit the offender to the common gaol of the county, division, or place for which such justice is acting, and shall keep the indenture to be produced when required, and shall bind over such person as he may think proper to give evidence against the offender, who shall be tried at the next or at the sessions immediately succeeding the next general or quarter sessions of such county, division, or place, unless the court shall for just cause put off the trial; and the production of the indenture, with the certificate of the justice that the same was proved, shall be sufficient evidence of the said indenture; and every such offender in Scotland may be tried by the judge ordinary in the county or stewartry in such and the like manner as any person may be tried in Scotland for any offence not incurring a capital punishment: Provided always, that any justice not required as aforesaid to commit such apprentice or indentured labourer may deliver him to his master.

59. No person who shall, for six months either before or after the passing of this Act, have received pay and been borne on the strength and pay list of any regiment or corps, or depôt or battalion of a regiment or corps (of which the last quarterly pay list, if produced, shall be evidence), shall be entitled to claim his discharge on the ground of error or illegality in his enlistment or attestation or re-engagement, or on any other ground whatsoever, but, on the contrary, every such person shall be deemed to have been duly enlisted, attested, or re-engaged, as the case may be; and no person shall be exempted from the provisions of this Act or of the Articles of War for the time being by reason only that the number of the forces for the time being in the service of Her Majesty is either greater or less than the number herein-before mentioned.

60. No Secretary of State for the War Department, paymaster general of the army, paymaster, or any other officer whatsoever, or any of their under officers, shall receive any fees or make any deductions whatsoever out of the pay of any officer or soldier in Her Majesty's army, or from their agents, which shall grow due from and after the twenty-fifth day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy, other than the usual deductions, or such other necessary deductions as shall from time to time be authorised or required by Her Majesty's regulations or Articles of War, or by statute twenty-six and twenty-seven Victoria, chapter sixty-five, section eight (Volunteer Act), or by Her Majesty's order signified by the Secretary of State for the War Department; and every paymaster or other officer who having received any officer's or soldier's pay shall unlawfully detain the same for the space of one month, or refuse to pay the same when it shall become due, according to the several rates and agreeably to the several regulations established by Her Majesty's orders, shall, upon proof thereof before a court-martial, be discharged from his employment, and shall forfeit one hundred pounds, and the informer, if a soldier, shall, if he demand it, be discharged from any further service.

61. And whereas by petition of right in the third year of King Charles the First it is enacted and declared, that the people of the land are not by the laws to be burdened with the sojourning of soldiers against their wills; and by a clause in an Act of the Parliament of England, made in the thirty-first year of the reign of King Charles the Second, for granting a supply to His Majesty of two hundred and six thousand four hundred and sixty-two pounds seventeen shillings and threepence, for paying and disbanded the forces, it is declared and enacted that no officer, civil or military, nor other person whatsoever, should thenceforth presume to place, quarter, or billet any soldier upon any subject or inhabitant of this realm, of any degree, quality, or profession whatsoever, without his consent, and that it shall be lawful for any subject or inhabitant to refuse to quarter any soldier, notwithstanding any warrant or billeting whatsoever: And whereas by an Act passed in the Parliament of Ireland in the sixth year of the reign of Queen Anne, chapter fourteen, section eight, intituled "An Act to prevent the disorders that may happen by the marching of soldiers, and providing carriages for the baggage of soldiers on their march," it was enacted, that no officer, soldier, or trooper in the army, nor the servant of any officer, nor any attendant on the train of artillery, nor any yeoman of the guard or battle-axes, nor any officer commanding the said yeomen, nor any servant of any such officer, should at any time thereafter have, receive, or be allowed any quarters in any part of Ireland, save only during such time or times as he or they should be on their march as in the same Act is before mentioned, or during such time as he or they should be and remain in some seaport town or other place in the neighbourhood of a seaport town in order to be transported, or during such time as there should be any commotion in any part of Ireland, by reason of which emergency the army, or any considerable part thereof, should be commanded to march from one part of Ireland to another: But forasmuch as there is and may be occasion for the marching and quartering of regiments, corps, troops, and companies in several parts of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, the said several provisions of the said recited Acts shall be suspended and cease to be of any force or effect during the continuance of this Act.

62. And whereas by the eleventh section of the said Act of the sixth year of the reign of Queen Anne, chapter fourteen, it is provided and enacted, that no civil magistrate or constable should be obliged to find quarters for or give billets to more or other soldiers than those only whose true christian and surnames should be delivered to him in writing under the hand of the officer desiring quarters or billets for such soldiers at the time such quarters or billets should be desired, and that all such names should be written together and delivered in one piece of paper, signed as aforesaid, and that the christian and surnames of every soldier to be quartered or billeted, together with the name of the person on whom he or they should be billeted or quartered, should be given in writing by the constable or civil officer billeting or quartering such soldier, and be contained in the billet given by such civil officer: And whereas it has been found inconvenient and difficult to comply with all the requirements of the said enactment: It shall not be necessary, so long as this Act shall continue in force, for any officer, upon the occasion of his requiring quarters or billets for any soldiers in Ireland, to deliver to the constable or other person whose duty it shall be to find or give the same any list of the names of the soldiers to be so quartered or billeted; and it shall not be necessary for the constable or other such person as aforesaid to set forth in any billet the name of any soldier to be billeted or quartered, but only the number of the soldiers, or the number of the soldiers and horses respectively, as the case may require, to be billeted or quartered on the person named in the billet, and to whom the same shall be addressed.

63. It shall be lawful for all constables of parishes and places, and other persons specified in this Act, in Great Britain and Ireland, and they are hereby required, to billet the officers and soldiers in Her Majesty's service, and out-pensioners when assembled as a local force by competent authority, and persons receiving pay in Her Majesty's army, and the horses belonging to Her Majesty's cavalry, and also all staff and field officers horses, and all bāt and baggage horses belonging to any of Her Majesty's other forces, when on actual service, not exceeding for each officer the number for which forage is or shall be allowed by Her Majesty's regulations, in victualling houses and other houses specified in this Act (taking care in Ireland not to billet less than two men in one house, except only in case of billeting cavalry as specially provided); and they shall be received by the occupiers of the houses in which they are so billeted, and be furnished by such victuallers with proper accommodation in such houses, or if any victualler shall not have sufficient accommodation in the house upon which a soldier is billeted, then in some good and sufficient quarters to be provided by such victualler in the immediate neighbourhood, and in Great Britain shall also be furnished with diet and small beer, and in Great Britain and Ireland with stables, oats, hay, and straw for such horses as aforesaid, paying and allowing for the same the several rates herein-after provided; and at no time when troops are on a march shall any of them, whether infantry or cavalry, be billeted above one mile from the place mentioned in the route, care being always taken that billets be made out for the less distant houses, in which suitable accommodation can be found, before making out billets for the more distant; and in all places where cavalry shall be billeted in pursuance of this Act, each man and his horse shall be billeted in one and the same house, except in case of necessity; and, except in case of necessity, one man at least shall be billeted where there shall be one or two horses, and two men at least where there shall be four horses, and so in proportion for a greater number; and in no case shall a man and his horse be billeted at a greater distance from each other than one hundred yards; and the constables are hereby required to billet all soldiers and their horses on their march, in the manner required by this Act, upon the occupiers of all houses within one mile of the place mentioned in the route, and whether they be in the same or in a different county, in like manner in every respect as if such houses were all locally situate within such place; provided that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to authorise any constable to billet soldiers out of the county to which such constable belongs when the constable of the adjoining county shall be present and shall undertake to billet the due proportion of men in such adjoining county; and no more billets shall at any time be ordered than there are effective soldiers and horses present to be billeted; all which billets, when made out by such constables, shall be delivered into the hands of the commanding officer present; and if any person shall find himself aggrieved by having an undue proportion of soldiers billeted in his house, and shall prefer his complaint, if against a constable or other person not being a justice, to one or more justices, and if against a justice then to two or more justices within whose jurisdiction such soldiers are billeted, such justices respectively shall have power to order such of the soldiers to be removed, and to be billeted upon other persons, as they shall see cause; and when any of Her Majesty's cavalry or any horses as aforesaid shall be billeted upon the occupiers of houses in which officers or soldiers may be quartered by virtue of this Act who shall have no stables, then and in such case, upon the written requisition of the commanding officer of the regiment, corps, troop, or detachment, the constable is hereby required to billet the men and their horses, or horses only, upon some other person or persons who have stables, and who are by this Act liable to have officers and soldiers billeted upon them; and upon complaint being made by the person or persons to whose house or stables the said men or horses shall have been so removed to two or more justices within whose jurisdiction such men or horses shall be so billeted, it shall be lawful for such justices to order a proper allowance to be paid by the person relieved to the persons receiving such men and horses, or to be applied in furnishing the requisite accommodation; and commanding officers may exchange any man or horse billeted in any place with another man or horse billeted in the same place for the benefit of the service, provided the number of men and horses do not exceed the number at that time billeted on such houses respectively; and the constables are hereby required to billet such men and horses so exchanged accordingly; and it shall be lawful for any justice, at the request of any officer or non-commissioned officer commanding any soldiers requiring billets, to extend any routes or to enlarge the districts within which billets shall be required, in such manner as shall appear to be most convenient to the troops; provided that to prevent or punish all abuses in billeting soldiers it shall be lawful for any justice within his jurisdiction, by warrant or order under his hand, to require any constable to give him an account in writing of the number of officers and soldiers who shall be quartered by such constables, together with the names of the persons upon whom such officers and soldiers are billeted, stating the street or place where such persons dwell, and the sign, if any, belonging to the houses: Provided always, that no officer shall be compelled or compellable to pay anything for his lodging where he shall be duly billeted.

64. The officers and soldiers of Her Majesty's Foot Guards shall be billeted within the city and liberties of Westminster and places adjacent, lying in the county of Middlesex (except the city of London) and in the county of Surrey, and in the borough of Southwark, in the same manner and under the same regulations as in other parts of England, in all cases for which particular provision is not made by this Act; and the high constables shall, on receipt of the order for billeting soldiers, deliver precepts to the several constables within their respective divisions, in pursuance of which the said constables shall billet such officers and soldiers equally and proportionably on the houses subjected thereto by this Act; and the said constables shall, at every general sessions of the peace to be holden for the said city and liberties, counties and borough respectively, make and deliver to the justices then in open session assembled, upon oath, which oath the said justices are hereby required to administer, lists, signed by them respectively, of the houses subject by this Act to receive officers and soldiers, together with the names and rank of all officers and soldiers billeted on each respectively, which lists shall remain with the respective clerks of the peace for the inspection of all persons, without fee or reward; and such clerk shall forthwith from time to time deliver to any persons who shall require the same true copies of any such lists, upon being paid twopence per sheet for the same, each sheet to contain at the least one hundred and fifty words.

65. No justice having or executing any military office or commission in any part of the United Kingdom shall, directly or indirectly, be concerned in the billeting or appointing quarters for any soldier in the regiment, corps, troop, or company under the immediate command of such justice, and all warrants, acts, and things made, done, and appointed by such justice for or concerning the same shall be void.

66. The innholder or other person on whom any soldier is billeted in Great Britain shall, if required by such soldier, furnish him for every day of the march, and for a period not exceeding two days when halted at the intermediate place upon the march, and for the day of the arrival at the place of final destination, with one hot meal in each day, the meal to consist of such quantities of diet and small beer as may be fixed by Her Majesty's regulations, not exceeding one pound and a quarter of meat previous to being dressed, one pound of bread, one pound of potatoes or other vegetables, and two pints of small beer, and vinegar, salt, and pepper, and for such meal the innholder or other person furnishing the same shall be paid the sum of tenpence, and twopence halfpenny for a bed; and all innholders and other persons on whom soldiers may be billeted in Great Britain or Ireland, except when on the march in Great Britain and entitled to be furnished with the hot meal as aforesaid, shall furnish such soldiers with a bed and with candles, vinegar, and salt, and shall allow them the use of fire, and the necessary utensils for dressing and eating their meat, and shall be paid in consideration thereof the sum of fourpence per diem for each soldier; and the sum to be paid to the innholder or other person on whom any of the horses belonging to Her Majesty's forces shall be billeted in Great Britain or Ireland for ten pounds of oats, twelve pounds of hay, and eight pounds of straw, shall be one shilling and ninepence per diem for each horse; and every officer or non-commissioned officer commanding a regiment, detachment, or party shall, every four days, or before they shall quit their quarters if they shall not remain so long as four days, settle and discharge the just demands of all victuallers or other persons upon whom such officers, soldiers, or horses are billeted, out of the pay and subsistence of such officers and soldiers, before any part of the said pay or subsistence be distributed to them respectively; and if any such officer or non-commissioned officer shall not pay the same as aforesaid, then, upon complaint, and oath made thereof by any two witnesses before two justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough, or place where such quarters were situated, sitting in quarter or petty sessions, the Secretary of State for the War Department is hereby required (upon certificate of the justices before whom such oath was made of the sum due upon such accounts, and the persons to whom the same is owing, to give orders to the agent of the regiment or corps to pay the sums due to such victuallers or other persons as aforesaid, and to charge the same against such officers; and in case any soldier be suddenly ordered to march, and the respective commanding officers or non-commissioned officers are not enabled to make payment of the sums due for the lodging or victualling of the men and stabling or forage for the horses, every such officer or non-commissioned officer shall, before his departure, make up the account with every person upon whom such soldier may have been billeted, and sign a certificate thereof; which account and certificate shall be transmitted by such officer or non-commissioned officer to the agent of the regiment or corps, who is hereby required to make immediate payment thereof, and to charge the same to the account of such officer or non-commissioned officer.

67. All powers and provisions relating to soldiers shall be construed to extend to non-commissioned officers, unless when otherwise provided; and all powers and provisions relating to justices shall be construed to extend to all magistrates authorised to act as such in their respective jurisdictions and to chief magistrates of exclusive local jurisdictions; and all the powers given to and regulations made for the conduct of constables in relation to the billeting of officers and soldiers, and all penalties and forfeitures for any neglect thereof, shall extend to all tithingmen, headboroughs, and such like officers, and to all inspectors or other officers of police, and to high constables and other chief officers and magistrates of cities, towns, villages, hamlets, parishes, and places in England and Ireland, and to all justices of the peace, magistrates of burghs, commissioners of police, and other chief officers and magistrates of cities, towns, villages, parishes, and places in Scotland, who shall act in the execution of this Act in relation to billeting; and all powers and provisions for billeting officers and soldiers in victualling houses shall extend and apply to all inns, hotels, livery stables, alehouses, and to the houses of sellers of wine by retail, whether British or foreign, to be drunk in their own houses, or places thereunto belonging, and to all houses of persons selling brandy, spirits, strong waters, cider, or metheglin, by retail, in Great Britain and Ireland; and in Ireland, when there shall not be found sufficient room in such houses, then to billeting soldiers in such manner as has been heretofore customary: Provided that no officer or soldier shall be billeted in Great Britain in any private houses, or in any canteen held or occupied under the authority of the War Department, or upon persons who keep taverns only, being vintners of the City of London admitted to their freedom of the said company in right of patrimony or apprenticeship, notwithstanding such persons who keep such taverns only have taken out victualling licences, nor in the house of any distiller kept for distilling brandy and strong waters, nor in the house of any shopkeeper whose principal dealing shall be more in other goods and merchandise than in brandy and strong waters, so as such distillers and shopkeepers do not permit tipping in such houses, nor in the house of residence in any part of the United Kingdom of any foreign consul duly accredited as such.

68. For the regular provision of carriages for Her Majesty's forces, and their baggage, in their marches in Great Britain and Ireland, all justices of the peace within their several jurisdictions, being duly required thereunto by an order from Her Majesty, or the general of her forces, or other person duly authorised in that behalf, shall, on production to them of such order, or a copy thereof, certified by the commanding officer, by some officer or non-commissioned officer of the regiment or corps so ordered to march, issue a warrant to any constable having authority to act in any place from, through, near, or to which the troop shall be ordered to march, (for each of which warrants the fee of one shilling only shall be paid,) requiring him to provide the carriages, horses, and oxen, and drivers therein mentioned, and allowing sufficient time to do the same, specifying the places from and to which the said carriages shall travel, and the distance between the places, for which distance only so specified payment shall be demanded, and which distance shall not, except in cases of pressing emergency, exceed a day's march prescribed in the order of route, and shall in no cases exceed twenty-five miles; and the constables receiving such warrants shall order such persons as they shall think proper, having carriages, to furnish the requisite supply, who are hereby required to furnish the same accordingly; and when sufficient carriages cannot be procured within the proper jurisdiction, any justice of the next adjoining jurisdiction shall, by a like course of proceeding, supply the deficiency; and in order that the burden of providing carriages may fall equally, and to prevent inconvenience arising from there being no justice near the place where troops may be quartered on the march, any justice residing nearest to such place may cause a list to be made out once in every year of all persons liable to furnish such carriages, and of the number and description of their said carriages, (which list shall at all seasonable hours be open to the inspection of the said persons,) and may by warrant under his hand authorise the constable within his jurisdiction to give orders to provide carriages, without any special warrant for that purpose, which orders shall be valid in all respects; and all orders for such carriages shall be made from such lists in regular rotation, as far as the same can be done.

69. In every case in which the whole distance for which any carriage shall be impressed shall be under one mile the rate of a full mile shall be paid; and the rates to be paid for carriages impressed shall be, in Great Britain, for every mile which a waggon with four or more horses, or a wain with six oxen or four oxen and two horses, shall travel, one shilling; and for every mile any waggon with narrow wheels, or any cart with four horses, carrying not less than fifteen hundredweight, shall travel, ninepence; and for every mile any other cart or carriage with less than four horses, and not carrying fifteen hundredweight, shall travel, sixpence; and in Ireland, for every hundredweight loaded on any wheel carriage, one halfpenny per mile; and in Great Britain such further rates may be added, not exceeding a total addition per mile of fourpence, threepence, or twopence, to the respective rates of one shilling, ninepence, or sixpence, as may seem reasonable to the justices assembled at general sessions for their respective districts, or to the recorder at the sessions of the peace of any municipal city, borough, or town; and the order of such justices or recorder shall specify the average price of hay and oats at the nearest market town at the time of fixing such additional rates, the period for which the order shall be enforced not exceeding ten days beyond the next general sessions; and no such order shall be valid unless a copy thereof, signed by the presiding magistrate and one other justice, or by the recorder, shall be transmitted to the Secretary of State for the War Department within three days after the making thereof, and also in Great Britain when the day's march shall exceed fifteen miles the justice granting his warrant may fix a further reasonable compensation, not exceeding the usual rate of hire fixed by this Act; and when any additional rates or compensation shall be granted, the justice shall insert in his own hand in the warrant the amount thereof, and the date of the order of sessions, if fixed by sessions, and the warrant shall be given to the officer commanding as his voucher; and the officer or non-commissioned officer demanding carriages by virtue of the warrant of a justice shall, in Great Britain, pay the proper sums into the hands of the constables providing carriages, who shall give receipts for the same on unstamped paper; and in Ireland the officers or non-commissioned officers as aforesaid shall pay the proper sums to the owners or drivers of the carriages, and one third part of such payment shall be made before the carriage be loaded, and all the said payments in Ireland shall be made, if required, in the presence of a justice or constable; and no carriage shall be liable to carry more than thirty hundredweight in Great Britain, and in Ireland no car shall be liable to carry more than six hundredweight, and no dray more than twelve hundredweight; but the owner of such carriages in Ireland consenting to carry a greater weight shall be paid at the same rate for every hundredweight of the said excess; and the owners of such carriages in Ireland shall not be compelled to proceed, though with any less weight, under the sum of threepence a mile for each car and sixpence a mile for each dray; and the loading of such carriages in Ireland shall be first weighed, if required, at the expense of the owner of the carriage, if the same can be done in a reasonable time, without hindrance to Her Majesty's service; provided that a cart with one or more horses for which the furnisher shall receive ninepence a mile shall be required to carry fifteen hundredweight at the least; and no penalties or forfeitures in any Act relating to highways or turnpike roads in the United Kingdom shall apply to the number of horses and oxen, or weight of loading of the aforesaid carriages, which shall not on that account be stopped or detained; and whenever it shall be necessary to impress carriages for the march of soldiers from Dublin, at least twenty-four hours notice of such march, and in case of emergency as long notice as the case will admit, shall be given to the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who shall summon a proportional number of cars and drays, at his discretion, out of the licensed cars and drays and other cars and drays within the county of the said city, and they shall by turns be employed on this duty at the prices and under the regulations herein-before mentioned; and no country cars, drays, or other carriages coming to markets in Ireland shall be detained or employed against the will of the owners in carrying the baggage of the army on any pretence whatsoever.

70. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or for the Lord Lieutenant or chief governor of Ireland, by her or their order, distinctly stating that a case of emergency doth exist, signified by the Secretary of State for the War Department, or, if in Ireland, by the Chief Secretary or Under Secretary, or the first clerk in the Military Department, to authorize any general or field officer commanding Her Majesty's forces in any district or place, or the chief acting agent for the supply of stores and provisions, by writing under his hand reciting such order of Her Majesty or Lord Lieutenant or chief governor aforesaid, to require all justices within their several jurisdictions in Great Britain and Ireland to issue their warrants for the provision, not only of waggons, wains, carts, and cars kept by or belonging to any person and for any use whatsoever, but also of saddle horses, coaches, post-chaises, chaises, and other four-wheeled carriages kept for hire, and of all horses kept to draw carriages licensed to carry passengers, and also of boats, barges, and other vessels used for the transport of any commodities whatsoever upon any canal or navigable river, as shall be mentioned in the said warrants, therein specifying the place and distance to which such carriages or vessels shall go; and on the production of such requisition, or a copy thereof certified by the commanding officer, to such justice, by any officer of the corps ordered to be conveyed, or by any officer of the War Department, such justice shall take all the same proceedings in regard to such additional supply so required on such emergency as he is by this Act required to take for the ordinary provision of carriages; and all provisions whatsoever of this Act as regards the procuring of the ordinary supply of carriages, and the duties of officers and non-commissioned officers, justices, constables, and owners of carriages in that behalf, shall be to all intents and purposes applicable for the providing and payment, according to the rates of posting or of hire usually paid for such other description of carriages or vessels so required on emergency, according to the length of the journey or voyage in each case, but making no allowance for post horse duty, or turnpike, canal, river, or lock tolls, which duty or tolls are hereby declared not to be demandable for such carriages and vessels while employed in such service or returning therefrom; and it shall be lawful to convey thereon, not only the baggage, provisions, and military stores of such regiment, corps, or detachment, but also the officers, soldiers, servants, women, children, and other persons of and belonging to the same.

71. It shall be lawful for the justices of the peace assembled at their quarter sessions to direct the treasurer to pay, without fee, out of the public stock of the county or riding, or if such public stock be insufficient then out of moneys which the said justices shall have power to raise for that purpose, in like manner as for county gaols and bridges, such reasonable sums as shall have been expended by the constables within their respective jurisdictions for carriages and vessels, over and above what was or ought to have been paid by the officer requiring the same, regard being had to the season of the year and the condition of the ways by which such carriages and vessels are to pass; and in Scotland such justices shall direct such payments to be made out of the rogue money and assessments directed and authorized to be assessed and levied by an Act of the twentieth and twenty-first years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter seventy-two.

72. It shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governor for the time being of Ireland to depute, by warrant under his hand and seal, some proper person to sign routes in cases of emergency, for the marching of any of Her Majesty's forces in Ireland, in the name of such Lord Lieutenant or chief governor.

73. All Her Majesty's officers and soldiers, on duty or on their march, and their horses and baggage, and all recruits marching by route, and all prisoners under military escort, and all enrolled pensioners in uniform when called out for training or in aid of the civil power, and all carriages and horses belonging to Her Majesty or employed in her service under the provisions of this Act, or in any of Her Majesty's colonies, when conveying any such persons as aforesaid, or their baggage, or returning from conveying the same, shall be exempted from payment of any duties and tolls on embarking or disembarking from or upon any pier, wharf, quay, or landing place, or in passing along or over any turnpike or other roads or bridges, otherwise demandable by virtue of any Act already passed or hereafter to be passed, or by virtue of any Act or ordinance, order or direction of any colonial legislature or other authority in any of Her Majesty's colonies; provided that nothing herein contained shall exempt any boats, barges, or other vessels employed in conveying the said persons, horses, baggage, or stores along any canal from payment of tolls in like manner as other boats, barges, and vessels are liable thereto, except when employed in cases of emergency as herein-before enacted.

74. When any soldiers on service have occasion in their march by route to pass regular ferries in Scotland, the officer commanding may at his option pass over with his soldiers as passengers, and shall pay for himself and each soldier one half only of the ordinary rate payable by single persons, or may hire the ferry boat for himself and his party, debarring others for that time, and shall in all such cases pay only half the ordinary rate for such boat.

75. Every soldier entitled to his discharge shall, if then serving abroad, be sent, if he shall so require, to Great Britain or Ireland free of expense, and shall be entitled to receive marching money from the place of his being landed (or, if discharged at home, shall receive marching money from the place of his discharge,) to the parish or place in which he shall have been originally enlisted, or at which he shall at the time of his discharge decide to take up his residence, such place not being at a greater distance from the place of his discharge than the place of his original enlistment.

76. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to extend to exempt any officer or soldier from being proceeded against by the ordinary course of law, when accused of felony, or of misdemeanor, or of any crime or offence other than the misdemeanors and offences herein-before mentioned; and if any commanding officer shall neglect or refuse, on application being made to him for that purpose, to deliver over to the civil magistrate any officer or soldier under his command, or shall wilfully obstruct, neglect, or refuse to assist the officers of justice in apprehending any officer or soldier under his command, so accused as aforesaid, such commanding officer shall, upon conviction thereof in any of Her Majesty's superior courts at Westminster, Dublin, or Edinburgh, or in any court of record in India, be deemed to be thereupon cashiered, and shall be thenceforth utterly disabled to have or hold any civil or military office or employment in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland or in Her Majesty's service; and a certificate of such conviction, containing the substance and effect of the indictment only, omitting the formal part, with the copy of the entry of the judgment of the court thereon, shall be transmitted to the judge advocate general in London.

77. For enforcing a prompt observance of the rules and orders for the due appropriation of the public funds applicable to army services, and in order that a true and regular account may be kept and rendered by the agents for the several corps, the said agents are hereby required to observe such orders as shall from time to time be given by Her Majesty under her sign manual, or by the Secretary of State for the War Department, or by Her Majesty's Lord Lieutenant or chief governor of Ireland, or by the Lord Treasurer or the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury; and if any person, being or having been an agent, shall refuse or neglect to comply with such orders in relation to his duty as agent, or shall unlawfully withhold or detain the pay of any officer or soldier for a longer period than the space of one month after the receipt thereof, he shall for the first offence forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds, and, if still an agent, for the second offence be discharged from his employment as an army agent, and be utterly disabled to have or hold such employment thereafter, or, if he have ceased to be an army agent, shall for the second and every succeeding offence forfeit the sum of two hundred pounds.

78. Every person, not being an authorized army agent, who shall negotiate or act as agent for or in relation to the purchase, sale, or exchange of any commission in Her Majesty's army, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of one hundred pounds; and every person, whether authorized as an army agent or not, who shall receive any money or reward in respect of any such purchase, sale, or exchange, or who shall negotiate or receive for any purpose whatsoever any money or consideration where no price is allowed by Her Majesty's regulations, or any money or consideration exceeding the amount so allowed, shall forfeit one hundred pounds, and treble the value of the consideration where the commission is not allowed to be sold, or treble the excess of such consideration beyond the regular price.

79. Every person, not having any military commission, who shall give or procure to be given any untrue certificate, whereby to excuse any soldier for his absence from any muster or any other service which he ought to attend or perform, or who shall directly or indirectly cause to be taken any money or gratuity for mustering any soldiers, or for signing any muster rolls or duplicates thereof, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of fifty pounds; and any person who shall falsely be mustered, or offer himself to be mustered, or lend or furnish any horse to be falsely mustered, shall, upon conviction before some justice of the peace residing near the place where such muster shall be made, forfeit for every such offence the sum of twenty pounds; and the informer, if he belongs to Her Majesty's service, shall, if he demand it, be forthwith discharged.

80. Every person (except such person or persons as shall be authorized by beating order under the hand of the Secretary of State for the War Department) who shall cause to be advertised, posted, or dispersed bills for the purpose of procuring recruits or substitutes for the line, embodied militia, or Her Majesty's Indian forces, or shall open or keep any house, place of rendezvous, or office, or receive any person therein under such bill or advertisement, as connected with the recruiting service, or shall directly or indirectly interfere therewith, without permission in writing from the adjutant general, or from the Secretary of State in Council of India, (as the case may be,) shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding twenty pounds.

81. Any person who shall in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, or by any means whatsoever, directly or indirectly, procure any soldier to desert, or attempt to procure or persuade any soldier to desert, and any person who, knowing that any soldier is about to desert, shall aid or assist him in deserting, or, knowing any soldier to be a deserter, shall conceal such deserter, or aid or assist such deserter in concealing himself, or aid or assist in his rescue, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof before any two justices acting for the county, district, city, burgh, or place where any such offender shall at any time happen to be, be liable to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for such term not exceeding six calendar months as the convicting justices shall think fit.

82. Any officer or soldier who shall, in pursuit of any deserter, forcibly enter into or break open any dwelling house or outhouse, or shall give any order under which any dwelling house or outhouse shall be forcibly entered into or broken open, without a warrant from one or more justices of the peace, shall, on conviction thereof before two justices of the peace, forfeit a sum not exceeding twenty pounds.

83. If any person shall convey or cause to be conveyed into any military prison appointed to be a public prison under this Act any arms, tools, or instruments, or any mask or other disguise, in order to facilitate the escape of any prisoner, or shall by any means whatever aid and assist any prisoner to escape or in attempting to escape from such prison, whether an escape be actually made or not, such person shall be deemed guilty of felony, and upon being convicted thereof shall be kept to penal servitude for any term not less than five years and not exceeding seven years, or be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years; and if any person shall bring or attempt to bring into such prison, in contravention of the existing rules thereof, any spirituous or fermented liquor, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds and not less than ten pounds, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding three calendar months; and if any person shall bring into such prison, to or for any prisoner, without the knowledge of the governor, any money, clothing, provisions, tobacco, letters, papers, or any other articles not allowed by the rules of the prison to be in the possession of a prisoner, or shall throw into the said prison any such articles, or shall by desire of any prisoner, without the sanction of the governor, carry out of the prison any of the articles aforesaid, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, or to be imprisoned, either with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding one calendar month; and if any person shall assault or violently resist any officer of such prison in the execution of his duty, or shall aid or excite any person so to assault or resist any such officer, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding one calendar month, or, if the offender be a soldier already under sentence of imprisonment, he shall be liable for every such offence, upon conviction thereof by a board of not less than three of the visitors of the prison, to be imprisoned, either with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding six calendar months, in addition to his original sentence, or to be subjected to corporal punishment not exceeding fifty lashes, or upon conviction thereof by a single visitor to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding seventy-two hours, in addition to his original sentence, or to be subjected to corporal punishment not exceeding twenty-five lashes; or if such soldier shall, within forty-eight hours of the expiration of his original or of any additional sentence, be guilty of any offence against the rules of the prison, he may for every such offence, on conviction thereof by a board or by a single visitor, be ordered to be kept in prison for a period not exceeding seventy-two hours either in a dark cell or in a light cell, and with or without hard labour, on a bread and water diet, or otherwise; and all the provisions of any Act or Acts of Parliament for the regulation or better ordering of gaols, houses of correction, or prisons in Great Britain shall be deemed to apply to all military prisons so far as any such provision relates to such offences; and it shall be lawful for the governor, provost marshal, officer, or servant of any military prison to use and exercise all the powers and authorities given by any such Act to the gaoler, keeper, or turnkey of any prison, or to his or their assistants, to apprehend or to cause offenders to be apprehended, in order to their being taken before a justice or justices of the peace; and all the powers and authorities given by any such Act to any justice or justices of the peace to convict offenders in any of the above cases, together with the forms of convictions contained in any such Act, shall be applicable to the like offences when committed in respect of military prisons; and all the provisions contained in any such Act relating to suits and actions prosecuted against any person for anything done in pursuance of such Act shall be deemed to apply to all suits and actions prosecuted against any person acting in pursuance of such Act in respect of military prisons.

84. Any governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement, who shall refuse to receive and to confine, or to discharge or deliver over, any military offender in the manner herein-before prescribed, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of one hundred pounds.

85. Any person who shall knowingly detain, buy, exchange, or receive from any soldier or deserter or any other person acting for or on his behalf, on any pretence whatsoever, or who shall solicit or entice any soldier, or shall be employed by any soldier, knowing him to be such, to sell any arms, ammunition, medals for good conduct or for distinguishment or other service, clothes, or military furniture, or any provisions, or any sheets or other articles used in barracks provided under barrack regulations, or regimental necessities, or any article of forage provided for any horses belonging to Her Majesty's service, or who shall have in his or her possession or keeping any such arms, ammunition, medals, clothes, furniture, provisions, spirits, articles, necessities, or forage, and shall not give a satisfactory account how he or she came by the same, or shall change the colour of any clothes as aforesaid, shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, together with treble the value of all or any of the several articles of which such offender shall so become or be possessed; and if any person having been so convicted shall afterwards be guilty of any such offence, he shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding twenty pounds but not less than five pounds, and the treble value of all or any of the several articles of which such offender shall have so become possessed, and shall in addition to such forfeiture be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for such term, not exceeding six calendar months, as the convicting justice or justices shall think fit; and upon any information against any person for a second or any subsequent offence, a copy of the former conviction, certified by the proper officer having the care or custody of such conviction, or any copy of the same proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove such former conviction; and if any credible person shall prove on oath before a justice of the peace, or person exercising like authority according to the laws of the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which the offence shall be committed, a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his or her possession, or on his or her premises, any property of the description herein-before described, on or with respect to which any such offence shall have been committed, such justice may grant a warrant to search for such property as in the case of stolen goods; and if upon such search any such property shall be found, the same shall and may be seized by the officer charged with the execution of such warrant, who shall bring the offender in whose possession the same shall be found before the same or any other justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the legislature of any of Her Majesty's foreign dominions, on the recommendation of the officer or officers for the time being administering the government thereof, but not otherwise, to make provision by law for reducing such pecuniary penalty, if not exceeding twenty pounds, to such amount as may to such legislature appear to be better adapted to the ability and pecuniary means of Her Majesty's subjects and others inhabiting the same, which reduced penalty shall be sued for and recovered in such and the same manner as the full penalty hereby imposed: Provided also, that it shall be competent to Her Majesty, or to the person or persons administering the government of any such foreign dominions as aforesaid, to exercise, in respect of the laws so to be passed as aforesaid, all such powers and authorities as are by law vested in Her Majesty or in any such officer or officers as aforesaid in respect of any other law made or enacted by any such legislature.

86. If any constable or other person who by virtue of this Act shall be employed in billeting any officers or soldiers in any part of the United Kingdom shall presume to billet any such officer or soldier in any house not within the meaning of this Act, without the consent of the owner or occupier thereof; or shall neglect or refuse to billet any officer or soldier on duty, when thereunto required, in such manner as is by this Act directed, provided sufficient notice be given before the arrival of such troops; or shall receive, demand, or agree for any money or reward whatsoever, in order to excuse any person from receiving such officer or soldier; or shall quarter any of the wives, children, men or maid servants of any officers or soldiers, in any such houses, against the consent of the occupiers; or shall neglect or refuse to execute such warrants of the justices as shall be directed to him for providing carriages, horses, or vessels, or shall demand more than the legal rates for the same; or if any person ordered by any constable in manner herein-before directed to provide carriages, horses, or vessels shall refuse or neglect to provide the same according to the orders of such constable, or shall do any act or thing by which the execution of any warrants for providing carriages, horses, or vessels shall be hindered; or if any constable shall neglect to deliver in to the justices at quarter sessions lists of officers and soldiers of the foot guards quartered according to the provisions of this Act, or shall wilfully cause to be delivered defective lists of the same; or if any person liable by this Act to have any officer or soldier quartered upon him shall refuse to receive and to afford proper accommodation or diet in the house in which such officer or soldier is quartered, and to furnish the several things directed to be furnished to officers and soldiers, or shall neglect or refuse to furnish good and sufficient stables, together with good and sufficient oats, hay, and straw, in Great Britain and Ireland, for each horse, in such quantities and at such rates as herein-before provided; or if any innkeeper or victualler not having good and sufficient stables shall refuse to pay over to the person or persons who may provide stabling such allowance by way of compensation as shall be directed by any justice of the peace, or shall pay any sum or sums of money to any soldier on the march in lieu of furnishing in kind the diet and small beer to which such soldier is entitled; or if any toll collector shall demand and receive toll from any of Her Majesty's officers or soldiers, on duty or on their march, for themselves or for their horses, or from any recruits marching by route, or from any prisoners under military escort, or from any enrolled pensioners in uniform when called out for training or in aid of the civil power, or for any carriages or horses belonging to Her Majesty, or employed in her service under the provisions of this Act, or in any of Her Majesty's colonies, when conveying persons or baggage or returning therefrom, every such constable, victualler, toll-keeper, or other person respectively shall forfeit for every such offence, neglect, or refusal any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings; and if any person shall personate or represent himself to be a soldier or a recruit, with the view of fraudulently obtaining a billet, or money in lieu thereof, he shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than twenty shillings.

87. If any military officer shall take upon himself to quarter soldiers otherwise than is limited and allowed by this Act, or shall use or offer any menace or compulsion to or upon any mayor, constable, or other civil officer, tending to deter and discourage any of them from performing any part of their duty under this Act, or tending to induce any of them to do anything contrary to their said duty, such officer shall for every such offence (being thereof convicted before any two or more justices of the county by the oath of two credible witnesses) be deemed and taken to be thereupon cashiered, and shall be utterly disabled to hold any military employment in Her Majesty's service; provided that a certificate of such conviction shall be transmitted by one of the said justices to the Judge Advocate in London, who is hereby required to certify the same to the Commander-in-Chief and Secretary of State for the War Department, and that the said conviction be affirmed at some quarter sessions of the peace of the said county held next after the expiration of three months after such certificate of the justice shall have been transmitted as aforesaid; and if any military officer shall take, or knowingly suffer to be taken, from any person, any money or reward for excusing the quartering of officers or soldiers, or shall billet any of the wives, children, men or maid servants of any officer or soldier, in any house, against the consent of the occupier, he shall, upon being convicted thereof before a general court-martial, be cashiered; and if any officer shall constrain any carriage to travel beyond the distance specified in the justice's warrant, or shall not discharge the same in due time for their return home on the same day, if it be practicable, except in the case of emergency for which the justice shall have given licence, or shall compel the driver of any carriage to take up any soldier or servant (except such as are sick) or any woman to ride therein, except in the cases of emergency as aforesaid, or shall force any constable, by threatening words, to provide saddle horses for himself or servants, or shall force horses from their owners, or in Ireland shall force the owner to take any loading until the same shall be first duly weighed, if the same can be done within reasonable time, or shall, contrary to the will of the owner or his servant, permit any person whatsoever to put any greater load upon any carriage than is directed by this Act, such officer shall forfeit for every offence any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings.

88. For the better preservation of game and fish in or near places where any officers shall at any time be quartered, be it enacted, that every officer who shall, without leave in writing from the person or persons entitled to grant such leave, take, kill, or destroy any game or fish in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of five pounds.

89. Any action which shall be brought against any person for anything to be done in pursuance of this Act shall be brought within six calendar months after the doing thereof, and it shall be lawful for every such person to plead thereunto the general issue Not Guilty, and to give all special matter in evidence to the jury; and if the verdict shall be for the defendant in any such action, or the plaintiff therein become, nonsuited, or suffer any discontinuance thereof, or if in Scotland such court shall see fit to assolvie the defendant or dismiss the complaint, the court in which the said matter shall be tried shall allow unto the defendant treble costs, for which the said defendant shall have the like remedy as in other cases where costs are by law given to defendants; and every action against any person for anything done in pursuance of this Act, or against any member or minister of a court-martial in respect of any sentence of such court, or of anything done by virtue or in pursuance of such sentence, shall be brought in some one of the courts of record at Westminster, or in Dublin, or in India, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, and in no other court whatsoever.

90. All offences for which any penalties and forfeitures are by this Act imposed not exceeding twenty pounds, over and above any forfeiture of value or treble value, shall and may be determined, and such penalties and forfeitures and forfeiture of value or treble value recovered, in every part of the United Kingdom, by and before one or more justice or justices of the peace, under the provisions of an Act passed in the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of Justices of the Peace out of Sessions, within England and Wales, with respect to summary convictions and orders:" Provided always, that in all cases in which there shall not be sufficient goods whereon any penalty or forfeiture can be levied, the offender may be committed and imprisoned for any time not exceeding six calendar months; which said recited Act shall be used and applied, in Scotland and in Ireland, for the recovery of all such penalties and forfeitures, as fully to all intents as if the said recited Act had extended to Scotland and Ireland, anything in the said recited Act, or in an Act passed in the fourteenth and fifteenth years of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts regulating the proceedings at Petty Sessions, and the duties of Justices of the Peace out of Quarter Sessions, in Ireland," to the contrary notwithstanding; and all such offences committed in the British Isles or in any of Her Majesty's dominions beyond the seas may be determined, and the penalties and forfeitures and forfeiture of value or treble value recovered, before any justices of the peace or persons exercising like authority according to the laws of the part of Her Majesty's dominions in which the offence shall be committed; and all penalties and forfeitures by this Act imposed exceeding twenty pounds shall be recovered by action in some of the courts of record at Westminster, or in Dublin, or in India, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, and in no other court in the United Kingdom, and may be recovered in the British Isles, or in any other parts of Her Majesty's dominions, in any of the royal or superior courts of such isles or other parts of Her Majesty's dominions.

91. One moiety of every penalty, not including any treble value of any articles, adjudged or recovered under the provisions of this Act, shall go to the person who shall inform or sue for the same, and the remainder of the penalty, together with the treble value of any articles, or, where the offence shall be proved by the person who shall inform, the whole of the penalty, shall be paid, in the United Kingdom, to the general agent for the recruiting service in London, and in India to the military secretary of the government of the presidency to which the court by whom the penalty shall be adjudicated shall be subject, and elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions to the local military accountant, to be at the disposal of the Secretary of State for the War Department, anything in an Act passed in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to provide for the regulation of Municipal Corporations in England and Wales," or in any other Act or Acts, to the contrary notwithstanding. Every justice or court adjudging any penalty under this Act shall report the same immediately, if in the United Kingdom, to the said Secretary of State, if in India to the said military secretary, and if elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions to the general or other officer commanding at the station.

92. Any justice in the United Kingdom within whose jurisdiction any soldier in Her Majesty's army, or on the permanent staff of the militia, having a wife or child, shall be billeted, may summon such soldier before him in the place where he is billeted, (which summons he is hereby directed to obey,) and take his examination in writing, upon oath, touching the place of his last legal settlement, and such justice shall give an attested copy of such examination to the person examined, to be by him delivered to his commanding officer, to be produced when required; which said examination and such attested copy thereof shall be at any time admitted as good and legal evidence of such last legal settlement before any justices or at any general or quarter sessions, although such soldier be dead or absent from the kingdom; provided that in case any soldier shall be again summoned to make oath as aforesaid, then, on such examination or such attested copy thereof being produced by him or by any other person on his behalf, such soldier shall not be obliged to take any other oath with regard to his legal settlement, but shall leave a copy of such examination, or a copy of such attested copy of examination, if required; provided also, that when no such examination shall have been required, the statement made by the recruit on his attestation of his place of birth shall be taken to be his last place of settlement until legally disproved.

93. When any person shall hold any canteen under proper authority of the War Department, it shall be lawful for any two justices within their respective jurisdictions to grant or transfer any beer, wine, or spirit licence to such persons, without regard to time of year or to the notices or certificates required by any Act in respect of such licences; and the commissioners of excise, or their proper officers within their respective districts, shall also grant such licences as aforesaid; and such persons so holding canteens, and having such licences, may sell therein victuals and exciseable liquors, as empowered by such excise licence, without being subject to any penalty or forfeiture.

94. All muster rolls and accounts and pay and pension lists which are required to be verified by declaration shall be so verified and attested free of stamp duty, and without fee or reward paid for such declaration or attestation.

95. All commissaries, regimental paymasters, and all other accountants for military services, storekeepers, and barrack masters, upon making up their accounts, and all commissaries and storekeepers upon returning from any foreign service, shall severally make the respective declarations described in the schedule to this Act annexed; which declarations, if made in any part of the United Kingdom, shall be made before some justice, or other person authorised to administer oaths and declarations, and if made on foreign service shall be made before the officer commanding in chief, or the second in command, or the quartermaster or deputy quartermaster general or any assistant quartermaster general of the army, who shall respectively have power to administer and receive the same.

96. All oaths and declarations which are authorised and required by this Act may be administered (unless where otherwise provided) by any justice of the peace, or other person having authority to administer oaths and declarations; and any person taking a false oath or declaration where an oath or declaration is authorised or required by this Act shall be deemed guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury, or of wilfully making a false declaration, and being thereof duly convicted shall be liable to such pains and penalties as by law any person convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury is subject and liable to; and every commissioned officer convicted before a general court-martial of perjury, or of wilfully making a false declaration, shall be cashiered, and every soldier or other person amenable to the provisions of this Act found guilty thereof by a general, district, or garrison court-martial shall be punished at the discretion of such court. In India, in all cases where any oath is hereby required to be taken, or any person is hereby required to be sworn, a solemn declaration or affirmation may be substituted, if by the laws for the time being in force in India such declaration or affirmation would be allowed to be substituted in the place of an oath, in case the party were about to depose as a witness in a civil action in any of the supreme courts at the presidencies; and any person wilfully and knowingly giving false testimony on oath or solemn declaration or affirmation in any case wherein such oath or solemn declaration or affirmation shall have been made for the purpose of this Act, or any proceedings under this Act, shall be deemed guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury, and, being duly convicted thereof before a court-martial or otherwise, shall be liable to such pains and penalties as by any law in force in England, or by any law in force in India, any persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are subject and liable to.

97. All crimes and offences which have been committed against any former Act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters, or against any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers and soldiers in the service of the East India Company, or against any of the Articles of War made and established by virtue of either of the same, may, during the continuance of this Act, be tried and punished in like manner as if they had been committed against this Act; and every warrant for holding any court-martial under any such former Act shall remain in full force, and all proceedings of courts-martial convened and held under any such warrant shall be continued, notwithstanding the expiration of such Act: Provided always, that no person shall be liable to be tried or punished for any offence against any of the said Acts or Articles of War which shall appear to have been committed more than three years before the date of the warrant for such trial, unless the person accused, by reason of his having absented himself, or of some other manifest impediment, shall not have been amenable to justice within that period, in which case such person shall be liable to be tried at any time not exceeding two years after the impediment shall have ceased.

98. It shall be the duty of all officers and soldiers to observe and conform to the provisions contained in "The Regimental Debts Act, 1863," and in the regulations for the better execution of the purposes of the said Act prescribed from time to time by warrant under the royal sign manual.

99. In all places in India where any body of Her Majesty's forces may be serving situate beyond the jurisdiction of any court of small causes established by or under the authority of the Governor General of India in council, actions of debt and all personal actions against officers or against persons licensed to act as sutlers, or other persons amenable to the provisions of this Act not being soldiers, shall be cognizable before a court of requests composed of military officers, and not elsewhere, provided the value in question shall not exceed four hundred rupees, and that the defendant was a person of the above description when the cause of action arose, which court the commanding officer of any camp, garrison, cantonment, or military post is hereby authorised and empowered to convene. Whenever, owing to paucity of officers, or to any other cause, a court of requests cannot conveniently be held at the station where the defendant or defendants may be, it shall be lawful for the officer commanding the division or district to authorise the assembly of a court by the officer commanding at the nearest place where such court can be formed. Courts of requests shall in all practicable cases consist of five commissioned officers, and in no instance of less than three, and the president thereof shall in all practicable cases be a field officer, and in no case be under the rank of a captain, and every member shall have served five years as a commissioned officer; and the president and members assisting at any such court, before any proceedings be had before it, shall take the following oath, which oath shall be administered by the president of the court to the other members thereof, and to the president by any member having first taken the oath; (that is to say.)

‘ I swear, that I will duly ‘ administer justice according to the evidence in ‘ the matters that shall be brought before me.
 ‘ So help me GOD.’

And all witnesses before any such court shall be examined in the same manner as in the case of a trial by courts-martial. All actions of debt and personal actions against persons amenable to this Act within the jurisdiction of any court of small causes shall be cognizable by such court to the extent of its powers; and all such actions where the amount sued for exceeds four hundred rupees shall be cognizable by a civil court or court of small causes only; and it shall be competent for any civil court or court of small causes, or for any military court of requests held in lieu thereof under the authority of this section, upon finding or awarding any debt or damage, either to award execution thereof generally, or to direct specially that the whole or any part thereof shall be stopped and paid over to the plaintiff out of any part not exceeding one half of any pay or allowance, or out of any other public money which may respectively be coming to the defendant in the current or any future month or months, or to direct the same to be so paid by instalments. In regard to awards of execution general civil courts and courts of small causes shall proceed in accordance with the rules of procedure for such courts in India; and in all cases where execution shall be awarded generally by a military court of requests, the debt, if not paid forthwith, shall be levied by seizure and public sale of such of the defendant's goods and property as may be found within the camp, garrison, cantonment, or military post, under a written order of the commanding officer, grounded on the judgment of the court, and all orders of such commanding officer as to the manner of such sale, or the person by whom the same shall be made, or otherwise respecting the same, shall be valid and binding; and any goods and property of the defendant found within the limits of the camp, garrison, cantonment, or military post to which the defendant shall belong at any subsequent time shall be liable to be seized and sold in like manner in satisfaction of any remainder of such debt or damages; and if any question shall arise whether any such effects or property are liable to be taken in execution as aforesaid, the decision and order of the said commanding officer shall be final and conclusive with respect to the same, and if sufficient goods shall not be found within the limits of the camp, garrison, cantonment, or military post, then any public money or any part not exceeding one half of the pay or allowances accruing to the defendant shall be stopped in liquidation of such debt or damages; and if such defendant shall not receive pay as an officer or from any public department, but be a sutler, servant, or follower, he may be arrested by like order of the commanding officer, and imprisoned in some convenient place within the military boundaries for any period not exceeding two months, unless the debt be sooner paid; and the said commanding officer shall not, nor shall any person acting on his orders in respect of the matters aforesaid, incur any liability to any person or persons whomsoever for any act done by him in pursuance of the provisions aforesaid; and in cases where the said court shall direct specially that the whole or any part of the debt or damages shall be stopped and paid out of part of any pay and allowances, or out of any public money, the same shall be stopped and paid accordingly in conformity with direction: Provided always, that nothing herein-before contained shall enable any such action as aforesaid to be brought in a military court of requests by any officer or soldier against any officer: Provided also, that the articles of military equipment of any defendant shall not be deemed “goods and property” under this section.

100. The government of any of the presidencies in India may suspend the proceedings of any court-martial held in India on any officer or soldier belonging to Her Majesty's Indian forces within such presidencies respectively; and if any officer belonging to Her Majesty's Indian forces shall think himself wronged by the officer commanding the regiment, and shall upon due application made to him not receive the redress to which he may consider himself entitled, he may complain to his commander-in-chief in order to obtain justice, who is hereby required to examine into such complaint, and thereupon, either by himself or by his adjutant general, to make his report to the government of the presidency to which such officer belongs, in order to receive the further directions of such government.

101. Any officer or soldier, or other person subject to this Act, who shall be serving in the territories of any foreign state in India or in any country in India under the protection of Her Majesty, or at any place in Her Majesty's dominions in India (other than Prince of Wales Island, Singapore, or Malacca), at a distance of upwards of one hundred and twenty miles from the presidencies of Fort William, Fort Saint George, and Bombay respectively, and who shall be accused of having committed any offence which, if committed in England, would be punishable by the criminal law there, may, if the same be also punishable under the Indian penal code for the time being, be tried by a general court-martial to be appointed by the general or other officer commanding in chief in such place for the time being, and, if found guilty, shall be liable to be sentenced by such court-martial to suffer such punishment as may legally be awarded by any of Her Majesty's courts of criminal jurisdiction within Her Majesty's dominions of India in respect of a like offence committed within the jurisdiction of such last-mentioned court; but no sentence of a general court-martial for any such offence shall be carried into execution until the same shall have been duly confirmed; and it shall be lawful for such general or other officer commanding in chief as aforesaid to confirm the sentence of any such general court-martial; and such general or other officer as aforesaid may, if he shall think fit, suspend, mitigate, or remit the sentence; or, in the case of a sentence of penal servitude, may commute the same to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for such period as to him shall seem fit: Provided always, that in all cases wherein a sentence of death or penal servitude shall have been awarded by any such general court-martial held for the trial of a commissioned officer, or where a sentence of death shall have been awarded by any such general court-martial held for the trial of any person subject to this Act other than a commissioned officer, such sentence shall not be carried into execution until it shall have been duly approved by the Governor General in Council, or Governor in Council of the presidency in the territories subordinate to which the offender shall have been tried: Provided also, that any person who may have been so tried as aforesaid shall not be tried for the same offence by any other court whatsoever.

102. This Act shall be and continue in force within Great Britain from the twenty-fifth day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy inclusive until the twenty-fifth day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and shall be and continue in force within Ireland, and in Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Isle of Man, and the islands thereto belonging, from the first day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy inclusive until the first day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and shall be and continue in force within the garrison of Gibraltar, the Mediterranean, and in Spain and Portugal, from the first day of August one thousand eight hundred and seventy inclusive until the first day of August one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and shall be and continue in force in all other parts of Europe where Her Majesty's forces may be serving, and in the West Indies and America, from the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy inclusive until the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; and shall be and continue in force in India, and within the Cape of Good Hope, the Isle of France or Mauritius and its dependencies, Saint Helena, and the settlements on the western coast of Africa, from the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one inclusive until the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two; and shall be and continue in force within British Columbia and Vancouver's Island from the date of the promulgation thereof in general orders there inclusive until the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two; and shall be and continue in force in all other places from the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two inclusive until the first day of February one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three: Provided always, that this Act shall, from and after the receipt and promulgation thereof in general orders in any part of Her Majesty's dominions or elsewhere beyond the seas, become and be in full force, anything herein stated to the contrary notwithstanding.

103. The words Commander-in-Chief in this Act shall be held to include the field marshal or other officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces for the time being.

104. The ninth section of The Army Enlistment Act, 1867, and the tenth section of the same Act, except as to enlistments which may have been made thereunder, are repealed.

Schedule.

An Act for the Regulation of Her Majesty's Royal Marine Forces while on shore.
(4th April 1870.)

WHEREAS it is judged necessary for the safety of the United Kingdom, and the defence of the possessions of this realm, that a body of Royal

Marine forces should be employed in Her Majesty's fleet and naval service, under the direction of the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid : And whereas the said forces may frequently be quartered or be on shore, or sent to do duty or be on board transport ships or merchant ships or vessels, or ships or vessels of Her Majesty, or other ships or vessels, or they may be under other circumstances in which they will not be subject to the laws relating to the government of Her Majesty's forces by sea: And whereas no man can be forejudged of life or limb, or subjected in time of peace to any kind of punishment within this realm, by martial law, or in any other manner than by the judgment of his peers, and according to the known and established laws of this realm; yet nevertheless it being requisite for the retaining of such forces in their duty that an exact discipline be observed, and that marines who shall mutiny or stir up sedition, or shall desert Her Majesty's service, or be guilty of any other crime or offence in breach of or to the prejudice of good order and discipline, be brought to a more exemplary and speedy punishment than the usual forms of the law will allow:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. It shall be lawful for the said Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid, from time to time to make, ordain, alter, and establish rules and Articles of War, under the hand of the said Lord High Admiral, or under the hands of any two or more of the said Commissioners, for the better government of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, and for the punishment of mutiny, desertion, immorality, breach of discipline, misbehaviour, neglect of duty, and any other offence or misconduct of which they shall be guilty, in any place on shore or afloat in or out of Her Majesty's dominions, or at any time when or under any circumstances in which they shall not be amenable to the laws for the government of Her Majesty's ships, vessels, and forces by sea, and for regulating the proceedings of courts-martial, which rules and articles shall be judicially taken notice of by all judges and in all courts whatsoever; and copies of the same shall, as soon as conveniently may be after the same shall have been made, be transmitted by the Secretary of the Admiralty for the time being (certified under his hand) to the judges of Her Majesty's superior courts at Westminster, Dublin, and Edinburgh respectively, and also to the governors of Her Majesty's dominions abroad; provided that no person within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland or within the British Isles shall by such Articles of War be subject to suffer any punishment extending to life or limb, or to be kept in penal servitude, except for crimes which are by this Act expressly made liable to such punishment as aforesaid, or shall be subject, with reference to any crimes made punishable by this Act, to be punished in any manner which may be inconsistent with the provisions of this Act.

2. All crimes and offences committed against any former Act made for the regulation of the Royal Marine forces while on, shore, or against any of the rules, regulations, or Articles of War made and established by virtue of the same, may, during the continuance of this Act, be tried, inquired of, and punished in like manner as if they had been committed against this Act; and every warrant for holding any court-martial under any former Act shall remain in full force notwithstanding the expiration of such Act; and all proceedings of any court-martial upon any trial begun under the authority of such former Act shall not be discontinued by the expiration of the same: Provided always, that no person shall be liable to be tried and punished for any offence against any of the said Acts or Articles of War which shall appear to have been committed more than three years before the date of the commission or warrant for such trial, unless the person accused, by reason of his having absented himself, or of some other manifest impediment, shall not have been amenable to justice within that period, in which case such person shall be liable to be tried at any time not exceeding two years after the impediment shall have ceased; and provided also, that if any officer or marine in any place beyond the seas shall commit any of the offences punishable by court-martial under this Act, and shall escape and come or be brought into this realm before he be tried for the same, he shall, when apprehended, be tried for the same as if such offence had been committed within this realm.

3. This Act shall extend to the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Man, and the islands thereto belonging, as to the provisions herein contained for enlisting of recruits, whether minors or of full age, and swearing and attesting such recruits, and for mustering and paying, and to the provisions for trial and punishment of officers and marines who shall be charged with mutiny and desertion or any other of the offences which are by this Act declared to be punishable by the sentence of a court-martial, and also to the provisions which relate to the punishment of persons who shall conceal deserters, or shall knowingly buy, exchange, or otherwise receive any arms, medals for good conduct or for distinguished or other service, clothes, military furniture, or regimental necessaries from any marine or deserter, or who shall cause the colour of any such clothes to be changed; and also to the provisions for exempting marines from being taken out of Her Majesty's service for not supporting or for leaving chargeable to any parish any wife or child or children, or on account of any breach of contract to serve or work for any employer, or on account of any debts under thirty pounds in the said islands.

4. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to extend to exempt any officer or marine from being proceeded against by the ordinary course of law when accused of felony or misdemeanor, or of any misdemeanor other than the misdemeanor of refusing to comply with an order of justices for the payment of money; and any commanding officer who shall neglect or refuse, when due application shall be made to him for that purpose, to deliver over to the civil magistrate any officer or marine, or who shall wilfully obstruct, neglect, or refuse to assist any peace officer in apprehending any such offender, shall, upon conviction thereof in any of Her Majesty's courts at Westminster, Dublin, or Edinburgh, be deemed to be thereupon cashiered, and shall be utterly disabled to hold any civil or military office or employment in Her Majesty's service; and a certificate of such conviction shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Admiralty.

5. No person subject to this Act having been acquitted or convicted of any crime or offence by the civil magistrate or by the verdict of a jury shall be liable to be again tried for the same crime or offence by a court-martial, or to be punished for the same otherwise than by cashiering in the case of a commissioned officer, or in the case of a warrant officer by reduction to an inferior class, or to the rank of a private marine, by order of the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or in the case of a non-commissioned officer, by reduction to the ranks, by order of the commandant of the division to which such non-commissioned officer may belong; and whenever any officer or marine shall have been tried before a court of ordinary criminal jurisdiction, the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the records of such court, or the deputy of such clerk, shall, if required by the officer commanding the division to which such officer or marine belongs, transmit to him a certificate containing the substance and effect only, omitting the formal part, of the indictment, conviction, and entry of judgment thereon or acquittal of such officer or marine, and shall be allowed for such certificate a fee of three shillings.

6. All of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces shall, during the time they shall be respectively borne on the books of or be on board any of Her Majesty's ships or vessels in commission, either as part of the complement or as supernumeraries, or otherwise, be subject and liable in every respect to the laws for the government of Her Majesty's forces by sea, and to the rules and discipline of the Royal Navy for the time being, and shall and may be proceeded against and punished for offences committed by them whilst so borne or on board, in the same manner as the officers and seamen employed in the Royal Navy may be tried or punished; except when and so long as any marine officers or marines shall be landed from any of Her Majesty's ships, and be employed in military operations on shore, and when on such occasions the senior naval officer present shall deem it expedient to issue an order declaring that such marine officers and marines shall during such employment on shore be subject to the regulations of this Act, in which cases, and while such order shall remain in force, they shall be subject to such regulations, and be tried and punished under this Act accordingly for any offences to be committed by them while so on shore; and, with or without any commission or warrant from the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners for that purpose, the officer commanding in chief or commanding for the time being any such marine officers or marines shall have power and authority to convene, and to authorise any officer to convene, courts-martial under this Act, as occasion may require, for the trial of offences committed by any of the Royal Marine forces, whether the same shall have been committed before or after such officer shall have taken upon himself such command: Provided always, that if any marine officer or marine so borne on the books of any of Her Majesty's ships or otherwise shall commit any offence for which he shall not be amenable to a naval court-martial, he may be tried and punished for the same in the same manner as other officers or marines may be tried and punished for the like offences under the authority of this Act; or if the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid so direct, he may be so tried and punished for any offence committed by him on shore, whether he be or be not amenable to a naval court-martial for the same.

7. It shall be lawful for the said Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid, from time to time to grant commissions or warrants under the hand of the said Lord High Admiral, or under the hands of any two or more of the said Commissioners, for the holding of general and other courts-martial within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and elsewhere out of the same, in like manner as has been heretofore used, and for bringing offenders against this Act and the Articles of War to justice, and to erect and constitute courts-martial, as well within the said United Kingdom and the British Isles as in any of Her Majesty's garrisons or dominions or elsewhere beyond the seas, and to grant commissions or warrants to the officer or officers commanding in chief or commanding for the time being any of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, as well within the said United Kingdom as Her Majesty's other dominions, and in any foreign parts out of the same dominions, for convening, as well as for authorising any officer to convene, courts-martial, as occasion may require, for the trial of offences committed by any of the Royal Marine forces, whether the same shall have been committed before or after such officer shall have taken upon himself such command, or before or after any such commission or warrant shall be granted, provided that the officer so authorised be not below the degree of a field officer, except in detached situations beyond seas, where a captain may be authorised to convene district or garrison courts-martial; and any person subject to this Act who shall, in any of Her Majesty's dominions or elsewhere, commit any of the offences for which he may be liable to be tried by court-martial by virtue of this Act or of the Articles of War, may be tried and punished for the same in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, or other place where he may have come or be after the commission of the offence, as if the offence had been committed where such trial shall take place.

8. Every general court-martial convened within the United Kingdom or the British Isles shall consist of not less than nine commissioned officers, each of whom shall have held a commission for three years before the date of the assembly of the court. Every general court-martial shall have power to sentence any officer of marines or marine to suffer death, penal servitude, imprisonment, forfeiture of pay or pension, or any other punishment which shall accord with the usage of the service; but no sentence of death by a court-martial shall pass unless two thirds at least of the officers present shall concur therein. No sentence of penal servitude shall be for a period of less than five years, and no sentence of imprisonment shall be for a period longer than two years.

9. Every district or garrison court-martial convened within the United Kingdom or the British Isles shall consist of not less than seven commissioned officers, and shall have the same power as a general court-martial to sentence any marine to such punishments as shall accord with the provisions of this Act; provided that the sentence of a district or garrison court-martial shall be confirmed by the general officer, governor, or senior officer in command of the district, garrison, island, or colony, and that no such district or garrison court-martial shall have power to try a commissioned officer, or to pass any sentence of death or penal servitude.

10. A divisional or detachment court-martial shall consist of not less than five commissioned officers, unless it be found impracticable to assemble that number, in which case three shall be sufficient, and shall have power to sentence any marine to corporal punishment or to imprisonment, and forfeiture of pay, in such manner as shall accord with the provisions of this Act.

11. In cases of mutiny and insubordination accompanied with personal violence or of other offences committed on the line of march, or on board any transport ship, convict ship, or merchant vessel, the offender may be tried by a divisional or detachment court-martial, and the sentence may be confirmed and carried into execution on the spot by the officer in immediate command, provided that the sentence shall not exceed that which a divisional court-martial is competent to award.

12. It shall be lawful for any officer commanding any detachment or portion of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, upon complaint made to him of any offence committed against the property or person of any inhabitant of or resident in any country in which Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces are so serving by any person under the immediate command of any such officer, to summon and cause to be assembled a detachment general court-martial, which shall consist of not less than three commissioned officers, for the trial of any such person, notwithstanding such officer shall not have received any warrant empowering him to assemble courts-martial; and every such court-martial shall have the same powers in regard to summoning and examining witnesses, trial of and sentence upon offenders, as are granted by this Act to general courts-martial: Provided always, that no sentence of any such detachment court-martial shall be executed until the officer commanding the army to which the division, brigade, detachment, or party to which any person so tried shall belong shall have approved and confirmed the same.

13. When it is necessary or expedient, a court-martial composed exclusively of officers of the Royal Marines, or a court-martial composed of officers of Her Majesty's Army, or of Her Majesty's Indian Army, or of both or of either, together with officers of the Royal Marines, whether the commanding officer by whose order such court-martial is assembled belongs to the land or to the marine forces, may try a person belonging to any one of the said three services; provided that when the person to be tried shall belong to Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, then the provisions of this Act, or of such Act as shall be then and there in force for the regulation of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces while on shore, and the oaths therein respectively prescribed, and the Rules and Articles of War relating to the Royal Marines then and there in force, shall be applicable to such court, and the proceedings thereof and relating thereto; but where the person to be tried shall belong to Her Majesty's Army, or shall belong to Her Majesty's Indian Army, and be within the United Kingdom, then the proceedings of such court shall be regulated as if the court were composed of officers of Her Majesty's Army only, and the provisions of the Act then and there in force for the punishment of mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters, and the oaths therein prescribed, and the Rules and Articles of War relating to Her Majesty's Army then and there in force, shall be applicable to such court, and the proceedings thereof and relating thereto; and where the person to be tried shall belong to Her Majesty's Indian Army, and be out of the United Kingdom, the provisions of such Act or Acts as shall be then and there in force for punishing mutiny and desertion of officers and soldiers in Her Majesty's Indian Army, and the Rules and Articles of War, if any, relating to such officers and soldiers then and there in force, shall be applicable to such court, and the proceedings thereof and relating thereto.

14. Provided there be no superior officer of Her Majesty's land forces present in command of a district, garrison, station, or place where marines may be serving, it shall be lawful for any officer of the Royal Marine corps of the degree of a field officer, and holding a commission from the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, for that purpose but not otherwise, to convene or assemble a district or garrison court-martial, to be composed as before stated, and for such court to proceed to try any marine or marines below the rank of commissioned officer for any of the offences cognizable by a district or garrison court-martial; but the sentence so awarded by any such court shall not be carried into effect until the senior officer of the Royal Marines in the district, garrison, station, or place, not being a member of the court, shall have confirmed the same: Provided always, that if there be any such superior officer of Her Majesty's land forces present in command of the district, garrison, station, or place where marines may be, in such case it shall be lawful for him to convene or assemble such district or garrison court-martial for the trial of any marine or marines below the rank of a commissioned officer, and for such court-martial to try any such marine or marines in conformity with the provisions of this Act and the Articles of War to be made in pursuance hereof; but the sentence which may be awarded by any such court which may be convened or assembled by any such superior officer shall not be carried into effect until such superior officer shall have confirmed the same.

15. The president of every court-martial shall be appointed by or under the authority of the officer convening such courts, and shall in no case be the confirming officer, or the officer whose duty it has been to investigate the charges on which the prisoner is to be arraigned, nor, in the case of a general court-martial, under the degree of a field officer, unless where a field officer cannot be had, nor in any case whatsoever under the degree of a captain, save in the case of a detachment general court-martial holden out of Her Majesty's dominions, or of a divisional or detachment court-martial holden on the line of march, or on board a transport ship, convict ship, merchant vessel, or troop ship not in commission, or on any foreign station where a captain cannot be had: Provided always, that in the case of a detachment general court-martial holden out of Her Majesty's dominions the officer convening such court may be the president thereof.

16. In all trials by court-martial, as soon as the president and other officers appointed to serve thereon shall be assembled, their names shall be read over in the hearing of the prisoner, who shall thereupon be asked if he objects to being tried by the president or by any of such officers, and if the prisoner shall then object to the president, such objection, unless disallowed by two thirds at least of the other officers appointed to form the court, shall be referred to the decision of the authority by whom such president shall have been appointed; but if he object to any officer other than the president, such objection shall be decided by the president and the other officers so aforesaid appointed to form the court; and when the place of the president or other officer in respect of whom any challenge shall have been made and allowed shall be supplied by some officer in respect of whom no challenge shall be made or allowed, or if no challenge whatever shall have been made, or, if made, not allowed, the president and the other officers composing a general court-martial shall take the oaths in the schedule to this Act annexed before the judge advocate or his deputy or person officiating as judge advocate, and on trials by other courts-martial before the president of such court, who are hereby respectively authorised to administer the same, and any sworn member may administer the oath to the president; and as soon as the said oaths shall have been administered to the respective members, the president of the court is hereby authorised and required to administer to the judge advocate, or the person officiating as such, the oath in the schedule to this Act annexed; and no proceeding or trial shall be had upon any offence but between the hours of eight of the clock in the morning and four in the afternoon, except in cases which require an immediate example, and except in the East Indies, where such proceedings or trial may be had between the hours of six in the morning and four in the afternoon.

17. All general and other courts-martial shall have power and authority and are hereby required to administer an oath to every witness or other person who shall be examined before such court in any matter relating to any proceeding before the same; and every person, as well civil as military, who may be required to give or produce evidence before a court-martial, shall, in the case of general courts-martial, be summoned by the judge advocate, or the person officiating as such, and in the case of all other courts-martial by the president of the court; and all persons so summoned and attending as witnesses before any court-martial shall, during their necessary attendance in or on such courts, and in going to and returning from the same, be privileged from arrest, and shall, if unduly arrested, be discharged by the court out of which the writ or process issued by which such witness was arrested; or if such court be not sitting, then by any judge of the superior courts of Westminster or Dublin, or of the Court of Session in Scotland, or of the courts of law in the East or West Indies, or elsewhere, according as the case shall require, upon its being made to appear to such court or judge by any affidavit in a summary way that such witness was arrested in going to, attending upon, or returning from or attending upon such court-martial; and all witnesses so duly summoned as aforesaid who shall not attend on such courts, or attending shall refuse to be sworn, or not produce the documents being under their power or control required to be produced by them, or, being sworn, shall refuse to give evidence or to answer all such questions as the court may legally demand of them, shall be liable to be attached in the Court of Queen's Bench in London or Dublin, or in the Court of Session, sheriff or steward courts in Scotland, or in the courts of law in the East or West Indies, or in any of Her Majesty's colonies, garrisons, or dominions in Europe or elsewhere, respectively, upon complaint made, in like manner as if such witness had, after being duly summoned or subpoenaed, neglected to attend on a trial in any proceeding in the court in which such complaint shall be made: Provided always, that nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to render an oath necessary in any case where by law a solemn affirmation may be made instead thereof.

18. No officer or marine who shall be acquitted or convicted of any offence shall be liable to be tried a second time by the same or any other court-martial for the same offence; and no finding, opinion, or sentence given by any court-martial, and signed by the president thereof, shall be revised more than once, nor shall any additional evidence in respect of any charge on which the prisoner then stands arraigned be received by the court on any revision.

19. If any person who is or shall be commissioned or in pay as an officer of Royal Marines, or who is or shall be listed or in pay as a non-commissioned officer, drummer, or private man in Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, shall at any time during the continuance of this Act, while on shore in any place within the said kingdom, or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions, or in any foreign parts out of such dominions, or on board any transport ship, or merchant ship or vessel, or any ship or vessel of Her Majesty, or on board any convict hulk or ship, or any other ship or vessel, or in any place whatever, where or while being in any circumstances in which he shall not be subjected to, or not be liable to or punishable by, the laws relating to the government of Her Majesty's forces by sea, begin, excite, cause, or join in any mutiny or sedition in Her Majesty's marine or other forces, or shall not use his utmost endeavours to suppress any such mutiny or sedition, or shall conspire with any other person to cause a mutiny, or coming to the knowledge of any mutiny or intended mutiny shall not without delay give information thereof to his commanding officer; or shall misbehave himself before the enemy; or shall shamefully abandon or deliver up any garrison, fortress, post, or guard committed to his charge, or which he shall have been commanded to defend; or shall compel the governor or commanding officer of any garrison, fortress, or post to deliver up to the enemy or to abandon the same; or shall speak words or use any other means to induce such governor or commanding officer or any other to misbehave before the enemy, or shamefully to abandon or deliver up any garrison, fortress, post, or guard committed to their respective charge, or which he or they shall be commanded to defend; or shall leave his post before being regularly relieved, or shall sleep on his post; or shall hold correspondence with or give advice or intelligence to any rebel, pirate, or enemy of Her Majesty, either by letters, messages, signs, tokens, or any other ways or means whatever; or shall treat or enter into any terms with any such rebel, pirate, or enemy, without the licence of the Lord High Admiral of the said United Kingdom, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid, for the time being; or shall strike or use or offer any violence against his superior officer being in the execution of his office, or shall disobey any lawful command of his superior officer; or who being confined in a military prison shall offer any violence against a visitor or other officer being in the execution of his office, or shall violate any law or regulation of or relating to any military prison; or shall desert from Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces; every person so offending in any of the matters before mentioned, whether such offence be committed within this realm, or in any other of Her Majesty's dominions, or in foreign parts upon land or upon the sea, shall suffer death or penal servitude or such other punishment as by a court-martial shall be awarded: Provided always, that any non-commissioned officer or marine in pay in any division or company who shall, without having first obtained a regular discharge therefrom, enlist himself in any other division or company, or in any other branch of Her Majesty's service, may be deemed to have deserted Her Majesty's service and shall be liable to be punished accordingly.

20. In all cases where the punishment of death shall have been awarded by a general court-martial or by a detachment general court-martial, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or, if in any place out of the United Kingdom or British Isles, for the commanding officer having authority to confirm the sentence, instead of causing such sentence to be carried into execution, to order the offender to be kept to penal servitude for any term not less than five years, or to suffer such term of imprisonment, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, as shall seem meet to Her Majesty or to the officer commanding as aforesaid.

21. Any officer or marine, or any person employed or in any way concerned in the care or distribution of any money, provisions, forage, arms, clothing, ammunition, or other stores belonging to any of Her Majesty's forces or for Her Majesty's use, who shall embezzle, fraudulently misapply, wilfully damage, steal, or receive the same knowing them to have been stolen, or shall be concerned therein or connive thereat, may be tried for the same by a general court-martial, and sentenced to be kept in penal servitude for any term not less than five years, or to suffer such punishment of fine, imprisonment with or without hard labour, dismissal from Her Majesty's service, reduction to the ranks, if a warrant or non-commissioned officer, as such court shall think fit, according to the nature and degree of the offence; and every such offender shall, in addition to any other punishment, make good at his own expense the loss and damage sustained; and in every such case the court is required to ascertain by evidence the amount of such loss or damage, and to declare by their sentence that such amount shall be made good by such offender; and the loss and damage so ascertained as aforesaid shall be a debt to Her Majesty, and may be recovered in any of Her Majesty's courts at Westminster or in Dublin, or the Court of Exchequer in Scotland, or in any court in Her Majesty's colonies where the person sentenced by such court-martial shall be resident after the said judgment shall be confirmed and made known, or the offender, if he shall remain in the service, may be put under stoppages not exceeding one half of his pay and allowances until the amount so ascertained shall be recovered.

22. Whenever Her Majesty shall intend that any sentence of penal servitude heretofore or hereafter to be passed upon any offender by any court-martial shall be carried into execution for the term specified in such sentence, or for any shorter term, or shall be graciously pleased to commute as aforesaid to penal servitude any sentence of death which shall have been passed by any such court, such sentence, together with Her Majesty's pleasure upon the same, shall be notified in writing by the Lord High Admiral, or by the Secretary to the Admiralty for the time being, to any justice of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or baron of the Exchequer, and thereupon such justice or baron shall make an order for the penal servitude of such offender upon the terms and for the time which shall be specified in such notification, and shall do all such other acts consequent upon such notification as any such justice or baron is authorised to make or do by any statute or statutes in force at the time of making any such orders in relation to penal servitude of offenders; and such order, and other acts to be so made and done as aforesaid, shall be obeyed and executed by such person in whose custody such offender shall at that time be, and by all other persons whom it may concern, and shall be as effectual, and have all the same consequences, as any order made under the authority of any statute with respect to any offender in such statute mentioned; and every sheriff, gaoler, keeper, governor, or superintendent whom it may concern, and all constables and other persons, shall be bound to obey the aforesaid order and orders, be assistant in the execution thereof, and be liable to the same punishment for disobedience to or for interrupting the execution of such order, as they would be if the same had been made under the authority of any such Act of Parliament; and every person so ordered to be kept in penal servitude shall be subject respectively to all and every the penalties and provisions made by law and in force concerning persons under sentence of penal servitude, or receiving Her Majesty's pardon on condition of penal servitude; and from the time when such order of penal servitude shall be made every law and statute in force touching the escape of felons, or their afterwards returning or being at large without leave, shall apply to such offender, and to all persons aiding, abetting, contriving, or assisting in any escape or intended escape or the returning without leave of any such offender; and the judge who shall make any order of penal servitude as aforesaid shall direct the notification of Her Majesty's pleasure, and his own order made thereupon, to be filed and kept of record in the office of the Clerk of the Crown of the Court of Queen's Bench; and the said clerk shall have a fee of two shillings and sixpence only for filing the same, and shall, on application, deliver a certificate in writing (not taking more than two shillings and sixpence for the same) to such offender, or to any person applying in his or Her Majesty's behalf, showing the Christian and surname of such offender, his offence, the place where the court was held before which he was convicted, the sentence, and the conditions on which the order of penal servitude was made; which certificate shall be sufficient proof of the conviction and of the sentence of such offender, and also of the terms in which such order for his penal servitude was made, in any court and in any proceeding wherein it may be necessary to inquire into the same; and it shall be lawful for any judge of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer in Ireland to make an order that any such offender convicted in Ireland shall be kept in penal servitude in England, and such order shall be in all respects as effectual in England as though such offender had been convicted in England and the order had been made by any judge of the Queen's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer in England.

23. Whenever any sentence of penal servitude heretofore or hereafter passed upon any offender by any court-martial holden in any part of Her Majesty's foreign dominions, or elsewhere beyond the seas, is to be carried into execution for the term specified in such sentence, or for any shorter term, or when sentence of death passed by any such court-martial has been or shall as aforesaid be commuted to penal servitude, the same shall be notified by the officer commanding Her Majesty's forces at the presidency or station where the offender may come or be, if in India to the chief judge or any judge of the chief civil court of the presidency or province in which the court-martial has been held; and if in any other part of Her Majesty's foreign dominions, to the chief justice or some other judge therein, who shall make order for the penal servitude or intermediate custody of such offender; and upon any such order being made it shall be duly notified to the governor of the presidency if in the East Indies, or to the governor of the colony if in any of Her Majesty's colonies, or to the person who shall for the time being be exercising the office of governor of such presidency or colony, who on receipt of such notification shall cause such offender to be removed or sent to some other colony or place, or to undergo his sentence within the presidency or colony where the offender was so sentenced or where he may come or be as aforesaid in obedience to the directions for the removal and treatment of convicts which shall from time to time be transmitted from Her Majesty through one of Her Principal Secretaries of State to such presidency or colony; and such offender shall, according to such directions, undergo the sentence of penal servitude which shall have been passed upon him either in the presidency or colony in which he has been so sentenced or in the colony or place to which he has been so removed or sent, and whilst such sentence shall remain in force shall be liable to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour, and otherwise dealt with under such sentence, in the same manner as if he had been sentenced to be imprisoned with hard labour during the term of his penal servitude by the judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction in such presidency or colony or in the colony or place to which he has been so removed or sent respectively.

24. In any case where a sentence of penal servitude shall have been awarded by a general or detachment general court-martial, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or, if in any place out of the United Kingdom or British Isles, for the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces there serving, instead of causing such sentence to be carried into execution, to order that the offender be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, for such term not exceeding two years as shall seem meet to Her Majesty or to the officer commanding as aforesaid.

25. Where an award of any forfeiture, or of deprivation of pay, or of stoppages of pay shall have been added to any sentence of penal servitude, it shall be lawful for the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners, or, if in any place out of the United Kingdom or British Isles, for the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's forces there serving, in the event of the sentence being commuted for imprisonment, to order such award of forfeiture, deprivation of pay, or stoppages of pay to be enforced, mitigated, or remitted as may be deemed expedient.

26. When any sentence of death shall be commuted for penal servitude, or when any marine shall by court-martial be adjudged to penal servitude as authorised by this Act, it shall be lawful for the commanding officer of the division to which such marine shall have belonged or may belong to cause him to be detained and conveyed to any gaol or prison, there to remain in safe custody until he shall be removed therefrom by due authority under an order for his penal servitude to be made by some justice of the Queen's Bench or Common Pleas or baron of the Exchequer as aforesaid; and a certificate of his sentence, after the same shall have been approved by the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, (such certificate to be signed by the commanding officer of the division from which he shall be sent,) shall be a sufficient order, requisition, and authority to the governor, keeper, or superintendent of the gaol or prison to receive and detain him: Provided always, that in case of any such offender being so conveyed to gaol or prison the usual allowance of sixpence per diem, or such other sum as the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners may at any time or times direct, shall be made to the keeper of the gaol or prison for the subsistence of such offender during his detention therein, which allowance shall be paid by the paymaster of the division, upon production to him, by the said governor, keeper, or superintendent, of a declaration, to be made by him before one of Her Majesty's justices of the peace of such county, of the number of days during which the offender shall have been so detained and subsisted in such gaol or prison.

27. No court-martial shall, for any offence whatever committed in time of peace within the Queen's dominions, have power to sentence any marine to corporal punishment: Provided, that any court-martial may sentence any marine to corporal punishment while on active service in the field, or on board any ship not in commission, for mutiny, insubordination, desertion, drunkenness on duty or on the line of march; and no sentence of corporal punishment shall exceed fifty lashes.

28. It shall be lawful for any general, district, or garrison court-martial to award imprisonment, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, such confinement not exceeding the periods prescribed herein-after or by the Articles of War, and in case of a marine in addition to corporal punishment.

29. In all cases in which corporal punishment shall form the whole or part of the sentence awarded by any court-martial, it shall be lawful for the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or for the officer authorised to confirm the sentences of courts-martial, to commute such corporal punishment to imprisonment for any period not exceeding forty-two days, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, or to mitigate such sentence, or instead of such sentence to award imprisonment for any period not exceeding twenty days, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, and corporal punishment, to be inflicted in the prison, not exceeding twenty-five lashes, and the solitary confinement herein-before mentioned shall in no case exceed seven days at a time, with intervals of not less than seven days between each period of such confinement.

30. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, in all cases whatsoever, instead of causing a sentence of cashiering to be put in execution, to order the offender to be reprimanded, or, in addition thereto, to suffer such loss of army or regimental rank, or both, as may be deemed expedient.

31. Any general court-martial may, in addition to any other punishment which such court may award, sentence any offender to forfeiture of all advantage as to additional pay, good-conduct pay, and to pension on discharge, which might have otherwise accrued from the length of his former service, or to forfeiture of such advantage absolutely, whether it might have accrued from past service, or might accrue from future service, or to forfeiture of any annuity and medal which may have been granted for former meritorious service, or of the gratuity and medal awarded for former good conduct, and of all medals and decorations, according to the nature of the case; and any district or garrison court-martial may also, in addition to any punishment which such court may award, sentence any offender to such forfeiture for desertion, or for disgraceful conduct,

In wilfully maiming or injuring himself or any other marine, whether at the instance of such other marine or not, or of causing himself to be maimed or injured by any other person, with intent thereby to render himself or such other marine unfit for service:

In wilfully doing any act, or wilfully disobeying any orders, whether in hospital or otherwise, thereby producing or aggravating disease or infirmity, or delaying his cure:

In malingering or feigning disease:

In tampering with his eyes, with intent thereby to render himself unfit for service:

In stealing or embezzling Government property or stores, or in receiving the same knowing the same to have been stolen:

In stealing any money or goods the property of a comrade, of a marine officer, or of any marine mess or band, or in receiving any such money or goods knowing the same to have been stolen:

In making any false or fraudulent accounts, returns, matters, or entries, or assisting or conniving at the same being made, or producing the same as true, knowing the same to be false or fraudulent :

In stealing or embezzling, or fraudulently misapplying public money intrusted to him :

Or in committing any other offence of a felonious or fraudulent nature, to the injury of, or with intent to injure, any person, civil, marine, or military :

Or for any other disgraceful conduct, being of a cruel, indecent, or unnatural kind.

32. Every marine who shall be found guilty by a court-martial of desertion, of wilfully maiming or injuring himself or any other marine, whether at the instance of such other marine or not, or of causing himself to be maimed or injured by any other person, with intent thereby to render himself or such other marine unfit for service, of tampering with his eyes with intent thereby to render himself unfit for service, such finding having been confirmed, or found guilty by a jury of felony in any court of ordinary criminal jurisdiction in England or Ireland, or of any crime or offence in any court of criminal judicature in any part of the United Kingdom, or in any dominion, territory, colony, settlement, or island belonging to or occupied by Her Majesty out of the United Kingdom, which would, if committed in England, amount to felony, shall thereupon forfeit all advantage as to additional pay, good-conduct pay, and to pension on discharge which might have otherwise accrued from the length of his former service, in addition to any punishment which such court may award ; and every marine who may be so convicted, or who may be sentenced to penal servitude, or discharged with ignominy, shall thereupon likewise forfeit all medals which he may be in possession of, whether for sea or field service or for good conduct, together with any annuity or pension or gratuity, if any, thereto appertaining ; and any sergeant reduced to the ranks by sentence of court-martial may, by the order of the same court, be made to forfeit any annuity or pension and medal for meritorious service, or any or either of them, which may have been conferred upon him.

33. If any non-commissioned officer or marine, by reason of his imprisonment, whether under sentence of a court-martial or of any other court duly authorised to pass such sentence, or by reason of his confinement for debt, or by reason of his desertion, or, being an apprentice, by reason of his being allowed to serve out his time with his master, shall have been absent from his duty during any portion of the time limited by his enlistment or re-engagement or prolongation of service, as herein-after provided, such portion of his time shall not be reckoned as a part of the limited service for which such non-commissioned officer or marine was enlisted or re-engaged, or for which his time of service may have been prolonged ; and no marine shall be entitled to pay, or to reckon service towards pay or pension, when in confinement under a sentence of any court, or during any absence from duty by commitment or confinement as a deserter by confession or under any charge of which he shall be afterwards convicted, either by court-martial or by any court of ordinary criminal jurisdiction, or whilst in confinement for debt ; and when any marine shall be absent as a prisoner of war he shall not be entitled to pay, or to reckon service towards pay or pension, for the period of such absence, but upon rejoining Her Majesty's service due inquiry shall be made by a court-martial, and unless it shall be proved to the satisfaction of such court that the said marine was taken prisoner through wilful neglect of duty on his part, or that he had served with or under, or in some manner aided, the enemy, or that he had not returned as soon as possible to Her Majesty's service, he may thereupon be recommended by such court to receive either the whole of such arrears of pay, or a proportion thereof, and to reckon service during his absence ; and any marine who shall be convicted of desertion, or of absence without leave, shall, in addition to any punishment awarded by the court, forfeit his pay for the day or days during which he was in a state of desertion, or during his absence without leave ; and if any marine shall absent himself without leave for any period, and shall not account for the same to the satisfaction of the commanding officer, or if any marine shall be guilty of any other offence which the commanding officer may not think necessary to bring before a court-martial, the commanding officer may, in addition to any minor punishment he is authorised to award, order that such marine shall be imprisoned for such period not exceeding one hundred and sixty-eight hours, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, as the said commanding officer may think fit, and such marine shall forfeit his pay for any day or days on which he may be so imprisoned ; and the said commanding officer may moreover order that, in addition to or instead of such imprisonment and forfeiture, or any other punishment which he has authority to inflict, any marine who shall have so absented himself as aforesaid shall forfeit his pay for the day or days during which he shall have so absented himself ; and, in pursuance of any such order as aforesaid, the pay of the marine shall be accordingly forfeited : Provided always, that such marine shall not be liable to be afterwards tried by a court-martial for any offence for which he shall have been so punished, ordered to suffer imprisonment, punishment, or forfeiture as last aforesaid : Provided also, that any marine who shall be so ordered to suffer imprisonment or forfeiture of pay shall, if he so request, have a right to be tried by a court-martial for his offence, instead of submitting to such imprisonment or forfeiture: Provided also, that it shall be lawful for the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners to order or withhold the payment of the whole or any part of the pay of any officer or marine during the period of absence by any of the causes aforesaid.

34. In addition to any other punishment which the court may award, a court-martial may further direct that any offender may be put under stoppages until he shall have made good—

Any bounty fraudulently obtained by him by desertion from his corps and enlisting in some other corps or in the militia:

Any loss, disposal of, or damage occasioned by him in any of the instances of disgraceful conduct herein specified:

Any loss, disposal of, or destruction of, or damage or injury to any property whatsoever, occasioned by his wilful or negligent misconduct:

Any loss, disposal of, or destruction of, or damage or injury to his arms, clothing, instruments, equipments, accoutrements, or necessities, or any extra article of clothing or equipment that he may have been put in possession of and ordered to wear on the recommendation of the surgeon for the benefit of his health, or making away with or pawning any medal or decoration for service or for general good conduct, which may have been granted to him by order of Her Majesty or by order of the East India Company, or any medal or decoration which may have been granted to him by any foreign power, or any loss, disposal of, or destruction of, or damage or injury to the arms, clothing, instruments, equipments, accoutrements, or necessities of any officer or marine, occasioned by his wilful or negligent misconduct:

Any expense necessarily incurred by his drunkenness or other misconduct:

Provided always, that, except in the case of the loss, disposal of, or destruction of, or damage or injury to arms, clothing, instruments, equipments, accoutrements, or necessities, in which case the court may by its sentence direct that the said stoppages shall continue till the cost of replacing or repairing the same be made good, the amount of any loss, disposal, destruction, damage or injury, or expense, shall be ascertained by evidence, and the offender shall be placed under stoppages for such an amount only as shall be proved to the satisfaction of the court: Provided also, that when an offender is put under stoppages for making away with or pawning any medal or decoration, the amount shall be credited to the public, but the medal or decoration in question shall not be replaced, except under special circumstances, to be determined by the Lord High Admiral or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral aforesaid: Provided also, that so much only of the pay of the marine may be stopped and applied as shall, after satisfying the charges for messing and washing, leave him a residue at the least of one penny a day.

35. Whenever any marine shall have been convicted of desertion or of any such disgraceful conduct as is herein-before described, and the court in respect of such disgraceful conduct shall have made the forfeiture of all claim to pension on discharge a part of the sentence passed on such marine, such court may further sentence him to be discharged with ignominy from Her Majesty's service: Provided always, where an award of any of the forfeitures herein-before mentioned, or of deprivation of pay, or of stoppages of pay, shall have been added to a sentence of transportation or penal servitude, it shall be lawful for the Lord High Admiral or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or, if in the East Indies, for the officer commanding in chief Her Majesty's land forces in India, in the event of the sentence of transportation or penal servitude being commuted to imprisonment, to order such award of forfeiture, deprivation of pay, or stoppages of pay to be enforced, mitigated, or remitted as may be deemed expedient.

37. A general or district or garrison court-martial may sentence any marine to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, and may also direct that such offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of such imprisonment, in no case exceeding fourteen days at a time, nor eighty-four days in any one year, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods; and when the imprisonment awarded shall exceed three months, the court-martial shall imperatively order that the solitary confinement shall not exceed seven days in any one month of the whole imprisonment awarded, with intervals between the periods of solitary confinement of not less duration than such periods; and any divisional or detachment court-martial may sentence any marine to imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding forty-two days, and may also direct that such marine be kept in solitary confinement for any portion or portions of such imprisonment, not exceeding fourteen days at a time, with intervals between them of not less duration than such periods of solitary confinement: Provided always, that when any court-martial, whether general, garrison, or district, or divisional or detachment, shall direct that the imprisonment shall be solitary confinement only, or when any sentence of corporal punishment shall have been commuted to imprisonment only, the period of such solitary confinement shall in no case exceed fourteen days.

38. Whenever sentence shall be passed by a court-martial on an offender already under sentence, either of imprisonment or of penal servitude, the court may award sentence of imprisonment or penal servitude for the offence for which he is under trial to commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or penal servitude to which he shall have been so previously sentenced, although the aggregate of the terms of imprisonment or penal servitude respectively may exceed the term for which either of those punishments could be otherwise awarded.

Whenever Her Majesty, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty, or any general or other officer authorised to confirm the sentences of courts-martial shall commute a sentence of penal servitude or corporal punishment to imprisonment, and the offender whose sentence shall be so commuted shall at the time of such commutation be under sentence of imprisonment or penal servitude, it shall be lawful to direct that such commuted sentence of imprisonment shall commence at the expiration of the imprisonment or penal servitude to which such prisoner shall have been so previously sentenced, although the aggregate of the term of imprisonment or penal servitude respectively may exceed the term for which either of those punishments could be otherwise awarded.

39. Save as herein specially provided, every term of penal servitude or imprisonment under the sentence of a court-martial, whether original or revised, shall be reckoned as commencing on the day on which the original sentence and proceedings shall be signed by the president; and the place of imprisonment under the sentences of courts-martial shall be appointed by the court or the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or the commanding officer of the division to which the offender belongs or is attached, or the officer commanding the district, garrison, island, or colony.

40. In the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment under sentence of a court-martial, or as part of commuted punishment, in any public prison other than a military prison, or in any gaol or house of correction or elsewhere, in any part of the United Kingdom, it shall be lawful for the said Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, for the time being, in all cases, or for the officer who confirmed the proceedings of the court, or the officer commanding the division or the district or garrison in which such prisoner may be, to give, as often as occasion may arise, an order in writing directing that the prisoner be discharged, or be delivered over to military custody, whether for the purpose of being removed to some other prison or place in the United Kingdom, there to undergo the remainder or any part of his sentence, or for the purpose of being brought before a court-martial either as a witness or for trial; and in the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment under the sentence of a court-martial in any public prison other than a military prison, or in any gaol or house of correction, in any part of Her Majesty's dominions other than the United Kingdom, it shall be lawful for the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners, or for the officer commanding the Royal Marines there serving, in the case of any such prisoner, to give, as often as occasion may arise, an order in writing directing that the prisoner be discharged, or be delivered over to military or other custody, whether for the purpose of being removed to some other prison or place in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, there to undergo the remainder or any part of his sentence, or for the purpose of being brought before a court-martial either as a witness or for trial; and in the case of any prisoner who shall be removed by any such order from any such prison, gaol, or house of correction, either within the United Kingdom or elsewhere, to some other prison or place, either in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, the officer or authorities who gave such order shall also give an order in writing directing the governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of such other prison or place to receive such prisoner into his custody, and specifying the offence of which such prisoner shall have been convicted, and the sentence of the court, and the period of imprisonment which he is to undergo, and the day and the hour on which he is to be released; and such governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper shall keep such offender in a proper place of confinement, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, according to the sentence of the court, and during the time specified in the said order, or until he be duly discharged or delivered over to other custody before the expiration of that time under an order duly made for that purpose; and in the case of a prisoner undergoing imprisonment under the sentence of a court-martial in any military prison in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, the Secretary of State for War, or the general officer commanding the district or station in which the prison may be situated, shall have the like powers in regard to the discharge and delivery over of such prisoners to military or other custody as may be lawfully exercised by any of the authorities above mentioned in respect of any prisoners undergoing confinement as aforesaid in any public prison other than a military prison, or in any gaol or house of correction in any part of Her Majesty's dominions; and such prisoner in any of the cases herein-before mentioned shall accordingly, on the production of any such order as is herein-before mentioned, be discharged or delivered over, as the case may be: Provided always, that the time during which any prisoner under sentence of imprisonment by a court-martial shall be detained in such military or other custody under such order as aforesaid shall be reckoned as imprisonment under the sentence, for whatever purpose such detention shall take place, and such prisoner may during such time, either when on board ship or otherwise, be subjected to such restraint as is necessary for his detention and removal.

41. Every governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of any public prison, or of any gaol or house of correction, in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, shall receive into his custody any military offender under sentence of imprisonment by a general or other court-martial, upon delivery to him of an order in writing in that behalf from the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or from the officer commanding the division or detachment to which the offender belongs or did last belong or is attached, which order shall specify the period of imprisonment or remainder of imprisonment which the offender is to undergo, and the day and hour of the day on which he is to be released or be otherwise disposed of; and such governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper shall keep such offender in a proper place of confinement, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement, according to the sentence of the court, and during the time specified in the said order, or until he be discharged or delivered over to other custody before the expiration of that time, under an order duly made for that purpose; and whenever marines are called out in aid of the civil power, or are stationed in billets, or are on the line of march, every governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement, shall receive into his custody any marine for a period not exceeding seven days, upon delivery to him of an order in writing in that behalf from the officer commanding such marine; and any governor, provost marshal, gaoler, or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement who shall refuse to receive and to confine, or to discharge or deliver over, any marine offender in the manner herein prescribed, shall forfeit for every such offence the sum of one hundred pounds.

42. The gaoler or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement in any part of Her Majesty's dominions shall diet and supply every marine imprisoned therein under the sentence of a court-martial or as a deserter with fuel and other necessaries according to the regulations of such place of confinement, and shall receive on account of every marine during the period of his imprisonment one shilling per diem, or such other sum as the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners may at any time or times direct, which the Secretary of the Admiralty shall cause to be issued out of the subsistence of such marine, upon application in writing signed by any justice within whose jurisdiction such place of confinement shall be locally situated, together with a copy of the order of commitment, and which sum of sixpence per diem, or such other sum as aforesaid, shall be carried to the credit of the fund from which the expense of such place of confinement is defrayed.

43. Every gaoler or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, or other place of confinement, to whom any notice shall have been given, or who shall have reason to know or believe, that any person in his custody for any debt or contempt, or upon any charge or for any offence, civil, criminal, or military, is a marine, shall on receiving him into custody give notice thereof to the Secretary of the Admiralty, and also, previous to the expiration of the period of the confinement or imprisonment of such marine, give to the Secretary of the Admiralty one month's notice of the period of such expiration of confinement or imprisonment, or if there shall not be sufficient time for a month's notice, then the longest practicable notice thereof, specifying the day and hour of the day on and at which he is to be released; and for every default of giving either or any of such notices such gaoler or person shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds; and moreover every gaoler or other person having such immediate inspection as aforesaid shall, as soon as any such marine shall be entitled to be discharged out of custody, with all convenient speed, safely and securely conduct and convey and safely and securely deliver every such marine either unto the officer commanding at the nearest head quarters of the Royal Marines or to the officer commanding Her Majesty's ship to which any such marine may happen to belong, unless the said Commissioners shall, by writing under the hand of the Secretary of the Admiralty, or the officer commanding at the nearest head quarters of the Royal Marines, or the officer commanding Her Majesty's ship to which any such marine may belong, shall, by writing under his hand, direct that such marine be delivered to some other officer or person, in which case he shall be delivered to such other officer or person accordingly, and the officer or person to whom such marine shall be so delivered in accordance with this Act shall thereupon give to such gaoler or person delivering up such marine a certificate, directed to the Secretary of the Admiralty, specifying the receipt of such marine, and, if such gaoler or other person as aforesaid has conducted or conveyed any such marine, specifying the place from and to which he shall have been conducted and conveyed as aforesaid; and such gaoler or person who shall have so conducted, conveyed, and delivered any such marine shall, upon the production of such certificate, be entitled to receive of and from the Accountant General of Her Majesty's Navy the sum of one shilling per mile, and no more, for conducting, conveying, and delivering any such marine as aforesaid; and every such gaoler or other person having such immediate inspection as aforesaid who shall not safely and securely conduct, convey, or deliver any such marine as aforesaid shall for every such misconduct or offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds. In all cases where the marine in custody is under sentence to be discharged from the service on the completion of his term of imprisonment, and the discharge document is in the hands of the gaoler, such gaoler shall not be required to make any report thereof to the Secretary of the Admiralty or to the Deputy Adjutant General of Marines.

44. Every military prison which shall be established under or by virtue of any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and their quarters, shall be deemed to be public prisons within the meaning of any Act now in force or hereafter to be in force for the regulation of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces; and any officer or marine convicted by a court-martial may be sent, by order of the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, to any such military prison, there to undergo such punishment as may be awarded by the sentence passed upon him, or until he be discharged or delivered up by an order, as in the case of a discharge or removal from any other prison under this Act.

45. Musters, as have been customary, shall be taken of every division or company of Royal Marines once in every calendar month, as shall be appointed; and no officer or marine shall be absent from any such muster, unless duly certified to be employed on some other duty of the corps, or sick, or in prison, or on furlough; and every person belonging to Her Majesty's service who shall give or procure to be given any untrue certificate thereby to excuse any person from any muster or other service which he ought to attend or perform, or shall make any false or untrue muster of man or horse, or who shall willingly allow or sign any false muster or duplicate thereof, or shall directly or indirectly take or receive any money or gratuity for mustering any person, or for signing any muster roll or duplicate, or shall knowingly muster any person by a wrong name, shall, upon proof by two witnesses before a general court-martial, for any such offence be sentenced to be cashiered: Provided that it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, in all cases whatsoever, instead of causing a sentence of cashiering to be put in execution, to order the offender to be reprimanded, or, in addition thereto, to suffer such loss of rank as may be deemed expedient; and any person who shall fraudulently offer or procure himself to be falsely mustered, or lend or furnish any horse to be falsely mustered, shall, upon proof thereof by the oaths of two witnesses before some justice of the peace residing near to the place where such muster shall be made, forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and the informer, if he belongs to Her Majesty's service, shall, if he demand it, be forthwith discharged; and if any person not belonging to Her Majesty's service shall give or sign any untrue certificate of illness or otherwise in order to excuse any officer or marine from appearance at any muster, or whereby Her Majesty's service may be defrauded, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

46. All muster rolls and pay lists of Royal Marines required to be verified upon oath shall be sworn before and attested by any justice of the peace, without fee or reward to himself or his clerk.

47. Every marine shall be liable to be tried and punished for desertion from any corps into which he may have unlawfully enlisted, although he may of right belong to another corps, and be a deserter therefrom; and whether such marine shall be tried for deserting from the corps to which he may of right belong, or from the corps into which he may have unlawfully enlisted, or for any other desertion, every desertion previous or subsequent to that for which he may at the time be taking his trial may, if duly stated in the charges, be given in evidence against him on such trial.

48. Upon reasonable suspicion that a person is a deserter it shall be lawful for any constable, or if no constable can be immediately met with, then for any officer or marine or soldier in Her Majesty's service, or other person, to apprehend or cause to be apprehended such suspected person, and forthwith to bring him or cause him to be brought before any justice living in or near the place where he was so apprehended, and acting for the county, city, district, place, or borough wherein such place is situate, or for the county adjoining such first-mentioned county or such borough; and such justice is hereby authorised and required to inquire whether such suspected person is a deserter, and from time to time to defer the said inquiry, and to remand the said suspected person, in the manner prescribed by an Act passed in the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter forty-two, section twenty-one, and subject to every provision therein contained; and if it shall appear to the satisfaction of such justice, by the testimony of one or more witnesses taken upon oath, or by the confession of such suspected person, confirmed by some corroborative evidence upon oath, or by the knowledge of such justice, that such suspected person is a deserter, such justice shall forthwith cause him to be conveyed in civil custody to the head quarters or depôt of the division to which he belongs, if stationed within a convenient and easily accessible distance from the place of commitment, or if not so stationed then to the nearest or most convenient public prison (other than a military prison) or police station legally provided as the lock-up house for temporary confinement of persons taken into custody, whether such prison or police station be in the county or borough in which such suspected person was apprehended or in which he was committed, or not; or if the deserter has been apprehended by a party of marines in charge of a commissioned officer, such justice may deliver him up to such party, unless the officer shall deem it necessary to have the deserter committed to prison for safe custody; and such justice shall transmit an account of the proceedings, in the form prescribed in the schedule annexed to this Act, to the Secretary of the Admiralty, specifying thereon whether such deserter was delivered to a party of marines in order to his being taken to the head quarters or depôt of his division, or whether such deserter was committed to prison, to the end that the person so committed may be removed by an order from the said Lord High

Admiral, or the said Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or deputy adjutant general of Royal Marines, and proceeded against according to law; and such justice shall also send to the Secretary of the Admiralty a report stating the names of the persons by whom or by or through whose means the deserter was apprehended and secured, and the Secretary of the Admiralty shall transmit to such justice an order upon the proper department for the payment of the sum of twenty shillings as a reward to the person so certified to be entitled thereto; and for such information, commitment, and report as aforesaid the clerk of the said justice shall be entitled to a fee of two shillings and no more; and every gaoler and other person into whose custody any person charged with desertion is committed shall, immediately upon the receipt of the person so charged into his custody, pay such fee of two shillings, and also, upon the production of a receipt from the medical practitioner who may have been required to examine such suspected person, a fee of two shillings and sixpence, and shall notify the fact to the Secretary of the Admiralty, and transmit also to the Secretary of the Admiralty a copy of the commitment, to the end that the Secretary of the Admiralty may order repayment of such fees; and that when any such person shall be apprehended and committed as a deserter in any part of Her Majesty's foreign dominions, the justice shall forthwith cause him to be conveyed to some public prison, if the detachment to which he is suspected to belong shall not be in such part, or if the detachment be in such part, the justice may deliver him into custody at the nearest military post, although the detachment to which such person is suspected to belong may not be stationed at such military post, if within reasonable distance; and such justice shall in every case transmit to the officer commanding a description return in the form prescribed in the schedule to this Act annexed, to the end that such person may be removed by the order of such officer, and proceeded against according to law; and such description return, purporting to be duly made and subscribed in accordance with the Act, shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be deemed sufficient evidence of the facts and matters therein stated: Provided always, that any such person so committed as a deserter in any part of Her Majesty's dominions shall, subject to the provisions herein-after contained, be liable to be transferred, by order of the colonel commandant or other officer commanding, to serve in any division, corps, detachment, or party nearest to the place where he shall have been apprehended, or to any other division, corps, detachment, or party to which the Lord High Admiral or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral may deem it desirable that he should be transferred, and shall also be liable after such transfer of service to be tried and punished as a deserter.

49. For and in respect of any marine attempting to desert from any head quarters, the party or parties by whom he shall be apprehended shall be entitled to a reward of ten shillings, to be paid upon the delivering up of such marine, which sum of ten shillings shall be charged against and stopped and retained out of the pay and subsistence of every such marine.

50. Every gaoler or keeper of any public prison, gaol, house of correction, lock-up house, or other place of confinement in any part of Her Majesty's dominions is hereby required to receive and confine therein every deserter who shall be delivered into his custody by any marine or other person conveying such deserter under lawful authority, on production of the warrant of the justice of the peace on which such deserter shall have been taken, or some order from the Admiralty, which order shall continue in force until the deserter shall have arrived at his destination; and such gaoler or keeper shall be entitled to one shilling for the safe custody of the said deserter while halted on the march, and to such subsistence for his maintenance as shall be directed by the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners.

51. Any person who, while serving in Her Majesty's Navy or in any of Her Majesty's forces, or the embodied militia, shall to any officer, or subordinate, warrant, petty, or non-commissioned officer, fraudulently confess himself to be a deserter from Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, shall be liable to be tried by any court-martial under this Act, and punished according to the sentence thereof; and any person who shall voluntarily deliver himself up as and confess himself to be a deserter from Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, or who, upon being apprehended for any offence, shall in the presence of the justice confess himself to be a deserter as aforesaid, shall be deemed to have been duly enlisted and to be a marine, and shall be liable to serve in Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, whether such person shall have been ever actually enlisted as a marine or not; or in case such person shall not be a deserter from the Royal Marine forces, or shall have been discharged therefrom or from any other corps for any cause whatever, or shall be incapable of service, he shall, on conviction thereof before two justices of the peace at or near the place where he shall deliver himself up or confess, or where he may at any time happen to be, be adjudged to be punished, if in England, as a rogue and vagabond, and if elsewhere by commitment to some prison or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding three months, or shall be deemed guilty of obtaining money under false pretences within the true intent and meaning, if in England or Ireland, of an Act passed in the session holden in the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth years of Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Statute Law of England and Ireland relating to Larceny and other similar offences," or, if in Scotland, shall be deemed guilty of falsehood, fraud, and wilful imposition; and every person so deemed to be guilty of obtaining money under false pretences, or of falsehood, fraud, and wilful imposition, (as the case may be,) shall be liable to be proceeded against and punished accordingly; and the confession and receiving subsistence as a marine by such person shall be evidence of the false pretence, or of the falsehood, fraud, and imposition, (as the case may be,) and of the obtaining money to the amount of the value of such subsistence, and the value of such subsistence so obtained may be charged in the indictment as so much money received by such person; and in case such person shall have been previously convicted of the like offence, or shall have been summarily convicted and punished in England as a rogue and vagabond, or in Scotland or Ireland by commitment, for making a fraudulent confession of desertion, such former conviction may be alleged in the indictment, and may be proved upon the trial of such person; and in such indictment for a second offence it shall be sufficient to state that the offender was at a certain time and place convicted of obtaining money under false pretences as a deserter, for making a fraudulent confession of desertion, without otherwise describing the said offence; and a certificate containing the substance and effect only (omitting the formal part) of the indictment and conviction of the former offence, purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court or other officer having the custody of the record of the court where the offender was first convicted, or by the deputy of such clerk, or by the clerk of the convicting magistrates, shall, upon proof of the identity of the person of the offender, be sufficient evidence of the first conviction, without proof of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed such certificate; and if the person so confessing himself to be a deserter shall be serving at the time in Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces he shall be deemed to be and shall be dealt with by all justices and gaolers as a deserter.

52. Any person who shall, in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, by any means whatsoever, directly or indirectly procure any marine to desert or absent himself from his duty without leave from his commanding officer, or attempt to procure or persuade any marine to desert or absent himself from his duty, and any person who, knowing that any marine is absent from his duty without leave from his commanding officer, shall harbour or conceal such marine, or aid or assist such marine in concealing himself, or aid and assist in his rescue, or aid or assist him to desert, shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall, on conviction thereof before any two justices acting for the county, district, city, burgh, or place where any such offender shall at any time happen to be, be liable to be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for such term not exceeding six calendar months as the convicting justices shall think fit.

53. When there shall not be any officer of Her Majesty's land or marine forces of the rank of captain or of a superior rank, or any adjutant of militia, within convenient distance of the place where any non-commissioned officer or marine, not borne on the books of any of Her Majesty's ships or vessels in commission as aforesaid, and who shall be on furlough, shall be detained by sickness or other casualty rendering necessary an extension of such furlough, it shall be lawful for any justice who shall be satisfied of such necessity to grant an extension of furlough for a period not exceeding one month; and the said justice shall immediately certify such extension, and the cause thereof, to the commanding officer of the division or detachment to which the man belongs, if known, and if not, then to the Secretary of the Admiralty, in order that the necessary allowance of pay and subsistence may be remitted to the marine, who shall not during the period of such extension of furlough be liable to be treated as a deserter; Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to exempt any marine from trial and punishment according to the provisions of this Act for any false representation made by him in that behalf to the said officer or justice so extending the furlough, or for any breach of discipline committed by him in applying for and obtaining the said extension of furlough.

54. Any person enlisted into Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces as a marine, or who has received marine enlistment money, shall be liable to be taken out of Her Majesty's service only by process or execution on account of any charge of felony, or on account of misdemeanor, or of any crime or offence other than the misdemeanor of refusing to comply with an order of justices for the payment of money, or on account of an original debt proved by affidavit of the plaintiff or of some one on his behalf to amount to the value of thirty pounds at the least over and above all costs of suit, such affidavit to be sworn, without payment of any fee, before some judge of the court out of which process or execution shall issue, or before some person authorised to take affidavits in such court, of which affidavit, when duly filed in such court, a memorandum shall, without fee, be endorsed upon the back of such process, stating the fact sworn to, and the day of filing such affidavit; but no marine or other person as aforesaid shall be liable by any process whatever to appear before any justice of the peace or other authority whatsoever, or to be taken out of Her Majesty's service by any writ, summons, order, warrant, judgment, execution, or any process whatever issued by or by the authority of any court of law, or any magistrate, justice or justices of the peace, or any other authority whatsoever, for any original debt not amounting to thirty pounds, or for not supporting or maintaining, or for not having supported or maintained, or for leaving or having left chargeable to any parish, township, or place, or to the common fund of any union, any relation or child which such marine or person might, if not in Her Majesty's service, be compellable by law to relieve or maintain, or for neglecting to pay to the mother of any bastard child, or to any person who may have been appointed to have the custody of such child, any sum to be paid in pursuance of an order in that behalf, or for the breach of any contract, covenant, agreement, or other engagement whatever, by parol or in writing, or for having left or deserted his employer or master, or his contract, work, or labour; and all summonses, warrants, commitments, indictments, convictions, judgments, and sentences, on account of any of the matters for which it is herein declared that a marine is not liable to be taken out of Her Majesty's service, shall be utterly illegal, and null and void to all intents and purposes; and any judge of any such court may examine into any complaint made by a marine or by his superior officer, and by warrant under his hand discharge such marine, without fee, he being shewn to have been arrested contrary to the intent of this Act, and shall award reasonable costs to such complainant, who shall have for the recovery thereof the like remedy as would have been applicable to the recovery of any costs which might have been awarded against the complainant in any judgment or execution as aforesaid, or a writ of Habeas corpus ad subjiciendum shall be awarded or issued, and the discharge of any such marine out of custody shall be ordered thereupon; provided that any plaintiff, upon notice of the cause of action first given in writing to any marine or left at his last quarters, may proceed in any action or suit to judgment, and have execution other than against the body or marine necessities or equipments of such marine: Provided also, that nothing herein contained relating to the leaving or deserting a master or employer, or to the breach of any contract, agreement, or engagement, shall apply to persons who shall be really and bona fide apprentices duly bound under the age of twenty-one years, as herein prescribed.

55. No person who shall be commissioned and in full pay as an officer in the Royal Marine forces, or who shall be employed in enlisting for such forces, shall be capable of being nominated or elected to be sheriff, and no such officer and no non-commissioned officer of such forces shall be capable of being nominated or elected to be a constable, or overseer, guardian of any union, or any officer of a like description, of any county, hundred, riding, city, borough, town, division, parish, or other place, or to be mayor, portreeve, alderman, or to hold any office in any municipal corporation in any city, borough, or place in Great Britain or Ireland, or be summoned or shall serve as a grand or petit or other juror or upon any inquest, and any summons for him to attend to serve as a grand or petit or other juror or upon an inquest shall be null and void; and every such person is hereby exempted from attendance and service in accordance with any such summons, and from all fines, pains, and penalties for or in consequence of not attending or serving as aforesaid.

56. Every person authorised to enlist recruits for the Royal Marines shall first ask the person offering to enlist whether he belongs to the militia, and also such other questions as the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners may direct to be put to recruits, and shall, immediately after giving him enlisting money, serve him with a notice in the form set forth in the schedule to this Act annexed.

57. Every person who shall receive enlisting money in manner aforesaid shall upon such receipt be deemed to be enlisted as a marine in Her Majesty's service, and while he shall remain with the recruiting party shall be entitled to be billeted.

58. Every person so enlisted as aforesaid shall, within ninety-six hours (any intervening Sunday, Christmas Day, or Good Friday not included), but not sooner than twenty-four hours after such enlistment, appear, together with some person employed in the recruiting service, before a justice of the peace, not being an officer of the marines, for the purpose of being attested as a marine, or of objecting to his enlistment.

discharge to the commandant of the division for which the marine shall have enlisted; but if the recruit so dissenting shall not allege or shall not satisfy the justice that the enlistment was effected irregularly, nevertheless upon repayment of the enlisting money and of any sum received by him in respect of pay, and of a further sum of twenty shillings as smart money, he shall be entitled to be discharged; and the sum paid by such recruit upon his discharge shall be kept by the justice, and, after deducting therefrom one shilling as the fee for reporting the payment to the Secretary of the Admiralty and to the said commandant, shall be paid over to any person belonging to the recruiting party who may demand the same; and the justice who shall discharge any recruit shall in every case give a certificate thereof, signed with his hand, to the recruit, specifying the cause thereof.

60. If the recruit on appearing before a justice shall not dissent from his enlistment, or dissenting shall within twenty-four hours return and state that he is unable to pay the same mentioned in the last section, he shall be attested as follows: the justice, or some person deputed by him, shall read to the recruit the questions set forth in the form contained in the schedule to this Act annexed, cautioning him that if he fraudulently make any false answer thereto he shall be liable to be punished as a rogue and vagabond, and the answers of the recruit shall be recorded opposite to the said questions, and the justice shall require the recruit to make and sign the declaration in the said form, and shall then administer to him the oath of allegiance in the said form; and when the recruit shall have signed the said declaration and taken the oath, the justice shall attest the same by his signature, and shall deliver to the recruiting officer the declaration so signed and attested, and the fee for such attestation, including the declaration and oath, shall be one shilling and no more; and any recruit shall, if he so wish, be furnished with a certified copy of the above-mentioned declaration by the officer who finally approved of him for the service.

61. No recruit, unless he shall have been attested or shall have received pay other than enlisting money, shall be liable to be tried by court-martial; but if any recruit, previously to his being attested, shall by means of any false answer obtain enlistment money, or shall make any false statement in his declaration, or shall refuse to answer any question duly authorised to be put to recruits for the purpose of filling up such declaration, or shall refuse or neglect to go before a justice for the purposes aforesaid, or having dissented from his enlistment shall wilfully omit to return and pay such money as aforesaid, in any of such cases it shall be lawful for any two justices within the United Kingdom, or for any one justice out of the United Kingdom, acting for the county, district, city, burgh, or place where any such recruit shall at any time happen to be, when he shall be brought before them or him, if in England, to adjudge him to be a rogue and vagabond, and to sentence him to be punished accordingly, and if in Scotland or Ireland, or elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions, to be imprisoned with hard labour in any prison or house of correction for any period not exceeding three calendar months; and the declaration made by the recruit on his attestation, purporting to be made and subscribed in accordance with the schedule to this Act annexed, shall, in the absence of proof to the contrary, be deemed sufficient evidence of such recruit having represented the several particulars as stated in such declaration; and any marine who shall have given any false answer at the time of or relative to his becoming a marine shall forfeit all pay, wages, and other moneys, be the same naval, marine, or otherwise, which he might otherwise have been entitled to for any period of service in the Royal Marines.

62. Any recruit who shall have been attested, and who shall afterwards be discovered to have given any wilfully false answer to any question directed to be put to recruits, or shall have made any wilfully false statement in the declaration herein-before mentioned, shall be liable, at the discretion of the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners, to be proceeded against before two justices in the manner herein-before mentioned, and by them sentenced accordingly, or to be tried by a district or garrison court-martial for the same, and punished in such manner as such court shall direct.

63. If any recruit shall abscond so that it is not possible immediately to apprehend and bring him before a justice for attestation, the recruiting party shall produce to the justice before whom the recruit ought regularly to have been brought for that purpose a certificate of the name and place of residence and description of such recruit and of his having absconded, and shall declare the same to be true, and the justice to whom such certificate shall be produced shall transmit a duplicate thereof to the Secretary of the Admiralty in order that the same may appear in the Police Gazette.

64. If any man while belonging to a militia regiment shall enlist in and be attested for Her Majesty's Royal Marines, he shall be liable to be tried before a court-martial on a charge of desertion; but it shall be lawful for the Secretary of State for War, on the confession thereof by such militiaman, or on other proof thereof, to order that in lieu of his being so tried he shall be subjected to a stoppage of one penny a day of his pay for eighteen calendar months, to be applied as the Secretary of State for War shall direct, and further to determine whether such man shall be returned to his militia regiment after such sum shall have been made good, or shall be deemed to be a marine in the same manner as he would have been if he had not been a militiaman at the time of his attestation: Provided also, that every soldier who, while belonging to a militia regiment, enlisted in Her Majesty's Royal Marines, whether such enlistment took place before or after the passing of the Mutiny Act, 1860, shall reckon service towards the performance of his limited engagement from the date of his attestation: Provided also, that any such soldier shall not reckon service for pension until the day on which his engagement for the militia would have expired; but if any such soldier shall, subsequently to his enlistment, have rendered long, faithful, or gallant service, the Lords Commissioners of the Admiralty may, upon the special recommendation of the Deputy Adjutant General, Royal Marines, order that he may reckon service for pension from the date of his attestation.

65. If any non-commissioned officer of the volunteer permanent staff shall enlist into the Royal Marines, he may be tried and punished as a deserter, but if he confesses his desertion the Secretary of State for War, instead of causing him to be tried and punished as a deserter, may cause him to be returned to his service on the volunteer permanent staff, to be there put under stoppages from his pay until he has repaid the amount of any bounty received by him, and the expenses attending his enlistment, and also the value of any arms, &c. issued to him while on the volunteer permanent staff, and not duly delivered up by him, or may cause him to be held to his service in the Royal Marines, with a direction, if it seems fit, that his term of service therein shall not be reckoned for pension until the time when his engagement on the volunteer permanent staff would have expired, and may further cause him to be put under stoppages of one penny a day of his pay until he has repaid the expense attending his engagement or attestation on the volunteer permanent staff, and also the value of any arms, clothing, or appointments issued to him while on the volunteer permanent staff, and not duly delivered up by him.

martial, and to be sentenced to such punishment, other than death or penal servitude, as such court may award.

67. It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace or person exercising the office of a magistrate within any of Her Majesty's dominions abroad, or for the officer commanding any ship or vessel of Her Majesty on the books of which any marine may be borne, or on board of which any such marine may be, or, notwithstanding anything in this Act contained, for the commanding officer of any battalion or detachment of Royal Marines, whether borne on the books of any one of Her Majesty's ships or otherwise, to re-engage or enlist and attest out of Great Britain or Ireland any marine desirous of re-enlisting or re-engaging into Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, if such marine be considered by such commanding officer, justice, or magistrate a fit person to continue in Her Majesty's service; and every such commanding officer, justice, or magistrate shall have the same powers in that behalf as are by this or any other Act of Parliament given to justices of the peace in the United Kingdom for all such purposes of enlistment and attestation, and any marine so re-enlisted or re-engaged shall be deemed to be an attested marine.

68. Any person duly bound as an apprentice who shall enlist into Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, and shall falsely state to the magistrate before whom he shall be carried and attested that he is not an apprentice, shall be deemed guilty of obtaining money by false pretences, if in England or in Ireland, and of falsehood, fraud, and wilful imposition, if in Scotland, and shall after the expiration of his apprenticeship, whether he shall have been so convicted and punished or not, be liable to serve as a marine according to the terms of the enlistment, and if on the expiration of his apprenticeship he shall not deliver himself up to some officer authorised to receive recruits, such person may be taken as a deserter from Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces.

69. No master shall be entitled to claim an apprentice who shall enlist as a marine in Her Majesty's service unless such master shall, within one calendar month next after such apprentice shall have left his service, go before some justice, and take the oath mentioned in the schedule to this Act annexed, and at the time of making his claim produce to the officer under whose command the recruit shall be the certificate of such justice of his having taken such oath, which certificate such justice is required to give in the form in the schedule to this Act annexed; nor unless such apprentice shall have been bound, if in England, for the full term of five years, (not having been above the age of fourteen years when so bound,) and, if in Ireland or in the British Isles, for the full term of five years at the least, (not having been above the age of sixteen when so bound,) and, if in Scotland, for the full term at least of four years, by a regular contract or indenture of apprenticeship, duly extended, signed, and tested, and binding on both parties by the law of Scotland prior to the period of enlistment, and unless such contract or indenture in Scotland shall, within three months after the commencement of the apprenticeship and before the period of enlistment, have been produced to a justice of the peace of the county in Scotland wherein the parties reside, and there shall have been endorsed thereon by such justice a certificate or declaration signed by him specifying the date when and the person by whom such contract or indenture shall have been so produced, which certificate or declaration such justice of the peace is hereby required to endorse and sign; nor unless any such apprentice shall, when claimed by such master, be under twenty-one years of age: Provided always, that any master of an apprentice indentured for the sea service shall be entitled to claim and recover him in the form and manner above directed, notwithstanding such apprentice may have been bound for a less term than five or four years as aforesaid: Provided also, that any such master who shall give up the indentures of apprenticeship within one month after the enlisting of such apprentice shall be entitled to receive, to his own use, so much of the bounty payable to such recruit as shall not have been paid to such recruit before notice given of his being an apprentice.

70. No apprentice claimed by his master shall be taken from any division, detachment, recruiting party, or ship of Her Majesty, except under a warrant of a justice residing near and within whose jurisdiction such apprentice shall then happen to be, and before whom he shall be carried; and such justice shall inquire into the matter upon oath (which oath he is hereby empowered to administer), and shall require the production and proof of the indenture, and that notice of the said warrant has been given to the commanding officer, and a copy thereof left with some officer or non-commissioned officer of the party, and that such person so enlisted declared that he was no apprentice; and such justice, if required by such officer or non-commissioned officer, shall commit the offender to the common gaol of the county, division, or place for which such justice is acting, and shall keep the indenture to be produced when required, and shall bind over such person as he may think proper to give evidence against the offender, who shall be tried at the next or at the sessions immediately succeeding the next general or quarter sessions of such county, division, or place, unless the court shall for just cause put off the trial; and the production of the indenture, with the certificate of the justice that the same was proved, shall be sufficient evidence of the said indenture; and every such offender in Scotland may be tried by the judge ordinary in the county or stewartry in such and the like manner as any person may be tried in Scotland for any offence not inferring a capital punishment: Provided always, that any justice not required as aforesaid to commit such apprentice may deliver him to his master.

71. No person who shall for six months, and either before or after the passing of this Act, have received pay and be borne on the strength and pay list of any division of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces, of which the last quarterly pay list (if produced) shall be evidence, or been borne as a marine on the books of any of Her Majesty's ships in commission, shall be entitled to claim his discharge on the ground of error or illegality in his enlistment or attestation or re-engagement, or on any other ground whatsoever, but, on the contrary, every such person shall be deemed to have been duly enlisted, attested, or re-engaged, as the case may be.

72. It shall also be lawful for the Lord High Admiral, and also for the said Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, to give orders for withholding the pay of any officer or marine for any period during which such officer or marine shall be absent without leave, or improperly absent from his duty, or in case of any doubt as to the proper issue of pay to withhold it from the parties aforesaid until the said Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners shall come to a determination upon the case.

73. And whereas there is and may be occasion for the marching and also for the quartering of the Royal Marine forces when on shore: Be it enacted, that during the continuance of this Act, upon the order or orders in writing in that behalf under the hand of the Lord High Admiral, or the hands of two or more of the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral for the time being, or upon the order or orders in writing in that behalf under the hand of any colonel commandant or commanding officer of any division of Royal Marines, it shall be lawful for all constables and other persons specified in this Act in Great Britain and Ireland, and they are hereby required, to billet the officers and marines, whether marching or otherwise, and all staff and field officers horses, and all bät and baggage horses belonging to the Royal Marine forces, when on actual service, not exceeding for each officer the number for which forage is or shall be allowed by Her Majesty's regulations, in victualling houses and other houses specified in this Act, taking care in Ireland not to billet less than two men in any one house; and they shall be received by the occupiers of the houses in which they are so billeted, and be furnished by such victualler with proper accommodation in such houses, and with a separate bed for each marine, or if any victualler shall not have sufficient accommodation in the house upon which a marine is billeted, then in some good and sufficient quarters to be provided by such victualler in the immediate neighbourhood, and in Great Britain with diet and small beer, and in Great Britain and Ireland with stables, oats, hay, and straw for such horses as aforesaid, paying and allowing for the same the several rates herein-after provided; and at no time when marines are on their march shall any of them be billeted above one mile from the place mentioned in the route, care being always taken that the billets be made out for the less distant houses in which suitable accommodation can be found before making out billets for the more distant; and in all places where marines shall be billeted in pursuance of this Act, the officers and their horses shall be billeted in one and the same house, except in case of necessity; and the constables are hereby required to billet all marines on their march in the manner required by this Act upon the occupiers of all houses within one mile of the place mentioned in the route, and whether they be in the same or a different county in like manner in every respect as if such houses were all locally situated within such place: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to authorise any constable to billet marines out of the county to which such constable belongs when the constable of the adjoining county shall be present and shall undertake to billet the due proportion of men in such adjoining county; and no more billets shall at any time be ordered than there are effective marines and horses present to be billeted; all which billets, when made out by such constables, shall be delivered into the hands of the commanding officer present, or to the non-commissioned officer on the spot; and if any person shall find himself aggrieved by having an undue proportion of marines billeted in his house, and shall prefer his complaint, if against a constable or other person not being a justice, to one or more justices, and if against a justice, then to two or more justices, within whose jurisdiction such marines are billeted, such justices respectively shall have power to order such of the marines to be removed and to be billeted upon other persons as they shall see cause; and when any horses belonging to the officers of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces shall be billeted upon the occupiers of houses who shall have no stables, then, upon a written requisition of the officer commanding such marines, the constable is hereby required to billet the horses upon some other person or persons having stables, and who are by this Act liable to have officers and marines billeted upon them, and any two or more justices of the peace may order a proper allowance to be paid by the persons relieved to the persons receiving such horses, or to be applied in the furnishing the requisite accommodation; and the commanding officer may exchange any man or horse billeted in any place with another man or horse billeted in the same place, for the convenience or benefit of the service, provided the number of men and horses do not exceed the number at that time billeted on such houses respectively, and the constables are hereby required to billet such men and horses so exchanged accordingly; and it shall be lawful for any justice, at the request of any officer or non-commissioned officer commanding any marines requiring billets, to extend any route, or to enlarge the district within which billets shall be required, in such manner as shall appear to be most convenient to Her Majesty's service: Provided also, that to prevent or punish all abuses in billeting marines, it shall be lawful for any justice, within his jurisdiction, by warrant or order under his hand, to require any constable to give him an account in writing of the number of officers and marines who shall be quartered by such constables, together with the names of the persons upon whom such officers and marines are billeted, stating the street or place where such persons dwell, and the signs, if any, belonging to the houses: Provided always, that no officer shall be compelled or compellable to pay anything for his lodging where he shall be duly billeted: Provided also, that no justice being an officer of Royal Marines shall directly or indirectly be concerned in billeting or appointing quarters under this Act.

74. The innholder or other person on whom any marine is billeted in Great Britain shall, if required by such marine, furnish him for every day on the march, and for a period not exceeding two days, when halted at any intermediate place upon the march, and for the day of the arrival at the place of final destination, with one hot meal in each day, the meal to consist of such quantities of diet and small beer as may be fixed by Her Majesty's regulations, not exceeding one pound and a quarter of meat previously to being dressed, one pound of bread, one pound of potatoes or other vegetables, and two pints of small beer, and vinegar, salt, and pepper, and for such meal the innholder or other person furnishing the same shall be paid the sum of tenpence, and twopence halfpenny for a bed; and all innholders and other persons on whom marines may be billeted in Great Britain or Ireland, except when on the march in Great Britain, and entitled to be furnished with the hot meal as aforesaid, shall furnish such marines with a bed and with candles, vinegar, and salt, and shall allow them the use of fire, and the necessary utensils for dressing and eating their meat, and shall be paid in consideration thereof the sum of fourpence per diem for each marine; and the sum to be paid to the innholder or other person on whom any of the horses belonging to Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces shall be billeted, in Great Britain or Ireland, for ten pounds of oats, twelve pounds of hay, and eight pounds of straw, shall be one shilling and ninepence per diem for each horse; and every officer or non-commissioned officer commanding a division, detachment, or party shall every four days, or before they shall quit their quarters if they shall not remain so long as four days, settle and discharge the just demands of all victuallers or other persons upon whom such officers, marines, or horses are billeted, out of the pay and subsistence of such officers and marines, before any part of the said pay or subsistence be paid or distributed to them respectively; and if any such officer or non-commissioned officer shall not pay the same as aforesaid, then, upon complaint and oath made thereof by any two witnesses before two justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, liberty, city, borough, or place where such quarters were situate, sitting in quarter or petty sessions, the Secretary of the Admiralty is hereby required, upon certificate of the justices before whom such oath shall be made of the sum due to complainant, to order payment of the amount which shall be charged against such officer; and in case of any marines being suddenly ordered to march, and of the commanding officer or non-commissioned officer not being enabled to make payment of the sums due on account of billets, every such officer or non-commissioned officer shall before his departure make up the account with every person upon whom any such marines may have been billeted, and sign a certificate thereof; which account and certificate, on being transmitted to the Secretary of the Admiralty, shall be immediately paid, and charged to the account of such officer or non-commissioned officer.

75. For the regular provision of carriages for the Royal Marine forces and their baggage on their marches in Great Britain and Ireland, all justices of the peace within their several jurisdictions, being duly required thereunto by order of the said Lord High Admiral, or two or more of the Commissioners for executing the said office of Lord High Admiral for the time being, or any colonel commandant or commanding officer of a division of Royal Marines, shall, on the production of such order, or a copy thereof certified by the commanding officer, to them or any one or more of them, by the officer or non-commissioned officer of the party of marines so ordered to march, issue a warrant to any constable having authority to act in any place from, through, near, or to which such marines shall be ordered to march, (for each of which warrants a fee of one shilling only shall be paid,) requiring him to provide the carriages, horses, oxen, and drivers therein mentioned, (allowing sufficient time to do the same,) specifying the places from and to which the said carriages shall travel, and the distance between the places, for which distance only so specified payment shall be demanded, and which distance shall not, except in cases of pressing emergency, exceed the day's march prescribed in the order of route, and shall in no case exceed twenty-five miles; and the constables receiving such warrant shall order such persons as they shall think proper, having carriages, to furnish the requisite supply, who are hereby required to furnish the same accordingly; and in case sufficient carriages cannot be procured within the proper jurisdiction, any justice of the next adjoining jurisdiction shall, by a like course of proceeding, supply the deficiency; and in order that the burden of providing carriages may fall equally, and to prevent inconvenience arising from there being no justice residing near the place where marines may be quartered on the march, the justice or justices residing nearest to such place shall cause a list to be made out, at least once in every year, of all persons liable to furnish such carriages, and of the number and description of their said carriages, which list shall at all seasonable hours be open to the inspection of the said persons, and shall by warrant under his hand authorise the constables within his jurisdiction to give orders to provide carriages without any special warrant from him for that purpose, which orders shall be valid in all respects; and all orders for such carriages shall be made from such lists in regular rotation, so far as the same can be done.

76. In every case in which the whole distance for which any carriage shall be impressed shall be under one mile the rate of a full mile shall be paid; and the rates to be paid for carriages impressed shall be, in Great Britain, for every mile which a waggon with four or more horses, or a wain with six oxen or four oxen and two horses, shall travel, one shilling; and for every mile any waggon with narrow wheels, or any cart with four horses carrying not less than fifteen hundredweight, shall travel, ninepence; and for every mile every other cart or carriage with less than four horses, and not carrying fifteen hundredweight, shall travel, sixpence; and in Ireland for every hundredweight loaded on any wheel carriage one halfpenny per mile; and in Great Britain such further rates may be added, not exceeding a total additional sum per mile of fourpence, threepence, or twopence to the respective rates of one shilling, ninepence, and sixpence, as may seem reasonable to the justices assembled at general sessions for their respective districts, or to the recorder at the sessions of the peace of any municipal city, borough, or town; and the order of such justices or recorder shall specify the average price of hay and oats at the nearest market town at the time of fixing such additional rates, and the period for which the order shall be enforced, not exceeding ten days, beyond the next general sessions; and no such order shall be valid unless a copy thereof, signed by the presiding magistrate and one other justice, or by the recorder, shall be transmitted to the Secretary of the Admiralty within three days after the making thereof; and also in Great Britain when the day's march shall exceed fifteen miles, the justice granting his warrant may fix a further reasonable compensation not exceeding the usual rate of hire fixed by this Act; and when additional rates or compensation shall be granted, the justice shall insert in his own hand in the warrant the amount thereof, and the date of the order of sessions, if fixed by sessions, and the warrant shall be given to the officer commanding as his voucher; and the officer or non-commissioned officer demanding carriages by virtue of the warrant of a justice shall, in Great Britain, pay down the proper sums into the hands of the constable providing carriages, who shall give receipts for the same on unstamped paper; and, in Ireland, the officers or non-commissioned officers as aforesaid shall pay the proper sums to the owners or drivers of the carriages, and one third part of such payment shall be made before the carriage be loaded, and all the said payments in Ireland shall be made, if required, in presence of a justice or constable; and no carriage shall be liable to carry more than thirty hundredweight in Great Britain, and in Ireland no car shall be liable to carry more than six hundredweight, and no dray more than twelve hundredweight; but the owner of such carriages in Ireland consenting to carry a greater weight shall be paid at the same rate for every hundredweight of the said excess; and the owners of such carriages in Ireland shall not be compelled to proceed, though with any less weight, under the sum of threepence a mile for each car and sixpence a mile for each dray; and the loading of such carriages in Ireland shall be first weighed, if required, at the expense of the owner of the carriage, if the same can be done in a reasonable time without hindrance of Her Majesty's service: Provided also, that a cart with one or more horses, for which the furnisher shall receive ninepence a mile, shall be required to carry fifteen hundredweight at the least; and that no penalties or forfeitures in any Act relating to highways or turnpike roads in the United Kingdom shall apply to the number of horses or oxen or weight of loading of the aforesaid carriages, nor shall any such carriages on that account be stopped or detained; and whenever it shall be necessary to impress carriages for the march of marines from Dublin at least twenty-four hours notice of such march, and in case of emergency as long notice as the case will admit, shall be given to the Lord Mayor of Dublin, who shall summon a proportional number of cars and drays at his discretion out of the licensed cars and drays and other cars and drays within the county of the said city, and they shall by turns be employed on this duty at the prices and under the regulations herein-before mentioned; and no country cars, drays, or other carriages coming to markets in Ireland shall be detained or employed against the will of the owners in carrying the baggage of marines on any pretence whatever.

77. It shall be lawful for the Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, or the Lord Lieutenant or Chief Governors of Ireland, by their or his orders distinctly stating that a case of emergency doth exist, signified by the Secretary of the Admiralty, or, if in Ireland, by the chief secretary or under secretary, or the first clerk in the military department, to authorise any commanding officer of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces in any district or place, or to the chief acting agents for the supply of stores and provisions, by writing under his hand, reciting such order of the Lord High Admiral, or the said Commissioners, or Lord Lieutenant or Chief Governors aforesaid, to require all justices within their several jurisdictions in Great Britain and Ireland to issue their warrants for the provision, not only of waggons, wains, carts, and cars kept by or belonging to any person and for any use whatsoever, but also of saddle horses, coaches, postchaises, chaises, and other four-wheeled carriages kept for hire, and of all horses kept to draw carriages licensed to carry passengers, and also of boats, barges, and other vessels used for the transport of any commodities whatsoever upon any canal or navigable river as shall be mentioned in the said warrants, therein specifying the place and distance to which such carriages or vessels shall go; and on the production of such requisition, or a copy thereof certified by the commanding officer, to such justice, by any officer of the corps ordered to be conveyed, such justice shall take all the same proceedings in regard to such additional supply so required on such emergency as he is by this Act required to take for the ordinary provision of carriages; and all provisions whatsoever of this Act as regards the procuring of the ordinary supply of carriages, and the duties of officers and non-commissioned officers, justices, constables, and owners of carriages in that behalf, shall be to all intents and purposes applicable for the providing and payment according to the rates of posting or of hire usually paid for such other description of carriages or vessels so required on emergency, according to the length of the journey or voyage in each case, but making no allowance for post horse duty, or turnpike, canal, river, or lock tolls, which duty or tolls are hereby declared not to be demandable for such carriages and vessels while employed in such service or returning therefrom; and it shall be lawful to convey thereon not only the baggage, provisions, and military stores of such detachment, but also the officers, marines, servants, women, children, and other persons of and belonging to the same.

78. It shall be lawful for the justices of the peace assembled at their quarter sessions to direct the treasurer to pay, without fee, out of the public stock of the county or riding, or if such public stock be insufficient then out of moneys which the said justices shall have power to raise for that purpose, in like manner as for county gaols and bridges, such reasonable sums as shall have been expended by the constables within their respective jurisdictions for carriages and vessels, over and above what was or ought to have been paid by the officer requiring the same, regard being had to the season of the year and the condition of the ways by which such carriages and vessels are to pass; and in Scotland such justices shall direct such payments to be made out of the rogues money and assessments directed and authorised to be assessed and levied by an Act passed during the session holden during the twentieth and twenty-first years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter seventy-two.

79. It shall be lawful for the said Lord Lieutenant or other Chief Governor for the time being of Ireland to depute, by warrant under his hand and seal, some proper person to sign routes in cases of emergency for the marching of any of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces in Ireland in the name of such Lord Lieutenant or Chief Governor.

80. All officers and marines on duty or on their march, being in proper uniform, dress or undress, and their horses and baggage, and all recruits marching by route, and all prisoners under military escort, and all carriages and horses belonging to Her Majesty or employed in her service under the provisions of this Act, or in any of Her Majesty's colonies, when employed in conveying any such persons as aforesaid or their baggage, or returning from conveying the same, shall be exempted from the payment of any duties and tolls on embarking or disembarking from or upon any pier, wharf, quay, or landing place, or in passing along or over any turnpike or other roads or bridges, otherwise demandable by virtue of any Act already passed or hereafter to be passed, or by virtue of any prescription, grant, or custom, or by virtue of any Act or ordinance, order or direction, of any colonial legislature or other authority in any of Her Majesty's colonies; and if any toll collector shall demand or receive toll from any marine officer or marine on duty or on their march who shall be in proper uniform, dress or undress, or for their horses, and who by this Act is exempted from payment thereof, or from any recruits marching by route, or from any prisoners under military escort, or for any carriages or horses belonging to Her Majesty or employed in Her service under the provisions of this Act, when conveying persons or baggage, or returning therefrom, every such collector shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds; provided that nothing herein contained shall exempt any boats, barges, or other vessels employed in conveying the said persons, horses, baggage, or stores along any canal from payment of tolls in like manner as other boats, barges, and vessels are liable thereto, except when employed in cases of emergency as herein mentioned; and that when any officers or marines on service shall have occasion in the march by route to pass regular ferries in Scotland, the officer commanding shall be at liberty to pass over with his marines as passengers, paying for himself and each marine one half only of the ordinary rate payable by passengers, or he shall be at liberty to hire the ferry boat for himself and his party, debarring all others for that time, and shall in such case pay only half the ordinary rate for such boat.

81. Every marine upon being discharged from the service shall be entitled to an allowance (not exceeding in any case the amount of twenty-one days marching money) to enable him to reach his home, or the place at which he shall at the time of his discharge decide to take up his residence, such place not being at a greater distance from the place of his discharge than the place of his original enlistment, which allowance shall be calculated according to the distance he has to travel: Provided always, that no person who shall purchase his own discharge, or be discharged on account of misbehaviour, or at his own desire, before the expiration of his period of service, shall be entitled to any such allowance.

82. If any constable or other person who by virtue of this Act shall be employed in billeting any officers or marines in any part of the United Kingdom shall presume to billet any such officer or marine in any house not within the meaning of this Act without the consent of the owner or occupier thereof; or shall neglect or refuse to billet any officer or marine on duty when thereunto required in such manner as is by this Act directed, provided sufficient notice be given before the arrival of such marines; or shall receive, demand, or agree for any money or reward whatsoever in order to excuse any person from receiving any such officer or marine; or shall quarter any of the wives, children, men or maid servants of any officer or marine in any such houses against the consent of the occupiers; or shall neglect or refuse to execute such warrants of the justices as shall be directed to him for providing carriages, horses, or vessels, or shall demand more than the legal rates for the same; or if any person ordered by any constable in manner herein-before directed to provide carriages, horses, or vessels shall refuse or neglect to provide the same according to the orders of such constable, or shall demand more than the legal rates for the same, or shall do any act or thing by which the execution of any warrants for providing carriages, horses, or vessels shall be hindered; or if any person liable by this Act to have any officer or marine quartered on him shall refuse to receive any such officer or marine, or to afford him proper accommodation or diet in the house of such person in which he is quartered, or to furnish the several things directed to be furnished to officers and marines, or shall neglect or refuse to furnish good and sufficient stables, together with good and sufficient oats, hay, and straw in Great Britain and Ireland, for each horse, in such quantities and at such rates as herein-before provided, or if any innkeeper or victualler not having good and sufficient stables shall refuse to pay over to the person or persons who may provide stabling such allowance by way of compensation as shall be directed by any justice of the peace, or shall pay any sum of money to any marine on the march in lieu of furnishing in kind the diet and small beer to which such marine is entitled; such constable, victualler, and other person respectively shall forfeit for every offence, neglect, or refusal any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings; and if any person shall personate or represent himself to be a marine or marine recruit with the view of fraudulently obtaining a billet or money in lieu thereof, he shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than twenty shillings.

83. If any officer of Royal Marines shall take upon him to quarter men otherwise than is allowed by this Act, or shall use or offer any menace or compulsion to or upon any justice, constable, or other civil officer tending to deter and discourage any of them from performing any part of their duty under this Act, or to do anything contrary thereto, such officer shall for every such offence, being thereof convicted before any two or more justices of the county by the oath of two credible witnesses, be deemed and taken to be ipso facto cashiered, and shall be utterly disabled to hold any military employment in Her Majesty's service; provided a certificate of such conviction be forthwith transmitted by the said justices to the Secretary of the Admiralty, and that the conviction be affirmed at some quarter sessions of the peace for the said county to be held next after the expiration of three months after such certificate shall have been transmitted as aforesaid; and if any marine officer shall take or knowingly suffer to be taken from any person any money or reward for excusing the quartering of officers or marines, or shall billet any of the wives, children, men or maid servants of any officer or marine in any house against the consent of the occupier, he shall for any of the said offences, upon being convicted thereof before a general court-martial, be cashiered; and if any officer shall constrain any carriage to travel beyond the distance specified in the justice's warrant; or shall not discharge the same in due time for their return home on the same day if it be practicable, except in the case of emergency for which the justice shall have given licence, or shall compel the driver of any carriage to take up any marine or servant (except such as are sick) or any woman to ride therein, except in cases of emergency as aforesaid, or shall force any constable, by threatening words, to provide saddle horses for himself or servants, or shall force horses from their owners, or in Ireland shall force the owner to take any loading until the same shall be first duly weighed, if the same shall be required, and can be done within a reasonable time, or shall, contrary to the will of the owner or his servant, permit any person whatsoever to put any greater load upon any carriage than is directed by this Act, he shall forfeit for every offence any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings.

84. Every marine officer or marine who shall, without warrant from one or more of Her Majesty's justices, forcibly enter into or break open the dwelling house or outhouse of any person whomsoever in pursuit of any deserters, shall, upon due proof thereof, forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

85. Any person who shall knowingly detain, buy, or exchange, or otherwise receive from any marine or marine deserter, or any other person acting for or on his behalf, upon any account or pretence whatsoever, or who shall solicit or entice any marine or marine deserter, or shall be employed by any marine or marine deserter, knowing him to be such, to sell any arms, ammunition, medals for good conduct, or distinguishment, or other service, marine clothes, or military furniture, or any other articles which, according to the custom of the marine corps, are generally deemed regimental or divisional necessities, or any provisions, sheets, or other articles used in barracks or provided under barrack regulations, whether on shore or afloat, and whether the marine or marine deserter or other person be or be not borne on the books of any one of Her Majesty's ships, or be or be not embarked, or who shall have in his or her possession or keeping any arms, ammunition, medals, marine clothes, or military furniture, or any other articles which, according to the custom of the marine corps, are generally deemed regimental or divisional necessities, or any provisions, spirits, sheets, or other articles used in barracks or provided under barrack regulations, and shall not give a satisfactory account how he or she came by the same, or shall change or cause the colour or mark of any such clothes, appointments, necessities, sheets, or other articles to be changed or defaced, or who shall pawn, sell, or deposit in any place or with any person such articles of regimental necessities, with or without the consent of such marine, shall forfeit for every such offence any sum not exceeding twenty pounds, together with treble the value of all or any of the several articles; and if any person having been at any time previously convicted of either of the above offences under this or any previous Act for the regulation of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces while on shore shall afterwards be guilty of any such offence, he or she shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding twenty pounds but not less than five pounds, and the treble value of all or any of the several articles, and shall, in addition to such forfeiture, be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned only, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for such term not exceeding six calendar months as the convicting justice or justices shall think fit; and upon any information against any person for a second or any subsequent offence, a copy of the former conviction, certified by the proper officer having the care or custody of such conviction, or any copy of the same proved to be a true copy, shall be sufficient evidence to prove such former conviction; and if any credible person shall prove, on oath before a justice of the peace or person exercising like authority according to the laws of that part of Her Majesty's dominions in which the offence shall be committed, a reasonable cause to suspect that any person has in his or her possession or on his or her premises any property of the description herein-before described, on or with respect to which any such offence shall have been committed, such justice may and he is hereby required to grant a warrant to search for such property as in the case of stolen goods; and if upon such search any such property shall be found, the same shall and may be seized by the officer charged with the execution of such warrant, who shall bring the offender in whose possession the same shall be found before the same or any other justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law.

86. Every person (except such recruiting parties as may be stationed under military command) who shall cause to be advertised, posted, or dispersed bills for the purpose of procuring recruits or substitutes for the Royal Marines, or shall open or keep any house or place of rendezvous or office, or receive any person therein under such bill or advertisement as connected with the marine recruiting service, or shall directly or indirectly interfere therewith, without permission in writing from the Lord High Admiral or the said Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, shall forfeit for every such offence a sum not exceeding twenty pounds.

87. For the better preservation of the game and fish in or near places where any officer shall at any time be quartered, every officer who shall, without leave in writing from the person or persons entitled to grant such leave, take, kill, or destroy any game or fish within the United Kingdom, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of five pounds.

88. If any action shall be brought against any member or members of a court-martial to be assembled under the authority of this Act, or of any Act heretofore passed for the regulation of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces while on shore, in respect of the proceedings or the sentence thereof, or against any other person, for anything done in pursuance or under the authority of this Act, or of any Act heretofore passed for the regulation of Her Majesty's Royal Marine forces while on shore, the same shall be brought in some one of the Courts of Record at Westminster or Dublin, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, and shall be commenced within six months next after the cause of action shall arise, and it shall be lawful for the defendant or defendants therein, or in any such action now pending, to plead thereto the general issue, and to give all special matter in evidence on the trial; and if the verdict shall be for the defendant in any such action, or if the plaintiff shall become nonsuit or suffer any discontinuance thereof, or if, in Scotland, the court shall see fit to assize the defendant or dismiss the complaint, the court in which the matter shall be tried shall allow the defendant treble costs, for the recovery of which he shall have the like remedy as in other cases where costs by the laws of this realm are given to defendants.

89. All offences for which any pecuniary penalty or forfeiture not exceeding twenty pounds, over and above any forfeiture of value or treble value, is by this Act imposed, shall and may be heard and determined by any justice of the peace in or near to the place where the offence shall be committed, or where the offender may at any time happen to be; and all such penalties and forfeitures, and forfeiture of value and treble value, and also the reasonable costs attending the prosecution, to be duly ascertained and awarded by such justice, shall and may be enforced and recovered in the same manner as any pecuniary penalties may be recovered under the provisions of an Act passed in the twelfth year of the reign of Her Majesty, intituled "An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary convictions and orders:" Provided always, that in all cases in which there shall not be sufficient goods whereon any penalty or forfeiture or treble value can be levied, the offender may be committed and imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding six calendar months; which said recited Act shall be used and applied in Scotland and in Ireland for the recovery of all such penalties and forfeitures or treble value as fully to all intents as if the said recited Act had extended to Scotland and Ireland, anything in the said recited Act, or in an Act passed in the fourteenth and fifteenth years of the reign of Her Majesty Queen Victoria, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Acts regulating the proceedings at petty sessions, and the duties of justices of the peace out of quarter sessions, in Ireland," to the contrary notwithstanding; and all such offences committed in the British Isles, or in any of Her Majesty's dominions other than the United Kingdom, may be determined, and the penalties and forfeitures of value or treble value recovered, before any justices of the peace or persons exercising like authority, according to the laws of Her Majesty's dominions in which the offence shall be committed or the offender may at any time happen to be, and for default of payment the offender shall be punished as if the offence had been committed in the United Kingdom; and all penalties and forfeitures by this Act imposed exceeding twenty pounds shall be recovered by action in some of the Courts of Record at Westminster or in Dublin, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, and in no other court in the United Kingdom, and may be recovered in the British Isles or in any other part of Her Majesty's dominions, in any of the royal or superior courts of such isles or other parts of Her Majesty's dominions.

90. One moiety of every such penalty or forfeiture, not including any treble value of any articles, shall go to the person who shall inform or sue for the same, and the other moiety, together with the treble value of such articles, or, where the offence shall be proved by the person who shall inform, then the whole of the penalty and such treble value, shall be paid over and applied in such manner as the Lord High Admiral or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral shall direct, anything in an Act passed in the sixth year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to provide for the regulation of municipal corporations in England and Wales," or in any other Act or Acts of Parliament, to the contrary notwithstanding; and every justice who shall adjudge any penalty under this Act shall within four days thereafter at the furthest report the same, and his adjudication thereof, to the Secretary of the Admiralty.

91. It shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace, within their respective jurisdictions, to grant or transfer any licence for selling by retail any spirit, beer, wine, cider, or perry to any person or persons applying for the same who shall hold any canteen under any lease thereof, or by agreement with any department or other authority under the said Lord High Admiral, or the Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral for the time being, without regard to the time of year, or any notices or certificates required by any Act in respect of such licences; and the commissioners of excise or their proper officers within their respective districts shall also grant or transfer any such licence as aforesaid; and such persons holding such canteens, and having such licences as aforesaid, may sell therein victuals, and all such excisable liquors as they shall be licensed and empowered to sell, without being subject for so doing to any penalty or forfeiture whatever.

92. Any justice in the United Kingdom, within whose jurisdiction any marine shall be quartered on shore, may summon such marine before him, which summons such marine is hereby required to obey, and take his examination in writing upon oath touching the place of his last legal settlement; and such justice shall give an attested copy of such examination to the person so examined, to be by him delivered to his commanding officer to be produced when required; which said examination and such attested copy thereof shall be at any time admitted as good and legal evidence as to such legal settlement before any justice or at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, although such marine be dead or absent from the kingdom: Provided always, that in case any marine shall be again summoned to make oath as aforesaid, then, on such examination or such attested copy being produced, such marine shall not be obliged to make any other or further oath with regard to his legal settlement, but shall leave with such justice a copy of such examination or a copy of such attested copy of examination, if required: Provided also, that when no such examination shall have been required, the statement made on oath by the recruit on his attestation of his place of birth shall be taken to be his last place of settlement until legally disproved.

93. All oaths and declarations which are authorised or required by this Act may be administered (unless where otherwise provided) by any justice of the peace or other person having authority to administer oaths and declarations; and any person giving false evidence, or taking a false oath or declaration where an oath or declaration is authorised or required to be taken by this Act, and being thereof duly convicted, shall be deemed guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury, and shall be liable to such pains and penalties as persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are or may be subject and liable to; and every commissioned officer convicted before a general court-martial of perjury shall be cashiered, and every marine or other person amenable to the provisions of this Act found guilty thereof by a general or other court-martial shall be punished at the discretion of such court.

94. All clauses and provisions in this Act contained relating to England shall be construed to extend to Wales and to the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed; and the provisions of this Act shall apply to all persons who are or shall be commissioned or in pay as an officer of Royal Marines, or who are or shall be listed or in pay as a non-commissioned officer or marine; and all clauses and provisions relating to marines shall be construed to include non-commissioned officers and drummers, unless when otherwise provided; and all clauses and provisions relating to justices shall be construed to extend to all magistrates authorised to act as such in their respective jurisdictions; and all the powers given to and regulations made for the conduct of constables, and all penalties and forfeitures for any neglect thereof, shall extend to all tithingmen, headboroughs, and such like officers, and to all inspectors or other officers of police, and to high constables and other chief officers and magistrates of cities, towns, villages, and places in England and Ireland, and to all justices of the peace, magistrates of burghs, commissioners of police, and other chief officers and magistrates of cities, towns, villages, parishes, and places in Scotland, who shall act in the execution of this Act; and all powers and provisions for billeting marines in victualling houses shall extend and apply to all inns, hotels, livery stables, alehouses, and to the houses of sellers of wine by retail, whether British or foreign, to be drunk in their own houses or places thereunto belonging, to all houses of persons licensed to sell beer, ale, porter, cider, or perry by retail, to be consumed or drunk in their dwelling houses or premises, and to all houses of persons selling brandy, spirits, strong

An Act to amend "The Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1856," and for other purposes relating to the Preservation of Peace in Ireland.

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the "Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1856," and to make further and better provisions for the protection of life and property in Ireland:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall apply to Ireland only, and shall continue in operation until the first day of August one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

3. In this Act—

The term "Lord Lieutenant" shall mean the Lord Lieutenant and the Lords Justices or other chief governors or governor of Ireland for the time being:

The terms "Chief Secretary" and "Under Secretary" shall mean respectively the Chief Secretary and Under Secretary of the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland:

The term "chief officer of police" shall mean within the police district of Dublin metropolis any one of the commissioners of police for the said district, and elsewhere any inspector, sub-inspector, head or other constable of the Royal Irish Constabulary acting as chief officer of constabulary within any district or town:

The term "county" shall extend to and include county of a city and county of a town, and a riding of a county, and a borough:

The term "grand jury" shall include every corporation, committee, council, and body authorized to make presentments:

The term "secretary to the grand jury" shall include town clerk :

The term "assizes" shall include presenting term :

The term "judge of assize," in the application of this Act to the county or county of the city of Dublin, shall include the Court of Queen's Bench at Dublin or any Judge of the said Court :

The term "petty sessions" shall include a divisional police office of Dublin metropolis :

The term "principal Act" shall mean the parts of the Act passed in the session of Parliament held in the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for the better prevention of crime and outrage in certain portions of Ireland until the first day of December one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine, and to the end of the then next session of Parliament," which are continued by and are in force and operation under the Peace Preservation Act :

The term "Peace Preservation Act" shall mean "The Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1856," and the Acts amending and continuing the same now in force :

The term "gunpowder" shall include gun-cotton and any other explosive matter used for the discharge of fire-arms :

The terms "constabulary" and "Royal Irish Constabulary" in the Peace Preservation Act, and in this Act, shall respectively include "Dublin Metropolitan Police:"

The terms "threatening letter" and "threatening notice" shall respectively mean and include any letter or notice written, posted, published, circulated, sent, delivered, or uttered contrary to the provisions of any of the enactments following ; that is to say,

1 & 2 Will. 4. c. 44. s. 3.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 97. s. 50.

24 & 25 Vict. c. 100. s. 16.

PART I.

AMENDMENT OF PEACE PRESERVATION ACT.

4. In Part I. and Part II. of this Act the terms following shall have the meanings herein-after assigned to them respectively :

The term "proclaimed district" shall mean any county, county of a city, county of a town, or any barony or baronies, half barony or half baronies, in any county at large, or any district of less extent, to which the provisions of the Peace Preservation Act are declared to apply by proclamation under the said Act, so long as such proclamation shall be in force :

The term "notice" shall mean any notice published under the provisions of section eleven of the principal Act, requiring persons in a proclaimed district to deposit arms at a place therein named :

The term "arms" shall include any cannon, gun, revolver, pistol, or other fire-arm, or any part or parts of any cannon, gun, revolver, pistol, or other fire-arm, or any sword, cutlass, pike or bayonet, or any bullets, gunpowder, or ammunition.

5. Part I. of this Act, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, shall be construed as one with the Peace Preservation Act.

6. Notwithstanding anything in the principal Act, it shall not be lawful for—

Any person, although duly licensed to kill game, to carry arms, or, after notice, to have arms, in any proclaimed district, unless such person shall also have a licence granted to him under the Peace Preservation Act to carry and have arms in such district, or in some other proclaimed district ; or for—

Any person (except justices of the peace, persons in Her Majesty's naval or military service, or in the coast guard service, or in the service of the revenue, or in the police or Royal Irish Constabulary, or special constables) to carry, or, after notice, to have any fire-arm of the description known as a revolver in any proclaimed district, although he shall have a licence granted to him under the Peace Preservation Act to carry and have arms within such district, unless such licence shall describe such fire-arm as a revolver and specially permit the carrying or having the same.

7. So much of section two of the Peace Preservation Act as enacts that the punishment to which parties are liable, on conviction, under the ninth and twelfth sections of the principal Act, shall thenceforth be reduced from imprisonment for any period not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, to imprisonment for any period not exceeding one year, shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

Any person guilty of carrying or having arms contrary to the provisions of the said ninth and twelfth sections of the principal Act, or contrary to the provisions of the sixth section of this Act, or any of them, shall be liable on conviction thereof to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any term not exceeding two years.

8. All the powers and provisions now in force of an Act passed in the Parliament of Ireland in the session of Parliament held in the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, intituled "An "Act to prevent and punish tumultuous risings of persons within this kingdom, and for other purposes therein mentioned," and also of another Act amending the same, passed in the Parliament of the United Kingdom in the second year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to amend an Act passed in the Parliament of Ireland in the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of His Majesty King George the Third, intituled 'An Act to prevent and punish tumultuous risings of persons within this kingdom, and for other purposes therein mentioned,'" shall extend and apply to every proclaimed district, and upon any trial or proceeding under the said last-recited Acts, or either of them, it shall not be necessary to prove that any such district was at the time of the commission of any offence or offences against the said last-recited Acts or either of them in a state of public or general disturbance, or insurrectionary movement, or that any such offence or offences, or the circumstances attending the same, was or were of an insurrectionary nature or character: Provided always, that the court or judge before which or whom any person or persons shall be tried for any offence against the provisions of section two of the said Act of the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, shall, where such offence has been committed at any time after sunset and before sunrise, or before the hour of six in the forenoon though the sun should be arisen, have power and authority to sentence such prisoner to penal servitude for any term not exceeding seven years.

9. From and after the passing of this Act, section fourteen of the principal Act shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

10. It shall be lawful for any person to whom any warrant to search for and seize arms in any proclaimed district is directed, under the provisions of section thirteen of the principal Act, and for constables and other persons acting in their aid or assistance, within the space of three months next after the date of any such warrant, at such time and times and as often as they think fit, to enter into any house or place in order to execute such warrant, and in case admittance shall be refused to any such constables or persons as aforesaid, or shall not be obtained by them within a reasonable time after it has been first demanded, then to enter by force into such house or place in order to execute such warrant.

11. Every maker of or dealer in gunpowder, his agent or servant, shall, before selling or delivering any gunpowder to any person (except justices of the peace, persons in Her Majesty's naval or military service, or in the coast guard service, or in the service of the revenue, or in the police or Royal Irish Constabulary, or special constables) in any proclaimed district, require such person to produce a licence authorizing him to make, deal in, or sell gunpowder, or to have or carry arms, or in case such gunpowder shall be wanted for the purpose of mining or blasting, a certificate, under the hands of one or more justices of the peace, that such gunpowder is to be applied to such purpose, and in the case of gunpowder required for mining or blasting there shall be endorsed on such certificate by the person selling or delivering the same the quantity so sold or delivered, and the time of sale, and such person shall sign his name thereto; and if any maker of or dealer in gunpowder, his agent or servant, shall sell or deliver any gunpowder to any person without the production of such a licence or certificate, or shall neglect to endorse on such certificate the quantity so sold or delivered and the time when, and to sign his name thereto, he shall for the first such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds, and for any second offence he shall be liable to a further penalty not exceeding ten pounds.

12. It shall not be lawful for any person in a proclaimed district to sell to, or to make, mend, repair, or keep for any person (except justices of the peace, persons in Her Majesty's naval or military service, or in the coast guard service, or in the service of the revenue, or in the police or Royal Irish Constabulary, or special constables) not duly licensed to have arms any gun, revolver, pistol, or other fire-arm, or any part thereof; and if any person shall sell, make, mend, repair, or keep any gun, revolver, pistol, or other fire-arm, or part thereof, contrary to the provisions of this Act, every such offender shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds.

13. Where in any proclaimed district it shall appear that any felony or misdemeanor was committed, any justice of the peace in such district, although no person may be charged before him with the commission of such offence, shall have full power and authority to summon to the police office, or to the place where the petty sessions for the district in which said felony or misdemeanor has been committed are usually held, any person within his jurisdiction who, he shall have reason to believe, is capable of giving material evidence concerning any such felony or misdemeanor, and to examine such person on oath concerning any such felony or misdemeanor, and, if he shall see cause, to bind such person by recognizance to appear and give evidence at the next petty sessions, quarter sessions, or assizes. And in case any person who shall be summoned for that purpose shall neglect or refuse to appear or shall refuse to take such oath, or having taken such oath shall refuse to answer such questions concerning the said felony or misdemeanor as shall then be put to him, or shall refuse to enter into such recognizance, such person may be dealt with in the manner provided by section thirteen of The Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851, in the case of a witness to whom a summons was issued and who neglects or refuses to attend or who refuses to give evidence or be bound by recognizance so to do.

Every summons under this section may be in the Form (I.) in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect.

14. Where any person in a proclaimed district shall be charged with any offence contrary to the provisions of sections nine and twelve of the principal Act, or of section six of this Act, or of any of them, the admission to bail of such person shall be subject to the like conditions as the admission to bail under section sixteen of The Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851, of persons charged with any of the offences specified in sub-section one of the said section.

15. Whenever any information in writing and on oath is made before a justice that there is reasonable cause to suspect that any threatening letter or threatening notice was written by any person, and that there is or are to be found in any house or other place belonging to or under the control of such person in a proclaimed district any document or documents in his handwriting, it shall be lawful for such justice to issue a warrant to search such house or place for such document or documents; and every such warrant shall be in the Form (II.) in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, and shall be directed to and executed by the like parties, and in like manner, and subject to the like conditions in every respect, so far as the same are applicable, as if the same were a warrant to search issued under "The Summary Jurisdiction (Ireland) Act, 1851."

16. From and after the passing of this Act, so much of the Peace Preservation Act as relates to the posting of proclamations, abstracts, and notices shall be and the same is hereby repealed.

17. Printed copies of every proclamation, abstract, and notice under the provisions of the Peace Preservation Act shall be posted on, or near to, the door of one place of public worship, if there be such, in every parish, and of every police station and barrack within the district named in such proclamation, by some one or more of the constables or sub-constables of the Royal Irish Constabulary; and after any constable or sub-constable has posted any such printed copies within such district, or any part thereof, he shall verify such posting by a solemn declaration annexed to a printed copy of such proclamation and abstract or notice, to be made before a justice of the peace in the Form (VII.) specified in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect; and such constable or sub-constable shall deposit such printed copy and declaration annexed thereto with the clerk of the peace for the county within which such district or any part thereof is situate or his deputy; and the said clerk of the peace or deputy shall sign and date the same, and shall preserve the same amongst the records of the said county; and the production from the custody of such clerk of the peace or deputy of the said printed copy of such proclamation and abstract or notice, and declaration annexed thereto, or of a copy of the same respectively, signed and certified as a true copy by such clerk of the peace or deputy, shall in all proceedings, and for all purposes whatsoever, be conclusive evidence that the said proclamation and abstract or notice were or was duly posted within the district or part of the district in said declaration mentioned.

PART II.

Special Proclamations.

18. Whenever in the judgment of the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of the Privy Council of Ireland, it is necessary for the better prevention of crime and outrage that the provisions of this part of this Act shall apply to any proclaimed district, it shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of the said Privy Council, to declare by proclamation, in this part of this Act called a special proclamation, to be published in the Dublin Gazette, that from and after a day to be named therein the provisions of this part of this Act shall be in force within the same; and thereupon such district shall be a district specially proclaimed within the meaning of this part of this Act: Provided always, that it shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant, by a new proclamation, to be made by and with the advice of the Privy Council of Ireland, to be published in the Dublin Gazette, to revoke any special proclamation issued under this part of this Act, as to the whole or any part of the district named in such special proclamation; and thereupon such special proclamation shall, from and after a day to be named in such new proclamation, stand and be revoked, so far as such new proclamation shall purport to revoke the same.

19. It shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant, by notice in writing, to be signed by the Chief or Under Secretary and to be published in the Dublin Gazette, at any time or times to revoke all licences granted under the Peace Preservation Act to have or carry arms in any district specially proclaimed, and thereupon all such licences shall stand revoked, and shall be null and void to all intents and purposes.

Every such last-mentioned notice shall require every person to whom any licence thereby revoked was granted, and to whom a new licence shall not be granted under the said Peace Preservation Act, to deposit and leave on or before a day to be named in such notice, at a place or places to be named in such notice, or at the nearest police station or barrack, the arms for the having or carrying of which such revoked licence was granted; and such arms shall be kept, detained, and dealt with in the manner prescribed by section eleven of the principal Act in reference to arms deposited and left as therein mentioned.

Every person to whom any licence so revoked was granted, and to whom a new licence as aforesaid has not been granted, and who shall after the day named in such notice as aforesaid carry or have arms within such district, shall be guilty of carrying or having arms contrary to the provisions of the principal Act; provided always, that no person carrying any arms for the purpose only of depositing and leaving the same as hereinbefore mentioned shall by reason thereof be deemed or taken to be a person carrying or having any arms contrary to the provisions of the principal Act.

20. Printed copies of every special proclamation or notice under the authority of this part of this Act shall be posted on or near to the door of one place of public worship, if there be such, in every parish, and of every police station and barrack, within the district named in such special proclamation, by some one or more of the constables or sub-constables of the Royal Irish Constabulary, and at the foot of every copy of any such special proclamation so posted as aforesaid an abstract of the provisions of this part of this Act shall be printed for the information of all persons affected by the said enactments; and after any constable or sub-constable has posted any such printed copies within such district, or any part thereof, he shall verify such posting by a solemn declaration annexed to such printed copy of such special proclamation and abstract or notice, to be made before a justice of the peace in the Form (VIII.) specified in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, and such constable or sub-constable shall deposit such printed copy and declaration annexed thereto with the clerk of the peace for the county within which such district or any part thereof is situate, or his deputy, and the said clerk of the peace or deputy shall sign and date the same, and shall preserve the same amongst the records of the said county, and the production from the custody of such clerk of the peace or deputy of the said printed copy of such special proclamation, and abstract or notice and declaration annexed thereto, or of a copy of the same respectively signed and certified as a true copy by such clerk of the peace or deputy, shall in all proceedings, and for all purposes whatsoever, be conclusive evidence that the said proclamation and abstract or notice were duly posted within the district or part of the district in said declaration mentioned.

21. The production of a printed copy of the Dublin Gazette, purporting to be printed and published by the Queen's authority, containing the publication of any special proclamation, under this part of this Act, shall be conclusive evidence of all such facts and circumstances as were or shall be necessary to authorize the issuing of any such special proclamation; and every such special proclamation shall be deemed and taken in all such courts respectively, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, to have been issued in conformity with this part of this Act.

22. A copy of every special proclamation issued under the authority of this Act shall be laid before each House of Parliament within fourteen days of the date of the same, if Parliament be then assembled, and if not then within fourteen days of the next subsequent meeting of Parliament.

Arrest of Persons out at night under suspicious Circumstances.

23. It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to arrest and bring before him, or cause to be arrested or brought before him, or for any constable, peace officer, or other person to arrest and bring before any justice of the peace any person who, within any district specially proclaimed and under suspicious circumstances, shall be in the fields, streets, highways, or elsewhere out of his dwelling or place of abode at any time from one hour after sunset until sunrise, and any such justice may order such person to be brought or appear before the justices of the peace assembled at the next petty sessions for the district in which such person was arrested, and may in the meantime commit such person to gaol or admit him to bail as to such justice shall seem fit, and the justices at such petty sessions assembled shall examine the person so brought or appearing before them, who shall in such case be a competent witness, and shall examine such other witnesses and receive such evidence as may be brought before them touching the charge, and if upon such hearing the justices shall believe that such person was not out of his house upon some lawful occasion or business, such justices may commit him to gaol, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding six calendar months.

Closing of Public Houses by order of Lord Lieutenant.

24. It shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant, by order in writing to be signed by the Chief or Under Secretary, whenever he thinks fit, to direct that any person who, in any district specially proclaimed, keeps any house or place for the sale of wine, spirits, ale, beer, or cyder by retail, shall, during the period specified in such order, close such house or place at sunset or at such time after sunset as shall be specified in such order; and every such order shall be served upon the person to whom the same is directed by delivering to him a copy of such order, or if he cannot be conveniently met with by leaving such copy at the house or place to which such order relates; and any person upon whom such order shall be served, and who shall keep open such house or other place in violation of such order, shall on conviction be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds, and to imprisonment for any period not exceeding three calendar months.

Power to arrest Strangers.

25. It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to arrest and bring before him, or cause to be arrested or brought before him, or for any constable, peace officer, or other person to arrest and bring before any justice of the peace, any stranger sojourning or wandering in any district specially proclaimed, and for such justice to examine him respecting his place of abode, the place from whence he came, his manner of livelihood, and his object or motive for remaining or coming into the county, city, or town in which he shall be found, and unless he shall answer to the satisfaction of such justice, or produce sufficient security for his good behaviour, such justice shall commit him to gaol, there to remain until he shall find such security as aforesaid, or until he shall be discharged by a justice of the peace: Provided always, that such justice shall, without delay, after such committal, transmit to the Lord Lieutenant a true and faithful report of such committal, and the grounds and reasons thereof, the amount of bail required, with the examination of the prisoner, and the reasons alleged by him why he should not be committed; which such justice is required to take down in writing, in order that such person may be detained or discharged, as to the Lord Lieutenant may seem right.

Summary Proceedings in certain Cases.

26. When any person is charged in any district specially proclaimed before any justices of the peace assembled at petty sessions with any offence contrary to any of the enactments specified in Part I. of the Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed, it shall be lawful for such justices, if they so think fit, to hear and determine the charge in a summary way, and if the person charged shall confess the same, or if such justices, after hearing the whole case for the prosecution and for the defence, shall find the charge to be proved, then it shall be lawful for such justices to convict the person charged, and commit him to gaol, there to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, for any period not exceeding six calendar months; and if they find the offence not proved they shall dismiss the charge, and make out and deliver to the person charged a certificate under their hands, stating the fact of such dismissal; and every such conviction and certificate respectively may be in the Forms (III.) and (IV.) in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect: Provided that if such justices are of opinion that the charge, from any circumstances, should be made the subject of prosecution by indictment, rather than be disposed of summarily, such justices shall, instead of summarily adjudicating thereon, deal with the case in all respects as if this Act had not been passed. If upon the hearing of the charge such justices shall be of opinion that there are circumstances in the case which render it inexpedient to inflict any punishment, they shall have power to dismiss the person charged, without proceeding to a conviction.

Every person who obtains a certificate of dismissal or is convicted under this Act shall be released from all further or other criminal proceedings for the same cause.

27. In every case of summary proceeding under this Act the person accused shall be allowed to make his full answer and defence, and to have all witnesses examined and cross-examined by counsel or attorney.

28. Any magistrate appointed to act at the police courts of the police district of Dublin metropolis, and sitting at a police court within the said district, or any stipendiary magistrate sitting in petty sessions, may do alone all acts by this part of this Act authorized to be done by justices of the peace at petty sessions.

Where any justices of the peace at petty sessions are by this part of this Act authorized to do any act, such act may be done by any two or more of such justices, provided always, that one of such justices shall be a stipendiary magistrate.

Change of Venue.

29. Where any indictment found in any county specially proclaimed shall be removed by Certiorari into Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Dublin, and issue shall be joined on such indictment, the said court, in term time or in the vacation, shall, upon the application of Her Majesty's Attorney General for Ireland in that behalf, order a suggestion to be entered upon the record directing such issue to be tried in such county as the court shall name, and specified in such suggestion other than the county in which such indictment was found, and such suggestion may be in the Form (V.) in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed or to the like effect, and shall have the same force and effect as any suggestion by which if made on the record the issue joined on any such indictment might now by law be tried in a county other than the county in which such indictment was found, and thereupon all proceedings may be taken according to the practice of the said court for the trial of the person charged in such indictment, and such person may be tried, in the county in that behalf specified in such suggestion, and such proceedings and trial, and every verdict given at such trial, and any judgment thereon, shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes as if such person had been tried in the county in which the offence charged in such indictment was committed.

In case of any such indictment so removed as aforesaid the days or times allowed or required according to the practice of the court for appearing or pleading, or in any notice of motion or in any writ of Habeas corpus, or in or for any other step or proceeding relating to such indictment, shall run in vacation as well as in term time, and any order may be made in reference to such indictment or the proceedings thereon by the said Court of Queen's Bench, or by a judge thereof in vacation as well as in term time; and for the purposes of this section the said Court of Queen's Bench shall have power to sit in vacation.

PART III.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Newspapers.

30. Where it appears to the Lord Lieutenant that any newspaper printed or published, or purporting to be printed or published, in Ireland, after the passing of this Act, contains any treasonable or seditious engraving, matter, or expressions, or any incitements to the commission of any felony, or any engraving, matter, or expressions encouraging or propagating treason or sedition, or inciting to the commission of any felony, the Lord Lieutenant may cause a notice, in the Form (IX.) in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, to be published in the Dublin Gazette, and if such newspaper purports to be printed or published at any known house in Ireland, a true copy of such notice shall be served at such house on the proprietor or publisher or printer of any such newspaper, either personally or by leaving the same with his wife, child, servant, or any other inmate aged sixteen years or upwards; provided that if such service cannot be effected, or admission into the said house or premises cannot be obtained, then such service may be effected by posting on some conspicuous part upon such house or premises a true copy of such notice between the hours of eight o'clock a.m. and six o'clock p.m.; and where any person shall have served or posted any such notice as aforesaid, he shall verify such service or posting by a solemn declaration annexed to a printed copy of the Dublin Gazette containing such notice, to be made before a justice of the peace in the Form X. specified in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect; and such printed copy and declaration annexed thereto shall be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county within which such house is situate, or his deputy; and the said clerk of the peace, or deputy, shall sign and date the same, and shall preserve the same amongst the records of the said county; and the production from the custody of such clerk of the peace, or deputy, of the said printed copy of such Gazette and declaration annexed thereto, or of a copy of the same respectively, signed and certified as a true copy by such clerk of the peace or deputy, shall in all proceedings, and for all purposes whatsoever, be conclusive evidence that the said notice was duly served or posted.

The production of a printed copy of the Dublin Gazette, purporting to be printed and published by the Queen's authority, containing the publication of any such notice as aforesaid, shall be conclusive evidence in all courts of justice in Ireland of all such facts and circumstances as were or shall be necessary to authorize the issuing of any such notice; and every such notice shall be deemed and taken in all such courts respectively, to all intents and purposes whatsoever, to have been issued in conformity with this part of this Act.

If, when seven days have expired in the case of a paper published at intervals of not less than a week, or two days in the case of a paper published at intervals of less than one week, after the publication of such notice and the service or posting thereof (if such there be), the said newspaper, or any newspaper belonging to or published by the same proprietor, printer, or publisher, or printed or published at the same premises, or under the same control or management, contains any treasonable or seditious engraving, matter, or expressions, or any incitements to the commission of any felony, or any engraving, matter, or expressions encouraging or propagating treason or sedition, or inciting to the commission of any felony, all printing presses, engines, machinery, types, implements, utensils, paper, and other plant and materials used or employed, or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or found in or about any premises where such newspaper is printed or published, and all copies of such newspaper, wherever found in Ireland, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

Where after the passing of this Act any newspaper printed elsewhere than in Ireland is published or circulated in Ireland, and contains any such engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements as aforesaid, all copies of such newspaper, wherever found in Ireland, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

31. Where it appears to the Lord Lieutenant that any such newspaper after the publication and service of such notice, where such publication and service shall by this part of this Act be required, or that any such newspaper printed elsewhere than in Ireland and published or circulated in Ireland as aforesaid, contains any such engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements, as aforesaid, he may, by warrant under his hand in the Form (VI.) in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, empower any person or persons to whom such warrant is addressed, or his or their assistants, to enter upon any premises where the newspaper specified in said warrant, and containing such engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements as aforesaid, is printed or published, or where any printing press, engine, machine, types, implements, utensils, paper, or other plant or materials used or employed or intended to be used or employed, or suspected to be or to have been used or employed, for the printing or publishing of such newspaper as aforesaid, shall be, or shall be suspected to be, or where any copy of such newspaper as aforesaid is sold, distributed, or published, or suspected to be sold, distributed, or published, or kept or deposited for sale, distribution, or publication, or suspected to be kept or deposited for sale, distribution, or publication, and to search for, seize, and take away such printing presses, engines, machines, types, papers, implements, utensils, and plant, and every copy of such newspaper as aforesaid; and no action, save as herein-after mentioned, shall be brought or maintained against any person for the issuing of such warrant, or for any entry, search, or seizure, or other act, matter, or thing done in pursuance or under the authority of any such warrant as aforesaid: Provided always, that any chattels so seized shall be kept and detained until the determination of any action brought as herein-after mentioned; and if such action shall be determined in favour of the plaintiff, being the owner of or entitled to the possession of such chattels, such chattels shall be restored to such plaintiff, and the jury shall take such restoration into consideration in mitigation of the damages to be awarded by them in such action.

32. Where any person duly authorized by warrant, as aforesaid, to enter any premises, or his assistants, shall demand admittance, and give notice of such warrant, and the door of any house, room, shop, warehouse, outhouse, building, or other premises shall not be opened within reasonable time after the making of such demand, it shall be lawful for any such person, or his assistants, to break open such door, and to enter thereat, for the purpose of making such search or seizure as aforesaid, and if any person shall refuse to permit any person duly authorized in that behalf, or his assistants, to enter such premises for the purpose of making any such search or seizure, or shall resist, obstruct, molest, prevent, or hinder any such person, or his assistants, as aforesaid, in the making of any such search, or in the seizing or taking away of any goods, chattels, articles, matters, and things which may be lawfully seized, or otherwise in the execution of any warrant under this Act, such person shall be deemed guilty of assaulting or wilfully resisting or obstructing a peace officer in the due execution of his duty, and on conviction shall be punished accordingly.

33. Where any person, who but for the provisions of this part of this Act would be entitled to maintain an action for any search or seizure made under the authority of a warrant under this part of this Act, feels aggrieved by any search or seizure made under the authority of any such warrant, he may within two calendar months after such search or seizure commence an action in any of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Common Law at Dublin against the person or persons to whom such warrant is addressed, or any of the assistants of such person or persons, and may claim damages on the ground that such search or seizure was illegal, because a notice was not published or served according to the provisions of this part of this Act, or because the newspaper specified in such warrant and in reference to which such search or seizure was made did not contain any engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements, by reason of which such newspaper was forfeited to Her Majesty under the provisions of this part of this Act, or because the chattels seized were not copies of such newspaper, or because the printing presses, engines, machinery, types, implements, utensils, paper, plant, and materials were not used or employed or intended to be used or employed, or reasonably suspected to be or to have been used or employed or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or because the chattels seized were not found in or about any premises where such newspaper as aforesaid was printed, published, sold, or distributed, or kept or deposited for publication, sale, or distribution, or reasonably suspected to be published, sold, or distributed, or kept for publication, sale, or distribution; and the defendant in such action may plead in defence to such action the defence in the Schedule (C.) to this Act annexed, or a defence to the like effect; and such action shall, except as is herein specially provided, be prosecuted, tried, and determined in every respect as any other action of tort brought in any of the said superior courts; and any copy or copies of the said newspaper published before the search or seizure complained of, and after the passing of this Act, may be given in evidence by the defendant in aid of the proof of the nature or tendency of the engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements used in the said newspaper, in reference to which the search or seizure complained of was made; and in the event of the jury finding that such notice was duly published and served as aforesaid, or that such newspaper did contain any such engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements as aforesaid, or that the chattels seized were copies of such newspaper, or that the printing presses, engines, machinery, types, implements, utensils, paper, plant, and materials were used or employed or intended to be used or employed, or reasonably suspected to be or to have been used or employed or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or that the chattels seized were found in or about any premises where such newspaper as aforesaid was printed, published, sold, or distributed, or kept or deposited for publication, sale, or distribution, or reasonably suspected to be published, sold, or distributed, or kept for publication, sale, or distribution, the defendant shall be entitled to a verdict, and to his costs of suit; and if they shall find that such notice was not duly published and served as aforesaid, or that such newspaper did not contain any such engraving, matter, expressions, or incitements as aforesaid, or that the chattels seized were not copies of such newspaper, or that the printing presses, engines, machinery, types, implements, utensils, paper, plant, and materials were not used or employed or intended to be used or employed, or reasonably suspected to be or to have been used or employed or intended to be used or employed, in or for the purpose of printing or publishing such newspaper, or that the chattels seized were not found in or about any premises where such newspaper as aforesaid was printed, published, sold, or distributed, or kept or deposited for publication, sale, or distribution, or reasonably suspected to be published, sold, or distributed, or kept for publication, sale, or distribution, the plaintiff shall be entitled to a verdict, and after final judgment to such damages as may be lawfully awarded by the jury, together with his costs of suit according to the practice of the court applicable to such an action; and where any such judgment shall be given for the plaintiff, there shall be paid to the plaintiff out of moneys to be provided by Parliament the damages awarded him, together with his costs of suit.

34. The term "newspaper" in this part of this Act shall include two or more copies of a newspaper bearing the same name, whether published on the same day or on different days, and shall also include any series of newspapers, whether printed on one day or different days, or with one name or with different names.

Regulations as to Gunpowder and Fire-arms.

35. It shall not be lawful for any person not being duly licensed to manufacture gunpowder to deal in or sell gunpowder by retail or otherwise in Ireland, unless he shall have obtained a licence for that purpose from the Lord Lieutenant, or the chief or under secretary; and no such licence shall be granted without a certificate, under the hands and seals of two or more justices of the peace in petty sessions assembled for the district within which such person shall carry on such trade, that such person is a proper person to obtain the same, and that his stores are secure and fit for the purpose of keeping gunpowder; and any person who shall sell gunpowder, by retail or otherwise, without being licensed for that purpose, or without being licensed to manufacture gunpowder as aforesaid, shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds, and all gunpowder, and every cask or vessel in which the same shall be contained, found in the possession of, or in any house or other place belonging to such person, shall be forfeited to the use of Her Majesty.

36. Every maker or manufacturer of gunpowder, and every person dealing in or selling the same, in Ireland, shall within thirty days after the passing of this Act return an account to the chief officer of police in the district in which he resides of all the stock of gunpowder then in his possession, describing the place or places where the same is kept, and the packages containing the same, and shall provide a book in which such quantity shall be entered, and shall from time to time, in the first week of every calendar month, make or cause to be made a like return and like entry; and every such maker or manufacturer or dealer in gunpowder, by wholesale or retail, shall also enter or cause to be entered in a separate book to be by him for that purpose provided, and distinguished by the name of "the book of sales," an account of every parcel of gunpowder sold or disposed of or delivered, with the time when and to whom; and it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, or any chief officer of police, or any person duly authorized by such justice or officer, at all reasonable times to have access to such books, and to examine the stock of such maker or seller of gunpowder, and compare and balance the same with the account kept in such books; and the several chief officers of police (except the chief officers of police within the police district of Dublin metropolis), to whom such accounts and returns shall be rendered, shall, from time to time, transmit the same to the inspector general of constabulary in Ireland as they may be by him directed; and if any such maker or manufacturer of, or dealer in, gunpowder shall not make such returns, or shall not truly make the same, or shall not keep such books, or shall not truly make, or cause to be made, such entries therein, or shall not, after demand, produce such books to any person hereby or by the said persons duly authorized as aforesaid, or shall not permit any such person to inspect the same, or to examine his stock, he shall, for the first offence, be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds, and for any subsequent offence shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

37. Every person who shall make, repair, or sell any gun, pistol, revolver, or other fire-arm, or any part thereof, shall keep a book in which he shall enter or cause to be entered a monthly account of all such articles made, sold, or repaired by such person, and to or for whom and the respective times when the same were sold or repaired, and shall every month return a copy of such account to the chief officer of police in the district, and the chief officer of police of every district (except the police district of Dublin metropolis) shall transmit the same to the inspector general of constabulary in Ireland; and it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, or chief officer of police, or any person duly authorized by such justice or officer, at all reasonable times, on demand, to have access to such book, to examine the same; and if any person making, repairing, or selling any such article shall not keep such book, or shall not truly enter or cause to be entered therein such account as aforesaid, or shall omit to make any such return as aforesaid, or shall not, after demand, produce such book to any person hereby or by the said persons duly authorized as aforesaid, or shall not permit such person to examine the same, he shall for the first offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds, and for any subsequent offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

Power to apprehend Witnesses absconding.

38. Whenever any person shall be bound by recognizance to give evidence at any trial, or at the hearing of any charge, it shall be lawful for any justice, if he shall see fit, upon the application of any person, and upon information being made in writing, and on oath by such person that the person so bound to give evidence is about to abscond or has absconded, to issue his warrant for the arrest of such person so bound to give evidence, and afterwards, when such person has been arrested upon being satisfied that the ends of justice would otherwise be defeated, to commit such person when so arrested to gaol until such trial or hearing, or until he shall produce another sufficient surety or other sufficient sureties, as the case may be, in like manner as before.

Power to Grand Jury to present Compensation in certain Cases.

39. Where it shall appear that any person has been murdered, maimed, or otherwise injured in his person, and that such murder, maiming, or injury is a crime of the character commonly known as agrarian, or arising out of any illegal combination or conspiracy, the grand jury of the county within which such murder, maiming, or injury shall have been committed shall, upon application, as herein-after directed, present such sum or sums of money as they shall think just and reasonable to be paid to the personal representative of the person so murdered, or to the person so maimed or injured, having regard to the rank, degree, situation, and circumstances of such person; such money to be raised off the county at large or the barony, half-barony, or other district in which such murder or maiming shall respectively have been perpetrated, at the discretion of such grand jury; and every such presentment shall be made and levied in the like manner, and shall, save as is by this Act expressly provided, be subject to the like conditions as any presentment made under the authority of section one hundred and six of an Act passed in the session of Parliament held in the sixth and seventh years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, chapter one hundred and sixteen, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws relating to the presentment of public money by Grand Juries in Ireland." No such presentment shall be traversed, but shall be subject to appeal as herein-after mentioned.

Applications may be made by the personal representative or one of the next of kin of any person murdered, or by any person maimed or injured, or by the Crown solicitor of the county, or by any person in that behalf authorized by the Lord Lieutenant.

Any person intending to apply for a presentment under the provisions of this section in respect of any murder, maiming, or injury, shall publish a notice stating his intention of so applying in the newspaper in which grand jury notices for the county are published, and shall serve notice in writing of such murder, maiming, or injury, and of such his intention, upon the high constable of the barony, or upon two of the principal inhabitants of the parish wherein such offence shall have been committed, and at the nearest police station, fourteen days at least before the holding of the next assizes; and copies of such notice shall within the same time be affixed on or immediately adjacent to the doors of every police barrack within such barony, and every such person shall lodge with the high constable and secretary of the grand jury within the same time an application setting forth the loss or damage occasioned by such offence, and stating the time and place when and where such murder, maiming, or injury took place, and the amount of damage claimed, and such application shall be scheduled by the secretary of the grand jury, and shall be delivered by him to the grand jury at the next assizes.

Where between the commission of any such offence as aforesaid, and the holding of the next assizes, there shall not be sufficient time for the service of the notices herein-before required, such application shall be made at the assizes which shall be holden next but one after the time of the commission of such offence.

In case such grand jury shall refuse to make such presentment, or in case the person or persons applying for such presentment shall be dissatisfied with the amount presented, or in case any person chargeable with any of the moneys so presented shall be desirous of opposing such presentment, such applicant or ratepayer may appeal to one of the going judges of assize, who shall inquire into such application or presentment and the grounds and reasons for passing or refusing the same, and if such judge shall be reasonably satisfied that such presentment ought to be made, he shall affirm or make such presentment for such amount as to him shall seem fit, and the presentment shall be valid and effectual for such amount to all intents and purposes, and shall and may be levied after such assizes; but if the judge shall be of opinion that there was no ground for such presentment he shall disallow or refuse to make the same, and the same, if passed by the grand jury, shall thereupon be null and void; and in case the judge shall be of opinion that the appeal was reasonable he may award the reasonable costs in that behalf to the appellant, which shall be added to the amount of such presentment if the same shall be affirmed or made, and if such presentment shall be disallowed or refused the amount of such costs shall be levied as if lawfully presented at such assizes by such grand jury off the county at large.

40. Every penalty recoverable under the provisions of this Act shall be recoverable in a summary way, with respect to the police district of Dublin metropolis subject and according to the provisions of any Act regulating the powers and duties of justices of the peace for such district or of the police of such district, and with respect to other parts of Ireland, before a justice or justices of the peace sitting in petty sessions, subject and according to the provisions of The Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851, and any Act amending the same, and with the like right and power of appeal as in the said Act is given and provided for, and shall be applied according to the provisions of The Fines Act (Ireland), 1851, or any Act amending the same.

41. It is hereby declared and enacted, that the parts of Acts in Part II. of the Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed do not and shall not apply to any information filed in Her Majesty's Court of Queen's Bench at Dublin, or to any indictment found in or removed by the writ of Certiorari into the said Court, or to the trial of any issue joined on any such information or indictment; and it is hereby declared and enacted, that the term the "court house of any county" as used in section four of The Juries Act (Ireland), 1868, does and shall, so far as relates to the county of Dublin, include the Court of Queen's Bench, or any Court within the building known as the Four Courts at Dublin.

An Act to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Coinage and Her Majesty's Mint. (4th April 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to consolidate and amend the law relating to the Coinage and Her Majesty's Mint:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Coinage Act, 1870."

2. In this Act—

The term "Treasurer" means the Lord High Treasurer for the time being, or the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being, or any two of them;

The term "the Mint" means, except as expressly provided, Her Majesty's Royal Mint in England;

The term "British possession" means any colony, plantation, island, territory, or settlement within Her Majesty's dominions and not within the United Kingdom; and

The term "person" includes a body corporate.

3. All coins made at the mint of the denominations mentioned in the first schedule to this Act shall be of the weight and fineness specified in that schedule, and the standard trial plates shall be made accordingly.

If any coin of gold, silver, or bronze, but of any other denomination than that of the coins mentioned in the first schedule to this Act, is hereafter coined at the Mint, such coin shall be of a weight and fineness bearing the same proportion to the weight and fineness specified in that schedule as the denomination of such coin bears to the denominations mentioned in that schedule.

Provided that in the making of coins a remedy (or variation from the standard weight and fineness specified in the said first schedule) shall be allowed of an amount not exceeding the amount specified in that schedule.

4. A tender of payment of money, if made in coins which have been issued by the Mint in accordance with the provisions of this Act, and have not been called in by any proclamation made in pursuance of this Act, and have not become diminished in weight, by wear or otherwise, so as to be of less weight than the current weight, that is to say, than the weight (if any) specified as the least current weight in the first schedule to this Act, or less than such weight as may be declared by any proclamation made in pursuance of this Act, shall be a legal tender,—

In the case of gold coins for a payment of any amount:

In the case of silver coins for a payment of an amount not exceeding forty shillings, but for no greater amount:

In the case of bronze coins for a payment of an amount not exceeding one shilling, but for no greater amount.

Nothing in this Act shall prevent any paper currency which under any Act or otherwise is a legal tender from being a legal tender.

5. No piece of gold, silver, copper, or bronze, or of any metal or mixed metal, of any value whatever, shall be made or issued, except by the

Mint, as a coin or a token for money, or as purporting that the holder thereof is entitled to demand any value denoted thereon. Every person who acts in contravention of this section shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

6. Every contract, sale, payment, bill, note, instrument, and security for money, and every transaction, dealing, matter, and thing whatever relating to money, or involving the payment of or the liability to pay any money, which is made, executed, or entered into, done or had, shall be made, executed, entered into, done and had according to the coins which are current and legal tender in pursuance of this Act, and not otherwise, unless the same be made, executed, entered into, done or had according to the currency of some British possession or some foreign state.

7. Where any gold coin of the realm is below the current weight as provided by this Act, or where any coin is called in by any proclamation, every person shall, by himself or others, cut, break, or deface any such coin tendered to him in payment, and the person tendering the same shall bear the loss.

If any coin cut, broken, or defaced in pursuance of this section is not below the current weight, or has not been called in by any proclamation, the person cutting, breaking, or defacing the same shall receive the same in payment according to its denomination. Any dispute which may arise under this section may be determined by a summary proceeding.

8. Where any person brings to the Mint any gold bullion, such bullion shall be assayed and coined, and delivered out to such person, without any charge for such assay or coining, or for waste in coinage:

Provided that—

(1.) If the fineness of the whole of the bullion so brought to the Mint is such that it cannot be brought to the standard fineness under this Act of the coin to be coined thereout, without refining some portion of it, the Master of the Mint may refuse to receive, assay, or coin such bullion:

(2.) Where the bullion so brought to the Mint is finer than the standard fineness under this Act of the coin to be coined thereout, there shall be delivered to the person bringing the same such additional amount of coin as is proportionate to such superior fineness.

No undue preference shall be shown to any person under this section, and every person shall have priority according to the time at which he brought such bullion to the Mint.

9. The Treasury may from time to time issue to the Master of the Mint, out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, such sums as may be necessary to enable him to purchase bullion in order to provide supplies of coin for the public service.

10. All sums received by the Master of the Mint, or any deputy master or officer of the Mint, in payment for coin produced from bullion purchased by him, and all fees and payments received by the master or any deputy master or officer of the Mint as such, shall (save as otherwise provided in the case of any branch mint in a British possession by a proclamation respecting such branch mint) be paid into the receipt of the Exchequer, and carried to the Consolidated Fund.

11. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, with the advice of Her Privy Council, from time to time by proclamation to do all or any of the following things; namely,

- (1.) To determine the dimension of and design for any coin:
- (2.) To determine the denominations of coins to be coined at the Mint:
- (3.) To diminish the amount of remedy allowed by the first schedule to this Act in the case of any coin:
- (4.) To determine the weight (not being less than the weight (if any) specified in the first schedule to this Act) below which a coin, whether diminished in weight by wear or otherwise, is not to be a current or a legal tender:
- (5.) To call in coins of any date or denomination, or any coins coined before the date in the proclamation mentioned:
- (6.) To direct that any coins, other than gold, silver, or bronze, shall be current and be a legal tender for the payment of any amount not exceeding the amount specified in the proclamation, and not exceeding five shillings:
- (7.) To direct that coins coined in any foreign country shall be current, and be a legal tender, at such rates, up to such amounts, and in such portion of Her Majesty's dominions as may be specified in the proclamation; due regard being had in fixing those rates to the weight and fineness of such coins, as compared with the current coins of this realm:
- (8.) To direct the establishment of any branch of the Mint in any British possession, and impose a charge for the coinage of gold thereat; determine the application of such charge; and determine the extent to which such branch is to be deemed part of the Mint, and to which coins issued therefrom are to be current and be a legal tender, and to be deemed to be issued from the Mint:

- (9.) To direct that the whole or any part of this Act shall apply to and be in force in any British possession, with or without any modifications contained in the proclamation:
- (10.) To regulate any matters relative to the coinage and the Mint within the present prerogative of the Crown which are not provided for by this Act:
- (11.) To revoke or alter any proclamation previously made.

Every such proclamation shall come into operation on the date therein in that behalf mentioned, and shall have effect as if it were enacted in this Act.

12. For the purpose of ascertaining that coins issued from the Mint have been coined in accordance with this Act, a trial of the pyx shall be held at least once in every year in which coins have been issued from the Mint.

It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, with the advice of Her Privy Council, from time to time, by order, to make regulations respecting the trial of the pyx and all matters incidental thereto, and in particular respecting the following matters; viz.,

- (1.) The time and place of the trial:
- (2.) The setting apart out of the coins issued by the Mint certain coins for the trial:
- (3.) The summoning of a jury of not less than six out of competent freemen of the mystery of goldsmiths of the city of London or other competent persons:
- (4.) The attendance at the trial of the jury so summoned, and of the proper officers of the Treasury, the Board of Trade, and the Mint, and the production of the coins so set apart, and of the standard trial plates and standard weights:
- (5.) The proceedings at and conduct of the trial, including the nomination of some person to preside thereat, and the swearing of the jury, and the mode of examining the coins:
- (6.) The recording and the publication of the verdict, and the custody of the record thereof, and the proceedings (if any) to be taken in consequence of such verdict.

Every such order shall come into operation on the date therein in that behalf mentioned, and shall have effect as if it were enacted in this Act, but may be revoked or altered by any subsequent order under this section.

13. The Treasury may from time to time do all or any of the following things:

- (1.) Fix the number and duties of the officers of and persons employed in the Mint:

- (2.) Make regulations and give directions (subject to the provisions of this Act and any proclamation made thereunder) respecting the general management of the Mint, and revoke and alter such regulations and directions.

Master and Officers of Mint.

14. The Chancellor of the Exchequer for the time being shall be the master, worker, and warden of Her Majesty's Royal Mint in England, and governor of the Mint in Scotland.

Provided that nothing in this section shall render the Chancellor of the Exchequer incapable of being elected to or of sitting or voting in the House of Commons, or vacate the seat of the person who at the passing of this Act holds the office of Chancellor of the Exchequer.

All duties, powers, and authorities imposed on or vested in or to be transacted before the master of the Mint may be performed and exercised by or transacted before him or his sufficient deputy.

15. The Treasury may from time to time appoint deputy masters and other officers and persons for the purpose of carrying on the business of the Mint in the United Kingdom or elsewhere, and assign them their duties, and award them their salaries.

The master of the Mint may from time to time promote, suspend, and remove any such deputy masters, officers, and persons.

Standard Trial Plates and Weights.

16. The standard trial plates of gold and silver used for determining the justness of the gold and silver coins of the realm issued from the Mint, which now exist or may hereafter be made, and all books, documents, and things used in connexion therewith or in relation thereto, shall be in the custody of the Board of Trade, and shall be kept in such places and in such manner as the Board of Trade may from time to time direct; and the performance of all duties in relation to such trial plates shall be part of the business of the Standard weights and measures Department of the Board of Trade.

The Board of Trade shall from time to time, when necessary, cause new standard trial plates to be made and duly verified, of such standard fineness as may be in conformity with the provisions of this Act.

17. The standard weights for weighing and testing the coin of the realm shall be placed in the custody of the Board of Trade, and be kept in such places and in such manner as the Board of Trade may from time to time direct; and the performance of all duties in relation to such standard weights shall be part of the business of the Standard weights and measures Department of the Board of Trade.

VOL. XLVIII.—LAW JOUR. STAT.

The Board of Trade shall from time to time cause weights of each coin of the realm for the time being, and of multiples of such of those weights as may be required, to be made and duly verified; and those weights, when approved by Her Majesty in Council, shall be the standard weights for determining the justness of the weight of and for weighing such coin.

The master of the Mint shall from time to time cause copies to be made of such standard weights, and once at least in every year the Board of Trade and the master of the Mint shall cause such copies to be compared and duly verified with the standard weights in the custody of the Board of Trade.

All weights which are not less in weight than the weight prescribed by the first schedule to this Act for the lightest coin, and are used for weighing coin, shall be compared with the said standard weights, and if found to be just shall, on payment of such fee, not exceeding five shillings, as the Board of Trade from time to time prescribe, be marked by some officer of the Standard weights and measures Department of the Board of Trade with a mark approved of by the Board of Trade, and notified in the London Gazette; and a weight which is required by this section to be so compared, and is not so marked, shall not be deemed a just weight for determining the weight of gold and silver coin of the realm.

If any person forges or counterfeits such mark, or any weight so marked, or wilfully increases or diminishes any weight so marked, or knowingly utters, sells, or uses any weight with such counterfeit mark, or any weight so increased or diminished, or knowingly uses any weight declared by this section not to be a just weight, such person shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds.

All fees paid under this section shall be paid into the Exchequer, and carried to the Consolidated Fund.

Legal Proceedings.

18. Any summary proceeding under this Act may be taken, and any penalty under this Act may be recovered,—

In England, before two justices of the peace in manner directed by the Act of the session of the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter forty-three, intituled "An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary convictions and orders," and any Act amending the same.

In Scotland, in manner directed by The Summary Procedure Act, 1864.

In Ireland, so far as respects Dublin, in manner directed by the Acts regulating the powers of justices of the peace or the police of Dublin metropolis, and elsewhere in manner directed by

The Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851, and any Act amending the same.

In any British possession, in the courts, and before such justices or magistrates, and in the manner in which the like proceedings and penalties may be taken and recovered by the law of such possession, or as near thereto as circumstances admit, or in such other courts, or before such other justices or magistrates, or in such other manner as any Act or Ordinance having the force of law in such possession may from time to time provide.

Miscellaneous.

19. This Act, save as expressly provided by this Act, or by any proclamation made thereunder, shall not extend to any British possession.

20. The Acts mentioned in the first part of the second schedule to this Act are hereby repealed to the extent in the third column of such schedule mentioned, and those mentioned in the second part of the same schedule are hereby repealed entirely.

Provided that,—

(2.) All weights for weighing coin which have before the passing of this Act been marked at the Mint or by any proper officer shall be deemed to have been marked under this Act :

(3.) Every branch of the Mint which at the passing of this Act issues coins in any British possession shall, until the date fixed by any proclamation made in pursuance of this Act with respect to such branch Mint, continue in all respects to have the same power of issuing coins and be in the same position as if this Act had not passed, and coins so issued shall be deemed for the purpose of this Act to have been issued from the Mint :

(4.) The said Acts (unless relating to a branch Mint, and unless in the said schedule expressly otherwise mentioned,) are not repealed so far as they apply to any British possession to which this Act does not extend until a proclamation directing that this Act or any part thereof, with or without any modification contained in the proclamation, shall be in force in such British possession comes into operation.

CHAP. 11.

Dublin Collector-General of Rates Franchise.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Collector-General of Rates, and persons employed in his office, may vote at parliamentary elections for the city of Dublin.

An Act to enable the officers employed in the Collector-General of Rates office in the city of Dublin to vote at Parliamentary Elections for that city.
(12th May 1870.)

WHEREAS an Act was passed in the session of Parliament holden in the thirty-first and thirty-second years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to relieve certain officers employed in the collection and management of Her Majesty's revenues from any legal disability to vote at the election of members to serve in Parliament:"

And whereas the provisions of the said Act do not apply to the Collector-General of Rates in the city of Dublin, and to the officers and servants of the said collector-general appointed by virtue of an Act passed in the session of Parliament holden in the twelfth and thirteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to provide for the collection of rates in the city of Dublin:"

And whereas the said collector-general and the officers and servants employed for the purposes of the said last-recited Act are prohibited by the twenty-fourth section of the said Act from voting at any election of a member or members to serve in Parliament for the city of Dublin:

And whereas it is expedient that such prohibition should be repealed:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. From and after the passing of this Act, it shall be lawful for the Collector-General of Rates in the city of Dublin, and for the clerks, officers, and servants of the said collector-general, appointed under the provisions of the said "Act to provide for the collection of rates in the city of Dublin," when duly registered, to vote at any election of a member or members to serve in Parliament for the city of Dublin without incurring any penalty or forfeiture, anything contained in the said Act to the contrary notwithstanding.

CHAP. 12.

The Customs (Isle of Man) Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Repeal of duties of customs on articles herein named.

An Act to repeal certain Duties of Customs in the Isle of Man.

(12th May 1870.)

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Customs (Isle of Man) Act, 1870."

2. After the passing of this Act, the duties of customs chargeable upon the articles herein-after mentioned on their being imported or brought into the Isle of Man shall cease and determine, and so much of the Act of the session of the eighteenth and nineteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter ninety-seven, as imposed the same, is hereby repealed:

Corn, viz., wheat, barley, bear or bigg, oats, rye, peas, beans, buckwheat, maize or Indian corn, wheat meal and flour, barley meal, oat meal, rye meal and flour, pea meal, bean meal, buckwheat meal, and maize or Indian corn meal.

CHAP. 13.

The Survey Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Construction of Act.
3. Transfer of powers to Commissioners of Works.
4. Acts in schedule repealed.
5. Continuance of Act.
Schedule.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Surveys of Great Britain, Ireland, and the Isle of Man.

WHEREAS by an Act of the sixth year of King George the Fourth, chapter ninety-nine, intituled "An Act to repeal an Act of the last session of Parliament relative to the forming tables of manors, parishes, and townlands in Ireland, and to make provision for ascertaining the boundaries of the same," and by an Act of the seventeenth and eighteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter seventeen, intituled "An Act to make further provision for defining the boundaries of counties, baronies, half baronies, parishes, townlands, and other divisions and denominations of land in Ireland for public purposes," (which Acts are in this Act referred to as the Survey (Ireland) Acts), certain powers for the purpose of making and carrying on any survey authorized by those Acts or by the order of the Master General and Board of Ordnance were given to the Master General and Board of Ordnance, and to officers and other persons appointed by or acting under the orders of the Master General and Board of Ordnance :

And whereas all the powers and authorities of the principal officers of Her Majesty's Ordnance were, by an Act of the session of the eighteenth and nineteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and seventeen, intituled "An Act for transferring to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State the powers and estates vested in the principal officers of the Ordnance," transferred to Her Majesty's Secretary of State for the War Department :

And whereas by the Act of the session of the fourth and fifth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter thirty, intituled "An Act to authorize and facilitate the completion of a survey of Great Britain, Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the Isle of Man," (in this Act referred to as the Survey (Great Britain) Act,) certain powers for the purpose of making such survey were given to the Master General and Board of Ordnance and to officers and other persons appointed by or acting under the orders of the Master General and Board of Ordnance :

And whereas the powers given by the last-mentioned Act to the Master General and Board of Ordnance having been continued by subsequent Acts were, by an Act of the session of the nineteenth and twentieth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter sixty-one, intituled "An Act to continue an Act for the Survey of Great Britain, Berwick-upon-Tweed, and the Isle of Man," further continued until the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and sixty-one, and were by the same Act transferred to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department :

And whereas the said powers have been since continued by divers subsequent Acts :

And whereas it is expedient to place the said surveys under the superintendence of the Commissioners for the time being of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as the Survey Act, 1870.

2. This Act shall be construed as one, so far as it relates to Ireland with the Survey (Ireland) Acts, and so far as it relates to Great Britain and the Isle of Man with the Survey (Great Britain) Act, and the Survey (Ireland) Acts, together with this Act, may be cited together as the Survey (Ireland) Acts, 1825 to 1870, and the Survey (Great Britain) Act, together with this Act, may be cited as the Survey (Great Britain) Acts, 1841 and 1870.

3. All the powers, authorities, and things which under the Survey (Ireland) Acts, or the Survey (Great Britain) Act are, or, but for the transfer to Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department would be, vested in or capable of being exercised and done by the Master General and Board of Ordnance shall, after the passing of this Act, be vested in and capable of being exercised and done by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings, and not by the said Secretary of State, and those Acts shall be construed as if the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings were substituted throughout for the Master General and Board of Ordnance.

Every officer and other person who has been appointed before the passing of this Act by the Master General and Board of Ordnance, or Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the War Department, for the purpose of the said Acts or any of them, shall be deemed to have been appointed by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings.

4. The Acts mentioned in the schedule to this Act are hereby repealed, without prejudice to anything already done or suffered.

5. This Act, so far as it relates to Great Britain and the Isle of Man, shall not (except as regards the repeal, which is perpetual,) continue in force for any longer time than the Survey (Great Britain) Act.

Schedule.

An Act to amend the law relating to the legal condition of Aliens and British Subjects. (12th May 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the legal condition of aliens and British subjects:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Naturalization Act, 1870."

Status of Aliens in the United Kingdom.

2. Real and personal property of every description may be taken, acquired, held, and disposed of by an alien in the same manner in all respects as by a natural-born British subject; and a title to real and personal property of every description may be derived through, from, or in succession to an alien, in the same manner in all respects as through, from, or in succession to a natural-born British subject: Provided,—

- (1.) That this section shall not confer any right on an alien to hold real property situate out of the United Kingdom, and shall not qualify an alien for any office, or for any municipal, parliamentary, or other franchise;
- (2.) That this section shall not entitle an alien to any right or privilege as a British subject, except such rights and privileges in respect of property as are hereby expressly given to him;
- (3.) That this section shall not affect any estate or interest in real or personal property to which any person has or may become entitled, either mediately or immediately, in possession or expectancy, in pursuance of any disposition made before the passing of this Act, or in pursuance of any devolution by law on the death of any person dying before the passing of this Act.

3. Where Her Majesty has entered into a convention with any foreign state to the effect that the subjects or citizens of that state who have been naturalized as British subjects may divest themselves of their status as such subjects, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Order in Council, to declare that such convention has been entered into by Her Majesty; and from and after the date of such Order in Council, any person being originally a subject or citizen of the state referred to in such Order, who has been naturalized as a British subject, may, within such limit of time as may be provided in the convention, make a declaration of alienage, and from and after the date of his so making such declaration such person shall be regarded as an alien, and as a subject of the state to which he originally belonged as aforesaid.

A declaration of alienage may be made as follows; that is to say,—if the declarant be in the United Kingdom in the presence of any justice of the peace, if elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions in the presence of any judge of any court of civil or criminal jurisdiction, of any justice of the peace, or of any other officer for the time being authorized by law in the place in which the declarant is to administer an oath for any judicial or other legal purpose. If out of Her Majesty's dominions in the presence of any officer in the diplomatic or consular service of Her Majesty.

4. Any person who by reason of his having been born within the dominions of Her Majesty is a natural-born subject, but who also at the time of his birth became under the law of any foreign state a subject of such state, and is still such subject, may, if of full age and not under any disability, make a declaration of alienage in manner aforesaid, and from and after the making of such declaration of alienage such person shall cease to be a British subject. Any person who is born out of Her Majesty's dominions of a father being a British subject may, if of full age, and not under any disability, make a declaration of alienage in manner aforesaid, and from and after the making of such declaration shall cease to be a British subject.

5. From and after the passing of this Act, an alien shall not be entitled to be tried by a jury de medietate lingue, but shall be triable in the same manner as if he were a natural-born subject.

Expatriation.

6. Any British subject who has at any time before or may at any time after the passing of this Act, when in any foreign state, and not under any disability, voluntarily become naturalized in such state, shall from and after the time of his so having become naturalized in such foreign state be deemed to have ceased to be a British subject and be regarded as an alien: Provided,—

(1.) That where any British subject has before the passing of this Act voluntarily become naturalized in a foreign state, and yet is desirous of remaining a British subject, he may, at any time within two years after the passing of this Act, make a declaration that he is desirous of remaining a British subject, and upon such declaration, herein-after referred to as a declaration of British nationality, being made, and upon his taking the oath of allegiance, the declarant shall be deemed to be and to have been continually a British subject; with this qualification, that he shall not, when within the limits of the foreign state in which he has been naturalized, be deemed to be a British subject, unless he has ceased to be a subject of that state in pursuance of the laws thereof, or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect:

(2.) A declaration of British nationality may be made, and the oath of allegiance be taken as follows; that is to say,—if the declarant be in the United Kingdom in the presence of a justice of the peace; if elsewhere in Her Majesty's dominions in the presence of any judge of any court of civil or criminal jurisdiction, of any justice of the peace, or of any other officer for the time being authorized by law in the place in which the declarant is to administer an oath for any judicial or other legal purpose. If out of Her Majesty's dominions in the presence of any officer in the diplomatic or consular service of Her Majesty.

Naturalization and resumption of British Nationality.

7. An alien, who, within such limited time before making the application herein-after mentioned as may be allowed by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, either by general order or on any special occasion, has resided in the United Kingdom for a term of not less than five years, or has been in the service of the Crown for a term of not less than five years, and intends, when naturalized, either to reside in the United Kingdom, or to serve under the Crown, may apply to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State for a certificate of naturalization.

The applicant shall adduce in support of his application such evidence of his residence or service, and intention to reside or serve, as such Secretary of State may require. The said Secretary of State, if satisfied with the evidence adduced, shall take the case of the applicant into consideration, and may, with or without assigning any reason, give or withhold a certificate as he thinks most conducive to the public good, and no appeal shall lie from his decision, but such certificate shall not take effect until the applicant has taken the oath of allegiance.

An alien to whom a certificate of naturalization is granted shall in the United Kingdom be entitled to all political and other rights, powers, and privileges, and be subject to all obligations, to which a natural-born British subject is entitled or subject in the United Kingdom, with this qualification, that he shall not, when within the limits of the foreign state of which he was a subject previously to obtaining his certificate of naturalization, be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of that state, in pursuance of the laws thereof, or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect.

The said Secretary of State may in manner aforesaid grant a special certificate of naturalization to any person with respect to whose nationality as a British subject a doubt exists, and he may specify in such certificate that the grant thereof is made for the purpose of quieting doubts as to the right of such person to be a British subject, and the grant of such special certificate shall not be deemed to be any admission that the person to whom it was granted was not previously a British subject.

An alien who has been naturalized previously to the passing of this Act may apply to the Secretary of State for a certificate of naturalization under this Act, and it shall be lawful for the said Secretary of State to grant such certificate to such naturalized alien upon the same terms and subject to the same conditions in and upon which such certificate might have been granted if such alien had not been previously naturalized in the United Kingdom.

8. A natural-born British subject who has become an alien in pursuance of this Act, and is in this Act referred to as a statutory alien, may, on performing the same conditions and adducing the same evidence as is required in the case of an alien applying for a certificate of nationality, apply to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State for a certificate, herein-after referred to as a certificate of re-admission to British nationality, re-admitting him to the status of a British subject. The said Secretary of State shall have the same discretion as to the giving or withholding of the certificate as in the case of a certificate of naturalization, and an oath of allegiance shall in like manner be required previously to the issuing of the certificate.

A statutory alien to whom a certificate of re-admission to British nationality has been granted shall, from the date of the certificate of re-admission, but not in respect of any previous transaction, resume his position as a British subject; with this qualification, that within the limits of the foreign state of which he became a subject he shall not be deemed to be a British subject unless he has ceased to be a subject of that foreign state according to the laws thereof, or in pursuance of a treaty to that effect.

The jurisdiction by this Act conferred on the Secretary of State in the United Kingdom in respect of the grant of a certificate of re-admission to British nationality, in the case of any statutory alien being in any British possession, may be exercised by the governor of such possession; and residence in such possession shall, in the case of such person, be deemed equivalent to residence in the United Kingdom.

9. The oath in this Act referred to as the oath of allegiance shall be in the form following; that is to say,

"I do swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to Her Majesty Queen Victoria, her heirs and successors, according to law. So help me GOD."

National status of married women and infant children.

10. The following enactments shall be made with respect to the national status of women and children:

- (1.) A married woman shall be deemed to be a subject of the state of which her husband is for the time being a subject:
- (2.) A widow being a natural-born British subject, who has become an alien by or in consequence of her marriage, shall be deemed to be a statutory alien, and may as such at any time during widowhood obtain a certificate of re-admission to British nationality in manner provided by this Act:
- (3.) Where the father being a British subject, or the mother being a British subject and a widow, becomes an alien in pursuance of this Act, every child of such father or mother who during infancy has become resident in the country where the father or mother is naturalized, and has according to the laws of such country become naturalized therein, shall be deemed to be a subject of the state of which the father or mother has become a subject, and not a British subject:

- (4.) Where the father, or the mother being a widow, has obtained a certificate of re-admission to British nationality, every child of such father or mother who during infancy has become resident in the British dominions with such father or mother shall be deemed to have resumed the position of a British subject to all intents:
- (5.) Where the father, or the mother being a widow, has obtained a certificate of naturalization in the United Kingdom, every child of such father or mother who during infancy has become resident with such father or mother in any part of the United Kingdom shall be deemed to be a naturalized British subject.

Supplemental Provisions.

11. One of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may by regulation provide for the following matters:—

- (1.) The form and registration of declarations of British nationality:
- (2.) The form and registration of certificates of naturalization in the United Kingdom:
- (3.) The form and registration of certificates of re-admission to British nationality:
- (4.) The form and registration of declarations of alienage:
- (5.) The registration by officers in the diplomatic or consular service of Her Majesty of the births and deaths of British subjects who may be born or die out of Her Majesty's dominions, and of the marriages of persons married at any of Her Majesty's embassies or legations:
- (6.) The transmission to the United Kingdom for the purpose of registration or safe keeping, or of being produced as evidence, of any declarations or certificates made in pursuance of this Act out of the United Kingdom, or of any copies of such declarations or certificates, also of copies of entries contained in any register kept out of the United Kingdom in pursuance of or for the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act:
- (7.) With the consent of the Treasury, the imposition and application of fees in respect of any registration authorized to be made by this Act, and in respect of the making any declaration or the grant of any certificate authorized to be made or granted by this Act.

The said Secretary of State, by a further regulation, may repeal, alter, or add to any regulation previously made by him in pursuance of this section.

Any regulation made by the said Secretary of State in pursuance of this section shall be deemed to be within the powers conferred by this Act, and shall be of the same force as if it had been enacted in this Act, but shall not, so far as respects the imposition of fees, be in force in any British possession, and shall not, so far as respects any other matter, be in force in any British possession in which any Act or ordinance to the contrary of or inconsistent with any such direction may for the time being be in force.

12. The following regulations shall be made with respect to evidence under this Act:—

- (1.) Any declaration authorized to be made under this Act may be proved in any legal proceeding by the production of the original declaration, or of any copy thereof certified to be a true copy by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, or by any person authorized by regulations of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State to give certified copies of such declaration, and the production of such declaration or copy shall be evidence of the person therein named as declarant having made the same at the date in the said declaration mentioned:
- (2.) A certificate of naturalization may be proved in any legal proceeding by the production of the original certificate, or of any copy thereof certified to be a true copy by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, or by any person authorized by regulations of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State to give certified copies of such certificate:
- (3.) A certificate of re-admission to British nationality may be proved in any legal proceeding by the production of the original certificate, or of any copy thereof certified to be a true copy by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, or by any person authorized by regulations of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State to give certified copies of such certificate:
- (4.) Entries in any register authorized to be made in pursuance of this Act shall be proved by such copies and certified in such manner as may be directed by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, and the copies of such entries shall be evidence of any matters by this Act or by any regulation of the said Secretary of State authorized to be inserted in the register:

- (5.) The Documentary Evidence Act, 1868, shall apply to any regulation made by a Secretary of State, in pursuance of or for the purpose of carrying into effect any of the provisions of this Act.

Miscellaneous.

13. Nothing in this Act contained shall affect the grant of letters of denization by Her Majesty.

14. Nothing in this Act contained shall qualify an alien to be the owner of a British ship.

15. Where any British subject has in pursuance of this Act become an alien, he shall not thereby be discharged from any liability in respect of any acts done before the date of his so becoming an alien.

16. All laws, statutes, and ordinances which may be duly made by the legislature of any British possession for imparting to any person the privileges, or any of the privileges, of naturalization, to be enjoyed by such person within the limits of such possession, shall within such limits have the authority of law, but shall be subject to be confirmed or disallowed by Her Majesty in the same manner and subject to the same rules in and subject to which Her Majesty has power to confirm or disallow any other laws, statutes, or ordinances in that possession.

17. In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context or subject-matter thereof,— “Disability” shall mean the status of being an infant, lunatic, idiot, or married woman:

“British possession” shall mean any colony, plantation, island, territory, or settlement within Her Majesty's dominions, and not within the United Kingdom, and all territories and places under one legislature are deemed to be one British possession for the purposes of this Act:

“The Governor of any British possession” shall include any person exercising the chief authority in such possession:

“Officer in the Diplomatic Service of Her Majesty” shall mean any Ambassador, Minister, or Chargé d’Affaires, or Secretary of Legation, or any person appointed by such Ambassador, Minister, Chargé d’Affaires, or Secretary of Legation to execute any duties imposed by this Act on an officer in the Diplomatic Service of Her Majesty:

“Officer in the Consular service of Her Majesty” shall mean and include Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul, and Consular Agent, and any person for the time being discharging the duties of Consul-General, Consul, Vice-Consul, and Consular Agent.

Repeal of Acts mentioned in Schedule.

18. The several Acts set forth in the first and second parts of the schedule annexed hereto shall be wholly repealed, and the Acts set forth in the third part of the said schedule shall be repealed to the extent therein mentioned; provided that the repeal enacted in this Act shall not affect—

- (1.) Any right acquired or thing done before the passing of this Act :

- (2.) Any liability accruing before the passing of this Act :
- (3.) Any penalty, forfeiture, or other punishment incurred or to be incurred in respect of any offence committed before the passing of this Act :
- (4.) The institution of any investigation or legal proceeding or any other remedy for ascertaining or enforcing any such liability, penalty, forfeiture, or punishment as aforesaid.

SCHEDULE.

NOTE.—Reference is made to the repeal of the “whole Act” where portions have been repealed before, in order to preclude henceforth the necessity of looking back to previous Acts. This Schedule, so far as respects Acts prior to the reign of George the Second, other than Acts of the Irish Parliament, refers to the edition prepared under the direction of the Record Commission, intituled “The Statutes of the Realm; printed by command of His Majesty King George the Third, in pursuance of an Address of the House of Commons of Great Britain. 3. Transfer of property from treasurers to Commissioners.
4. As to providing courts, offices, &c.
5. Provisions of Acts in schedule repealed.
Schedule.

An Act to transfer to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings the property in and control over the buildings and property of the County Courts in England, and for other purposes relating thereto.
(20th June 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to transfer to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings the complete control over the buildings and property of the County Courts in England, and to vest in the said Commissioners the buildings and property now vested in the treasurers of the said courts :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as "The County Court (Buildings) Act, 1870."

2. In this Act the term "the Commissioners of Works" means the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings, as incorporated by the Act of the session of the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter twenty-eight, intituled "An Act to amend an Act of the fourteenth and fifteenth years of Her present Majesty, for the direction of Public Works and Buildings, and to vest the buildings appropriated for the accommodation of the Supreme Courts of Justice in Edinburgh in the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Works and Public Buildings."

3. All property, real and personal, (other than money and securities for money, books, papers, and records,) belonging to any county court, of or to which the treasurer of any county court or any other person is seised, possessed, or entitled in trust for a county court, under the sections of the Acts mentioned in the schedule to this Act, shall, on the passing of this Act, pass to and be vested in the Commissioners of Works, for the same estate and interest, and subject to the same covenants, conditions, agreements, and liabilities, for and subject to which the same were held by the said treasurer or other person ; and such treasurer or other person shall be discharged from such covenants, conditions, agreements, and liabilities.

4. The Commissioners of Works, with the approval of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, shall from time to time build, purchase, hire, or otherwise provide such court-house, offices, and buildings as may be necessary for carrying on the business of any county court, and cause the same to be furnished, cleaned, lighted, and warmed, and give such directions to the registrar of each court with regard to the hiring and dismissing of servants as shall seem fit.

For the purposes of any such purchase, the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Acts amending the same, (except so much thereof as relates to the purchase of land otherwise than by agreement,) are hereby incorporated with this Act, and in construing those Acts for the purposes of this Act the special Act shall be construed to mean this Act, and the promoters of the undertaking shall be construed to be the Commissioners of Works.

5. The Acts mentioned in the schedule to this Act are hereby repealed, to the extent in the third column of the said schedule mentioned, without prejudice to anything already done or suffered or any right already acquired or accrued.

An Act to define the boundary between the counties of Inverness and Elgin or Moray, in the district of Strathspey; and for other purposes.

WHEREAS doubts exist with respect to the boundary between the county of Inverness and the county of Elgin or Moray (herein-after called the county of Elgin), in the district of Strathspey:

And whereas certain parts of the county of Elgin, and certain parts of the county of Inverness, situated in the same district, and comprehending the parishes, or portions of the parishes, of Duthil and Abernethy, and of the united parish of Cromdale and Inverallan, are wholly or partially detached from their respective counties, and it will be for public advantage that the boundary between those counties in the district of Strathspey should be defined, and that the detached portions of the county of Elgin should be annexed to and form part of the county of Inverness, and that the detached portions of the county of Inverness should be annexed to and form part of the county of Elgin:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Inverness and Elgin County Boundaries Act, 1870."

2. Those parts and portions of the counties of Elgin and Inverness described in the schedule A. annexed to this Act, whether the same shall heretofore have been locally situated within the county of Elgin or the county of Inverness, shall, from and after the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, be held to be, and be, for all purposes whatsoever, except in so far as herein-after provided, part of the county, sheriffdom, and commissariat of Inverness.

3. Those parts and portions of the counties of Inverness and Elgin described in the schedule B. annexed to this Act, whether the same shall heretofore have been locally situated within the county of Inverness or the county of Elgin, shall, from and after the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, be held to be, and be, for all purposes whatsoever, except in so far as herein-after provided, part of the county and sheriffdom of Elgin and commissariat of Elgin and Nairn.

4. From and after the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, the roads and bridges presently maintained by the Elgin County Road Trustees under "The Elgin and Nairn Roads and Bridges Act, 1863," upon or within the district described in the schedule A. annexed to this Act, shall form part of the roads and bridges under the management and control of the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, and the assessment authorized to be levied by "The Highland Roads and Bridges Act, 1862," shall apply to and may be levied by the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness upon and within the said district in like manner and to the same effect as if that district had formed part of the county of Inverness at the passing of the last-mentioned Act.

5. From and after the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, the roads and bridges upon or within the district described in the schedule B. annexed to this Act shall form part of the roads and bridges under the management and control of the Elgin County Road Trustees acting under "The Elgin and Nairn Roads and Bridges Act, 1863," and the assessments authorized to be levied by that Act shall apply to and may be levied by the said Trustees upon and within the said district, in like manner and to the same effect as if that district had formed part of the county of Elgin at the passing of that Act.

6. From and after the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, all contracts for the maintenance and repair of the roads and bridges throughout the district described in the schedule A. annexed to this Act shall cease and determine as regards the Elgin County Road Trustees, or any person or persons acting on their behalf, except in regard to any claims due and payable by the trustees prior to the said fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy; and such contracts shall thereafter be binding on and may be enforced by and against the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, acting under "The Highland Roads and Bridges Act, 1862," as fully and effectually as the same would have been binding on or might have been enforced by and against the Elgin County Road Trustees; and in like manner, from and after the said fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, all contracts for the maintenance and repair of the roads and bridges throughout the district described in the schedule B. annexed to this Act shall cease and determine as regards the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, or the District Road Trustees of that county, or any person or persons acting on their behalf, except in regard to any claims due and payable by those Commissioners, or the District Trustees, prior to the said fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and such contracts shall thereafter be binding on and may be enforced by and against the Elgin County Road Trustees as fully and effectually as the same would have been binding on or might have been enforced by and against the said Commissioners or District Road Trustees.

7. Nothing herein contained shall affect the right of the present ministers of the parishes of Cromdale, Abernethy, and Duthil, so long as they shall continue ministers of those parishes respectively, to be paid their stipends, according to the fiars prices of the county by which they are entitled to be paid at the date of the passing of this Act.

8. Nothing herein contained shall affect the right of the present or future schoolmasters of the parish schools of the parishes of Duthil and Abernethy, in the county of Elgin, to participate in the benefits of the bequest of the late James Dick, esquire, of Finsbury Square, London, commonly called the Dick Bequest; but the schoolmasters of those parishes shall be entitled to all the benefits of the said bequest in the same way and manner as if the parishes of Duthil and Abernethy had continued to be locally situated in the county of Elgin.

9. Nothing herein contained shall affect the right of the inhabitants of the parishes of Duthil and Abernethy to be admitted into and to participate in the benefits of "The Elgin Institution" for the Support of Old Age and Education of "Youth," established under the will of the late Major-General Andrew Anderson, of the late Honourable East India Company's service; but the inhabitants of those parishes shall be entitled to all the benefits of that institution in the same way and manner as if those parishes had continued to be locally situate in the county of Elgin.

10. The court-house erected in the village of Grantown, in virtue of the provisions of "The Sheriff Court-Houses (Scotland) Act, 1860," shall, from and after the passing of this Act, be vested in and become the property of the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness and the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Elgin, jointly, for the joint use and benefit of those counties, excepting the police station, or the rooms in that court-house set apart for the use of a police constable, with the cells thereto attached, which shall be vested in and become the property of the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Elgin.

11. The Commissioners of Supply of the county of Elgin shall, on or before the fifteenth day of June one thousand eight hundred and seventy, pay to the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness the sum of three hundred and seventy-one pounds sterling towards the expense of erecting the said court-house, disbursed by the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, and the further sum of five hundred and two pounds sterling, being the whole expense of the said police station, or rooms and cells, disbursed by them, with interest at the rate of five pounds per centum per annum on those sums respectively from the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, till paid.

12. For the purpose of raising the money necessary to pay for the said court-house to the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Elgin may raise and levy by assessment, in the manner provided by "The Sheriff Court-Houses (Scotland) Act, 1860," a sum not exceeding four hundred and twenty pounds sterling; and for the purpose of raising the money necessary to pay for the said police station, or rooms and cells, they may raise and levy by assessment, in the manner provided by the Act twenty and twenty-one Victoria, chapter seventy-two, the sum of five hundred and fifty pounds sterling; and for the purpose of raising such sums of money the provisions of "The Sheriff Court-Houses (Scotland) Act, 1860," and the Act twenty and twenty-one Victoria, chapter seventy-two, relative to assessments, and the levying and recovering of the same, are incorporated with, and form part of, this Act.

13. And whereas there is no place in the upper district of the county of Inverness where circuit courts can conveniently be held, except the village of Grantown, which is situate in the district by this Act annexed to the county of Elgin: Therefore, notwithstanding the provisions of this Act, the sheriff of the county of Inverness, or his substitutes, may respectively grant warrants and hold courts for the trial of all causes under the Act one Victoria, chapter forty-one, as extended by the Act sixteen and seventeen Victoria, chapter eighty, and also under the Act thirty and thirty-one Victoria, chapter ninety-six, and also under the Act twenty-seven and twenty-eight Victoria, chapter fifty-three, and he or they may respectively pronounce judgment therein, and act otherwise with respect thereto, within the said village of Grantown, in the same way, and to the same effect in all respects, as if such courts were held, and warrants granted, and judgments pronounced, and acts done within the county of Inverness; and the sheriff-clerk and officers of the county of Inverness may issue summonses and other writs and perform the other duties authorized by the last-recited Acts within the village of Grantown in like manner as within the county of Inverness.

14. Notwithstanding the provisions of this Act, the justices of the peace of the county of Inverness may grant warrants, and hold courts for the trial of all causes, and for the disposal of all matters falling under their jurisdiction, and they may pronounce judgment therein, and act otherwise with respect thereto, within the said village of Grantown, in the same way and to the same effect in all respects as if such courts were held, and warrants granted, and judgments pronounced, and acts done within the county of Inverness; and the clerk of the peace and officers of the county of Inverness may issue summonses and other writs, and perform all the other duties pertaining to their offices, within the village of Grantown in like manner as within the county of Inverness.

15. Nothing herein contained shall affect any assessment due to or imposed by the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, or of the county of Elgin, or the Elgin County Road Trustees respectively, previous to the passing of this Act, but the same shall be paid and may be recovered in the same manner and to the same effect as if this Act had not been passed; and nothing herein contained shall affect any action or proceeding instituted, raised, or depending before any court, civil or criminal, previous to the passing of this Act, and the same may be proceeded with, determined, and followed forth by diligence or otherwise as if this Act had not been passed.

16. All costs, charges, and expenses of and incident to the preparing for, obtaining, and passing of this Act, or otherwise in relation thereto, shall be paid by the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Inverness, and the Commissioners of Supply of the county of Elgin, in equal moieties, out of the county general assessments levied by them respectively, under the provisions of "The County General Assessment (Scotland) Act, 1868."

CHAP. 17.

The War Office Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Appointment of Surveyor General of Ordnance.
3. Appointment of Financial Secretary of War Office.
4. Duties of officers appointed under Act.
5. Salaries of officers.

An Act for making further provision relating to the Management of certain Departments of the War Office.

WHEREAS previously to the date of the Act next herein-after mentioned divers duties relating to the administration of ordnance, munitions of war, and military stores, were performed by certain officers, styled the principal officers of Ordnance:

And whereas by the Act of the session of the eighteenth and nineteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and seventeen, intituled "An Act for transferring to "one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State the powers and estates vested in the "principal officers of the Ordnance," all the duties hitherto performed by the said principal officers were vested in one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State:

And whereas by the Act of the session of the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter twelve, intituled "An Act to abolish the office of Secretary at War, and to transfer the duties of that office

"to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State," the office of Secretary at War was abolished, and the various duties, powers, and authorities of the Secretary at War were vested in one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State:

And whereas it is expedient to make further provision for the performance of the increased duties that have so devolved on the said Secretary of State, and that the officers to be appointed under this Act to discharge such duties should, as the principal officers of Ordnance and Secretary at War formerly were, be eligible to sit in Parliament:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The War Office Act, 1870."

2. From and after the passing of this Act, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may from time to time appoint and at his pleasure remove an officer to be styled the Surveyor

General of the Ordnance, and such officer shall not by virtue of such appointment, if sitting in the Commons House of Parliament, vacate his seat, or, whether sitting in such House or not, be disqualified from being elected to or sitting or voting in the said House of Parliament.

3. From and after the passing of this Act, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may from time to time appoint and at his pleasure remove an officer to be styled the Financial Secretary of the War Office, and such officer shall not by virtue of such appointment, if sitting in the Commons House of Parliament, vacate his seat, or, whether sitting in such House or not, be disqualified from being elected to or sitting or voting in the said House of Parliament.

4. There shall be performed by the officers appointed under this Act such duties in relation to the War Office of Her Majesty's Government as Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, from time to time assign to them, and such Order in Council shall, if Parliament be sitting at the time of the making thereof, be laid before Parliament within fourteen days after the date thereof, and if Parliament be not then sitting, within fourteen days after the next meeting thereof.

5. There shall be paid to the officers appointed under this Act, out of moneys to be provided by Parliament, such salaries as shall be from time to time regulated by the Lord High Treasurer or the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

CHAP. 18.

The Metropolitan Poor Amendment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Maintenance of in-door poor to be a charge upon the Metropolitan Common Poor Fund.
2. The maintenance of officers to be allowed as part of their salaries.
3. Financial statement of guardians.
4. Construction. Short title.

An Act to provide for the equal distribution over the Metropolis of a further portion of the charge for the Relief of the Poor. (20th June 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. From and after the twenty-ninth day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy, the provisions of the sixty-ninth section of the Metropolitan Poor Act, 1867, directing the repayment of the expenses incurred for the maintenance of lunatics and insane poor, and of patients in any asylum specially provided under that Act for patients suffering from fever and small pox, shall extend to the expenses incurred for the maintenance of paupers in any other asylum now or hereafter to be provided under the said Act, and to the maintenance of paupers above the age of sixteen years in any workhouse in the Metropolis, and the Poor Law Board shall, by its precept under seal, direct the Receiver of the Common Poor Fund to repay such expenses out of that fund, in the same manner as the expenses specified in that section, subject, nevertheless, to the following provisions:—

- (1.) The Poor Law Board shall certify the maximum number of paupers to be maintained in any workhouse or asylum.
- (2.) No repayment shall be made in respect of a greater number of paupers maintained in any asylum on any one day than will complete the maximum number which such asylum shall have been certified to hold as aforesaid, nor in respect of a greater number of paupers maintained in any workhouse on any one day than will, together with the children under the age of sixteen, if any, maintained therein on the same day, complete the maximum number certified for such workhouse.
- (3.) The amount so repaid in respect of such maintenance shall be at the rate of five-pence per day for each pauper in such workhouse or asylum.
- (4.) If the guardians of any union or parish, or the managers of any asylum, shall, during any half year ending at Lady Day or Michaelmas respectively, have refused or neglected to comply with any Order of the Poor Law Board, issued under the Poor Law Acts, directing the alteration or enlargement of the workhouse, the provision of proper drainage, sewers, ventilation, fixtures, furniture, surgical and medical appliances, or directing the appointment of any officer, or prescribing the maximum number of paupers to be maintained in any workhouse or asylum, or the classification of such paupers, such guardians or managers shall be deemed to be in default, and the Poor Law Board may, if they think fit, omit from their precept for such half year, addressed to the Receiver of the Common Poor Fund, the sums which such guardians or the guardians of the unions and parishes comprised in the district to which the asylum belongs, would have been entitled to be repaid under this Act if there had been no such default: Provided that if such guardians or managers shall comply with such Order before the termination of the next ensuing half year, it shall be lawful for the Poor Law Board to include in their precept for that half year the sums so omitted from their precept for the previous half year.

2. The term "salaries of officers," referred to in the said sixty-ninth section of the said Metropolitan Poor Act, shall include the cost of the rations of the officers therein described, according to a scale to be fixed by the Poor Law Board.

3. Within one month of each audit of the accounts of the board of guardians of any union or parish in the metropolis, such board shall deliver, by post or otherwise, to each vestry within such union or parish, one or more copies of the financial statement of such guardians, showing the receipts, expenditure, balances, and liabilities for the half year, as audited.

4. This Act shall be construed in like manner as the Metropolitan Poor Act of 1867, and shall be termed The Metropolitan Poor Amendment Act, 1870.

CHAP. 19.

The Railways (Powers and Construction) Acts, 1864, Amendment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Parts of Acts herein named repealed.
3. Powers of Board of Trade where notice of opposition lodged. As to payment of costs of Orders.
4. Confirmation of Provisional Certificate by Act of Parliament.
5. Section 33 of 27 & 28 Vict. c. 121. repealed. Application of sections 4, 6, 7, and 8 of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 57. Gauge of railways.
6. Amendment of Part IV. of the schedule to 27 & 28 Vict. c. 121. Schedule.

An Act to amend "The Railway Companies Powers Act, 1864," and "The Railway Construction Facilities Act, 1864." (20th June 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend "The Railway Companies Powers Act, 1864," and also "The Railways Construction Facilities Act, 1864:"

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Railways (Powers and Construction) Acts, 1864, Amendment Act, 1870."

2. From and after the passing of this Act, there shall be repealed sections seven and eight of The Railway Companies Powers Act, 1864, and Part I. of the schedule annexed to the said Act; and sections nine and ten of The Railways Construction Facilities Act, 1864, and Part I. of the schedule annexed to the said Act.

3. Any railway or canal company, which for the purposes of this Act shall include the owners, lessees, or proprietors of any canal or inland navigation, may, in case it desires to be heard by counsel, agents, and witnesses against any application for a certificate under The Railway Companies Powers Act, 1864, or for a certificate authorizing any proposed undertaking under The Railways Construction Facilities Act, 1864, (each of which Acts is in this Act respectively referred to as the Act of Application,) lodge at the office of the Board of Trade, within the time prescribed by the schedule to this Act annexed, a notice in writing to that effect (in this Act referred to as a notice of opposition), in the forms set forth in the same schedule, with such variations as circumstances require.

Where a notice of opposition has been lodged the Board of Trade may nevertheless, if they think fit, proceed upon the application, but they shall in such case settle a Provisional Certificate in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

Every Provisional Certificate under this Act shall be settled in like manner, shall certify to the like effect, and contain the like provisions in every respect as if the same were a Draft Certificate settled by the Board of Trade, under the authority of the Act of Application in a like case, but where no notice of opposition was lodged.

When any such Provisional Certificate is confirmed in manner by this Act provided, the same shall have all the force and operation of a certificate duly made and issued by the Board of Trade, under the authority of the Act of Application, but previously to such confirmation it shall not be of any validity whatsoever.

When any Provisional Certificate is settled under this Act notice thereof shall be given by the promoters in like manner as if the same were a Draft Certificate under the Act of Application according to the provisions of such Act in that behalf.

The costs of and connected with the preparation and making of each Provisional Certificate shall be paid by the promoters, and the Board of Trade may require the promoters to give security for such costs before they proceed with the Provisional Certificate.

4. On proof to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade that notice of such certificate was duly given in manner aforesaid, the Board of Trade shall, as soon as they conveniently can after the expiration of seven days after such proof, procure a Bill to be introduced into either House of Parliament for an Act to confirm the Provisional Certificate, which shall be set out at length in the schedule to the Bill.

If while any such Bill is pending in either House of Parliament a petition is presented against any Provisional Certificate comprised therein, the Bill, so far as it relates to the certificate petitioned against, may be referred to a select committee, and the petitioner shall be allowed to appear and oppose as in the case of a Bill for a special Act.

The provisions of the Act of this present session of Parliament, intituled "An Act to empower Committees on Bills confirming Provisional Orders to award costs and to examine witnesses on oath," shall extend and apply to any select committee to whom any Bill to confirm a Provisional Certificate under this Act has been referred, in like manner and subject to the same conditions in every respect as if such Provisional Certificate were a Provisional Order.

The Act of Parliament confirming any Provisional Certificate shall be deemed a Public General Act.

5. From and after the passing of this Act, section thirty-three of the said Railways Construction Facilities Act, 1864, relating to the gauge of railways, shall be and the same is hereby repealed, and every railway made under the authority of a certificate under the said Act or this Act shall be made on such gauge as shall be prescribed by such certificate.

Sections four, six, seven, and eight of the Act of the session of the ninth and tenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fifty-seven, intituled "An Act for regulating the gauge of railways," shall apply to any railway made under the authority of any such certificate as aforesaid, and to the gauge thereby prescribed.

For the purposes of such application, the provisions of the certificate relating to gauge shall be deemed to be included in the provisions of the said Act of the ninth and tenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fifty-seven.

6. All enactments amending, perpetuating, or otherwise affecting the enactments described in Part IV. of the schedule to the said Railways Construction Facilities Act, 1864, and which are now in force, or which may hereafter become law, shall in like manner and subject to the like variations and provisions as the enactments described in the said schedule, extend and apply, as the case may require, to the railway, and to the company or persons empowered by the certificate under the said Act or this Act to make the railway, and shall in all respects operate in relation thereto respectively as if they were expressly repeated and re-enacted in the said Act, save where the same are expressly varied or excepted by such certificate.

An Act to amend "The Mortgage Debenture Act, 1865."

WHEREAS it is expedient that "The Mortgage Debenture Act, 1865," (herein-after called "the Principal Act,") should be amended:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most

Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act shall be construed as one with "The Mortgage Debenture Act, 1865," (which is herein-after referred to as "the Principal Act,") and may be cited for all purposes as "The Mortgage Debenture (Amendment) Act, 1870."

2. The expression "the company" when used in this Act has the same meaning as that attached to it in "the Principal Act."

3. Sections 5, 12, 14, 16, 17, 20, 24, 26, 28, and 36 of "The Mortgage Debenture Act, 1865," are hereby repealed.

4. The securities upon and in respect of which mortgage debentures may be founded and issued under the authority of "the Principal Act" shall be securities affecting property in England or Wales of the following descriptions:

- (a.) Lands, messuages, hereditaments, or real property, or some estate or interest therein:
- (b.) Rates, dues, assessments, or impositions upon the owners or occupiers of lands, messuages, hereditaments, or real property imposed by or under the authority of any Act of Parliament, public or private, Royal Charter, Commission of Sewers or Drainage, or other sufficient legal authority:
- (c.) Charges upon or affecting lands, messuages, hereditaments, or real property executed, made, given, or issued under the authority of any Act of Parliament, public or private:

But from the securities described in paragraph (a.) shall be excepted securities upon mines or mineral property, quarries, brickfields, and factories, mills, and other buildings or works for manufacturing purposes, and also securities upon leasehold estates determinable upon a life or lives, and not renewable, or held for a term of which at the date of the security less than fifty years shall be unexpired, or which are held at a rent beyond one-fourth part of the annual value of the property leased as estimated at the date of the security given to the company and verified by the statutory declaration of a surveyor as herein-after provided with respect to the value of the securities to be registered.

In construing this Act the word "securities" shall be deemed to mean such securities as above defined and restricted, and no others.

5. In lieu of the voluntary declaration required by section 10 of "the Principal Act" to be made by the surveyor or valuer therein mentioned, a statutory declaration in the same form or in the form (A.) in the schedule hereto, or to the like effect, shall hereafter be requisite.

6. Before any company shall be entitled to avail itself of the provisions of "the Principal Act" and this Act, such company shall file in the office of the Land Registry a return containing the following and such other particulars as the registrar may from time to time require, which return shall be under the hand of one, at least, of the directors of the company and the secretary:

- (a.) The amount of the nominal capital of the company:
- (b.) The amount per share and the aggregate amount paid up on the shares:
- (c.) The assets or property of the company at the date of the return, and how invested:
- (d.) The names, addresses, and occupations of the directors and auditors of the company:
- (e.) The registered office of the company.

7. All the registered securities for the time being of the company shall be charged with the payment of the principal moneys and interest from time to time payable upon or in respect of all the mortgage debentures of the company for the time being issued and outstanding, and no registered security, until discharged therefrom, as herein-after provided, shall be applicable to or available for any other purpose than the satisfaction of such principal moneys and interest, or be transferred, disposed of, or otherwise dealt with by the company, unless and until the same shall have been discharged from registration in the manner herein-after provided: Provided, nevertheless, that such registration shall not prevent the company from receiving, applying, and giving a valid discharge for any instalments payable by the terms of the deed creating the security or any annuities or interest which may from time to time be receivable upon or in respect of any such security, unless where a receiver shall have been actually appointed under the provisions of "the Principal Act."

8. Whenever any person for the time being entitled to redeem a security which has been registered under the provisions of this or "the Principal Act" has given notice to the company of his intention so to do, or if the company shall themselves at any time be desirous of freeing and discharging any registered security, the company, in the case first mentioned, shall before the day appointed for the redemption, and, in the case secondly mentioned, may at any time make application to the registrar for the purpose of having such respective security freed and discharged from the charge of the mortgage debentures issued by the company, and upon its being made to appear to his satisfaction that the aggregate of the principal sums secured by all the mortgage debentures of the company then outstanding does not exceed the total amount (to be ascertained in the manner provided by "the Principal Act") of the registered securities of the company at the time being, exclusive of that proposed to be discharged, he shall allow the same to be so freed and discharged, and shall cause an entry to be made in the register of securities of the said security being discharged, and shall on request re-deliver to the company the several deeds or instruments to which such security relates, and which were delivered to the registrar for registration under the provisions in that behalf contained in "the Principal Act," and such entry shall be conclusive evidence of such discharge.

9. If in the case first mentioned in the last preceding section the company shall have made default in procuring the discharge on or before the day appointed for redemption, the person so entitled to redeem, and who has given notice as aforesaid of his intention to redeem, may apply to the High Court of Chancery, by summons, calling upon the company to show cause why such security is not so discharged, and upon hearing such summons the judge shall appoint a day by which the discharge shall be obtained, and in default thereof shall order that the amount of principal and interest money due upon such security shall, by a day to be named in the order, be paid into the bank, to the credit of the Accountant-General of the Court of Chancery, to the account of the company's mortgage debentures, and shall make such order as to the costs of and incidental to the application as the court may deem just.

Upon production to and deposit with the land registrar of such order, together with the Accountant-General's certificate of such payment into court, as aforesaid, the registrar shall make an entry in the proper register of securities of the discharge of such security from the company's mortgage debentures, and shall deliver to the person named in such order the several deeds and instruments to which such security relates, and which were delivered to the registrar under the provisions herein contained.

Upon the company proving to the satisfaction of the court by the production of a certificate of the registrar, either that a security at least equal in value to the amount so paid into court as aforesaid has been registered as aforesaid, or that an equivalent amount of the company's mortgage debentures has been cancelled, the court shall direct the payment out of court to the company of the amount so paid in, together with any dividends that may have accrued due thereon in the meantime.

10. Whenever any person who has executed a mortgage security which has been registered under the provisions of this or the Principal Act is desirous to redeem a part of such security, and of having such part freed and discharged from the mortgage debentures for the time being issued by the company, and then outstanding, the company may make application to the registrar for the purpose of having such part freed and discharged from such mortgage debentures; and upon it being made to appear to the satisfaction of the registrar, by the statutory declaration of a surveyor approved by the Inclosure Commissioners, that the principal moneys secured on the residue of the mortgage security do not exceed two thirds of the value thereof, and upon it also being made to appear to the satisfaction of the registrar that the aggregate of the principal sums secured by all the mortgage debentures of the company then outstanding does not exceed the total amount (to be ascertained in manner provided by the Principal Act) of the registered securities of the company at the time being, exclusive of the part of the security proposed to be discharged, he shall allow the same to be so freed and discharged, and shall cause an entry to be made in the register of securities of such discharge, and shall, on request, re-deliver to the company the several deeds or instruments, if any, which exclusively relate to the part so discharged, and which were delivered to the registrar for registration under the provisions in that behalf contained in the Principal Act, and such entry shall be conclusive evidence of such discharge.

11. Subject to the regulations mentioned in section 19 of "the Principal Act," and on payment of such fees as the registrar, with the sanction of the Lord Chancellor, from time to time prescribes, any person may inspect and make copies of and extracts from the register of securities, the register of mortgage debentures, and the returns made by the company to the registrar, under the provisions of "the Principal Act."

12. In addition to the particulars required to be contained in the quarterly return to be made by the company to the registrar by the 23rd section of "the Principal Act," every such quarterly return shall contain the following particulars:—

- (a.) The names, addresses, and occupations of the directors and auditors of the company;
- (b.) The registered office of the company.

13. Where by any mortgage or other like security to the company the principal is expressly distinguished from the interest, and such principal is made payable by periodical payments, the amount or value of such mortgage or security shall for the purpose of the quarterly returns be deemed to be the amount of principal money exclusive of interest remaining unpaid thereon at the date of the quarterly return.

14. In all cases not provided for by the last section the amount or value of the annuities and other periodical payments to be comprised in the quarterly returns shall be ascertained or estimated by an actuary approved by the registrar.

15. Every mortgage debenture from time to time issued by the company shall be a deed under the common seal of the company duly stamped as a mortgage for the amount secured, and bearing the signatures of at least two of the directors, and the counter-signature of the manager, secretary, or accountant of the company, and shall be in accordance with the form (B.) in the schedule to this Act, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

16. The mortgage debentures shall be for the payment of principal sums, either at a fixed time to be named therein, not less than six months nor exceeding ten years from the date, or at any time on six calendar months previous notice being given to the company by the holder for the time being of the mortgage debenture, or by the company to the holder for the time being of the mortgage debenture, with interest thereon in the meantime at such rate as may be agreed, payable half yearly or otherwise, and no mortgage debenture shall be issued for a less principal sum than fifty pounds.

17. When a mortgage debenture is produced by the company to the registrar discharged or cancelled, he shall make in the register of mortgage debentures an entry of the discharge thereof.

18. Nothing in this Act shall exempt the company from the provisions of any Act relating to joint stock companies, and applicable to the company.

An Act to disfranchise the Boroughs of Bridgwater and Beverley.

WHEREAS representations were made to Her Majesty, in joint addresses of both Houses of Parliament, to the effect that the judges selected in pursuance of The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, for the trial of the petitions complaining of undue elections and returns for the boroughs of Bridgwater and Beverley at the elections of members to serve in Parliament, respectively held for the said boroughs in the month of November one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, had respectively reported to the House of Commons, as to the said borough of Bridgwater that there was reason to believe that bribery extensively prevailed at the said election, and as to the said borough of Beverley that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the said election:

And whereas, in pursuance of such representations, Commissioners were appointed under two several commissions, both dated the twenty-third day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of such bribery and corrupt practices, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament passed in the sixteenth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fifty-seven, intituled "An Act to provide for the more effectual inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices at elections for members to serve in Parliament:" And whereas the Commissioners so appointed reported to Her Majesty:

- (1.) As respects the said borough of Bridgwater, that corrupt practices had extensively prevailed at the said election held in the said month of November one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, and at every preceding election for the borough of Bridgwater into which they had inquired, up to and inclusive of the earliest in date, that is to say, the general election held in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one:

- (2.) As respects the said borough of Beverley, that corrupt practices had prevailed in Beverley at the election of March one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, and that corrupt practices had extensively prevailed in Beverley at the election of August one thousand eight hundred and fifty-seven, and at the elections of the years one thousand eight hundred and fifty-nine, one thousand eight hundred and sixty, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and the said election of the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. That from and after the passing of this Act the boroughs of Bridgwater and Beverley shall respectively cease to return any member or members to serve in Parliament.

2. Whereas the Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices in the said borough of Bridgwater, by their second report, dated the twentieth day of December one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, reported to Her Majesty that the persons named in the schedules marked (Y.) and (Z.) annexed to their said report had been guilty of giving or receiving bribes at the said election in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight: Be it enacted, that none of the persons so named in the said schedules shall have the right of voting for the western division of the county of Somerset in respect of a qualification situated within the said borough of Bridgwater.

3. Whereas the Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices in the borough of Beverley, by their report, dated the twenty-ninth day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy, reported to Her Majesty that certain persons named in the schedule annexed to their said report had been guilty of bribery, in either giving or receiving bribes, at the said election in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight or elections indicated in such schedule: Be it enacted, that none of the persons so named in the said schedule, except Luke Hind, as having been so guilty of bribery at the said election held in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, shall have the right of voting for the east riding of Yorkshire in respect of a qualification situated within the said borough of Beverley.

4. No person against whom any criminal proceeding has been instituted by the Attorney General for such bribery shall be subject to any disqualification under this Act until he shall be or have been adjudged guilty of such bribery.

5. Any copy of either of the said reports by the said Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices in either of the said boroughs of Bridgwater or Beverley, with the schedules thereunto annexed, purporting to be printed by the Queen's Printer, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be sufficient evidence of either of the said reports, and of the schedules annexed thereto.

CHAP. 22.

Turnpike Trusts Arrangements.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Provisional order confirmed. Schedule.

An Act to confirm a certain Provisional Order made under an Act of the fifteenth year of Her present Majesty, to facilitate arrangements for the relief of Turnpike Trusts. (4th July 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Act of the fifteenth year of Her Majesty, chapter thirty-eight, "to facilitate arrangements for the relief of Turnpike Trusts, and to make certain provisions respecting exemptions from Tolls," herein-after referred to as the Principal Act, power is given to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State to make provisional orders for reducing the rate of interest and for extinguishing the arrears of interest on mortgage debts charged or secured on the revenues of turnpike roads, in cases where such revenues are insufficient for the payment in full of the interest charged thereon:

And whereas by the Act of the session of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter forty-six, the Principal Act is extended to turnpike roads the Acts relating to which are continued by any annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, although their revenues are not insufficient for such payments as aforesaid:

And whereas, in pursuance of the Principal Act, and the said Act extending the same, the provisional order referred to in the schedule hereto has been made by Her Majesty's Principal Secretary of State for the Home Department, and there are stated in the said schedule the date of such order, and such particulars relating thereto as are therein specified:

And whereas it is expedient that the said provisional order should be confirmed and made absolute:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The provisional order, the date of which is set forth in the first column of the said schedule, is hereby confirmed, and the provisions thereof shall be of the like force and effect as if it had been expressly enacted by Parliament.

 33. Extent of Act.

An Act to abolish Forfeitures for Treason and Felony, and to otherwise amend the Law relating thereto.

WHEREAS it is expedient to abolish the forfeiture of lands and goods for treason and felony, and to otherwise amend the law relating thereto :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows; (that is to say.)

1. From and after the passing of this Act, no confession, verdict, inquest, conviction, or judgment of or for any treason or felony or felo de se shall cause any attainder or corruption of blood, or any forfeiture or escheat, provided that nothing in this Act shall affect the law of forfeiture consequent upon outlawry.

2. Provided nevertheless, that if any person hereafter convicted of treason or felony, for which he shall be sentenced to death, or penal servitude, or any term of imprisonment with hard labour, or exceeding twelve months, shall at the time of such conviction hold any military or naval office, or any civil office under the Crown or other public employment, or any ecclesiastical benefice, or any place, office, or emolument in any university, college, or other corporation, or be entitled to any pension or superannuation allowance payable by the public, or out of any public fund, such office, benefice, employment, or place shall forthwith become vacant, and such pension or superannuation allowance or emolument shall forthwith determine and cease to be payable, unless such person shall receive a free pardon from Her Majesty, within two months after such conviction, or before the filling up of such office, benefice, employment, or place if given at a later period; and such person shall become, and (until he shall have suffered the punishment to which he had been sentenced, or such other punishment as by competent authority may be substituted for the same, or shall receive a free pardon from Her Majesty,) shall continue thenceforth incapable of holding any military or naval office, or any civil office under the Crown or other public employment, or any ecclesiastical benefice, or of being elected, or sitting, or voting as a member of either House of Parliament, or of exercising any right of suffrage or other parliamentary or municipal franchise whatever within England, Wales, or Ireland.

3. It shall be lawful for any Court by which judgment shall be pronounced or recorded, upon the conviction of any person for treason or felony, in addition to such sentence as may otherwise by law be passed, to condemn such person to the payment of the whole or any part of the costs or expenses incurred in and about the prosecution and conviction for the offence of which he shall be convicted, if to such court it shall seem fit so to do; and the payment of such costs and expenses, or any part thereof, may be ordered by the Court to be made out of any moneys taken from such person on his apprehension, or may be enforced at the instance of any person liable to pay, or who may have paid the same, in such and the same manner (subject to the provisions of this Act) as the payment of any costs ordered to be paid by the judgment or order of any Court of competent jurisdiction in any civil action or proceeding may for the time being be enforced: Provided, that in the meantime and until the recovery of such costs and expenses from the person so convicted as aforesaid, or from his estate, the same shall be paid and provided for in the same manner as if this Act had not passed; and any money which may be recovered in respect thereof from the person so convicted, or from his estate, shall be applicable to the reimbursement of any person or fund by whom or out of which such costs and expenses may have been paid or defrayed.

4. It shall be lawful for any such Court as aforesaid, if it shall think fit, upon the application of any person aggrieved, and immediately after the conviction of any person for felony, to award any sum of money, not exceeding one hundred pounds, by way of satisfaction or compensation for any loss of property suffered by the applicant through or by means of the said felony, and the amount awarded for such satisfaction or compensation shall be deemed a judgment debt due to the person entitled to receive the same from the person so convicted, and the order for payment of such amount may be enforced in such and the same manner as in the case of any costs ordered by the Court to be paid under the last preceding section of this Act.

5. The word "forfeiture," in the construction of this Act, shall not include any fine or penalty imposed on any convict by virtue of his sentence.

6. The expression "convict," as herein-after used, shall be deemed to mean any person against whom, after the passing of this Act, judgment of death, or of penal servitude, shall have been pronounced or recorded by any Court of competent jurisdiction in England, Wales, or Ireland upon any charge of treason or felony.

7. When any convict shall die or be made bankrupt, or shall have suffered any punishment to which sentence of death if pronounced or recorded against him may be lawfully commuted, or shall have undergone the full term of penal servitude for which judgment shall have been pronounced or recorded against him, or such other punishment as may by competent authority have been substituted for such full term, or shall have received Her Majesty's pardon for the treason or felony of which he may have been convicted, he shall thenceforth, so far as relates to the provisions herein-after contained, cease to be subject to the operation of this Act.

8. No action at law or suit in equity for the recovery of any property, debt, or damage whatsoever shall be brought by any convict against any person during the time while he shall be subject to the operation of this Act; and every convict shall be incapable, during such time as aforesaid, of alienating or charging any property, or of making any contract, save as herein-after provided.

9. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, or for any person in that behalf authorized by Her Majesty, under Her Royal Sign Manual (and which authority may be given either generally or with reference to any particular case), if to Her Majesty or to the person so authorized it shall seem fit, by writing under Her Majesty's Royal Sign Manual, or under the hand of the person so authorized as aforesaid, to commit the custody and management of the property of any convict, during Her Majesty's pleasure, to an administrator, to be by such writing appointed in that behalf; and every such appointment may be revoked by the same or the like authority by which it is made; and upon any determination thereof, either by revocation or by the death of any such administrator, a new administrator may be appointed by the same or the like authority from time to time; and every such new administrator shall, upon his appointment, be and be deemed to be the successor-in-law of the former administrator; and all property vested in, and all powers given to, such former administrator, by virtue of this Act, shall thereupon devolve to and become vested in such successor, who shall be bound by all acts lawfully done by such former administrator during the continuance of his office; and the provisions herein-after contained with reference to any administrator shall, in the case of the appointment of more than one person, apply to such administrators jointly.

10. Upon the appointment of any such administrator in manner aforesaid, all the real and personal property, including choses in actions, to which the convict named in such appointment was at the time of his conviction, or shall afterwards while he shall continue subject to the operations of this Act, become or be entitled, shall vest in such administrator for all the estate and interest of such convict therein.

11. If, in the instrument by which any such administrator is appointed, provision shall be made for the remuneration of such administrator out of the property of the convict, the said administrator may receive and retain for his own benefit such remuneration accordingly.

12. The administrator shall have absolute power to let, mortgage, sell, convey, and transfer any part of such property as to him shall seem fit.

13. It shall be lawful for the administrator to pay or cause to be paid out of such property, or the proceeds thereof, all costs and expenses which the convict may have been condemned to pay; and also all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by such convict in and about his defence; and also all such costs, charges, and expenses as the said administrator may incur or be put to in or about the carrying this Act into execution with reference to such property, or with reference to any claims which may be made thereon.

14. The administrator may cause payment or satisfaction to be made out of such property of any debt or liability of such convict which may be established in due course of law, or may otherwise be proved to his satisfaction, and may also cause any property which may come to his hands to be delivered to any person claiming to be justly entitled thereto, upon the right of such person being established in due course of law, or otherwise to his satisfaction.

15. The administrator may cause to be paid or satisfied out of such property such sum of money by way of satisfaction or compensation for any loss of property or other injury alleged to have been suffered by any person through or by means of any alleged criminal or fraudulent act of such convict, as to him shall seem just, although no proof of such alleged criminal or fraudulent act may have been made in any Court of law or equity; and all claims to any such satisfaction or compensation may be investigated in such manner as the administrator shall think fit, and the decision of the administrator thereon shall be binding: Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall take away or prejudice any right, title, or remedy to which any person alleging himself to have suffered any such loss or injury would have been entitled by law if this Act had not passed.

16. The administrator may cause such payments and allowances for the support or maintenance of any wife or child, or reputed child of such convict, or of any other relative or reputed relative of such convict dependent upon him for support, or for the benefit of the convict himself, if and while he shall be lawfully at large under any licence, as to such administrator shall seem fit, to be made from time to time out of such property, or the income thereof.

17. The several powers herein-before given to the said administrator, or any of them, may be exercised by him in such order and course, as to priority of payments or otherwise, as he shall think fit; and all contracts of letting or sale, mortgages, conveyances, or transfers of property, bona fide made by the said administrator under the powers of this Act, and all payments or deliveries over of property bona fide made by or under the authority of the said administrator for any of the purposes herein-before mentioned, shall be binding; and the propriety thereof, and the sufficiency of the grounds on which the said administrator may have exercised his judgment or discretion in respect thereof, shall not be in any manner called in question by such convict, or by any person claiming an interest in such property by virtue of this Act.

18. Subject to the powers and provisions herein-before contained, all such property and the income thereof shall be preserved and held in trust by the said administrator, and the income thereof may, if and when the said administrator shall think proper, be invested and accumulated in such securities as he shall from time to time think fit, for the use and benefit of the said convict and his heirs or legal personal representatives, or of such other persons as may be lawfully entitled thereto, according to the nature thereof; and the same, and the possession, administration, and management thereof, shall re-vest in and be restored to such convict upon his ceasing to be subject to the operation of this Act, or in and to his heirs or legal personal representatives, or such other persons as may be lawfully entitled thereto; and all the powers and authorities by this Act given to the said administrator shall from thenceforth cease and determine, except so far as the continuance thereof may be necessary for the care and preservation of such property or any part thereof, until the same shall be claimed by some person lawfully entitled thereto, or for obtaining payment out of such property, or of the proceeds thereof, of any liabilities, or any costs, charges, or expenses, for which provision is made by this Act; for which purposes such powers and authorities shall continue to be in force until possession of such property shall be delivered up by the said administrator to some person being or claiming to be lawfully entitled thereto.

19. The said administrator shall not be answerable to any person for any property which shall not actually have come to his hands by virtue of this Act, nor for any loss or damage which may happen through any mere omission or non-feasance on his part to any property vested in him by virtue hereof.

20. The costs as between solicitor and client of every action or suit which may be brought against the said administrator with reference to any such property as aforesaid, whether during the time while the same shall be and continue vested in him under this Act or after the same shall cease to be so vested, and all charges and expenses properly incurred by him with reference thereto, shall be a first charge upon and shall be paid out of such property, unless the Court before which such action is tried or such suit is heard shall think fit otherwise to order.

21. If no such administrator as aforesaid shall have been appointed an interim curator of the property of any convict may be appointed by any justices of the peace in petty sessions assembled, or, where there are no petty sessions, by any justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place where such convict before his conviction shall have last usually resided, upon the application of any person who shall be able to satisfy such justice that the application is made bona fide with a view to the benefit of the convict or of his family, or to the due and proper administration and management of his property and affairs; and the interim curator to be appointed may be either the person making the application or any other person willing to accept the office, and competent to discharge its duties, as to such justice shall seem fit.

22. Before making any such appointment the justice shall require the applicant to make oath that no administrator or interim curator of the property of such convict has been to his knowledge or belief already appointed; and the applicant shall also state upon oath, to the best of his knowledge and belief, who are the nearest relatives (including any husband or wife) of such convict, and (if any such there be) where they are residing, and whether any and which of them have consented to or have had notice of such application; and it shall be competent for such justice to require notice of such application to be given to all such persons and in such manner as to such justice shall seem fit.

23. Any interim curator so appointed may be removed, for any cause shown to the satisfaction of the justices or justice or the Court, upon the application of any relative of the convict, or of any person interested in the due and proper administration and management of his property and affairs, either by the petty sessions or justice by whom he was appointed (or, in the event of such justice dying or being unable to act, by any other justice having the like jurisdiction,) or by any Court in which proceedings for an account may be instituted as herein-after provided; and upon the death or removal of any such interim curator a new interim curator may be appointed in the same manner and by the like authority as aforesaid, or (in case any such proceedings shall be then depending) by the Court in which any such proceedings shall be so depending as aforesaid.

24. Every interim curator so appointed as aforesaid shall have power (unless and until an administrator shall be appointed under this Act, in which case the authority of such interim curator shall thenceforth cease and determine,) to sue in his own name as such interim curator, at law or in equity, for the possession and recovery of any part of the property in respect of which he shall have been so appointed, or for damages in respect of any injury thereto, and to defend in his own name as such interim curator any action or suit brought against such convict or against himself in respect of such property, and to receive and give legal discharges for all rents, dividends, interest, and income of or arising from such property, and also to receive and give discharges for any debts due to such convict, or forming part of his property, and to pay and discharge all or any debts due from such convict out of such property, and to settle and adjust accounts with any debtor or creditor of such convict, and generally to manage and administer the property of such convict; and also to make or cause to be made such payments and allowances for the support or maintenance of any wife or child of such convict, or of any other relative dependent on him for support, as shall be specially authorized by any such justice or Court aforesaid (who shall have power from time to time to authorize the same), or by any other Court having competent jurisdiction to authorize the same, out of the income of such property, or (in case such income shall be insufficient for that purpose) out of the capital thereof; and every such interim curator shall be entitled to retain out of such property, or out of the income thereof, all his costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred in and about the discharge of his duties as such curator.

25. Any personal property of such convict may be sold and transferred by such interim curator by and with the authority of such justice or Court as aforesaid, or of any other Court having competent jurisdiction to order the same, but not otherwise; and such interim curator shall be accountable for the proceeds of any property so sold in the same manner as for such property while remaining unsold.

26. All proceedings at law or in equity duly instituted by or against any such interim curator may (in case of an administrator or a new interim curator being afterwards appointed) be continued by or against such administrator or such new interim curator without any abatement thereof, the appointment of such administrator or new interim curator being entered by way of suggestion on the record, or otherwise stated upon the proceedings, according to the practice of such Court; and all acts lawfully done and contracts lawfully made by such interim curator with respect to any property of such convict before the appointment of such administrator or such new interim curator shall be binding upon such administrator or such new interim curator after his appointment.

27. All judgments or orders for the payment of money of any Court of law or equity against such convict which shall have been duly recovered or made, either before or after his conviction, may be executed against any property of such convict under the care and management of any such interim curator as aforesaid, or in the hands of any person who may have taken upon himself the possession or management thereof without legal authority, in the same manner as if such property were in the possession or power of such convict; and all such judgments or orders may likewise be executed by writ of scire facias or otherwise, according to the practice of the Court, against any such property which may be vested in any administrator of the property of such convict under the authority of this Act.

28. It shall be competent for Her Majesty's Attorney General, or other the chief law officer of the Crown for the time being in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, or for any person who (if such convict were dead intestate) would be his heir at law, or entitled to his personal estate, or any share thereof, under the Statutes of Distribution or otherwise, or for any person authorized by Her Majesty's Attorney General, or by such chief law officer as aforesaid, in that behalf, to apply in a summary way to any Court which (if such convict were dead) would have jurisdiction to entertain a suit for the administration of his real or personal estate, to issue a writ of summons calling upon any administrator or interim curator of the property of such convict appointed under this Act, or any person who without legal authority shall have possessed himself of any part of the property of such convict, to account for his receipts and payments in respect of the property of such convict, in such manner as such Court shall direct; and it shall be lawful for such Court thereupon to issue such writ of summons, and to enforce obedience thereto, and to all orders and proceedings of such Court consequent thereon, in the same manner as in any other case of process lawfully issuing out of such Court; and such Court shall thereupon have full power, jurisdiction, and authority to take all such accounts, and to make and give all such orders and directions, as to it shall seem proper or necessary for the purpose of securing the due and proper care, administration, and management of the property of such convict, and the due and proper application of the same and of the income thereof, and the accumulation and investment of such balances, if any, as may from time to time remain in the hands of any such administrator or interim curator, or other person as aforesaid in respect of such property; and so long as any such proceedings shall be pending in any such Court, every such administrator or interim curator, or other person, shall act in the exercise of all powers vested in him under this Act, or otherwise in all respects as such Court shall direct; and it shall be lawful for such Court (if it shall think fit) to authorize and direct any act to be done by any such interim curator which might competently be done by an administrator duly appointed under this Act.

29. Subject to the provisions of this Act, every such administrator, interim curator, and other person as aforesaid shall, from and after the time when such convict shall cease to be subject to the operation of this Act, be accountable to such convict for all property of such convict which shall have been by him possessed or received and not duly administered, in the same manner in which any guardian or trustee is now accountable to his ward or cestuique trust, but subject nevertheless and without prejudice to the administration and application of such property under and according to the powers of this Act.

30. Provided always, that no property acquired by a convict during the time which he shall be lawfully at large under any licence shall vest in any administrator appointed under this Act, but such convict shall be entitled thereto without any interference on the part of any administrator or interim curator appointed under this Act, and during the time last aforesaid the disabilities mentioned in the eighth section of this Act shall, as to such convict, be suspended.

31. From and after the passing of this Act, such portions of the Acts of the thirtieth year of George the Third, chapter forty-eight, and the fifty-fourth year of George the Third, chapter one hundred and forty-six, as enacts that the judgment required by law to be awarded against persons adjudged guilty of high treason shall include the drawing of the person on a hurdle to the place of execution, and, after execution, the severing of the head from the body, and the dividing of the body into four quarters, shall be and are hereby repealed.

32. Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall be deemed to alter or in anywise affect the law relating to felony in England, Wales, or Ireland, except as herein is expressly enacted.

33. This Act shall not apply to Scotland.

3. Composition for stamp on transfers of future stock.
4. Composition for stamp on transfers of terminable annuities.
5. Exemption of transfers from stamp.
6. Payment of composition, and recovery thereof.
7. Amendment of section 11. of former Act.
8. Alteration of reference as to stock certificates.

An Act for making further provision respecting the borrowing of money by the Metropolitan Board of Works.

(4th July 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as The Metropolitan Board of Works (Loans) Act, 1870, and shall have effect as one Act with The Metropolitan Board of Works (Loans) Act, 1869, in this Act referred to as the principal Act; and the principal Act and this Act may be cited together as The Metropolitan Board of Works (Loans) Acts, 1869 and 1870.

2. By way of composition for stamp duty chargeable on transfers of metropolitan consolidated stock issued before the passing of this Act, the Metropolitan Board of Works shall, within seven days after the passing of this Act, pay to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue the sum of nine thousand eight hundred and ninety-five pounds two shillings and sixpence.

3. By way of composition for stamp duty chargeable on transfers of metropolitan consolidated stock from time to time issued after the passing of this Act, the Metropolitan Board of Works shall, within seven days after issuing any such stock, pay to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue a sum calculated at the rate of seven shillings and sixpence for every full sum of one hundred pounds of stock issued, and also for every fractional part of one hundred pounds of stock issued to any holder.

4. By way of composition for stamp duty chargeable on metropolitan annuities from time to time granted after the passing of this Act, the Metropolitan Board of Works shall, within seven days after granting any such annuity, pay to the Commissioners of Inland Revenue a sum calculated at the rate of seven shillings and sixpence for every full sum of one hundred pounds, and also for any fractional part of one hundred pounds, of the value of the annuity, which value shall be computed in such manner as the Treasury from time to time direct.

5. In consideration of the provisions for composition in this Act contained, transfers of metropolitan consolidated stock issued or to be issued, and stock certificates in respect thereof, and transfers of metropolitan annuities, are hereby, notwithstanding anything in the principal Act, exempted from stamp duty.

6. All sums payable by the Metropolitan Board of Works under this Act by way of composition for stamp duty shall be paid out of money raised or to be raised by the issuing of metropolitan consolidated stock, or by the granting of metropolitan annuities; and the same shall be recoverable as stamp duties.

7. Section eleven of the principal Act shall have effect as if in paragraph (1.) thereof "transferor" were substituted for "transferee."

8. In the event of any Act being passed in the present session of Parliament containing provisions in substitution for The Stock Certificate Act, 1863, section sixteen of the principal Act shall have effect as if the substituted provisions were referred to in that section in lieu of The Stock Certificate Act, 1863.

Norwich Voters Disfranchisement.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Disfranchisement of certain voters of the city of Norwich.
 2. Persons against whom proceedings have been instituted not disqualified until adjudged guilty of bribery.
 3. Evidence of report.

An Act to disfranchise certain Voters of the City of Norwich. (4th July 1870.)

WHEREAS the Commissioners appointed under a commission of Her Majesty, dated the twenty-third day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, for the purpose of making inquiries into the existence of corrupt practices at the election of members to serve in Parliament for the city of Norwich, held in the month of November one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, have by their report, dated the fifteenth day of February one thousand eight hundred and seventy, reported to Her Majesty that the several persons named in the schedule marked A. annexed to their report were guilty of bribery; that the several persons named in the schedule marked B. annexed to their report were bribed; and that the several persons named in the schedule marked C. annexed to their report were guilty of corruptly influencing voters by treating:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. From and after the passing of this Act, none of the persons so named in the said schedules, or any of them, shall at any time hereafter have the right of voting at any election of a member or members to serve in Parliament for the city of Norwich.

2. Neither Arthur Bignold, nor Orlando D. Ray, mentioned in schedule A. annexed to the said report, nor any person against whom any criminal proceeding has been instituted by the Attorney General for such bribery, shall be subject to any disqualification under this Act until he shall be or shall have been adjudged guilty of such bribery.

3. Any copy of the said report by the said Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiries into the existence of corrupt practices in the said city of Norwich, with the schedules thereunto annexed, purporting to be printed by the Queen's printers, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be sufficient evidence of the said report, and of the schedules annexed thereto.

An Act to regulate the Sale of Poisons in Ireland. (14th July 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient for the safety of the public that due provision should be made to regulate the sale of poisons in Ireland:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The several articles mentioned in the Schedule A. to this Act annexed shall be deemed to be poisons within the meaning of this Act; and the King and Queen's College of Physicians in Ireland may from time to time, by resolution, declare that any article other than those mentioned in the said schedule and in such resolution named ought to be deemed a poison within the meaning of this Act; and thereupon the said College shall submit the said resolution for the approval of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, and if such approval shall be given, then such resolution and approval shall be advertised in the "Dublin Gazette;" and on the expiration of one month from such advertisement the article named in such resolution shall be deemed to be a poison within the meaning of this Act.

2. It shall be unlawful to sell any poison, either by wholesale or by retail, unless the box, bottle, vessel, wrapper, or cover in which such poison is contained be distinctly labelled with the name of the article, and the word "poison," and with the name and address of the seller of the poison; and it shall be unlawful to sell any of the poisons which are named in the first part of Schedule A. to this Act annexed, or which may hereafter be added thereto under section one of this Act, to any person unknown to the seller, unless such person is introduced by some person known to the seller; and on every sale of any such article the seller shall, before delivery, make or cause to be made an entry in a book to be kept for that purpose, stating, in the form set forth in the Schedule B. to this Act annexed, the date of the sale, the name and address of the purchaser, the name and quantity of the article sold, and the purpose for which it is stated by the purchaser to be required, to which entry the signature of the purchaser and of the person (if any) who introduced him shall be affixed; and any person selling poison otherwise than is herein provided shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds for the first offence, and to a penalty not exceeding ten pounds for the second or any subsequent offence; and for the purposes of this section the person on whose behalf any sale is made by any apprentice or servant shall be deemed to be the seller; but the provisions of this section which are solely applicable to poisons in the first part of the Schedule A. to this Act annexed, or which require that the label shall contain the name and address of the seller, shall not apply to articles to be exported from Ireland by wholesale dealers, nor to sales by wholesale to retail dealers in the ordinary course of wholesale dealing, nor shall any of the provisions of this section apply to any medicine supplied by a duly qualified apothecary, nor apply to any article when forming part of the ingredients of any medicine dispensed by a duly qualified apothecary, provided such medicine be labelled in the manner aforesaid with the name and address of the seller, and the ingredients thereof be entered with the name of the person to whom it is sold or delivered in a book to be kept by the seller for that purpose; and nothing in this Act contained shall repeal or affect any of the provisions of the Act of the fourteenth and fifteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to regulate the Sale of Arsenic."

3. The provisions of the Act of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for preventing the Adulteration of Articles of Food or Drink," shall extend to all articles usually taken or sold as medicines, and every adulteration of any such article shall be deemed an admixture injurious to health.

4. Every penalty recoverable under the provisions of this Act shall be recoverable in a summary way, with respect to the police district of Dublin metropolis subject and according to the provisions of any Act regulating the powers and duties of justices of the peace for such district or of the police of such district, and with respect to other parts of Ireland before a justice or justices of the peace sitting in petty sessions, subject and according to the provisions of the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851, and any Act amending the same, and shall be applied according to the provisions of the Fines Act (Ireland), 1851, or any Act amending the same.

The Protection of Inventions Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Exhibition of new inventions not to prejudice patent rights.
3. Exhibition of designs not to prejudice right to registration.
4. Application of Act to international exhibitions in general.

An Act for the Protection of Inventions exhibited at International Exhibitions in the United Kingdom.

WHEREAS it is expedient that such protection as is herein-after mentioned should be afforded to persons desirous of exhibiting new inventions at exhibitions to be held in the United Kingdom :

1. This Act may be cited as "The Protection of Inventions Act, 1870."

2. The exhibition of any new invention at any international exhibition shall not, nor shall the publication during the period of the holding of such exhibition of any description of such invention, nor shall the user of such invention for the purposes of such exhibition, and within the place where the same may be held, nor shall the user of such invention elsewhere by any person without the privity and consent of the true and first inventor thereof, prejudice the right of the exhibitor thereof, he being the true and first inventor, within six months from the time of the opening of such exhibition, to leave at the office of the Commissioners of Patents a petition for the grant of letters patent for such invention and the declaration accompanying the same, and a provisional specification or a complete specification thereof, under The Patent Law Amendment Act, 1852, and the Acts amending the same, or to obtain provisional protection or letters patent for such invention in pursuance of those Acts, nor invalidate any letters patent which may be granted for such invention upon any such petition as aforesaid.

3. The exhibition at any international exhibition of any new design capable of being registered provisionally under "The Designs Act, 1850," or of any article to which such design is applied, shall not, nor shall the publication during the period of the holding of such exhibition of any description of such design, prejudice the right of any person to register, provisionally or otherwise, such design, or invalidate any provisional or other registration which may be granted for such design.

4. The term "international exhibition" shall mean in this Act the Workmen's International Exhibition to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy; also any of the annual international exhibitions of select works of fine and industrial art and scientific inventions to be held in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one and succeeding years, under the direction of Her Majesty's Commissioners for the Exhibition of one thousand eight hundred and fifty-one; also any international exhibition which the Board of Trade may, upon the application of any persons desirous of holding such exhibition, certify to be in their judgment calculated to promote British art or industry, and to prove beneficial to the mercantile or industrious classes of Her Majesty's subjects.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Remuneration of Attorneys and Solicitors. (14th July 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the remuneration of attorneys and solicitors:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Attorneys' and Solicitors' Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

3. In the construction of this Act, unless where the context otherwise requires, the words following have the significations herein-after respectively assigned to them; that is to say,

The words "attorney or solicitor" mean an attorney, solicitor, or proctor qualified according to the provisions of the Acts for the time being in force relating to the admission and qualification of attorneys, solicitors, or proctors:

"Person" includes a corporation:

"Client" includes any person who, as a principal or on behalf of another person, retains or employs, or is about to retain or employ, an attorney or solicitor, and any person who is or may be liable to pay the bill of an attorney or solicitor for any services, fees, costs, charges, or disbursements.

PART I.—Agreements between Attorneys or Solicitors and their Clients.

4. An attorney or solicitor may make an agreement in writing with his client respecting the amount and manner of payment for the whole or any part of any past or future services, fees, charges, or disbursements in respect of business done or to be done by such attorney or solicitor, whether as an attorney or solicitor or as an advocate or conveyancer, either by a gross sum, or by commission or per-centage, or by salary or otherwise, and either at the same or at a greater or at a less rate as or than the rate at which he would otherwise be entitled to be remunerated, subject to the provisions and conditions in this part of this Act contained: Provided always, that when any such agreement shall be made in respect of business done or to be done in any action at law or suit in equity, the amount payable under the agreement shall not be received by the attorney or solicitor until the agreement has been examined and allowed by a taxing officer of a court having power to enforce the agreement; and if it shall appear to such taxing officer that the agreement is not fair and reasonable he may require the opinion of a court or a judge to be taken thereon by motion or petition, and such court or judge shall have power either to reduce the amount payable under the agreement or to order the agreement to be cancelled and the costs, fees, charges, and disbursements in respect of the business done to be taxed in the same manner as if no such agreement had been made.

5. Such an agreement shall not affect the amount of, or any rights or remedies for the recovery of, any costs recoverable from the client by any other person, or payable to the client by any other person, and any such other person may require any costs payable or recoverable by him to or from the client to be taxed according to the rules for the time being in force for the taxation of such costs, unless such person has otherwise agreed: Provided always, that the client who has entered into such agreement shall not be entitled to recover from any other person under any order for the payment of any costs which are the subject of such agreement more than the amount payable by the client to his own attorney or solicitor under the same.

6. Such an agreement shall be deemed to exclude any further claim of the attorney or solicitor beyond the terms of the agreement in respect of any services, fees, charges, or disbursements in relation to the conduct and completion of the business in reference to which the agreement is made, except such services, fees, charges, or disbursements, if any, as are expressly excepted by the agreement.

7. A provision in any such agreement that the attorney or solicitor shall not be liable for negligence, or that he shall be relieved from any responsibility to which he would otherwise be subject as such attorney or solicitor, shall be wholly void.

8. No action or suit shall be brought or instituted upon any such agreement; but every question respecting the validity or effect of any such agreement may be examined and determined, and the agreement may be enforced or set aside, without suit or action, on motion or petition of any person, or the representative of any person, a party to such agreement, or being or alleged to be liable to pay, or being or claiming to be entitled to be paid, the costs, fees, charges, or disbursements in respect of which the agreement is made, by the court in which the business, or any part thereof, was done, or a judge thereof, or if the business was not done in any court, then, where the amount payable under the agreement exceeds fifty pounds, by any superior court of law or equity or a judge thereof, and where such amount does not exceed fifty pounds, by the judge of a county court which would have jurisdiction in an action upon the agreement.

9. Upon any such motion or petition as aforesaid, if it shall appear to the court or judge that such agreement is in all respects fair and reasonable between the parties, the same may be enforced by such court or judge by rule or order in such manner and subject to such conditions, if any, as to the costs of such motion or petition as such court or judge may think fit; but if the terms of such agreement shall not be deemed by the court or judge to be fair and reasonable, the same may be declared void, and the court or judge shall thereupon have power to order such agreement to be given up to be cancelled, and may direct the costs, fees, charges, and disbursements incurred or chargeable in respect of the matters included therein to be taxed in the same manner and according to the same rules as if such agreement had not been made; and the court or judge may also make such order as to the costs of and relating to such motion or petition, and the proceedings thereon, as to the said court or judge may seem fit.

10. When the amount agreed for under any such agreement has been paid by or on behalf of the client, or by any person chargeable with or entitled to pay the same, any court or judge having jurisdiction to examine and enforce such an agreement may, upon application by the person who has paid such amount, within twelve months after the payment thereof, if it appears to such court or judge that the special circumstances of the case require the agreement to be re-opened, re-open the same, and order the costs, fees, charges, and disbursements to be taxed, and the whole or any portion of the amount received by the attorney or solicitor to be repaid by him, on such terms and conditions as to the court or judge may seem just.

Where any such agreement is made by the client in the capacity of guardian, or of trustee under a deed or will, or of committee of any person or persons whose estate or property will be chargeable with the amount payable under such agreement, or with any part of such amount, the agreement shall before payment be laid before the taxing officer of a court having jurisdiction to enforce the agreement, and such officer shall examine the same, and may disallow any part thereof, or may require the direction of the court or a judge to be taken thereon by motion or petition; and if in any such case the client pay the whole or any part of the amount payable under the agreement, without the previous allowance of such officer or court or judge as aforesaid, he shall be liable at any time to account to the person whose estate or property is charged with the amount paid, or with any part thereof, for the amount so charged; and if in any such case the attorney or solicitor accept payment without such allowance, any court which would have had jurisdiction to enforce the agreement may, if it think fit, order him to refund the amount so received by him under the agreement.

11. Nothing in this Act contained shall be construed to give validity to any purchase by an attorney or solicitor of the interest, or any part of the interest, of his client, in any suit, action, or other contentious proceeding to be brought or maintained, or to give validity to any agreement by which an attorney or solicitor retained or employed to prosecute any suit or action stipulates for payment only in the event of success in such suit, action, or proceeding.

12. Nothing in this Act contained shall give validity to any disposition, contract, settlement, conveyance, delivery, dealing, or transfer, which may be void or invalid against a trustee or creditor in bankruptcy, arrangement, or composition, under the provisions of the laws relating to bankruptcy.

13. Where an attorney or solicitor has made an agreement with his client in pursuance of the provisions of this Act, and anything has been done by such attorney or solicitor under the agreement, and before the agreement has been completely performed by him, such attorney or solicitor dies or becomes incapable to act, an application may be made to any court which would have jurisdiction to examine and enforce the agreement by any party thereto, or by the representatives of any such party, and such court shall thereupon have the same power to enforce or set aside such agreement, so far as the same may have been acted upon, as if such death or incapacity had not happened; and such court, if it shall deem the agreement to be in all respects fair and reasonable, may order the amount due in respect of the past performance of the agreement to be ascertained by taxation, and the taxing officer in ascertaining such amount shall have regard so far as may be to the terms of the agreement, and payment of the amount found to be due may be enforced in the same manner as if the agreement had been completely performed by the attorney or solicitor.

14. If, after any such agreement as aforesaid shall have been made, the client shall change his attorney or solicitor before the conclusion of the business to which such agreement shall relate (which he shall be at liberty to do notwithstanding such agreement), the attorney or solicitor, party to such agreement, shall be deemed to have become incapable to act under the same within the meaning of section thirteen of this Act; and upon any order being made for taxation of the amount due to such attorney or solicitor in respect of the past performance of such agreement, the court shall direct the taxing master to have regard to the circumstance under which such change of attorney or solicitor has taken place; and, upon such taxation, the attorney or solicitor shall not be deemed entitled to the full amount of the remuneration agreed to be paid to him unless it shall appear that there has been no default, negligence, improper delay, or other conduct on his part affording reasonable ground to the client for such change of attorney or solicitor.

15. Except as in this part of this Act provided, the bill of an attorney or solicitor for the amount due under an agreement made in pursuance of the provisions of this Act shall not be subject to any taxation, nor to the provisions of the Act of the sixth and seventh Victoria, chapter seventy-three, and the Acts amending the same, respecting the signing and delivery of the bill of an attorney or solicitor.

PART II.—General Provisions.

16. An attorney or solicitor may take security from his client for his future fees, charges, and disbursements, to be ascertained by taxation or otherwise.

17. Subject to any general rules or orders hereafter to be made, upon every taxation of costs, fees, charges, or disbursements the taxing officer may allow interest at such rate and from such time as he thinks just on moneys disbursed by the attorney or solicitor for his client, and on moneys of the client in the hands of the attorney or solicitor, and improperly retained by him.

18. Upon any taxation of costs, the taxing officer may, in determining the remuneration, if any, to be allowed to the attorney or solicitor for his services, have regard, subject to any general rules or orders hereafter to be made, to the skill, labour, and responsibility involved.

19. Whenever any decree or order shall have been made for payment of costs in any suit, and such suit shall afterwards become abated, it shall be lawful for any person interested under such decree or order to revive such suit, and thereupon to prosecute and enforce such decree or order, and so on from time to time as often as any such abatement shall happen.

20. From and after the passing of this Act, it shall be lawful for an attorney or solicitor to perform all such acts as appertain solely to the office of a proctor, in any Ecclesiastical Court other than the Provincial Courts of the Archbishops of Canterbury and of York, and the Diocesan Court of the Bishop of London, without incurring any forfeiture or penalty, and to make the same charges which a proctor would be entitled to make, and to recover the same, any enactment or enactments to the contrary notwithstanding.

8. Regulation as to closing of houses, &c.
9. Avoidance of licences upon refusal to renew certificate.
10. As to beer dealer's additional retail licence.
11. Power to justices to postpone applications for renewals.
12. Limit of mitigation of penalties.
13. Houses licensed to retail sweets.
14. Persons convicted of felony disqualified from selling spirits by retail.
15. Visitation of suspected houses.
16. Sect. 6. of 5 G. 4. c. 54., sect. 2. of 6 G. 4. c. 81., and sect. 6. of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 67., so far as relates to brewers' retail licences, repealed.
17. Duration of the principal Act and of this Act.

An Act to amend and continue "The Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869."

(14th July 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Wine and Beerhouse Act Amendment Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

3. In this Act the words "the principal Act" mean the Wine and Beerhouse Act, 1869, and the word "sweets" includes sweets, made wines, mead, and metheglin.

4. The provisions of the principal Act with reference to the grant, duration, and transmission of certificates shall be amended as follows; (that is to say,)

- (1.) The seventh section of the principal Act shall be read as if for the words "constable or peace officer acting within such parish, township, or place," there were substituted the words "the superintendent of police of the district," and the notice required by that section to be given to any overseer or constable may be served by a registered letter through the post:

- (2.) Where a certificate is now required to be signed by a majority of justices, it shall be sufficient if, instead of such signature, the concurrence of such majority be signified by means of an impression from an official seal or stamp, in such form as the justices may direct, affixed in the presence of the justices in sessions assembled, and verified in the case of each certificate by the signature of their clerk. Any seal purporting to be so affixed and verified shall be received in evidence without further proof; and if any unauthorised person imitate or affix an impression of such seal on any certificate or imitation of a certificate, or knowingly use a certificate or imitation of a certificate falsely purporting to be sealed in pursuance of this section, he shall be guilty of forgery:
- (3.) For every certificate granted by way of renewal under the principal Act or this Act, there shall be payable to the clerk of the justices the sum of four shillings for all matters to be done by such clerk, and one shilling for the constable or officer for service of notices; and if any clerk of justices demand or receive any greater or further fee or payment in respect of any such renewal, whether for himself or for any other officer or person, he shall, upon summary conviction, be liable to a penalty of five pounds:
- (4.) It shall be in the discretion of the justices to whom an application for a transfer is made, either to allow or refuse the application, or to adjourn the consideration thereof:
- (5.) The proviso of the fifth section of the principal Act and the ninth section of the principal Act shall be repealed, and, subject to the provisions of this section, all the provisions of the Act of the ninth year of George the Fourth, chapter sixty-one, and Acts amending the same, relating to the time for which justices licences are to be in force, and relating to the fees payable for such licences, and relating to the transfer, removal, and transmission of such licences, and the grant of licences upon assignment, death, change of occupancy, or other contingency, and relating to copies of such licences, and relating to grants or transfers of such licences without the attendance of an applicant who is hindered by sickness, infirmity, or other reasonable cause, shall have effect with regard to certificates granted or to be granted under the principal Act and this Act.

5. The provisions of the seventeenth and nineteenth sections of the principal Act as to convictions shall extend to convictions for offences against the principal Act or this Act: Provided always, that the period of three years shall be substituted for the period of five years named in clause seventeen of the said Act.

6. Where by the principal Act, or any other Act or Acts, a person licensed to retail beer, cider, or wine, not to be consumed on the premises, is subject to any penalty or forfeiture for taking, or for authorising or suffering to be taken, any beer, cider, or wine out of such premises for the purpose of being for his benefit or profit drunk or consumed on or in other premises or places with intent to evade the provisions of any Act, or the conditions of his licence, he shall be subject to the like penalties and forfeitures for taking, or authorising or suffering to be taken, any beer, cider, or wine out of his premises for the purpose of being for his benefit or profit drunk or consumed on or in any place, whether enclosed or not, and whether or not a public thoroughfare, with intent to evade the provisions of any such Act or the conditions of his licence.

The fifteenth section of the principal Act shall be read as if after the word "house" there were inserted the words "by any person other than a servant or inmate of such house."

The sixteenth section of the principal Act shall be read as if for the words "convicted of keeping his house open," there were substituted the words "convicted of opening or of keeping open his house."

Any constable or officer of police who finds any person present in a house licensed for the sale of any excisable or distilled or fermented liquor at a time when such house is by law required to be closed, may demand the name and address of such person; and if any such person when so required refuse to give his name and address, or give a false name or address, he shall be liable on summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings; and any person who when so required refuses or neglects to give his name or address may be apprehended by such constable or officer, and detained until he can be carried before a justice of the peace.

7. The nineteenth section of the principal Act shall extend to licences granted by way of renewal from time to time of licences in force on the first day of May one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, whether such licences continue to be held by the same person or have been or may be transferred to any other person or persons.

The second and third provisoes of the said nineteenth section of the principal Act shall be read as if production of the certificate and record of convictions on the certificate were therein referred to instead of production of the licence and record of convictions on the licence, and as if for the expressions "two justices" and "justices" respectively, there were substituted the words "justice or justices."

Where a conviction is recorded on a certificate, in pursuance of the principal Act as amended by this Act, the clerk to the convicting justices shall also make and keep a record of such conviction, and of the fact that it has been recorded on the certificate.

Where a conviction of any person has, before the passing of this Act, been recorded on a licence in pursuance of the principal Act, or on a certificate in pursuance of this Act, the justices to whom such person applies for a renewal of his certificate shall cause such conviction to be recorded on the renewed certificate.

Any record of a conviction upon a licence or certificate, and also any copy of a record of a conviction made or kept by a clerk to the convicting justices, if such copy purport to be signed by the clerk by whom the record was made or is kept, shall for all purposes be sufficient evidence of such conviction, and of the fact that it was recorded on the licence or certificate.

8. Where any person is required by law to close any house or place for the sale or consumption in any manner of any exciseable, distilled, or fermented liquor during any days or times, subject in case of default to any penalties, he shall, subject in case of default to the like penalties, close such house or place during the same days or times for the sale or consumption of all other liquors, and of all articles whatsoever, notwithstanding any Act, law, licence, or certificate under authority whereof he might otherwise keep open such house or place for the sale or consumption of any such other liquor or article.

9. Where renewal of any certificate granted under the principal Act is refused, any licence held under authority thereof shall, if the person aggrieved do not give notice of appeal with the requisite security in that behalf within the time limited for such notice, or if such notice having been given the appeal be not prosecuted or be dismissed, become void to all intents from the time of such failure to give notice of or to prosecute the appeal or of such dismissal, as the case may be: Provided that where the excise licence shall expire before the appeal has been heard and determined, the appellant shall be permitted to carry on and exercise the trade or business on such terms as the Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall direct until the appeal shall have been heard and determined or withdrawn, and no longer.

10. A certificate for an additional licence to the holder of a strong beer dealer's licence to retail beer under the provisions of the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh of Her Majesty, chapter thirty-three, shall not after the passing of this Act, except by way of renewal from time to time of a certificate in force at the time of the passing of this Act, be granted unless upon the like proof of qualification according to rating as is required in the case of licences to retail beer for consumption on the premises under the provisions of the Acts recited in the principal Act for permitting the general sale of beer and cider by retail in England.

11. Where any applicant for the grant or renewal of a certificate has, through inadvertence or misadventure, failed to comply with any of the preliminary requirements of the principal Act or this Act, or any Act incorporated therewith, the justices may, if they shall so think fit, and upon such terms as they think proper, postpone the consideration of the application to an adjourned meeting, and if at such adjourned meeting the justices shall be satisfied that such terms have been complied with, they may proceed to grant or withhold such certificate as if the preliminary requirements of the principal Act had been complied with.

12. Where any person holding a certificate under the principal Act is convicted of any offence against the said Act or this Act, or against any of the Acts recited or mentioned in the principal Act, or against the tenor or conditions of any licence held by him under a certificate granted in pursuance of the principal Act, it shall not be lawful for the justices before whom he is convicted to mitigate or reduce the penalty for such offence to a less sum than twenty shillings: Provided that nothing herein contained shall extend to authorise the mitigation or reduction of any penalty, whether of excise or police, to a less sum than the minimum to which the same may, under the provisions of any other Acts, be mitigated or reduced.

13. All the provisions of the Act of the eighteenth and nineteenth of Her Majesty, chapter one hundred and eighteen, for authorising the entry by constables into houses or places of public resort for the sale of fermented or distilled liquors, shall extend to authorise such entry on all days and at any time into any house or place in which any person sells exciseable liquors or sweets by retail under any licence in that behalf, whether the same are sold for consumption on the premises or otherwise.

14. Every person convicted of felony shall for ever be disqualified from selling spirits by retail, and no licence to sell spirits by retail shall be granted to any person who shall have been so convicted as aforesaid; and if any person shall, after having been so convicted as aforesaid, take out or have any licence to sell spirits by retail, the same shall be void to all intents and purposes; and every person who, after being so convicted as aforesaid, shall sell any spirits by retail in any manner whatever, shall incur the penalty for doing so without a licence.

15. Where an information on oath is made before any justice of the peace that there is reasonable ground for believing that any fermented, distilled, or exciseable liquors or sweets are being unlawfully sold or kept for sale at any premises or place for the retail whereat of fermented, distilled, or exciseable liquors or sweets no licence is in force, such justice may in his discretion grant a warrant under his hand to any superintendent, inspector, sergeant, or other officer or officers of police, by virtue whereof it shall be lawful for the officer or officers named in the warrant at any time or times within one month from the date thereof to enter, and if need be by force, the premises or place named in the warrant, and every part thereof, and to search for and seize any fermented, distilled, or exciseable liquors or sweets there found which there is reasonable ground to suppose are in such premises or place for the purpose of unlawful sale at such or any other premises or place; and if any person, by himself or by any other person acting by or with his direction, permission, or consent, refuse or neglect to admit to any part of any such premises or place any officer or person demanding admittance in pursuance of the provisions of this section, he shall be liable upon summary conviction to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

Any liquor seized in pursuance of the provisions of this section shall be sold in such manner as two justices in petty sessions may direct, and the proceeds shall be applied in the same manner as penalties summarily imposed by the same justices for sale without a licence might be applied.

16. From the passing of this Act, so much of the Acts of the fifth of George the Fourth, chapter fifty-four, sixth George the Fourth, chapter eighty-one, and thirteenth and fourteenth of Her Majesty, chapter sixty-seven, as authorises the grant to brewers of beer of brewers licences to retail beer not to be consumed on the premises where sold, shall be repealed, and no such licence shall be granted after the passing of this Act, whether to a new applicant or by way of renewal: Provided that a person who at the passing of this Act holds any such licence shall continue to be subject to all the like regulations and conditions so long as such licence remains in force, and shall be subject to the like penalties for breach of any such regulations and conditions committed while such licence remains in force as if this Act had not been passed.

17. The principal Act shall be continued and be in force and this Act shall be in force for two years from the date of the passing of this Act, and until the end of the then next session of Parliament.

CHAP. 30.

The Wages Attachment Abolition Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. No order of attachment of wages after passing of Act.
2. Short title.

An Act to abolish Attachment of Wages. (14th July 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Order in Council made on the eighteenth day of November one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven, certain of the provisions of "The Common Law Procedure Act, 1854," were extended and applied to all the Courts of Record established under the provisions of "The County Courts Act, 1846," and also to the City of London Courts of Record as constituted by "The County Courts Act, 1867:"

And whereas much inconvenience has arisen by the attachment of wages to satisfy judgments recovered in some of such first-mentioned Courts, and it is expedient to prevent the attachment of wages to satisfy judgments recovered in any Court of Record or inferior Court:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same,

1. That after the passing of this Act no order for the attachment of the wages of any servant, labourer, or workman shall be made by the judge of any Court of Record or inferior Court.
2. That this Act may be cited as "The Wages Attachment Abolition Act, 1870."

CHAP. 31.

Consolidated Fund (£9,000,000).

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. There may be applied for the service of the year ending 31st March 1871 the sum of 9,000,000l. out of the Consolidated Fund.
2. Treasury may borrow 9,000,000l. on the credit of this Act.
3. Interest on moneys borrowed.

An Act to apply the sum of nine million pounds out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the year ending the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards making good the supply which we have cheerfully granted to Your Majesty in this session of Parliament, have resolved to grant unto Your Majesty the sum herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. There may be issued and applied, for or towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty for the service of the year ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, the sum of nine million pounds out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being are hereby authorised and empowered to issue and apply the same accordingly.

2. The Commissioners of the Treasury may borrow upon the credit of the sum granted by this Act out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland an amount not exceeding in the whole the sum of nine million pounds, and such amount may be borrowed by the said Commissioners from time to time in such sums as may be required for the public service, and shall be placed to the credit of the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, and be available to satisfy any orders for credits granted or to be granted on the said account, under the provisions of the "Exchequer and Audit Departments Act, 1866."

3. The sums borrowed from time to time under the authority of this Act shall bear interest not exceeding the rate of five pounds per centum per annum, and the principal and interest of all such sums shall be paid out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund at any period not later than the next succeeding quarter to that in which the said sums shall have been borrowed.

16. Poundage to be divided between assessors and collectors. Schedules.

An Act to grant certain Duties of Customs and Inland Revenue, and to repeal and alter other Duties of Customs and Inland Revenue.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards raising the necessary supplies to defray Your Majesty's public expenses, and making an addition to the public revenue, have freely and voluntarily resolved to give and grant unto Your Majesty the several duties herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted, and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1870."

PART I.

AS TO CUSTOMS.

2. There shall be charged, collected, and paid, for the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, the duties of customs specified in schedule (A.) to this Act, and there shall be allowed the several drawbacks specified in the said schedule; and all the provisions contained in any Act relating to customs duties, and drawbacks, and in force at the time of the passing of this Act, shall, so far as the same are applicable, have full force and effect with respect to the said duties and drawbacks of customs granted and allowed by this Act.

PART II.

AS TO EXCISE.

Repeal and Modification of certain Duties.

3. The duties of excise specified in this section shall cease to be payable on the several days herein-after mentioned; that is to say,

On the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and seventy,—

The duty of two pounds upon the license to be taken out by every hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, and other trading person who shall travel and trade on foot in Great Britain without any horse or other beast bearing or drawing burthen, and shall carry his goods, wares, or merchandise to and sell or expose for sale the same at other men's houses only, and not in or at any house, shop, room, booth, stall, or other place whatever belonging to or hired or occupied or used by him for that purpose in any town to which he may travel:

The duty of two pounds and two shillings upon a license to a person exercising the trade or calling of a hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, or other trading person going from place to place in Ireland, carrying to sell or exposing, to sale any goods, wares, or merchandise, and travelling on foot with or without a servant or other person, employed in carrying goods of any such hawker, pedlar, or petty chapman, but without a horse or other beast of burthen.

On the sixth day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy,—

The duty upon a license to a maker of paper, pasteboard, or scaleboard;

The duty upon a license to a maker of soap for sale;

The duty upon a license to a maker of stills in Scotland and Ireland.

On the second day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy,—

The duty of two shillings and sixpence upon a license to be taken out by any person who shall sell playing cards, not being a maker thereof;

but the enactments relating to the said duties respectively shall remain in full force and effect as to any duties which shall be owing or in arrear on the said days respectively, and also as to any offences which shall have been committed against any of the said enactments previous to the said days respectively.

4. On and after the sixth day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy, it shall not be necessary for any person to take out a license as a dealer in plate, in order to enable him to sell watch cases which shall have been made by him.

5. From and after the passing of this Act, it shall not be necessary for any person to take out an excise license as an auctioneer, in order to enable him to sell fish by auction upon the sea-shore where the same shall have been first landed.

Germinating Grain for Animals.

6. It shall be lawful for any farmer in Great Britain to germinate grain to be consumed by animals under the following conditions; that is to say,—

1. He shall deliver to the officer of excise of the district a notice in writing describing the particular building or place, or buildings or places, in which he intends to steep and germinate and in which he intends to keep the grain when steeped and germinated :

2. Every such building or place shall be situate on the farm upon which the grain is to be consumed, and at a distance of a quarter of a mile at least from any malthouse, and from any kiln upon which malt or grain could be dried, or, if not so situated, shall be otherwise situate to the satisfaction of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue :
3. Every such building or place shall at all times be open to the inspection of any officer of excise :
4. The grain, after being steeped or germinated, shall not be dried or ground or crushed in any manner whatsoever :
5. The grain shall be wholly consumed by animals on the farm upon which it shall have been steeped and germinated.

If any person shall germinate any grain, or shall keep or have in his custody or possession any germinated grain, otherwise than as allowed by this section, or shall prevent or hinder any officer of excise from inspecting any building or place used or entered by him for the purpose of steeping and germinating grain, or used or entered by him for the purpose of keeping grain when steeped and germinated; or shall dry, grind, or crush, or permit or suffer to be dried, ground, or crushed, any steeped or germinated grain, contrary to the provisions of this section; or shall use or consume, or permit or suffer to be used or consumed, any steeped and germinated grain, otherwise than as directed by this section, he shall forfeit all such grain and the penalty of one hundred pounds; and every person who shall be convicted of any of the offences aforesaid shall be incapable after such conviction of steeping and germinating grain under the provisions of this section.

Grant of Duties.

7. There shall be charged, collected, and paid, for the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, the duties of excise specified in schedule (B.) to this Act; and all the provisions contained in any Act relating to excise duties, and in force at the time of the passing of this Act, shall, so far as the same are applicable, have full force and effect with respect to the said duties of excise granted by this Act.

Sugar used in brewing.

8. In addition to any enactments now in force in relation to sugar to be used by brewers of beer for sale in the brewing and making of beer, the following provisions shall have effect in relation to sugar so to be used :—

1. The brewer shall on the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and seventy enter in a book or paper to be provided by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue an account in pounds weight avoirdupois of the quantity of sugar then in his possession, and from time to time a like account of every quantity of sugar subsequently received by him, and he shall make such entry on the day on which he shall receive the sugar :
2. The brewer shall keep the said book or paper at all times in some public and open part of his entered premises ready for the inspection of the officers of excise, and he shall permit any officer of excise at any time to inspect the said book or paper, and to make any entry therein or extract therefrom, and also to take away the said book or paper, upon leaving another for the use of the brewer :
3. The brewer shall not receive any sugar except in a package containing two hundredweight of sugar at the least, unless the sugar shall be contained in the package in which it shall have been imported into the United Kingdom, and shall be in the same state as when imported :
4. The brewer shall not receive any sugar unless accompanied by an invoice or delivery note specifying the quantity and the true name and address of the person from whom the sugar shall have been purchased :
5. The brewer shall produce and deliver to the officer of excise who shall first survey or visit his brewery after the receipt of any sugar, the invoice or delivery note which shall have accompanied such sugar, and he shall allow the officer to retain the said invoice or delivery note so long as may be necessary to enable him to compare the same with the book or paper in which the account of the sugar is required to be entered :
6. The brewer shall deposit all sugar received by him, immediately upon the receipt thereof, in the proper place entered by him for keeping or storing sugar, and shall keep the same therein, separate and apart from all other sugar, for the period of twenty-four hours from the time when such sugar shall have been so deposited, unless such sugar shall have been previously examined by an officer of excise :
7. The brewer shall permit any officer of excise at any time to take an account of the sugar in his possession, or any part thereof, and shall furnish the officer taking such account with proper scales and weights, and with such assistance as may be necessary to enable him conveniently to take such account:

8. The brewer shall not remove any sugar from his brewery, nor dispose thereof in any manner other than by dissolving the same in the mash tun or other vessel duly entered with the proper officer of excise for that purpose:
9. The brewer shall permit any officer of excise to gauge any wort or solution made from sugar, and also to take a sample or samples from such wort or solution; and if upon examination of the sample or samples it shall be found that the wort or solution contained an amount of sugar exceeding the quantity used in making such wort or solution, according to the entry made by the brewer in the proper book or paper provided for that purpose, such amount to be ascertained according to a table to be approved by the Commissioners of Inland Revenue for showing the quantity of sugar contained in any given quantity of wort or solution, according to the specific gravity thereof as ascertained by any saccharometer ordered to be used by the said Commissioners, the brewer shall be deemed to have committed an offence against this section; provided that it shall not be necessary on the trial of any information or other proceeding to produce or give in evidence any order of the said Commissioners approving such table, or ordering the use of any saccharometer.

For any offence against this section the brewer shall forfeit the penalty of one hundred pounds.

9. The proper officer of excise shall keep a stock account of the sugar received and used by a brewer of beer for sale for brewing and making beer, and shall debit the brewer with the quantity of sugar received, and shall credit him with the quantities used in brewing, and if upon taking the stock at any time any officer of excise shall find that the quantity of sugar remaining in the possession of the brewer shall be less than it ought to be, the deficiency shall be deemed to have been used in the brewing and making of beer, and the brewer shall forfeit, over and above any other penalty to which he may be liable, a penalty of double the amount of duty on such deficiency according to the rate of excise duty payable on sugar used in the brewing and making of beer at the time such deficiency shall be found, but the said penalty of double duty shall not be incurred if the deficiency shall be less than a quantity equal to two per cent. upon the balance remaining at the last preceding stock taking added to the quantities subsequently received: Provided always, that in taking the account of the stock of sugar in the possession of a brewer the weight that shall at any time have been marked upon any package of sugar by any officer of customs or excise shall be deemed to be the true weight, unless such package shall have since undergone some alteration, or the officer of excise who shall take the stock shall be dissatisfied with the weight so marked.

10. Whereas by the laws in force every brewer of beer for sale is required to enter in the book or paper provided for the purpose of his entering therein the quantity of malt and sugar intended to be used by him in the brewing of beer the particular hour of the day at which he intends to mash any malt or to dissolve any sugar: Be it enacted, that every such brewer shall also enter in the said book or paper the respective quantities of the malt and sugar intended to be used two hours at the least before the particular hour which he shall have entered in the said book or paper as the hour at which he intends to mash the malt or to dissolve the sugar, under the like penalty for any refusal or neglect to make such entry as is hereby directed to be made in such book or paper, or for cancelling, obliterating, or altering the same, as by the laws in force such brewer is subject and liable to for any refusal or neglect to make any other entry therein, or for cancelling, obliterating, or altering any such other entry.

Horses kept for Husbandry.

11. Whereas doubts have arisen with respect to the liability of horses or mules kept solely for the purpose of husbandry to duty: Be it enacted, that from and after the passing of this Act no person shall be required to take out a license under the Act of the thirty-second and thirty-third years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fourteen, for any horse or mule kept by him solely for the purpose of husbandry, on account of such horse or mule being used or employed in drawing materials for the repair of roads and highways of the parish of which he is a rated occupier, and whether for hire or otherwise.

PART III.

AS TO STAMP DUTIES.

12. On the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and seventy the stamp duties on newspapers shall cease and determine.

13. On the first day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy the stamp duties on policies of insurance under the tenth section of the Act passed in the twenty-eighth and twenty-ninth years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter ninety-six, shall cease and determine, and in lieu thereof, on and after the first day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy, there shall be charged and paid upon and for every policy of insurance, for any payment agreed to be made upon the death of any person, only from accident or violence, or otherwise than from a natural cause, or as compensation for personal injury, or by way of indemnity against loss or damage of or to any property, a stamp duty of one penny.

PART IV.

AS TO INCOME TAX.

14. There shall be charged, collected, and paid, for the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, the duties of income tax specified in schedule (C.) to this Act; and all such provisions contained in any Act relating to the duties of income tax as were in force on the fifth day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and are not repealed by this Act, shall have full force and effect with respect to the said duties of income tax granted by this Act, so far as the same shall be consistent with the provisions of this Act; and for the purposes of this Act the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two mentioned in the forty-third section of the Act passed in the twenty-fifth year of Her Majesty's reign, chapter twenty-two, shall be read as and deemed to mean the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

15. The provisions contained in the sixth and seventh sections of the Act passed in the thirty-second and thirty-third years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter fourteen, are hereby repealed.

PART V.

AS TO DUTIES ON INHABITED HOUSES.

16. The poundage now payable to collectors in respect of the amount of the duties on inhabited houses collected and paid to the proper officer for receipt shall be divided in each separate collection between the assessors and collectors in equal proportions.

An Act to amend the Acts relating to the Export of unseasonable Salmon.

WHEREAS by the third section of "The Salmon Acts Amendment Act, 1863," it is amongst other things provided, that "the burden of proving that any salmon entered for exportation from any part of the United Kingdom to parts beyond the seas between the third day of September and the second day of February following is not so entered in contravention of the said Act shall lie on the person entering the same for exportation:"

And whereas it is expedient to make further provision for preventing the exportation of salmon that cannot legally be sold within the limits of the United Kingdom:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Salmon Acts Amendment Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall not come into operation before the third day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy, which day is hereinafter referred to as "the commencement of this Act."

3. From and after the commencement of this Act, the said third section of "The Salmon Acts Amendment Act, 1863," shall be read and construed as if the words "second day of February" were omitted therefrom, and the words "thirtieth day of April" were inserted instead of the said omitted words.

4. The sixty-fifth section of "The Salmon Fishery Act, 1865," shall be read and construed as if the words "second day of February" were omitted therefrom, and the words "thirtieth day of April" were inserted instead of the said omitted words.

Charitable Funds Investment.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Corporations and trustees holding money in trust for any public or charitable purpose may invest the same in real securities.
2. Proviso for cases in which the equity of redemption of the premises may be barred or released.
3. Interpretation of terms.

An Act to amend the Law as to the Investment on Real Securities of Trust Funds held for public and charitable purposes.
(1st August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the investment on real securities of trust funds held for public and charitable purposes:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. It shall be lawful for all corporations and trustees in the United Kingdom holding moneys in trust for any public or charitable purpose to invest such moneys on any real security authorised by or consistent with the trusts on which such moneys are held, without being deemed thereby to have acquired or become possessed of any land within the meaning of the laws relating to mortmain, or of any prohibition or restraint against the holding of land by such corporations or trustees contained in any charter or Act of Parliament; and no contract for or conveyance of any interest in land made bonâ fide for the purpose only of such security shall be deemed void by reason of any non-compliance with the conditions and solemnities required by an Act passed in the ninth year of King George the Second, intituled "An Act to restrain the disposition of lands whereby the same become unalienable."

2. Provided always, that in every case in which the equity of redemption of the premises comprised in any such security shall become liable to foreclosure, or otherwise barred or released, the same shall be thenceforth held in trust to be sold and converted into money, and shall be sold accordingly; and if any decree shall be made in any suit for the purpose of redeeming or enforcing such security, such decree shall direct a sale (in default of redemption) and not a foreclosure of such premises.

3. The words "real security" in this Act shall include all mortgages or charges, legal or equitable, of or upon lands or hereditaments of any tenure, or of or upon any estate or interest therein or any charge or encumbrance thereon; and the word "conveyance" shall include all grants, releases, transfers, assignments, appointments, assurances, orders, surrenders, and admissions whatsoever operating to pass or vest any estate or interest, at law or in equity, in the premises comprised in any real security.

CHAP. 35.

The Apportionment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Rents and periodical payments shall accrue from day to day and be apportionable in respect of time.
3. Apportioned part of rent, &c. shall be payable when the next entire portion shall have become due.
4. Persons shall have the same remedies for recovering apportioned parts as for entire portions. Proviso as to rents reserved in certain cases.
5. Interpretation of terms.
6. Act not to apply to policies of assurance;
7. Nor where stipulation made to the contrary.

An Act for the better Apportionment of Rents and other periodical Payments.

WHEREAS rents and some other periodical payments are not at common law apportionable (like interest on money lent) in respect of time, and for remedy of some of the mischiefs and inconveniences thereby arising divers statutes have been passed in the eleventh year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Second (chapter nineteen), and in the session of Parliament holden in the fourth and fifth years of His late Majesty King William the Fourth (chapter twenty-two), and in the session of Parliament held in the sixth and seventh years of His late Majesty King William the Fourth (chapter seventy-one), and in the session of Parliament held in the fourteenth and fifteenth years of Her present Majesty (chapter twenty-five), and in the session of Parliament held in the twenty-third and twenty-fourth years of Her present Majesty (chapter one hundred and fifty-four) :

And whereas it is expedient to make provision for the remedy of all such mischiefs and inconveniences :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Apportionment Act, 1870."

2. From and after the passing of this Act, all rents, annuities, dividends, and other periodical payments in the nature of income (whether reserved or made payable under an instrument in writing or otherwise) shall, like interest on money lent, be considered as accruing from day to day, and shall be apportionable in respect of time accordingly.

3. The apportioned part of any such rent, annuity, dividend, or other payment shall be payable or recoverable in the case of a continuing rent, annuity, or other such payment when the entire portion of which such apportioned part shall form part shall become due and payable, and not before, and in the case of a rent, annuity, or other such payment determined by re-entry, death, or otherwise when the next entire portion of the same would have been payable if the same had not so determined, and not before.

4. All persons and their respective heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, and also the executors, administrators, and assigns respectively of persons whose interests determine with their own deaths, shall have such or the same remedies at law and in equity for recovering such apportioned parts as aforesaid when payable (allowing proportionate parts of all just allowances) as they respectively would have had for recovering such entire portions as aforesaid if entitled thereto respectively ; provided that persons liable to pay rents reserved out of or charged on lands or other hereditaments of any tenure, and the same lands or other hereditaments, shall not be resorted to for any such apportioned part forming part of an entire or continuing rent as aforesaid specifically, but the entire or continuing rent, including such apportioned part, shall be recovered and received by the heir or other person who, if the rent had not been apportionable under this Act, or otherwise, would have been entitled to such entire or continuing rent, and such apportioned part shall be recoverable from such heir or other person by the executors or other parties entitled under this Act to the same by action at law or suit in equity.

5. In the construction of this Act—

The word "rents" includes rent service, rent-charge, and rent seck, and also tithes and all periodical payments or renderings in lieu of or in the nature of rent or tithe.

The word "annuities" includes salaries and pensions.

The word "dividends" includes (besides dividends strictly so called) all payments made by the name of dividend, bonus, or otherwise out of the revenue of trading or other public companies, divisible between all or any of the members of such respective companies, whether such payments shall be usually made or declared at any fixed times or otherwise ; and all such divisible revenue shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to have accrued by equal daily increment during and within the period for or in respect of which the payment of the same revenue shall be declared or expressed to be made, but the said word "dividend" does not include payments in the nature of a return or reimbursement of capital.

6. Nothing in this Act contained shall render apportionable any annual sums made payable in policies of assurance of any description.

7. The provisions of this Act shall not extend to any case in which it is or shall be expressly stipulated that no apportionment shall take place.

CHAP. 36.

The Cattle Disease (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Extending provisions of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 4. relating to providing and applying fund for extinguishing rinderpest, to all cases of contagious or infectious cattle disease.
2. Power to Lord Lieutenant and Privy Council to make rules to carry Act into effect.

3. Steamboat company and other companies to cleanse and disinfect, &c.
4. Water and food to be provided by railway companies.
5. Animals landed in contravention of order to be forfeited.
6. Evidence of orders.
7. Certain acts to be offences under this Act.
8. Penalty for contravening provisions of this Act, or orders made in pursuance thereof.
9. Recovery and application of penalties.
10. Proceedings.
11. Certificate of inspector under the "Cattle Disease (Ireland) Act, 1866," or this Act.
12. Interpretation.
13. This Act to be construed with Act of 1866.
14. Short title.

An Act to amend "The Cattle Disease Act (Ireland), 1866."

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend "The Cattle Disease Act (Ireland), 1866.:"

1. The provisions of sections ten, eleven, and twelve of the said "Cattle Disease Act (Ireland), 1866," relating to the providing a fund for the purposes in section ten of the said Act mentioned, in case the cattle disease known as the rinderpest should appear in Ireland, and to the application of such fund, shall extend and apply to the providing and application of a fund for all or any of the additional purposes following ; (that is to say,)

- (1.) For preventing the introduction into Ireland of the cattle disease known as the "cattle plague," or "rinderpest"; and,
- (2.) For preventing the introduction into Ireland, the occurrence or the spreading therein, of any infectious or contagious disease of cattle, sheep, swine, or other animals.

2. The Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, may, from time to time, make such orders as they may think expedient for all and any of the purposes following ; (that is to say,)

For insuring for animals brought by sea to ports in Ireland, or shipped from any port in Ireland to any part of England, Wales, or Scotland, a proper supply of food and water during the passage and on landing :

For protecting such animals from unnecessary suffering during the passage and on landing:

For protecting animals from unnecessary suffering during inland transit :

For prohibiting or regulating the movement of animals, and the removal of dead animals or parts thereof, and of hay, straw, litter, dung, and other things likely to spread contagious or infectious diseases among animals :

For requiring the cleansing and disinfecting of yards, sheds, stables, fields, and other premises :

For regulating the disposal of animals dying while affected with a contagious or infectious disease :

For requiring notice of the appearance of any such disease among animals :

For prohibiting or regulating the holding of markets, fairs, exhibitions, or sales of animals :

And generally any orders whatsoever which they think it expedient to make for the better execution of this Act, or for the purpose of in any manner preventing the introduction or spreading of contagious or infectious disease among animals in Ireland (whether any such orders are of the same kind as the kinds enumerated in this section or not), and may in any such order direct or authorise the slaughtering of animals that are affected with any contagious or infectious disease, or that have been in contact with animals so affected ; and may in any such order direct or authorise the payment of compensation for any animals so slaughtered ; and may in any such order impose penalties for offences against the same, not exceeding the sum of twenty pounds for any such offence, and so that in every such order provision be made that a penalty less than the maximum may be ordered to be paid ; and this section shall extend to horses and all ruminating animals not within the definition of animals in this Act.

Every such order shall have the like force and effect as if it had been enacted by this Act.

3. Every steamboat company, railway company, and other company, and every person carrying animals for hire to or from or in any part of Ireland, shall thoroughly cleanse and disinfect in such manner as the Lord Lieutenant, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, from time to time by order may direct, all steamers, vessels, boats, pens, carriages, trucks, horse boxes, and vehicles used by such company or person for the carrying of animals.

If any company or person on any occasion fails to comply with the requisitions of any such order, such company or person shall on every such occasion be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act.

4. Every railway company shall make a provision, to the satisfaction of the Lord Lieutenant and Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, of water and food, or either of them, at such stations as they from time to time, by general or specific description, direct for animals carried or about to be or having been carried on the railway of the company; and such water and food, or either of them, shall be supplied to any such animal by the company carrying it, on the request in writing of the consignor thereof, or on the request of any person in charge thereof; and the company so supplying water and food, or either of them, may make in respect thereof such reasonable charges, if any, as the Lord Lieutenant and Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland may by order approve, in addition to such charges as they are for the time being authorised to make in respect of the carriage of animals; and the amount of such additional charges accrued due in respect of any animal shall be a debt from the consignor and from the consignee thereof to the company, and shall be recoverable by the company from either of them, by proceedings in any court of competent jurisdiction, and the company shall have a lien for the amount thereof on the animal in respect of which the same accrued due, and on any other animal at any time consigned by the same person to be carried by the company.

If any company on any occasion fails to comply with the requirements of this section they shall, on every such occasion, be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act. If in the case of any animal such a request as aforesaid is not made, so that the animal remains without a supply of water for a longer time than twelve consecutive hours, the consignor, and the person in charge of the animal, shall each be deemed guilty of an offence against this Act; and it shall lie on the person accused to prove the time within which the animal has had a supply of water.

5. If any person lands or attempts to land in any port or place in Ireland, or ships or attempts to ship from any port or place in Ireland to any part of England, Wales, or Scotland, any animal or thing in contravention of any order under this Act, such animal or thing shall be forfeited in like manner as goods the importation whereof is prohibited by the Acts relating to the customs are liable to be forfeited; and the person so offending shall be liable to such penalties as are imposed on persons importing or attempting to import goods the importation whereof is prohibited by the Acts relating to the customs, without prejudice to any proceeding against him under this Act or under any such order, but so that no person be punished twice for the same offence.

6. An order or regulation made or issued by the Lord Lieutenant by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland under this Act, or the "Cattle Disease (Ireland) Act, 1866," may be proved as follows:—By the production of a printed copy of such order or regulation purporting to be certified to be a true copy by the clerk of the said Council, or the person for the time acting as such.

And any such order or regulation shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been duly made and issued at the time at which it bears date.

7. If any person does any of the following things he shall be guilty of an offence against this Act:

- (1.) If he does anything for which a licence is requisite under this Act, or any order under this Act, without having obtained a licence:
- (2.) If, where such a licence is requisite, having obtained a licence in that behalf, he does the thing licensed after the licence has expired:
- (3.) If he uses, or offers or attempts to use, as such a licence, an instrument not being a complete licence, or an instrument untruly purporting or appearing to be a licence, unless he shows, to the satisfaction of the justice before whom he is charged, that he did not know of such incompleteness or untruth, and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained such knowledge:
- (4.) If he fabricates or alters, or offers or utters, knowing the same to be fabricated or altered, any licence, declaration, certificate, or instrument made or issued, or purporting to be made or issued, under or for any purpose of this Act, or any such order:
- (5.) If for the purpose of obtaining any licence, certificate, or instrument, under or for the purposes of any such provision, he makes a declaration or representation false in any material particular, unless he shows, to the satisfaction of the justice before whom he is charged, that he did not know of such falsity, and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained such knowledge:
- (6.) If he obtains or endeavours to obtain any such licence, certificate, or instrument, by means of any false pretence, unless he shows, to the satisfaction of the justice before whom he is charged, that he did not know of such falsity, and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained such knowledge:

- (7.) If he grants or issues any such licence, certificate, or instruments, being false in any material particular, unless he shows, to the satisfaction of the justice before whom he is charged, that he did not know of such falsity, and that he could not with reasonable diligence have obtained such knowledge:

And in such case he shall be liable, on conviction, in the discretion of the justice, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three months, with or without hard labour, in lieu of the pecuniary penalty to which he is liable under this Act.

8. If any person acts in contravention of any provisions in this Act contained, or if any person is guilty of any offence against this Act, or any order made in pursuance of this Act, he shall for each offence incur a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, and where any such act or offence is committed with respect to more than four animals, a penalty not exceeding five pounds for each animal may be imposed instead of the penalty of twenty pounds.

Where any such offence is committed in relation to offal, dung, hay, straw, litter, or other thing, a further penalty not exceeding ten pounds may be imposed in respect of every half ton in weight of such offal or other thing after the first half ton.

9. Every penalty recoverable under the provisions of this Act shall be recovered and applied in the same manner as penalties are recovered and applied under section five of the "Cattle Disease (Ireland) Act, 1866."

10. For the purpose of proceedings under this Act, or any order made hereunder, or under the "Cattle Disease (Ireland) Act, 1866," or any order made thereunder, every offence against this Act, or any such order or regulation, shall be deemed to have been committed, and every cause of complaint under this Act, or any such order or regulation, shall be deemed to have arisen, either in the place in which the same actually was committed or arose, or in any place in which the person charged or complained against happens to be.

11. The certificate of an inspector, authorised to act as such under the said "Cattle Disease (Ireland) Act, 1866," or under this Act, that an animal is affected with an infectious or contagious disease, shall for the purpose of the said Acts be conclusive evidence in all courts of justice.

12. In this Act, or Orders in Council made thereunder—

The term "Lord Lieutenant" shall mean the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and the Lords Justices or other chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being:

The term "cattle" means bulls, cows, oxen, heifers, and calves:

The term "animal" means, except where it is otherwise expressed, cattle, sheep, goats, and swine:

The term "foreign," as applied to cattle or animals, means brought from any place out of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland:

The term "contagious or infectious disease" includes cattle plague, pleuro-pneumonia, foot and mouth disease, sheep-pox, sheep-scab, and glanders, and any disease which the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, by and with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, may from time to time, by order, declare to be a contagious or infectious disease for the purpose of this Act:

The term "railway company" includes a company or person working a railway under a lease or otherwise:

The term "person" includes a body corporate or incorporate:

The word "month" shall include a calendar month.

13. This Act and the said Cattle Disease Act (Ireland), 1866, shall be construed together, and all provisions of the said recited Act shall remain in full force, save to the extent to which they have been modified or altered by this Act.

14. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Cattle Disease (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1870."

CHAP. 37.

Magistrates in populous Places (Scotland).

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Senior magistrate of a populous place to be a justice of the peace and a commissioner of supply.

An Act to enable the senior Magistrate of populous Places in Scotland to act ex officio as a Justice of the Peace and Commissioner of Supply for the County in which the said populous Place is situated. (1st August 1870.)

WHEREAS an Act was passed in the twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth years of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and one, intituled "An Act to make more effectual provision for regulating the police of towns and populous places in Scotland, and for lighting, cleansing, paving, draining, supplying water to, and improving the same, and also for promoting the public health thereof:"

And whereas various populous places have been established and magistrates and commissioners therein appointed under the provisions of the said recited Act and other Acts therein recited, and it is expedient that the senior police magistrate of such places should be placed in the same position with regard to the county in which the said populous places are situated as the provosts of royal and parliamentary burghs:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same:

1. In every populous place whereof the boundaries have been ascertained and fixed under the provisions of the said recited Act or the Act therein first recited, and which has adopted either of the said Acts so far as regards lighting, cleansing, draining, and the supply of water, the senior police magistrate elected under the provisions of either of the said Acts shall be ex officio a justice of the peace and commissioner of supply of the county within which the said populous place is situated; and where any such populous place is partly situated in each of two or more counties, such senior police magistrate shall in like manner be ex officio a justice of the peace and a commissioner of supply of each and all of the several counties in which any part of such populous place may be situated.

Sligo and Cashel Disfranchisement.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Disfranchisement of Sligo and Cashel.
2. Persons reported guilty of bribery in Sligo disqualified as voters for the county of Sligo in respect of qualification arising in said borough.
3. Persons reported guilty of bribery in Cashel disqualified as voters for the county of Tipperary in respect of qualification arising in said borough.
4. Evidence of reports.

An Act to disfranchise the Boroughs of Sligo and Cashel. (1st August 1870.)

WHEREAS representations were made to Her Majesty, in joint addresses of both Houses of Parliament, to the effect that the judges selected in pursuance of The Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, for the trial of the petitions complaining of undue elections and returns for the boroughs of Sligo and Cashel at the elections of members to serve in Parliament respectively held for the said boroughs in the month of November one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight, had respectively reported to the House of Commons as to the said borough of Sligo that corrupt practices extensively prevailed at the said election, and as to the said borough of Cashel that there was reason to believe that the corrupt practice of bribery did extensively prevail at the said election :

And whereas, in pursuance of such representations, Commissioners were appointed under two several commissions, both dated the twenty-third day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of such bribery and corrupt practices, in pursuance of the Act of Parliament passed in the sixteenth year of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fifty-seven, intituled "An Act to provide for the more effectual inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices at elections for members to serve in Parliament :"

And whereas the Commissioners so appointed reported to Her Majesty :

(1.) As respects the said borough of Sligo, that corrupt practices had extensively prevailed in Sligo at the elections of the years one thousand eight hundred and sixty, one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five, and the said election of the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight :

(2.) As respects the said borough of Cashel, that the election of the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-five was conducted in a corrupt manner on the part of one of the candidates, and that corrupt practices were committed at the said election, and that the said election of the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight was conducted in a corrupt manner on the part of each of the candidates :

And whereas it appears by the report of the said Commissioners as to the said borough of Cashel, that corrupt practices extensively prevailed in Cashel at both the said elections :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. From and after the passing of this Act, the boroughs of Sligo and Cashel shall respectively cease to return any member or members to serve in Parliament.

2. Whereas the Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices in the borough of Sligo, by their report, dated the third day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy, reported to Her Majesty that the persons named in the schedules (E.) and (F.) annexed to their said report had been guilty of bribery in either giving or receiving bribes at the said election in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight : Be it enacted, that none of the persons so named in the said schedules shall have the right of voting for the county of Sligo in respect of a qualification situated within the said borough of Sligo.

3. Whereas the Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices in the said borough of Cashel, by their report, dated the eighteenth day of December one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, reported to Her Majesty that the persons named in the schedules (C.) and (D.) annexed to their said report had been guilty of bribery in either giving or receiving bribes at the said election in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight : Be it enacted, that none of the persons so named in the said schedules, except Patrick Connor named in the said schedule (C.), shall have the right of voting for the county of Tipperary in respect of a qualification situated within the said borough of Cashel.

4. Any copy of either of the said reports by the said Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiry into the existence of corrupt practices in either of the said boroughs of Sligo or Cashel, with the schedules thereunto annexed, purporting to be printed by the Queen's authority, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be sufficient evidence of either of the said reports, and of the schedules annexed thereto.

CHAP. 39.

Ecclesiastical Patronage Transfer.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Provisions of 3 & 4 Vict. c. 113. s. 73., 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39. s. 22., 31 & 32 Vict. c. 114. s. 12., to authorise transfer of any advowson.

An Act to facilitate transfers of Ecclesiastical Patronage in certain cases.

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. The powers and provisions contained in the seventy-third section of the Act of the third and fourth years of Her Majesty, chapter one hundred and thirteen, in the twenty-second section of the Act of the fourth and fifth years of Her Majesty, chapter thirty-nine, and in the twelfth section of the Act of the thirty-first and thirty-second years of Her Majesty, chapter one hundred and fourteen, shall be held to authorise the transfer, by the process and with the consents therein mentioned, of the ownership of any advowson or other right of patronage in any spiritual preferment, or any estate or interest in the same; provided always, that it shall appear to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England, and shall be so stated in the scheme submitted by them to Her Majesty in Council for effecting such transfer, that the same transfer will tend to make better provision for the cure of souls in the parish or district in or in respect of which the right of patronage or advowson arises or exists; and provided always, that such transfer may take effect as from or to any ecclesiastical corporation, aggregate or sole, notwithstanding any statute of mortmain.

CHAP. 40.

New Zealand (Roads, &c.) Loan Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Power to Treasury to guarantee loan.
3. Conditions of guarantee.
4. Application of sinking fund.
5. Alteration of Act relating to guaranteed loan.
6. Issue out of Consolidated Fund.
7. Certificate of amount paid out of Consolidated Fund.
8. Accounts to be laid before Parliament.

An Act for authorising a guarantee of a loan to be raised by the Government of New Zealand for the construction of roads, bridges, and communications in that country, and for the introduction of settlers into that country.

WHEREAS the Government of New Zealand propose to raise by way of loan a sum not exceeding one million pounds for the purposes of the construction of roads, bridges, and communications in that country, and of the introduction of settlers into that country, and it is expedient to authorise the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, in this Act referred to as "the Treasury," to guarantee such loan :

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as the New Zealand (Roads, &c.) Loan Act, 1870.

2. The Treasury may guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, payment of the principal of all or any part of any loan not exceeding one million pounds raised by the Government of New Zealand for the purposes of the construction of roads, bridges, and communications in that country, and of the introduction of settlers into that country, and payment of the interest of any such loan at a rate not exceeding four per cent.

3. The Treasury shall not give any guarantee under this Act, unless and until provision has been made, either before or after the passing of this Act, by an Act of the Legislature of New Zealand, or otherwise to the satisfaction of the Treasury,—

- (1.) For raising the said loan, and appropriating the same to the purposes mentioned in this Act :
- (2.) For charging the Consolidated Revenue of New Zealand with the payment of the principal and interest of the said loan immediately after the charges on that fund existing at the time of the passing of this Act :
- (3.) For payment by the Government of New Zealand of a sinking fund at the rate of two per centum per annum on the entire amount of the said loan, or so much as is raised for the time being, commencing at the date at which the whole of such loan is raised, or at the expiration of ten years from the passing of the Act (whichever date first happens), and for charging the Consolidated Revenue of New Zealand with the payment of such sinking fund immediately after the principal and interest of the said loan :
- (4.) For charging the Consolidated Revenue of New Zealand with any sum issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom under this Act, with interest thereon at the rate of five per centum per annum, immediately after the sinking fund of the said loan :
- (5.) For rendering to the Governor of New Zealand, for transmission to the Treasury, an annual abstract of the accounts of the expenditure of the money raised by means of the said loan under such heads as the Treasury from time to time desire :
- (6.) For remitting to the Treasury the annual sums for the sinking fund by equal half-yearly payments, and for the investment and accumulation thereof under their direction in the names of four trustees nominated from time to time, two by the Treasury and two by the Government of New Zealand.

The Treasury shall not guarantee in any one year a larger sum than two hundred thousand pounds, and the Treasury, before guaranteeing any portion of the loan after the first, shall satisfy themselves that the portion of the loan already raised has been or is in the course of being spent for the purposes mentioned in this Act.

4. The said sinking fund may be invested in such securities as the Government of New Zealand and the Treasury from time to time agree upon, and shall, whether invested or not, be applied from time to time, under the direction of the Treasury, in discharging the principal of the said loan ; and the interest arising from such securities (including the interest on any part of the loan discharged by means of the sinking fund), and the resulting income thereof, shall be invested and applied as part of such sinking fund.

5. Every Act passed by the Legislature of New Zealand which in any way impairs the priority of the charge upon the Consolidated Revenue of New Zealand created by that Legislature of the said loan and the interest and sinking fund thereof, and the sums paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom and the interest thereon, shall, so far only as it impairs such priority, be void, unless such Act contain a suspending clause providing that such Act shall not come into operation until Her Majesty's pleasure thereon has been publicly signified in New Zealand.

6. The Treasury are hereby authorised to cause to be issued from time to time, out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, such sums of money as may at any time be required to be paid to fulfil the guarantee under this Act in respect either of principal or interest.

7. The Treasury may, from time to time, certify to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State the amount which has been paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom to fulfil the guarantee under this Act, and the date of such payment ; such certificate shall be communicated to the Governor of New Zealand, and shall be conclusive evidence of the amount having been so paid and of the time when the same was so paid.

8. The Treasury shall cause to be prepared and laid before both Houses of Parliament a statement of any guarantee given under this Act, and a copy of any accounts received by them respecting the expenditure of the said loan, and an account of all sums issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom for the purposes of this Act, within one month after the same are so given, received, or issued, if Parliament be then sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within fourteen days after the then next meeting of Parliament.

2. Interest on bonds, and repayment of principal money.
3. Treasury may cause Exchequer bonds to be prepared and issued according to provisions of 29 & 30 Vict. c. 25.
4. Persons forging Exchequer bonds, &c. guilty of felony.
5. Money raised to be paid to the Consolidated Fund.
6. *Treasury may borrow 1,300,000*l.* on the credit of bonds, and National Debt Commissioners may purchase bonds with savings banks money.*

An Act for raising the sum of one million three hundred thousand pounds by Exchequer Bonds for the service of the year ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards raising the necessary supplies which we have cheerfully granted to Your Majesty in this session of Parliament, have resolved to give and grant unto Your Majesty the sum herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. Towards raising the supply granted to Her Majesty for the service of the year ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury at any time or times, but not later than the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, to cause any number of Exchequer bonds to be made out at the Bank of England for any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of one million three hundred thousand pounds, and such bonds shall bear such interest as shall be determined by the said Commissioners, not exceeding four pounds per centum per annum, and shall be paid off at par at the expiration of any period or periods not exceeding five years from the date of such bonds.

2. The interest on such bonds shall be paid half-yearly on such days as shall be appointed by the said Commissioners, and shall be charged upon and issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or out of the growing produce thereof; and the principal moneys secured by such bonds shall be repaid out of such money as shall be provided by Parliament in that behalf.

3. The Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may from time to time, by warrant under their hands, cause or direct the Exchequer bonds to be issued under the authority of this Act to be prepared for such principal sums, not less in any case than one hundred pounds, together with coupons for the interest becoming due from time to time thereon, in such form and under such regulations as the said Commissioners may think most safe and convenient, and according to the provisions, so far as they relate to Exchequer bonds, of an Act of the twenty-ninth year of Her Majesty, chapter twenty-five, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the several laws regulating the preparation, issue, and payment of Exchequer bills and bonds."

4. If any person shall forge or alter, or shall offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any Exchequer bond issued under this Act, or any coupon for interest accruing thereon, such person shall be guilty of felony, and upon being lawfully convicted thereof shall suffer accordingly.

5. All such sums of money as shall be raised by Exchequer bonds to be made out in pursuance of this Act shall be paid to the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer at the Bank of England, and shall be carried to and form part of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom.

6. The Commissioners of the Treasury may borrow upon the credit of the Exchequer bonds to be made out in pursuance of this Act, any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of one million three hundred thousand pounds (anything in any Act to the contrary notwithstanding); and the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt may invest, in the purchase of Exchequer bonds issued under the authority of this Act, any money in their hands on account of savings banks, or Post Office savings banks.

CHAP. 42.

Petty Customs (Scotland) Abolition.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Interpretation of terms.
 2. Petty customs may be abolished by council.
 3. Saving in respect of creditors.
 4. Boundaries.
 5. Extent of Act.

An Act to empower magistrates and town councils of burghs in Scotland to abolish petty customs and to levy a rate in lieu thereof.

WHEREAS it is expedient to enable the provost, magistrates, and town councils of burghs in Scotland to abolish certain duties or customs styled petty customs, or part thereof, now leviable within certain of such burghs respectively, and to make other provision for the common good of such burghs in lieu thereof:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The word "burgh" shall mean any royal, parliamentary, or other burgh, as defined by the word "burgh" in the General Police and Improvement Act (Scotland), 1862, and in which heretofore petty customs have been levied or leviable.

2 After the thirty-first of December in this present year, the magistrates and council of any burgh may resolve that from a subsequent date, to be specified in such resolution, the petty customs or duties, or part of them, levied or leviable in such burgh, shall be abolished, and that in lieu thereof there shall be levied by way of assessment in such burgh a rate or rates calculated to yield in the whole in the year an amount equal to the net yearly amount of such petty customs, or part of them, and no more, but not exceeding in the whole for any one year the amount of threepence in the pound sterling on the valuation of the assessable property within the boundaries of such burgh, and from such date such petty customs or duties, or such part thereof, shall be wholly abolished in such burgh, and such rate may be levied either as a separate rate or as part of and in addition to and under the same conditions and subject to the same restrictions and exemptions as any police or burgh rate levied or leviable within such burgh: Provided that no such resolution shall have any force or effect unless a month's previous notice shall have been given of the meeting of the magistrates and council whereat such resolution was moved, and of the intention to move such resolution, in one or more public newspapers circulating within such burgh, and also in the manner in which notices of meetings of magistrates and town councils are usually given in such burgh, and unless also two thirds at the least of the members of the council present at such meeting concur in such resolution.

3. On such petty customs or duties, or part of them, levied or leviable in such burgh, being abolished in manner herein-before provided, the rate or rates to be levied in lieu thereof shall, ipso facto, come in place of any security held by any creditor or creditors of such burgh over such petty customs or duties, or part of them, but nothing herein contained, nor any such resolution, shall in any way affect, diminish, or take away the right, claim, or title of any creditor of any such burgh to any payment or any security out of or upon the common good of such burgh, nor shall any such resolution be of any validity or effect so long as any tack or lease of such petty customs shall be in force, or until such lease or tack shall have terminated by surrender or effluxion of time, or otherwise, nor without the consent of the creditor, so long as any such petty customs or any of them shall be and continue assigned as a special security to any creditor of such burgh.

4. The boundaries of any such burgh within which any such rate in lieu of petty customs shall be levied or leviable shall be the boundaries within which the assessment and rate for police purposes of such burgh shall be levied or leviable: Provided that such rate shall not be levied or leviable beyond the boundaries of any burgh within which such petty customs have heretofore been levied.

5. This Act shall only extend to Scotland.

CHAP. 43.

The Customs Refined Sugar Duties (Isle of Man) Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Alteration of duties.

An Act to alter certain Duties of Customs upon Refined Sugar in the Isle of Man. (1st August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Customs Refined Sugar Duties (Isle of Man) Act, 1870."

2. After the passing of this Act, in lieu of the duty of six shillings the hundredweight, now payable on sugar candy, white or brown, refined sugar, or sugar rendered by any process equal to refined, foreign or British, on the importation thereof into the Isle of Man, there shall be paid the duty of four shillings the hundredweight; and so much of the Act of the session of the twenty-ninth Victoria, chapter twenty-three, as imposed the said duty of six shillings the hundredweight is hereby repealed.

CHAP. 44.

Stamp Duty on Leases.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. As to stamps on leases.

An Act to declare the Stamp Duty chargeable on certain Leases. (1st August 1870.)

WHEREAS it was decided on the twenty-first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy by Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer, on the hearing of an appeal from the determination of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue on a question relating to stamp duty, that a certain lease made in consideration of a yearly rent thereby reserved, and in further consideration of a covenant by the lessee to complete unfinished houses which were at the date of the lease standing upon the demised land, was chargeable, according to the proper construction of the sixteenth section of an Act passed in the seventeenth and eighteenth years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter eighty-three, as if it were a separate lease made for such further consideration alone, with the stamp duty of thirty-five shillings, in addition to the ad valorem duty with which it was chargeable in respect of the yearly rent:

And whereas it is considered that the principle of the said decision is applicable to every lease made on or since the tenth day of October one thousand eight hundred and fifty-four, being the day on which the said Act came into operation, for any consideration or considerations in respect whereof it is chargeable with ad valorem duty, and in further consideration either of a covenant by the lessee to make or of his having previously made any substantial improvement of or addition to the property demised to him :

And whereas it was generally considered, previously to the said decision, that such leases as are herein-before described were not chargeable with the said additional duty :

And whereas it is expedient that the holders of any such leases made previously to the passing of this Act should be relieved from the payment of the said additional duty, and that such leases should not in future be chargeable with such additional duty :

Now be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. No lease already made or hereafter to be made for any consideration or considerations in respect whereof it is chargeable with ad valorem stamp duty, and in further consideration either of a covenant by the lessee to make or of his having previously made any substantial improvement of or addition to the property demised to him, or of any usual covenant, shall be deemed to be or to have been chargeable with any stamp duty in respect of such further consideration.

CHAP. 45.

Liverpool Admiralty District Registrar's Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Power to establish Court of Admiralty in Liverpool.
3. Power to appoint registrar, clerks, and officers.
4. Registrar, clerks, and other officers to be appointed by judge.
5. To hold office during good behaviour.
6. Qualification of registrar.
7. Registrar not to practise as attorney in his district.
8. Powers of registrar.
9. Where suits to be instituted.
10. Appeal.
11. Power to registrar to summon nautical assessors.
12. List of persons qualified to act as nautical assessors to be published in London Gazette.
13. Removal of suits or appeal.
14. Scale of costs to be prescribed.
15. Application of fees.
16. General orders for regulating practice, &c. to be made.
17. By whom to be made.
18. If salaries paid by Parliament fees shall be collected by stamps.
19. Act not to abridge power of registrar of High Court of Admiralty.

An Act for establishing a District Registrar of the High Court of Admiralty in England at Liverpool.

WHEREAS a large proportion of the entire business now transacted in each year before the High Court of Admiralty of England consists of suits arising from the port of Liverpool :

And whereas it would tend to increase the despatch and to lessen the expense of Admiralty suits if a registry of the said High Court of Admiralty were established at Liverpool :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as the Liverpool Admiralty District Registrar's Act, 1870.

2. There shall be established in Liverpool a registry of the High Court of Admiralty, and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty from time to time by Order in Council to fix the limits of such registry.

3. There shall be a registrar for such district, and such clerks and other officers as the judge of the High Court of Admiralty, with the concurrence of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, shall consider necessary, but no such registrar, clerk, or other officer shall be entitled to claim any compensation in case his office shall at any time be abolished.

4. The Liverpool district registrar shall be appointed by the judge, with the approval of the Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, or of the Lords Commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral, as the case may be. Such clerks and other officers as aforesaid shall be appointed by the judge.

5. The Liverpool district registrar and such clerks and other officers as aforesaid may respectively be removed by the judge for inability or misbehaviour.

6. No person shall be appointed Liverpool district registrar unless he shall have been in practice as an advocate or barrister, proctor, attorney, or solicitor for a period of ten years.

7. It shall not be lawful for the Liverpool district registrar, during the time he shall hold and exercise his office, either directly or indirectly by himself, his partners, clerk, or other person, to practise in his district of the said court, either as barrister or as attorney originally retained or as agent for any other attorney, nor to participate in any costs payable to any attorney in respect of any business done or suit or matter instituted or prosecuted in the district registry; and the Liverpool district registrar being proved to the satisfaction of the said judge of the Court of Admiralty to have so practised, or to have participated in any costs as aforesaid, contrary to the meaning and intent of this Act, shall be deemed to have committed and shall be punishable as and for a contempt of court, and shall be liable to dismissal from his office.

8. The Liverpool district registrar shall have and exercise, in respect of any matter in his registry, all powers held or exercised by the registrar of the High Court of Admiralty of England, by virtue of this or of any former Act or rule.

9. Any suit may be instituted,—

1. In the Liverpool district registry when the ship or property the subject of the suit is at the time of the institution of the suit within the district of such registry :

2. Or when the owner or owners of the ship or property, or the owner or owners of the larger number of shares in the ship, or the managing owner, or ship's husband, reside at the time of the institution of the suit within the district of such registry :

3. Or when the port of registry of the ship is within the district of such registry :

4. Or when the parties so agree by a memorandum signed by them or their attorneys or agents :

Provided always, that when a suit has been instituted in the Liverpool district registry, no further suit shall be instituted against the same property in the principal registry without leave of the judge, and subject to such terms as to costs and otherwise as he may direct.

10. An appeal may be made to the High Court of Admiralty of England from a final decree or order of the Liverpool district registrar, and by permission of the Liverpool district registrar or of the judge from any interlocutory decree or order therein, on security for costs being first given, and subject to such other provision as general orders shall direct.

11. On the trial of any Admiralty cause subsisting in the Liverpool district registry, before the registrar of such district, it shall be lawful for such registrar, if he shall think fit, and he shall, upon the request of either party, summon to his assistance, in such manner as general orders shall direct, two nautical assessors, and such nautical assessors shall attend and assist accordingly.

12. The Liverpool district registrar shall from time to time frame a list of persons of nautical skill and experience, residing or having places of business within the district, to act as assessors in that district, to be approved by the judge, before whom the same shall be laid by the Liverpool district registrar, and without whose approval it shall have no validity, and shall cause the list, when so approved, to be published in the "London Gazette," and in at least one Liverpool newspaper.

13. Any party to a suit or to an appeal, at any stage of such suit or appeal, may, by the leave of the Court and subject to such terms as to costs or otherwise as the Court may direct, remove any such suit instituted or any such appeal pending in the principal registry to the Liverpool district registry, and any suit instituted or appeal pending in the Liverpool district registry to the principal registry.

14. A scale of costs and charges in Admiralty causes in the Liverpool district registry, and of fees to be taken in the Liverpool district registry, shall be prescribed by general orders.

15. All fees received in the Liverpool district registry shall be applied in the first instance in the payment of such office expenses and salaries of the clerks employed therein, and in payment to the registrar of such remuneration in lieu of salary as may be determined by general orders; and all such fees shall be accounted for by the Liverpool district registrar, and the surplus, if any, paid over by him to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury at such period and in such manner as the Commissioners may direct.

16. General orders shall be from time to time made under this Act for the purposes in this Act directed, and for regulating the practice and procedure in the Liverpool district registry, the duties of the registrar and officers thereof, and the fees to be taken therein.

17. General orders under this Act shall be made by the judge of the High Court of Admiralty of England, subject to the approval of Her Majesty's Treasury, in all matters relating to the number of officers of or persons employed in the Liverpool district registry, their salaries or emoluments, and to the scale of fees to be taken at the said registry.

18. If at any time such salaries or emoluments are paid out of moneys provided by Parliament, the Lord Chancellor and the said Commissioners may direct that the fees shall be collected by means of stamps, under the provisions of the Public Offices Fees Act, 1866.

19. Nothing in this Act contained shall in any way abridge or lessen the power of the registrar of the High Court of Admiralty in England within the district of the Liverpool registry.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Occupation and Ownership of Land in Ireland. (1st August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the occupation and ownership of land in Ireland:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

PART I.

LAW OF COMPENSATION TO TENANTS.

Claim to Compensation.

1. The usages prevalent in the province of Ulster, which are known as, and in this Act intended to be included under, the denomination of the Ulster tenant-right custom, are hereby declared to be legal, and shall, in the case of any holding in the province of Ulster proved to be subject thereto, be enforced in manner provided by this Act.

Where the landlord has purchased or acquired or shall hereafter purchase or acquire from the tenant the Ulster tenant-right custom to which his holding is subject, such holding shall thenceforth cease to be subject to the Ulster tenant-right custom.

A tenant of a holding subject to the Ulster tenant-right custom, and who claims the benefit of such custom, shall not be entitled to compensation under any other section of this Act; but a tenant of a holding subject to such custom, but not claiming under the same, shall not be barred from making a claim for compensation, with the consent of the Court, under any of the other sections of this Act, except the section relating to compensation in respect of payment to incoming tenant; and where such last-mentioned claim has been made, and allowed, such holding shall not be again subject to the Ulster tenant-right custom.

2. If, in the case of any holding not situate within the province of Ulster, it shall appear that an usage prevails which in all essential particulars corresponds with the Ulster tenant-right custom, it shall in like manner, and subject to the like conditions, be deemed legal, and shall be enforced in manner provided by this Act.

Where the landlord has purchased or acquired or shall hereafter purchase or acquire from the tenant the benefit of such usage as aforesaid to which his holding is subject, such holding shall thenceforth cease to be subject to such usage.

A tenant of any holding subject to such usage as aforesaid, and who claims the benefit of the same, shall not be entitled to claim compensation under any other section of this Act, but a tenant of a holding not claiming the benefit of such usage shall not be barred from making a claim for compensation with the consent of the Court under any of the other sections of this Act; and where such last-mentioned claim has been made and allowed, such holding shall not be again subject to such usage as aforesaid.

3. Where the tenant of any holding held by him under a tenancy created after the passing of this Act is not entitled to compensation under sections one and two of this Act, or either of such sections, or if entitled does not seek compensation under said sections or either of them, and is disturbed in his holding by the act of the landlord, he shall be entitled to such compensation for the loss which the Court shall find to be sustained by him by reason of quitting his holding, to be paid by the landlord, as the Court may think just, so that the sum awarded does not exceed the scale following; that is to say,

In the case of holdings valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of rateable property in Ireland at an annual value of—

- (1.) £10 and under, a sum which shall in no case exceed seven years rent;
- (2.) Above £10 and not exceeding £30, a sum which shall in no case exceed five years rent;
- (3.) Above £30 and not exceeding £40, a sum which shall in no case exceed four years rent;
- (4.) Above £40 and not exceeding £50, a sum which shall in no case exceed three years rent;
- (5.) Above £50 and not exceeding £100, a sum which shall in no case exceed two years rent;
- (6.) Above £100 a sum which shall in no case exceed one year's rent;

But in no case shall the compensation exceed the sum of £250.

Any tenant in a higher class of the scale may, at his option, claim compensation under a lower class, provided such compensation shall not exceed the sum to which he would be entitled under such lower class on the assumption that the annual value of his holding is reduced to the sum (or where two sums are mentioned, the highest sum) stated in such lower class, and that his rent is proportionally reduced.

Provided that no tenant of a holding valued at a yearly sum exceeding £10, and claiming under this section more than four years rent, and no tenant of a holding valued at a yearly sum not exceeding £10, and claiming as aforesaid more than five years rent, shall be entitled to make a separate or additional claim for improvements other than permanent buildings and reclamation of waste land.

Provided that—

- (1.) Out of any moneys payable to the tenant under this section all sums due to the landlord from the tenant or his predecessors in title in respect of rent, or in respect of any deterioration of a holding arising from non-observance on the part of the tenant of any express or implied covenant or agreement, may be deducted by the landlord, and also any taxes payable by the tenant due in respect of the holding, and not recoverable by him from the landlord;
- (2.) A tenant of a holding who at any time after the passing of this Act subdivides such holding, or sublets the same or any part thereof, without the consent of the landlord in writing, or, after he has been prohibited in writing by the landlord or his agent from so doing, lets the same or any part thereof in conacre, save for the purpose of being solely used and which shall be solely used for the growing of potatoes or other green crops, the land being properly manured, shall not, nor shall any sub-tenant of or under any such tenant as last aforesaid, be entitled to any compensation under this section:

- (3.) A tenant of a holding under a lease made after the passing of this Act, and granted for a term certain of not less than thirty-one years, shall not be entitled to any compensation under this section, but he may claim compensation under section four of this Act.

The tenant of any holding valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of rateable property in Ireland at an annual value of not more than one hundred pounds, and held by him under a tenancy from year to year existing at the time of the passing of this Act, shall, if disturbed by the act of his immediate landlord, be entitled to compensation under and subject to the provisions of this section.

Any contract made by a tenant by virtue of which he is deprived of his right to make any claim which he would otherwise be entitled to make under this section shall, so far as relates to such claim, be void both at law and in equity; this provision shall be subject to the enactment contained in the section of this Act relating to the partial exemption of certain tenancies, and remain in force for twenty years from the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and no longer, unless Parliament shall otherwise determine.

4. Any tenant of a holding who is not entitled to compensation under sections one and two of this Act, or either of such sections, or if entitled does not make any claim under the said sections, or either of them, may on quitting his holding, and subject to the provisions of section three of this Act, claim compensation to be paid by the landlord under this section in respect of all improvements on his holding made by him or his predecessors in title.

Provided that—

- (1.) A tenant shall not be entitled to any compensation in respect of any of the improvements following; that is to say,—
 - (a.) In respect of any improvement made before the passing of this Act, and twenty years before the claim of such compensation shall have been made, except permanent buildings and reclamation of waste land; or,

(b.) In respect of any improvement prohibited in writing by the landlord as being and appearing to the Court to be calculated to diminish the general value of the landlord's estate, and made within two years after the passing of this Act, or made during the unexpired residue of a lease granted before the passing of this Act; or,

(c.) In respect of any improvement made either before or after the passing of this Act in pursuance of a contract entered into for valuable consideration therefor; or,

(d.) (Subject to the rule in this section mentioned as to contracts) in respect of any improvement made, either before or after the passing of this Act, in contravention of a contract in writing not to make such improvement; or,

(e.) In respect of any improvement made either before or after the passing of this Act which the landlord has undertaken to make, except in cases where the landlord has failed to perform his undertaking within a reasonable time :

- (2.) A tenant of a holding under a lease or written contract made before the passing of this Act shall not be entitled on being disturbed by the act of the landlord in or on quitting his holding to any compensation in respect of any improvement, his right to which compensation is expressly excluded by such lease or contract :
- (3.) A tenant of a holding under a lease made either before or after the passing of this Act for a term certain of not less than thirty-one years, or in case of leases made before the passing of this Act for a term of a life or lives with or without a concurrent term of years, and which leases shall have existed for thirty-one years before the making of the claim, shall not be entitled to any compensation in respect of any improvement unless it is specially provided in the lease that he is entitled to such compensation, except permanent buildings and reclamation of waste land, and tillages or manures, the benefit of which tillages or manures is unexhausted at the time of the tenant quitting his holding :
- (4.) A tenant of a holding, who is quitting the same voluntarily, shall not be entitled to any compensation in respect of any improvement when it appears to the Court that such tenant has been given permission by his landlord to dispose of his interest in his improvements to an incoming tenant upon such terms as the Court may deem reasonable, and the tenant has refused or neglected to avail himself of such permission :

- (5.) Out of any moneys payable to the tenant under this section all sums due to the landlord from the tenant or his predecessors in title in respect of rent, or in respect of any deterioration of the holding arising from non-observance on the part of the tenant of any express or implied covenant or agreement, may be deducted by the landlord, and also any taxes payable by the tenant due in respect of the holding and not recoverable by him from the landlord.

Any contract between a landlord and a tenant whereby the tenant is prohibited from making such improvements as may be required for the suitable occupation of his holding and its due cultivation shall be void both at law and in equity, but no improvement shall be deemed to be required for the suitable occupation of a tenant's holding and its due cultivation which appears to the Court to diminish the general value of the estate of the landlord, nor shall anything in this Act contained authorise or empower any tenant or occupier, without the previous consent in writing of the landlord, to break up or till any land or lands usually let, occupied, or used as grazing or grass lands, or let expressly as grazing or meadow land, or to cut timber without the consent of the landlord; provided that the tenant may cut timber planted and registered by him or his predecessors in title.

Any contract made by a tenant by virtue of which he is deprived of his right to make any claim which he would otherwise be entitled to make under this section shall, so far as relates to such claim, be void both at law and in equity, subject, however, to the enactment contained in the section of this Act relating to the partial exemption of certain tenancies, and to the provision in this section as to any improvement made in pursuance of a contract entered into for valuable consideration therefor.

Where a tenant has made any improvements before the passing of this Act on a holding held by him under a tenancy existing at the time of the passing thereof, the Court in awarding compensation to such tenant in respect of such improvements shall, in reduction of the claim of the tenant, take into consideration the time during which such tenant may have enjoyed the advantage of such improvements, also the rent at which such holding has been held, and any benefits which such tenant may have received from his landlord in consideration, expressly or impliedly, of the improvements so made.

5. For the purposes of compensation under this Act in respect of improvements on a holding which is not proved to be subject either to the

Ulster tenant-right custom or to such usage as aforesaid, or where the tenant does not seek compensation in respect of such custom or usage, all improvements on such holding shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been made by the tenant or his predecessors in title, except in the following cases where compensation is claimed in respect of improvements made before the passing of this Act:

- (1.) Where such improvements have been made previous to the time at which the holding in reference to which the claim is made was conveyed on actual sale to the landlord or those through whom he derives title:
- (2.) Where the tenant making the claim was tenant under a lease of the holding in reference to which the claim is made:
- (3.) Where such improvements were made twenty years or upwards before the passing of this Act:
- (4.) Where the holding upon which such improvements were made is valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of rateable property in Ireland at an annual value of more than one hundred pounds:
- (5.) Where the Court shall be of opinion that in consequence of its being proved to have been the practice on the holding, or the estate of which such holding forms part, for the landlord to make such improvements, such presumption ought not to be made:
- (6.) Where from the entire circumstances of the case the Court is reasonably satisfied that such improvements were not made by the tenant or his predecessors in title:

Provided always, that where it is proved to have been the practice on the holding, or the estate of which such holding forms part, for the landlord to assist in making such improvements, such presumption shall be modified accordingly.

6. Any landlord or tenant who may be desirous of preserving evidence of any improvements made by himself or by his predecessors in title before or after the passing of this Act may at any time (subject to the provisions herein-after contained) file a schedule in the Landed Estates Court specifying such improvements, and claiming the same as made by himself or his predecessors in title, and such schedule so filed shall be prima facie evidence that such improvements were made as therein mentioned: Provided always, that notice in writing of the intention to file such schedule, together with a copy thereof, shall be given by the landlord to the tenant for the time being of the holding on which such improvements shall have been made (or by the tenant to the landlord, as the case may be,) within the prescribed time before applying to the Landed

Estates Court to file the same; and if the person receiving such notice shall dispute the claim made by such schedule, either wholly or in part, he shall be at liberty within the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner to apply to the Civil Bill Court to determine the matter in difference, and in such case such schedule shall not be filed unless or until leave shall have been given to file the same either in its original or in any amended form by the Civil Bill Court; provided also, that before filing any such schedule proof shall be made in the Landed Estates Court by statutory declaration that the notice hereby required has been duly given, and that no application has been made within the prescribed time by the party receiving such notice to the Civil Bill Court, or (if any such application has been made) that leave has been given by the Civil Bill Court to file such schedule.

7. Where any tenant of a holding does not claim or has not obtained compensation under sections one, two, or three of this Act, and it is proved to the satisfaction of the Court that any such tenant or that his predecessors in title on coming into his holding paid money or gave money's worth with the express or implied consent of the landlord on account of his so coming into his holding, the Court shall award to such tenant on quitting his holding in respect of the sum so paid such compensation as it thinks just, having regard to the circumstances of the case; but such tenant shall not be entitled to any compensation under this section when it appears to the Court that such tenant has been given permission by the landlord to obtain such satisfaction from an incoming tenant in respect of the money so paid, or the money's worth so given by him, and on such terms as the Court may think reasonable, and such tenant has refused or neglected to avail himself of such permission; moreover where the money or money's worth paid or given by any tenant claiming compensation under this section on coming into his holding was paid or given in whole or in part in respect or as covering the value of any improvements on the holding, care shall be taken that such tenant shall not receive compensation in respect of the same improvements under this section and also under some other section of this Act; provided that out of any moneys payable to the tenant under this section all sums due to the landlord from the tenant or his predecessors in title in respect of rent, or in respect of any deterioration of a holding arising from non-observance on the part of the tenant of any express or implied covenant or agreement, and also any taxes payable by the tenant due in respect of the holding, and not recoverable by him from the landlord, may, if not deducted under the provisions of section four of this Act, be deducted by or on behalf of the landlord: Provided always, that this section shall not apply when such money or money's worth has been paid during the existence of a lease made before the passing of this Act.

8. Where a holding is proved to be subject to the Ulster tenant-right custom or such usage as aforesaid, and where the tenant claims under such custom or usage, and such custom or usage extends to away-going crops, the compensation payable in respect of away-going crops shall be dealt with according to the custom or usage, but the tenant of every other holding, which is not proved to be subject to the Ulster tenant-right custom or such usage as aforesaid, or in respect of which no claim is made under such custom or usage, shall, in the absence of any agreement in writing to the contrary, on quitting his holding, be entitled to all his away-going crops, or, at the option of the landlord, to be paid the value of the same.

9. For the purposes of this Act ejectment for nonpayment of rent, or for breach of any condition against assignment, sub-letting, bankruptcy, or insolvency, shall not be deemed disturbance of the tenant by act of the landlord; and for the purposes of this Act a person who is ejected for nonpayment of rent, or for breach of any such condition as aforesaid, and is not disturbed by act of the landlord within the meaning of this Act, shall stand in the same position in all respects as if he were quitting his holding voluntarily; provided that in the case of a person claiming compensation on the determination by ejectment for nonpayment of rent of a tenancy existing at the time of the passing of this Act, and continuing to exist without alteration of rent up to the time of such determination, the Court may, if it think fit, treat such ejectment as a disturbance if the arrear of rent in respect of which it is brought did not wholly accrue within the three previous years, and if any earlier arrear remained due from the tenant at the time of commencing the ejectment, or if, in case of any such tenancy of a holding held at an annual rent not exceeding fifteen pounds, the Court shall certify that the nonpayment of rent causing the eviction has arisen from the rent being an exorbitant rent; provided that no tenant who shall have given notice of surrender, and afterwards refuse to give up possession in pursuance of such notice, shall be entitled to any compensation under section three of this Act, though evicted by the landlord in a suit founded on such notice.

10. Any landlord may, after six months notice in writing to be served upon the tenant or left at his house, resume possession from a yearly tenant of so much land (not to exceed in the whole one twenty-fifth part of any individual holding) as he may require for the bonâ fide purpose of erecting thereon one or more labourers cottages, with or without gardens attached, and such resumption of land shall not, unless the Court shall be of opinion that same was unreasonable, be deemed a disturbance of the tenant within the meaning of this Act, and shall not subject the landlord to any claim for compensation, except in respect of improvements, beyond an abatement of rent proportionate to the annual value of the land so taken by the landlord.

11. For the purposes of this Act a tenant shall be deemed to have derived his holding from the preceding tenant if he has paid to such preceding tenant any money or given to him any money's worth in respect of his holding, or has taken such holding by assignment or operation of law from the preceding tenant; and where a succession of tenants have derived title each from the other, the earlier in such succession shall be deemed to be the predecessor of the later, and the later in such succession shall be deemed to be the successor of the earlier.

12. A tenant of a holding which is not proved to be subject to the Ulster tenant-right custom or such other usage as aforesaid, whose holding, or the aggregate of whose holdings, in Ireland is valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of rateable property in Ireland at an annual value of not less than fifty pounds, shall not be entitled to make any claim for compensation under any provision of this Act, in cases where the tenant has contracted in writing with his landlord that he will not make any such claim.

13. Where the holding in respect of which compensation is claimed under section three of this Act is held under a tenancy from year to year existing at the time of the passing of this Act, and such tenancy is assigned without the consent of the landlord, and the landlord does not accept the assignee as his tenant, no compensation shall be payable by the landlord under the said section in any of the cases following:

- (1.) Where the rent of such holding is in arrear at the time of such assignment so as to render the tenant liable to eviction for nonpayment of rent, and such arrear is due by the tenant:
- (2.) Where such holding forms part of an estate upon which the assignment of holdings without the consent or approval of the landlord is contrary to or not warranted by the practice prevalent upon such estate:
- (3.) Where the Court shall be of opinion that the refusal of the landlord to accept such assignee as tenant is a reasonable refusal:

Provided always, that the transmission of a tenancy by bequest to the husband or wife, or to any one child or grandchild, or to any one brother or sister, or to any one child or grandchild of a brother or sister of the tenant, or the devolution of a tenancy by operation of law upon an intestacy or marriage, shall not be deemed an assignment within the meaning of this section.

14. Where it is proved to the Court that the tenant of any holding held under a tenancy from year to year existing at the time of the passing of this Act is evicted by the landlord by reason of the persistent exercise by such tenant of any right not necessary to the due cultivation of his holding, and from which such tenant is debarred by express or implied agreement with his landlord, such eviction shall not be deemed a disturbance of the tenant by the act of the landlord; or where the tenant of any holding so held as last aforesaid at the time of the passing of this Act is evicted by the landlord by reason of the tenant's unreasonable refusal to allow the landlord, or any person or persons authorised by him in that behalf, he or they making reasonable amends and satisfaction for any injury to be done or occasioned thereby, to enter upon the holding for any of the purposes following, that is to say,

Mining or taking minerals;

Quarrying or taking stone, marble, gravel, sand, or slate;

Cutting or taking timber or turf;

Opening or making roads, drains, and water-courses;

Viewing or examining the state of the holding and all buildings or improvements thereon;

Hunting, shooting, or fishing, or taking game or fish;

Such eviction shall not be deemed a disturbance of the tenant by the act of the landlord, unless it shall be shown that the landlord is persisting in such eviction after such refusal has been withdrawn by the tenant.

15. No compensation shall be payable under the preceding provisions of this Act in respect of—

(1.) Any demesne land, or any holding ordinarily termed "townparks" adjoining or near to any city or town which shall bear an increased value as accommodation land over and above the ordinary letting value of land occupied as a farm, and shall be in the occupation of a person living in such city or town, or the suburbs thereof, or any holding let to be used wholly or mainly for the purpose of pasture, and valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of property in Ireland at an annual value of not less than fifty pounds, or any holding let to be used wholly or mainly for the purposes of pasture the tenant of which does not actually reside on the same, unless such holding adjoins or is ordinarily used with the holding on which such tenant actually resides: Provided, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the tenant of any such holding making any claim which he otherwise would be entitled to make under sections four, five, and seven of this Act; or,

(2.) Any holding which the tenant holds by reason of his being a hired labourer or hired servant; or,

(3.) Any letting in conacre or for the purposes of agistment or for temporary depasturage; or,

(4.) Any holding let and expressed in the document by which it is let to be so let for the temporary convenience or to meet a temporary necessity either of the landlord or tenant, and the letting of which has been determined by reason of the cause having ceased which gave rise to the letting;

(5.) Any cottage allotment not exceeding a quarter of an acre.

Proceedings in respect of Claims.

16. Every tenant entitled under this Act to make any claim in respect of any right or for payment of any sums due to him by way of compensation, and about to quit his holding, may within the prescribed time serve a notice of such claim on his landlord, or in his absence his known agent; the notice shall be in writing in the prescribed form, and shall state the particulars of such claim, subject to such amendment as the Court may allow, together with the dates at which and the periods within which such particulars are severally alleged to have accrued, and, where such claim or any part of the same is in respect of compensation under the provisions of section three of this Act, the number of years rent claimed shall be specified.

17. On the receipt of the notice the landlord shall be deemed to have admitted the claim made by the tenant, unless within the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner he serves a notice on the tenant stating that he disputes the whole or some portion of the claim made by the latter, and upon service of such notice by a landlord on the tenant a dispute shall be deemed to have arisen between the landlord and the tenant as to the whole or a portion of such claim, and such dispute shall be decided by the Court, unless within the time and in the manner prescribed in that behalf such dispute shall have been settled by agreement between the landlord and tenant.

18. On the hearing of any dispute between landlord and tenant under this Act either party may make any claim, urge any objection to the claim of the other, or plead any set-off such party may think fit (including in the case of a landlord any moneys paid on account of the purchase of the right of the tenant under the Ulster tenant-right custom or such usage as aforesaid), and the Court shall take into consideration any such claim, objection, or set-off, also any such default or unreasonable conduct of either party as may appear to the Court to affect any matter in dispute between the parties, and shall admit, reduce, or disallow altogether any such claim, objection, or set-off made or pleaded on behalf of either party as the Court thinks just, giving judgment on the case with regard to all its circumstances, including such consideration of conduct as aforesaid, and the Court shall have jurisdiction at the hearing of any such dispute to ascertain what sums, if any, shall be deemed due by the tenant to the landlord under sections three, four, and seven of this Act, or any set-off in respect of unliquidated or liquidated damages under said sections, or any of them; and in any case in which compensation shall be claimed under section three of this Act, if it shall appear to the Court that the landlord has been and is willing to permit the tenant to continue in the occupation of his holding upon just and reasonable terms, and that such terms have been and are unreasonably refused by the tenant, the claim of the tenant to such compensation shall be disallowed.

19. In every case of dispute between landlord and tenant heard before the Civil Bill Court, the order of the Court shall be reduced into writing in the form of a decree or award (as the case may be), and shall state the items of claim allowed, that is to say, the particulars of loss sustained by the tenant in quitting his holding, and of the improvements and payment to his predecessor in title in respect to which compensation may have been awarded to the tenant under the third, fourth, and seventh sections, and also the particulars of any set-off, objection, default, or conduct allowed or taken into account; such decree or award to be made in the prescribed form.

20. Where in the case of any holding there are several persons standing in the relation to each other of landlord and tenant, and the circumstance of any one of such tenants quitting his holding by reason of disturbance or otherwise involves the interest of any of such persons other than the tenant quitting his holding, the Court shall determine the whole amount payable under this Act on the occasion of such tenant quitting his holding, and shall direct payment of the same by such person, and to such one or more of the persons interested, and in such manner, as the Court thinks just; provided that this section shall not affect the Ulster tenant-right custom or such usage as aforesaid to which any holding is proved to be subject.

21. A tenant who may be decided by the Court to be entitled to compensation to be paid by any landlord shall not be compelled by process of law to quit his holding until the amount of compensation due to him has been paid or deposited in manner herein-after mentioned. A landlord shall in all cases have the option of depositing in the manner prescribed the amount of compensation due; and if at any time after the making of a claim for compensation as herein-before directed, and before finally giving up possession of his holding, a tenant shall be alleged to have done any damage to his holding, or the buildings thereon, the Court shall inquire into the same, and allow to the landlord out of the money so deposited such compensation as it may deem just, including mesne rates. In no case shall a tenant, except by special leave of the Court, be entitled to receive the money so deposited until he shall have given up possession of his holding. Where compensation is awarded in respect of any holding to be paid by any landlord who is himself a tenant of such holding, the tenant to whom such compensation is awarded shall not by reason of such compensation not being paid or deposited in manner aforesaid by such landlord be entitled under this section, as against a superior landlord not liable to such compensation, to retain possession of the holding after the expiration or determination of the title thereto of the landlord by whom such compensation was so awarded to be paid as aforesaid.

Court to award Compensation.

22. For the purposes of this part of this Act the Court shall mean one or other of the tribunals following; that is to say,

The Civil Bill Court of the county where the matter requiring the cognizance of the Court arises; or,

The Court of Arbitration constituted as in this Act mentioned.

Where a matter requiring the cognizance of the Court arises in respect of a holding situate within the jurisdiction of more than one Civil Bill Court, any Civil Bill Court within the jurisdiction of which any part of the holding is situate may take cognizance of the matter.

23. The judge of the Civil Bill Court (hereinafter called the chairman) shall in all cases brought before him under the provisions of this Act have power to take evidence upon oath, and to compel the attendance of witnesses, and shall have all and the same powers, jurisdiction, and authority as in cases of Civil Bill ejectment coming within his jurisdiction as such judge: Provided always, that the judge shall himself without a jury decide any question of fact arising in any case brought before him under this Act.

The chairman may, with the consent of both parties, hear and determine any case brought before him under this Act in chamber, if he so thinks fit, and when so sitting in chamber he shall have all and the same powers, jurisdiction, and authority in respect to cases so heard as if sitting in open court.

The chairman may, within the prescribed time after making any order, review or rescind or vary any order previously made by him, but, save as aforesaid, and as provided by this Act with respect to appeal, every order of the Civil Bill Court shall be final.

Any order made by the chairman under this Act may be enforced by attachment or otherwise in the same manner as if it were the order of any of the superior courts of common law at Dublin, and if such order made by the chairman be for the payment of money, it may also be enforced in the same manner as civil bill decrees for money demands made by such chairman.

24. Any person aggrieved by any order of the chairman made under this Act may, within the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner, appeal therefrom in manner following; that is to say,

- (1.) Where such order has been made in the county or the county of the city of Dublin, to two judges of the superior courts of common law to be from time to time selected by the Court for Land Cases reserved:
- (2.) Where such order has been made elsewhere, to the judges of assize of the county in which such order has been made:

And every such appeal may be heard and determined by one of the said judges; but in case any question of law shall arise upon any such appeal, the judge before whom such question arises may, if he thinks fit, require that the same shall be heard and determined by both the said judges, and thereupon such question shall be heard and determined by both the said judges, who shall for such purpose sit together.

The judge or judges hearing such appeal may give judgment affirming, reversing, or modifying the order appealed from, and may finally decide thereon, and make such order as to costs in the Court below and of the appeal as may be agreeable to justice; and if the judge or judges alter or modify the order, such order so altered or modified, and signed by the judge or judges, shall be of the like effect as if it were the order of the Civil Bill Court. The judge or judges may also, in cases where he or they think it expedient so to do, instead of making a final order, remit the case, with such directions as he or they may think fit, to the Court below.

The judges to whom any such appeal may be made may, where they deem it expedient, reserve any matter or question arising upon such appeal by way of case stated for the consideration of the Court for Land Cases reserved at Dublin.

The Court for Land Cases reserved at Dublin shall, for the purposes of this Act, be constituted in manner following; that is to say, the Lord Chancellor, the Master of the Rolls, the Lord Justice of Appeal, the Vice-Chancellor, and all the judges of the Common Law Courts shall be judges of the said Court for Land Cases reserved, and any five of such judges, the Lord Chancellor or Master of the Rolls, or Lord Justice of Appeal, or the Vice-Chancellor or one of the chief judges of the Common Law Courts being one, shall have power to hear and determine any matters that shall be brought before the said Court.

The officers of the Court of Exchequer Chamber shall act as officers of the Court for Land Cases reserved.

All cases referred to the Court for Land Cases reserved shall be prosecuted, heard, and determined by such Court in such manner and form and subject to such rules and regulations as the said Court may from time to time by rule direct.

The Court for Land Cases reserved shall give such judgment as ought to have been given in the Court below by the judges thereof, and such judgment shall be of the like effect as if it were the judgment of the said judges, or the Court of Land Cases reserved may remit the case, with such directions as they think fit, to the Court below.

25. Where the parties to any such dispute as aforesaid respecting any holding are desirous that such dispute should be settled by arbitration, they shall, in the prescribed manner and within the prescribed time, refer the same to an arbitrator or arbitrators, with an umpire to be appointed in manner appearing in the schedule annexed hereto, and the tribunal so selected shall be deemed in respect of such dispute the Court of Arbitration under this Act.

The Court of Arbitration shall, in all cases brought before it under this Act, have all and the like powers, jurisdiction, and authority as a Civil Bill Court under this Act, with this exception, that the Court of Arbitration shall have no power to punish persons for contempt, or to enforce its awards; but it may report to the Civil Bill Court the name of any person refusing to give evidence, or to produce documents, or guilty of contempt of the Court when sifting judicially; and the Civil Bill Court may, upon such report, punish the offender in the same manner as if the offence had been committed in, or in respect of a matter under the cognizance of the Civil Bill Court.

The award of the Court of Arbitration may, at the instance of either party, be recorded in the prescribed manner and within the prescribed time in the Civil Bill Court, and when so recorded shall be enforceable as if the same were an order of said Court.

No such award shall, so far as relates to the dispute under this Act, be held to be invalid by reason of the violation of or non-compliance with any technical rule of law respecting awards, where such award substantially decides the dispute referred to the Court of Arbitration.

No appeal shall lie from an award of the Court of Arbitration, nor shall any such award be removable by certiorari.

Powers of limited Owners.

26. The expression "limited owner" shall in this Act mean as follows:

- (1.) Any person entitled under any existing or future settlement at law or in equity, for his own benefit and for the term of his own life, to the possession or receipt of the rents and profits of land, whether subject or not to incumbrances, in which the estate for the time being subject to the trusts of the settlement is an estate for lives or years renewable for ever, or is an estate renewable for a term of not less than sixty years, or is an estate for a term of years of which not less than sixty are unexpired, or is a greater estate than any of the foregoing estates:
- (2.) Any body corporate, any corporation sole, ecclesiastical or lay, any trustees for charities, and any commissioners or trustees for ecclesiastical, collegiate, or other public purposes, entitled at law or in equity, in the case of freehold land, to an estate in fee simple or in fee farm, and in the case of leasehold land to a lease for an unexpired residue of not less than thirty-one years, or for a term of years or of lives renewable for ever, or renewable for a period of not less than thirty-one years.

27. A landlord, being a limited owner, shall have power to agree with a tenant as to the amount of compensation payable to him under this Act, and on payment of the same to the tenant may apply to the Civil Bill Court for an order charging the holding with an annuity in respect of such payment; and the Court, upon being satisfied of such payment having been made, shall charge the holding with an annuity of five pounds for every one hundred pounds of the sum so paid to the tenant, and so on in proportion for any less sum, such annuity to be limited in favour of the limited owner, his executors, administrators, and assigns, and to be payable for a term of thirty-five years on the anniversary of such date; provided that no such order shall be made by the Court unless notice of the application for the same shall have been given in the prescribed form to the person for the time being entitled to the first estate of inheritance, if any, expectant upon the determination of the estate of the limited owner, or if such person shall be a married woman, infant, or lunatic, to his or her husband, guardian, or committee respectively. Any annuity created under this section shall be a charge upon the holding having priority over all estates and interests subsequent to the estate or interest of the limited owner, but subject to any estates, mortgages, or other interests having priority over or charged on the estate of the limited owner.

28. Any limited owner shall have power to grant agricultural leases for any term of years absolute, or determinable at fixed periods, subject to the following restrictions:

- (1.) The term of any lease shall not exceed thirty-five years:
- (2.) The power of leasing conferred by this Act shall not include any mansion house or demesne lands:
- (3.) The lease shall take effect in possession, or within one year after the execution thereof, and not in reversion, and there shall be reserved thereby a fair yearly rent to be incidental to the immediate reversion of the holding, without taking anything in the nature of a fine, premium, or foregift; and in estimating such yearly rent it shall not be necessary to take into account against the tenant the increase (if any) in the value of the holding arising from any improvements executed by him or his predecessors in title:
- (4.) The lease shall imply a condition of re-entry for nonpayment of the rent thereby reserved:
- (5.) The lease, if it includes any building, shall contain a clause declaring whether the landlord or the tenant is bound to rebuild such building in the case of the same being destroyed during any part of the tenancy by fire, lightning, or tempest, and whether the landlord or the tenant is bound to keep the same in repair:
- (6.) The lessee shall execute a counterpart of every lease, and shall thereby covenant for the due payment of the rent reserved:

Upon the application of any landlord or tenant the Civil Bill Court may confirm any lease granted or proposed to be granted under this Act, and such Court may, if it thinks just, confirm or refuse to confirm such lease with or without modifications, and the confirmation of any such lease shall be deemed conclusive evidence of the lease being within the powers of this Act; the confirmation of a lease shall be certified in the prescribed manner.

29. Any lease granted in pursuance of this Act by an individual limited owner shall be valid against the person granting the same, and against all persons entitled to any estate or interest subsequent to the estate or interest of such limited owner; and any lease granted in pursuance of this Act by any limited owner, being a body corporate, corporation sole, trustees for charities, commissioners or trustees for ecclesiastical, collegiate, or other public purposes, shall bind all the estate and interest of such last-mentioned limited owner; but no lease granted by an owner holding himself under a lease shall continue after the expiration of the term granted by such owner's lease.

30. All powers of leasing given by this Act shall be deemed to be in addition to any other powers any limited owner may possess, and such owner may exercise any other power of leasing vested in him in the same manner as if this Act were not passed.

31. The Court for Land Cases reserved, or any five of the judges of the said Court (the Lord Chancellor or Master of the Rolls, Lord Justice of Appeal or Vice-Chancellor, or one of the chief judges of the Common Law Courts being one), may from time to time make, and when made may rescind, annul, or add to, rules with respect to the following matters:—

- (1.) The proceedings in the Civil Bill Court and Court of Arbitration under this part of this Act:
- (2.) The proceedings in appeals under this part of this Act:
- (3.) The proceedings in Land Cases reserved under this part of this Act:
- (4.) The circulation of forms and directions as to the mode in which this part of this Act is to be carried into execution:
- (5.) The scale of costs and fees to be charged in carrying this part of this Act into execution, and the taxation of such costs and fees, and the persons by or from whom and the manner in which such costs and charges are to be paid or deducted, subject nevertheless to the sanction of the Treasury as to the amount of fees to be charged:
- (6.) The service of notices on incumbrancers and other persons interested, and any other matter by this part of this Act directed to be prescribed:
- (7.) As to any other matter or thing, whether similar or not to those above mentioned, in respect of which it may be expedient to make rules for the purpose of carrying this part of this Act into effect.

Any rules made in pursuance of this section shall be deemed to be within the powers conferred by this Act, and shall be of the same force as if enacted in this Act, and shall be judicially noticed.

Any rules made in pursuance of this section shall be laid before Parliament within three weeks after they are made if Parliament be then sitting, and if Parliament be not then sitting, within three weeks after the beginning of the then next session of Parliament.

PART II.

Sale of Land to Tenants.

32. Subject to the restrictions herein-after mentioned, the landlord and tenant of any holding in Ireland may agree for the sale of the holding to the tenant at such price as may be fixed between them; and upon such agreement being made they may jointly, or either of them may separately with the assent of the other, apply to the Landed Estates Court, in this part of this Act referred to as "the Court," for the sale to the tenant of his holding.

33. No sale shall be made under this part of this Act unless the landlord is the absolute owner of the land which forms the holding of the tenant, or such tenant for life or other limited owner as is in this section mentioned.

"Absolute owner" shall in the case of freehold land mean the owner in fee simple or in fee farm, or person capable of appointing or disposing of the fee, whether subject or not to incumbrances, and in the case of leasehold land mean the owner or person capable of disposing of the whole interest in the lease under which the land is held, whether subject or not to incumbrances.

No holding of leasehold tenure shall be sold under this part of this Act unless the lease under which the landlord is possessed of the land which forms the holding is a lease for lives or years renewable for ever, or a lease for a term of years of which not less than sixty are unexpired at the time of the sale being made; and no sale shall be made under this part of this Act by a landlord being the owner of a leasehold under a lease containing a prohibition against alienation unless such prohibition has determined or is waived.

"Tenant for life" shall, for the purposes of this part of this Act, mean any person entitled under any existing or future settlement at law or in equity for his own benefit and for the term of his own life to the possession or receipt of the rents and profit of land, whether subject or not to incumbrances in which the estate for the time being, subject to the trusts of the settlement, is an estate in fee simple or fee farm, or a lease of such duration as is in this section mentioned.

"Other limited owner" shall mean any body corporate, any trustees for charities, and any commissioners or trustees for collegiate or other public purposes, having an estate in fee simple or fee farm, or possessed of such leasehold as is in this section mentioned, whether subject or not to incumbrances.

34. The application shall be accompanied by a deposit of such sum (if any), to be deposited by the landlord by way of security for costs, as the Court may require. Upon the foregoing conditions being complied with the Court shall make such inquiries as to the circumstances of the holding in respect of which the application is made, and as to the parties interested therein, either as incumbrancers, owners, or otherwise, and as to the sufficiency of the price and of the capacity of the landlord to sell the same, as the Court may think fit, and if the Court approve of the application it shall carry such sale into effect accordingly, and execute the necessary conveyance to the tenant.

35. The conveyance by the Court under this part of this Act of a holding to a tenant shall in the case of freehold land confer on the tenant an estate in fee simple or fee farm, as the case may be, in such holding, together with all rights, privileges, and appurtenances enjoyed or reputed as belonging or appertaining thereto, subject to such charges and interests, if any, as are in this part of this Act declared not to be incumbrances, and in the case of estates in fee farm to the rents, covenants, and conditions expressed in the grant relating to the land of which the holding forms the whole or part, and on the part of the grantee, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, to be paid, observed, and performed, but free from all other estates, incumbrances, and interests whatever, and shall in the case of leasehold land vest the holding in the tenant for the period, and subject to the rents, covenants, and conditions, expressed in the lease relating to the land of which the holding forms the whole or part, and on the part of the lessee, his executors, administrators, and assigns to be paid, observed, and performed, subject to such charges and interests, if any, as are in this part of this Act declared not to be incumbrances, but free from all other incumbrances and estates whatsoever.

36. The following charges and interests shall not be deemed incumbrances within the meaning of this part of this Act; that is to say,

- (1.) Quitrents and rentcharges in lieu of tithes:
- (2.) Rights of common, rights of way, watercourses, and rights of water and other easements;

(3.) Heriots, manorial rights of all descriptions, and franchises:

(4.) Charges for drainage, or other charges created under Act of Parliament, and to be specified in the conveyance.

And every holding sold under this part of this Act shall, unless the contrary is expressed, be deemed to be subject to such of the above charges and interests as may be for the time being subsisting thereon.

37. The Court shall determine the rights and priorities of the several persons entitled to or having charges upon or otherwise interested in any holding sold in pursuance of this Act, and shall distribute the purchase money in accordance with such rights and priorities.

Where any moneys arising from a sale under this part of this Act are not immediately distributable, or the parties entitled thereto cannot be ascertained, or where from any other cause the Court thinks it expedient for the protection of the rights of the parties interested, the Court may order the moneys to be lodged in Court or in the prescribed bank to the prescribed account, and may by its order declare the trusts affecting such moneys, so far as the Court has ascertained the same, or state the facts or matters found by it in relation to the rights and interests in such moneys; and the Court may from time to time make such orders in respect to any such moneys, and the investment or application thereof, or the payment thereof to the parties interested, as the circumstances of the case may require.

38. There shall be charged, in respect of any sale made in pursuance of this part of this Act, such per-centage fee on the price paid as the Treasury may prescribe, and the fees so charged shall be paid in to the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer, and carried to the account of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

39. Where any purchase moneys have been so lodged in Court or in the prescribed bank, provision shall be made in the prescribed manner with the sanction of the Treasury for the payment without cost to the persons entitled to any estate or interest in or having charges upon the holding so sold of any principal or interest moneys to which such persons may be entitled in respect of such estate and interest: Provided that any provision so made shall not extend to any expense caused by disputed titles, or any expense incurred by the failure of any person to comply with the rules for the time being in force relating to the distribution of such purchase moneys.

40. The Court shall have full power to apportion charges, rents, and covenants, and decide all questions whatsoever, which it may be necessary to decide for the purposes of this Act, and shall not be subject to be restrained in the due execution of their powers under this Act by the order of any Court.

41. The Privy Council in Ireland may from time to time make, and when made may rescind, annul, or add to, rules with respect to the following matters :

- (1.) The proceedings to be had under this part of this Act :
- (2.) The circulation of forms and directions as to the mode in which this part of this Act is to be carried into execution :
- (3.) The scale of costs and fees to be charged in carrying this part of this Act into execution, and the taxation of such costs, and the persons by whom such costs and fees are to be paid, subject nevertheless to the sanction of the Treasury as to the amount of fees to be charged :
- (4.) The giving of notices to incumbrancers and other persons interested, and the service of such notices and any other matter by this part of this Act directed to be prescribed :
- (5.) As to any other matter or thing, whether similar or not to those above mentioned, in respect of which it may be expedient to make rules for the purpose of carrying this part of this Act into execution :

In framing rules under this section the Privy Council shall provide that notice of any sale to be made under this part of this Act shall be served upon every registered incumbrancer by sending it through the post in a prepaid letter addressed to such incumbrancer, and in proving service of any such notice it shall be sufficient to prove that such notice was properly directed to the incumbrancer at his last known place of abode, and that it was put as a prepaid letter into the post office.

Any rules made in pursuance of this section shall be deemed to be within the powers conferred by this Act, and shall be of the same force as if enacted in this Act, and shall be judicially noticed.

Any rules made in pursuance of this section shall be laid before Parliament within three weeks after they are made, if Parliament be then sitting, and if Parliament be not then sitting, within three weeks after the beginning of the then next session of Parliament.

PART III.

Advances by and Powers of Board.

42. Where any sums are due in respect of compensation under this Act from a landlord to a tenant who is quitting his holding, but has not been disturbed by his landlord, the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, in this Act referred to as the Board, may, upon the application of such landlord, advance to the tenant on behalf of the landlord the whole or such portion of the sum so due as they may think expedient, and upon an order being made to that effect by the Civil Bill Court, and upon such advance being made by the Board, such holding shall be deemed to be charged with an annuity of five pounds for every one hundred pounds of such advance, and so in proportion for any less sum, such annuity to be limited in favour of the Board, and to be declared to be payable within a term of thirty-five years.

43. The Board may from time to time upon such security as they may approve advance such sums as they may think fit to any landlord in Ireland for the purpose of enabling him to reclaim waste lands ; and where any landlord has contracted for the sale of any waste land the Board may advance upon security jointly given by the vendor and purchaser such sums as they may think fit, not exceeding a moiety of the purchase money contracted to be paid ; and such waste land, and any other lands included in any such security, shall, upon an order being made to that effect by the Civil Bill Court, and upon such advance being made by the Board, be deemed to be charged with an annuity of five pounds for every one hundred pounds of such advance, and so in proportion for any less sum, such annuity to be limited in favour of the Board, and to be declared to be repayable within a period of thirty-five years.

44. The Board, if they are satisfied with the security, may advance to any tenant for the purpose of purchasing his holding in pursuance of this Act any sum not exceeding two thirds of the price of such holding, and upon an order being made by the Civil Bill Court to that effect, and upon such advance being made by the Board, such holding shall be deemed to be charged with an annuity of five pounds for every one hundred pounds of such advance, and so in proportion for any less sum, such annuity to be limited in favour of the Board, and to be declared to be repayable in the term of thirty-five years.

No purchaser, or person deriving title through him, of any holding to whom any advance has been made under this section shall, without the consent of the Board, alienate, assign, subdivide, or sublet his holding during such time as any part of the annuity charged on such holding remains unpaid, and any part of such holding alienated, assigned, subdivided, or sublet in contravention of this section shall be forfeited to the Board, to be held by them for public purposes.

45. Where an absolute order for the sale of any estate has been made by the Landed Estates Court, and the tenant of any holding forming part of such estate is desirous to purchase such holding, he may apply to the Board in the prescribed manner to advance any sum not exceeding two thirds of the amount he may pay for the purchase of the same, and the Board may, subject to such conditions as to the price to be paid for such holding and to any matter relating to such purchase, as they think fit, agree with such tenant to make such advance.

When any such tenant has been declared the purchaser of a holding, and has paid one third or any greater part of the purchase money, the Board may pay the balance of such purchase money instead of such tenant, and upon such payment being made by the Board the Landed Estates Court shall by order declare such holding to be charged with an annuity of five pounds for every hundred pounds of such advance, and so in proportion for any less sum, such annuity to be limited in favour of the Board, and to be declared to be repayable in the term of thirty-five years.

Any holding charged by order of the Landed Estates Court in manner aforesaid shall not, without the consent of the Board, be alienated, assigned, subdivided, or sublet during such time as any part of the annuity charged on such holding remains unpaid, and any part of such holding alienated, assigned, subdivided, or sublet in contravention of this section shall be forfeited to the Board, to be held by them for public purposes.

46. The Landed Estates Court shall on the sale of estates by said Court, so far as is consistent with the interests of the persons interested in the estates or the purchase money thereof, afford, by the formation of lots for sale or otherwise, all reasonable facilities to occupying tenants desirous of purchasing their holdings under the provisions of this Act, and for that purpose shall hear any application in that behalf made by the Board or any such occupying tenant.

47. Where the landlord of an estate is willing to contract for the sale under the second part of this Act of his estate in its entirety but not in part, and the tenants of the holdings comprising four fifths in value of such estate are willing to purchase their holdings, and other purchasers can be found to buy the residue of such estate, and to pay one half of the purchase money payable in respect of such residue, such sale may be made accordingly under the second part of this Act in the same manner as if the whole of the purchasers of the estate were tenants of the landlord, and the Board may advance to such other purchasers one half of their purchase money upon the security of the residue of the estate, and such advance may, at the discretion of the Board, be made to such purchasers collectively on the security of the whole of the residue of such estate, or to such purchasers severally on the security of the portions bought by them respectively, or partly in one way and partly in the other. Where any advance is made to purchasers or a purchaser under this section, the land bought by such purchaser or purchasers shall, on an order made to that effect by the Civil Bill Court, be charged with an annuity of five pounds for every one hundred pounds of such advance, and so in proportion for any less sum, such annuity to be limited in favour of the Board, and to be declared to be repayable within the term of thirty-five years.

48. Every annuity created in favour of the Board in pursuance of this Act shall be a charge on the land subject thereto having priority over all existing and future estates, interests, and incumbrances, with the exception of quitrents and other charges incident to the tenure, to rent-charges in lieu of tithes, and any charges created under any Act authorising advance of public money, or under any Act creating charges in respect of improvements on lands, and passed before this Act, with the exception also (in cases where the lands are subject to a fee-farm rent, or held under a lease reserving rent) of such fee-farm rent or rent reserved as aforesaid. The term during which every such annuity shall be payable shall be computed from the date of the advance in respect of which the same shall be charged, and every such annuity shall be payable in equal half-yearly payments on every first day of May and every first day of November during the said term of thirty-five years, with such apportionment, if any, as may be necessary in respect of the first and last of such payments.

49. Every annuity created in pursuance of this Act shall be recoverable by the Board or by or in the name of the Attorney General for Ireland in manner in which rentcharges in lieu of tithes are recoverable in Ireland; a certificate purporting to be under the hand of a member for the time being of the Board shall be evidence that the amount of any annuity or arrears of annuity stated therein to be due under this Act from any person named therein is due to the Board from such person.

50. No arrears of any annuity charged on land in pursuance of this Act shall be recoverable after the expiration of two years from the date at which the sum in arrear became due; and as between owners having successive interests in any land so charged it shall be the duty of the owner for the time being in possession or in receipt of the rents and profits of such land to prevent such arrears arising, and if he make default in doing so, and the owner next entitled in possession pay any arrears caused by such default, the amount so paid shall be a debt due to the owner who has paid the same from the owner by whose default it became necessary to make such payment.

51. Where any land is charged with an annuity in favour of the Board, it shall be lawful for any person liable to pay such annuity to redeem the said annuity, or so much thereof as may at any time remain unexpired, by payment to the Board of a sum of money equivalent to the then value of the said annuity, such value to be calculated according to the table in the schedule annexed hereto.

52. Where any person is entitled to receive any principal moneys in pursuance of the sale of any holding made by them in pursuance of this Act, the Board may, on the application of such person, commute such principal moneys for the payment of an annuity of equivalent value, the value of money being reckoned at three pounds ten shillings per cent. per annum; and where any such person as aforesaid is entitled to the payment of a sum annually, the Board may commute the same for the payment of a principal sum of equivalent value, the value of money being reckoned at three pounds ten shillings per cent. per annum.

The Board may also, with the assent of the claimant, compromise by the payment of any principal or annual sum any postponed contingent or doubtful or other claim of any person to any share or interest in the purchase money arising from the sale of any holding under this Act.

53. The Board shall in making advances, in the mode of investing and dealing with the funds that come into their possession, and in the mode of accounting for the same, and generally in the performance of their duties under this Act, conform to any directions, whether given on special occasions or by general rule or otherwise, which may from time to time be given to them by the Treasury, and shall report within such time and in such manner as the Treasury may direct to the Treasury all matters which may be transacted by the Board.

54. There shall be issued to the Board for the purposes of this Act, at such times and in such sums and in such manner as the Treasury may determine, any sums of money not exceeding in the whole one million pounds, and the Treasury may from time to time issue to the said Board the said sum of one million pounds out of the Consolidated Fund or the growing produce thereof.

55. All repayments to the Board of principal sums or by way of annuities in respect of advances made by them shall from time to time be paid back to the Consolidated Fund in such manner as the Treasury may direct.

56. The Civil Bill Court shall, on the application of any person entitled to an annuity by this Act directed to be charged by order of the Civil Court, make an order charging the same accordingly, and the clerk of the peace of the county in which such Court has jurisdiction shall keep an alphabetical registry in his office of all charging orders so made by the Court, and shall allow any person to inspect the same at all reasonable times on the payment of one shilling.

For the purpose of making charging orders in respect of any holding the Civil Bill Court of the county in which such holding or any part thereof is situate shall be deemed to have jurisdiction over such holding.

PART IV.

SUPPLEMENTAL PROVISIONS.

As to Legal Proceedings and Court.

57. There shall be paid in respect of every notice to quit to be served on a tenant of a holding as defined under this Act a duty of two shillings and sixpence, and such payment shall be denoted by a stamp on the notice.

58. No notice to quit shall be valid unless it is printed or written, or partly in print and partly in writing, and signed by the landlord or his agent lawfully authorised thereunto, nor unless such notice at the time of the service thereof is duly stamped with a stamp denoting the payment of a duty of two shillings and sixpence. A notice to quit shall not in the case of a tenant from year to year take effect until after the expiration of a period of not less than six calendar months from the date of the service of the notice, such period of six calendar months, in the absence of agreement to the contrary, to terminate on the last gale day of the calendar year. Any person serving on a tenant a notice to quit that is not in conformity with this section shall incur a penalty not exceeding forty shillings, to be recovered summarily under the provisions of the Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851.

In any proceedings between landlord and tenant, where the due service of a notice to quit has been proved, such notice to quit shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been duly stamped.

59. The Civil Bill Court in any county on being satisfied that a tenant in such county has died, and that there is no legal personal representative of such tenant or no legal personal representative whose services are available for the purposes of this Act, may, if a legal representation of the tenant is required for the purposes of this Act, by order appoint such person as it thinks best entitled to be administrator of the deceased tenant limited to the purposes of this Act, and any such limited administrator shall for all the purposes of this Act represent the deceased tenant in the same manner as if the tenant had died intestate, and administration had been duly granted to such limited administrator of all the personal estate and effects of the tenant.

60. A married woman entitled to her separate use, and not restrained from anticipation, shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed a feme sole, but where any other married woman is desirous of making any application, giving any consent, or doing any act, or becoming party to any proceeding under this Act, in relation to any holding, her husband's concurrence shall be required, and she shall be examined by the Civil Bill Court of the county where she may for the time being be, or of the county where the holding is situate, apart from her husband touching her knowledge of the nature and effect of the application or other act, and it shall be ascertained that she is acting freely and voluntarily.

61. Where any person who (if not under disability) might have made any application, given any consent, done any act, or been party to any proceeding in relation to any holding under this Act, is a minor, idiot, or lunatic, the guardian or committee of the estate respectively of such person may make such applications, give such consents, do such acts, and be party to such proceedings, as such person respectively, if free from disability, might have made, given, done, or been party to, and shall otherwise represent such person for the purposes of this Act; where there is no guardian or committee of the estate of any such person as aforesaid, being infant, idiot, or lunatic, or where any person the committee of whose estate if he were idiot or lunatic would be authorised to act for and represent such person under this part of this Act is of unsound mind or incapable of managing his affairs, but has not been found idiot or lunatic under an inquisition, it shall be lawful for the Civil Bill Court of the county in which the holding is situate to appoint a guardian of such person for the purpose of any proceedings under this part of this Act, and from time to time to change such guardian; and where such Civil Bill Court sees fit it may appoint a person to act as the next friend of a married woman for the purpose of any proceeding under this Act, and from time to time to remove or change such next friend.

62. For the purposes of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act the judges of Civil Bill Courts in Ireland shall, in addition to the Civil Bill Courts now by law directed, hold such Courts in such places within their respective jurisdictions as may be prescribed by the Privy Council in Ireland.

63. There shall be paid to the judges and officers of the Civil Bill Courts and to the officers of the Court of Exchequer Chamber in Ireland, by way of remuneration for the additional duties by this Act imposed upon them, such annual sums by way of additional salaries respectively as the Lord Lieutenant may direct and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may approve, and all such sums shall be paid by the said Commissioners out of moneys to be provided by Parliament for that purpose.

64. In case it shall appear to the Lord Chancellor that from any reasonable cause the judge of any Civil Bill Court cannot conveniently hold the Courts prescribed under this Act, he may appoint any other judge of a Civil Bill Court to hold such Courts in his stead, and thereupon the judge so appointed shall hold such Courts as aforesaid, and shall for the purposes thereof have all and every the powers, authority, and jurisdiction of the judge in whose stead he shall have been appointed, and so long as he shall continue to act in his stead there shall be paid to him instead of to the said judge the additional salary payable to the said judge under this Act.

PART V.

Miscellaneous.

65. Any person who, under any tenancy whatsoever created after the passing of this Act, becomes the occupier of any premises liable to grand jury cess, and who is liable to pay a rent in respect of the same, may deduct from such rent, for each pound of the rent which he is liable to pay, one half of the sum which he has paid as grand jury cess in respect of each pound of the net annual value of such premises as valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of rateable property in Ireland, and so in proportion for any less sum than a pound: Provided always, that it shall not be lawful for any such person to deduct from the rent payable by him for such premises a larger sum than one half of the amount of the cess that has been paid by him in respect of the same.

Any person receiving rent in respect of any premises liable to grand jury cess, who also pays a rent in respect of the same, shall, if such rent is received and paid under contracts entered into after the passing of this Act, be entitled to deduct from the rent so paid by him a sum bearing such a proportion to the amount of the cess deducted from the rent received by him as the rent paid by him bears to the rent received by him.

66. Whenever the net annual value of the whole of the premises situate in any county of a city, county of a town, or barony, occupied by any person under any tenancy whatsoever created after the passing of this Act, does not exceed four pounds, as valued under the Acts relating to the valuation of rateable property in Ireland, and the same are liable to grand jury cess, then such cess shall, after the passing of this Act, be paid and payable by the immediate lessor or lessors of such person, and may be recovered from such immediate lessor or lessors in like manner as but for the provisions of this section it might have been recovered from the person occupying such premises.

If any such cess payable by any such immediate lessor be not paid within four months after the same has become due, the person duly authorised to collect the same may give notice in writing to the occupier for the time being of such premises to pay the cess due in respect of such premises, and after the expiration of one calendar month from the time of giving such notice it shall be lawful to recover such cess from such occupier, or in his default from any subsequent occupier of the premises, in like manner as if the same were cess due in respect of premises of a net annual value greater than four pounds.

And every such occupier so paying such cess may deduct from the rent he may be then or next thereafter liable to pay in respect of any such premises the whole of any such cess that he may have paid in respect of the same premises, and if rent sufficient to cover such cess be not then or do not thereafter become due from such occupier, he shall be entitled to recover the same from such immediate lessor by Civil Bill.

67. Nothing in the two next preceding sections of this Act contained shall apply to any county cess levied under the authority of any presentment made for the compensation of any person for any loss or damage occasioned by any malicious injury, or of any presentment made under the authority of section one hundred and six of the Act passed in the session of Parliament held in the sixth and seventh years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, chapter one hundred and sixteen, or under the authority of "The Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1870," or to any moneys levied as county cess by the direction of the Lord Lieutenant of any district under the authority of "The Peace Preservation (Ireland) Act, 1856," or any Act or Acts amending or continuing the same now in force.

68. Any person who, after the passing of this Act, shall take at an acreable rent land adjoining or intersected by any public road or public roads, shall not, in the absence of an agreement to the contrary, be liable to rent for any portion of such land as may be contained in the public road or roads.

69. Where any tenancy at will, or less than a tenancy from year to year, is created by a landlord after the passing of this Act, the tenant under such tenancy shall on quitting his holding be entitled to notice to quit and compensation in the same manner in all respects as if he had been a tenant from year to year: Provided that this section shall not apply to any letting or contract for the letting of land made and entered into bonâ fide for the temporary convenience or to meet a temporary necessity either of the landlord or tenant.

Definitions.

70. In the construction of this Act the following words and expressions shall have the force and meaning hereby assigned to them, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant thereto:

The term "person" or "party" shall extend to and include any body politic, corporate, or collegiate, whether aggregate or sole, and any public company:

The term "county" shall extend to and include county of a city, and county of a town, and a riding of a county, where such county of a city, county of a town, or riding of a county is appointed for civil bill purposes:

The term "prescribed" shall mean prescribed by any rules made in pursuance of this Act:

The term "lease" shall include an agreement for a lease:

The term "settlement" as used in this Act shall include any Act of Parliament, will, deed, or other assurance or connected set of assurances whereby particular estates or particular interests in land are created, with remainders or interests expectant thereon; and every estate and interest created by appointment made in exercise of any power contained in any settlement or derived from any settlement shall be considered as having been created by the same settlement; and an estate or interest by way of resulting use or trust to or for the settlor, or his heirs, executors, or administrators, shall be deemed to be an estate or interest under the same settlement :

The term "landlord" in relation to a holding shall include a superior mesne or immediate landlord, or any person for the time being entitled to receive the rents and profits or to take possession of any holding :

The term "tenant" in relation to a holding shall mean any tenant from year to year and any tenant for a life or lives or for a term of years under a lease or contract for a lease, whether the interest of such tenant has been acquired by original contract, lawful assignment, devise, bequest, or act and operation of law ; and where the tenancy of any person having been a tenant under a tenancy which does not disentitle him to compensation under this Act is determined or expiring, he shall, notwithstanding such determination or expiration, be deemed to be a tenant until the compensation, if any, due to him under this Act has been paid or deposited as in this Act provided :

The term "improvements" shall mean in relation to a holding,—

- (1.) Any work which being executed adds to the letting value of the holding on which it is executed, and is suitable to such holding ; also,
- (2.) Tillages, manures, or other like farming works, the benefit of which is unexhausted at the time of the tenant quitting his holding.

71. This Act shall not apply to any holding which is not agricultural or pastoral in its character, or partly agricultural and partly pastoral ; and the term "holding" shall include all land of the above character held by the same tenant of the same landlord for the same term and under the same contract of tenancy.

72. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Landlord and Tenant (Ireland) Act, 1870."

73. This Act shall apply to Ireland only.

—••••— SCHEDULE.

Arbitrations.

(1.) If both parties concur a single arbitrator may be appointed.

(2.) If the single arbitrator dies or becomes incapable to act before he has made his award, the matters referred to him shall be determined by arbitration under the provisions of this Act in the same manner as if no appointment of an arbitrator had taken place.

(3.) If both parties do not concur in the appointment of a single arbitrator, each party on the request of the other party shall appoint an arbitrator.

(4.) An arbitrator shall in all cases be appointed in writing, and the delivery of an appointment to an arbitrator shall be deemed a submission to arbitration on the part of the party by whom the same is made, and after any such appointment has been made neither party shall have power to revoke the same without the consent of the other.

(5.) If for the space of fourteen days after the service by one party on the other of a request made in writing to appoint an arbitrator such last-mentioned party fails to appoint an arbitrator, then upon such failure the party making the request may apply to the Court, and thereupon the dispute shall be decided by the Court according to the provisions of this Act.

(6.) If any arbitrator appointed by either party dies or becomes incapable to act before an award has been made, the party by whom such arbitrator was appointed may appoint some other person to act in his place, and if for the space of fourteen days after notice in writing from the other party for that purpose he fails to do so the remaining or other arbitrator may proceed ex parte.

(7.) If where more than one arbitrator has been appointed either of the arbitrators refuses or for fourteen days neglects to act, the other arbitrator may proceed ex parte, and the decision of such arbitrator shall be as effectual as if he had been the single arbitrator appointed by both parties.

(8.) If, where more than one arbitrator has been appointed, and where neither of them refuses or neglects to act as aforesaid, such arbitrators fail to make their award within twenty-one days after the day on which the last of such arbitrators was appointed, or within such extended time (if any) as may have been appointed for that purpose by both such arbitrators under their hands, the matters referred to them shall be determined by the umpire to be appointed as hereafter mentioned.

(9.) Where more than one arbitrator has been appointed, the arbitrators shall, before they enter upon the matters referred to them, appoint by writing under their hands an umpire to decide on any matters on which they may differ.

(10.) If the umpire dies or becomes incapable to act before he has made his award, or refuses to make his award within a reasonable time after the matter has been brought within his cognizance, the arbitrators shall forthwith after such death, incapacity, or refusal appoint another umpire in his place.

(11.) If in any of the cases aforesaid the said arbitrators refuse, or for fourteen days after request of either party to such arbitration neglect, to appoint an umpire, the Civil Bill Court, as defined by this Act, shall, on the application of either party to such arbitration, appoint an umpire.

(12.) The decision of every umpire on the matters referred to him shall be final.

Dividends and Stock Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Extension to Ireland of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 104.
3. Amendment of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 104: s. 5.

An Act for extending to Ireland and amending "The Dividends and Stock Act, 1869." (1st August 1870.)

WHEREAS by the Dividends and Stock Act, 1869, facilities were given for the payment by warrants through the post of dividends on the public stocks transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and other regulations were made respecting such dividends, and it is expedient to extend the provisions of the said Act to the dividends on the public stocks transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, and otherwise to amend the said Act:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as the Dividends and Stock Act, 1870.

2. The Dividends and Stock Act, 1869, shall apply to all stock forming part of the National Debt and transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland in the same manner as if the provisions thereof were enacted in this Act, and the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland were substituted in those provisions for the Governor and Company of the Bank of England; and when the Dividends and Stock Act, 1869, has taken effect by virtue of this Act in relation to all stock transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland then on the fifth day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one there shall be deemed to have accrued due and to have become payable on the new five pounds per centum annuities standing on that day in those books one equal half part of one half year's dividend; and the same shall be accordingly paid on that day to the then holders of those annuities; and thenceforth the dividends on all new five pounds per centum annuities for the time being transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland shall be payable and paid on the same half-yearly days, and in the same manner in all respects as dividends are payable and paid on like annuities for the time being transferable in the books of the Governor and Company of the Bank of England.

3. The Dividends and Stock Act, 1869, and this Act shall each be construed as if the Comptroller and Auditor General were mentioned in the Dividends and Stock Act, 1869, instead of the commissioners for auditing the public accounts.

CHAP. 48.

Paupers Conveyance (Expenses) Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Poor Law Board to define cases in which guardians may pay expense of conveying paupers.
2. Short title and interpretation.

An Act for removing doubts respecting the payment of Expenses incurred in the Conveyance of Paupers in certain cases not expressly provided for by Law.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS doubts are entertained whether boards of guardians may in certain cases lawfully pay the expenses incurred in conveying persons chargeable to their union or parish to any other part of England, and it is expedient that provision should be made for removing such doubts:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows; (that is to say.)

1. The Poor Law Board may, by order, define and direct in what cases (other than those expressly provided for by law), and under what regulations, the guardians of any union or parish may pay the reasonable expenses incurred by them in conveying any person chargeable to such union or parish from one place to another in England, and may charge such expenses upon the common fund of the union or other like fund under their control.

2. This Act may be cited as the Paupers Conveyance (Expenses) Act, 1870, and shall be construed in like manner as the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, and the subsequent Acts amending or explaining the same.

CHAP. 49.

The Evidence Amendment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Interpretation of "court of justice" and "presiding judge" in recited Act.
2. Short title.
3. Not to extend to Scotland.

An Act to explain and amend "the Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869." (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it was enacted by the "Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869," section 4, as follows :

"If any person called to give evidence in any court of justice, whether in a civil or criminal proceeding, shall object to take an oath, or shall be objected to as incompetent to take an oath, such person shall, if the presiding judge is satisfied that the taking of an oath would have no binding effect on his conscience, make the following promise and declaration :

"I solemnly promise and declare, that the 'evidence given by me to the court shall be the 'truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the 'truth.'

"And any person who, having made such promise and declaration, shall wilfully and corruptly give false evidence, shall be liable to be indicted, tried, and convicted for perjury as if he had taken an oath :"

And whereas doubts have arisen as to the extent and meaning of the words "court of justice" and "presiding judge" in the said section :

Be it enacted by the Queen's, most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. The words "court of justice," and the words "presiding judge," in section 4 of the said Evidence Further Amendment Act, 1869, shall be deemed to include any person or persons having by law authority to administer an oath for the taking of evidence.

2. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Evidence Amendment Act, 1870."

3. This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

CHAP. 50.

Shipping Dues Exemption Act, 1867, Amendment.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Agreements for compensation made but not sent in to the Board of Trade within the time prescribed by recited Act may be approved by Board of Trade.
2. Construction of Act.
3. 32 & 33 Vict. c. 52. repealed.

An Act to amend "The Shipping Dues Exemption Act, 1867." (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by "The Shipping Dues Exemption Act, 1867," provision is made for the abolition of certain exemptions from local dues on shipping and on goods carried in ships, and for payment of compensation for such abolition :

And whereas the said Act contains the following provision ; that is to say,

"With respect to determining the amount of " compensation to be paid under this Act the " following rules shall be observed :

"(1.) The claimant shall send to the receiver " of dues, and to the Board of Trade, in " writing, his claim to compensation, " stating the amount and grounds of his " claim, and shall give such evidence in

- "support of his claim as the Board of Trade may require:
- "(2.) This claim shall be sent in to the Board of Trade within three months after the commencement of this Act, and if it is not sent in within that time the claimant shall not be entitled to any compensation in respect of the time prior to the date of the receipt of such claim by the Board of Trade; and if it is not sent in within one year after the passing of this Act the claimant shall not be entitled to any compensation:
- "(3.) As soon as may be after receiving such claim, the receiver of dues shall agree with the claimant on the amount of the compensation to be paid, and the times and mode of such payment, but such agreement shall be subject to the approval of the Board of Trade."

And whereas in certain cases claims for compensation have been sent to the receiver of dues, and agreements for compensation have been made between the claimant and such receiver, but through inadvertence such claims have not been sent in to the Board of Trade within the time prescribed by the said recited Act; and it is expedient to extend the time for sending in and approving such claims :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. In any case in which any claim has been allowed by or any agreement for compensation has been made with the receiver of dues under "The Shipping Dues Exemption Act, 1867," but has not been sent in to the Board of Trade within the time prescribed by the said Act, the Board of Trade, if satisfied that the omission to send in the same to them has arisen from inadvertence, may at any time within six months from the date of this Act approve the same, and compensation shall thereupon be paid according to the terms of such claim or agreement, as if the same had been duly sent to the Board of Trade within the time prescribed by the said Act and approved in accordance with the provisions thereof.

2. This Act shall be construed with and as part of "The Shipping Dues Exemption Act, 1867."

3. "The Shipping Dues Exemption Act Amendment Act, 1869," shall be repealed.

CHAP. 51.

The Notice Act (Isle of Man) Repeal Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. 7 W. 4. and 1 Vict. c. 45. so far as respects the Isle of Man repealed.

An Act to repeal an Act intituled "An Act to alter the mode of giving Notices for the holding of Vestries, of making Proclamation in cases of Outlawry, and of giving Notices on Sundays in respect to various matters," so far as such Act relates to the Isle of Man.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the first year of Her present Majesty's reign, chapter forty-five, and intituled "An Act to alter the mode of giving notices for the holding of vestries, and of making proclamations in cases of outlawry, and of giving notices on Sundays with respect "to various matters," certain provisions were made as to the mode of giving notices in lieu of any other existing mode of giving notices on Sundays during or after divine service in churches or chapels, whether under or by virtue of any law or statute or by custom or otherwise :

And whereas such Act is declared by the sixth section thereof to apply to the Isle of Man :

And whereas the provisions of the said Act have not been observed in the Isle of Man by reason of the inhabitants of that island having been ignorant that the said Act applied thereto, and in consequence it is apprehended that divers notices given in the said island, and acts and things done in pursuance of such notices, are invalid :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Notice Act (Isle of Man) Repeal Act, 1870."

2. The said Act passed in the first year of Her present Majesty's reign, chapter forty-five, is hereby repealed, so far as respects the Isle of Man, and shall be deemed never to have applied to or to have been in force in the said island, except in so far as may be necessary for giving validity to any notice given or any act or thing done in the said island in pursuance of the said Act, and all notices given and acts and things done in the said island which would have been valid if the said Act had not applied to or been in force in the said island shall be valid accordingly.

An Act for amending the Law relating to the Extradition of Criminals.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the surrender to foreign states of persons accused or convicted of the commission of certain crimes within the jurisdiction of such states, and to the trial of criminals surrendered by foreign states to this country:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Extradition Act, 1870."

2. Where an arrangement has been made with any foreign state with respect to the surrender to such state of any fugitive criminals, Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, direct that this Act shall apply in the case of such foreign state.

Her Majesty may, by the same or any subsequent order, limit the operation of the order, and restrict the same to fugitive criminals who are in or suspected of being in the part of Her Majesty's dominions specified in the order, and render the operation thereof subject to such conditions, exceptions, and qualifications as may be deemed expedient.

Every such order shall recite or embody the terms of the arrangement, and shall not remain in force for any longer period than the arrangement.

Every such order shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within six weeks after it is made, or, if Parliament be not then sitting, within six weeks after the then next meeting of Parliament, and shall also be published in the London Gazette.

3. The following restrictions shall be observed with respect to the surrender of fugitive criminals:

- (1.) A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered if the offence in respect of which his surrender is demanded is one of a political character, or if he prove to the satisfaction of the police magistrate or the court before whom he is brought on Habeas corpus, or to the Secretary of State, that the requisition for his surrender has in fact been made with a view to try or punish him for an offence of a political character:
- (2.) A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered to a foreign state unless provision is made by the law of that state, or by arrangement, that the fugitive criminal shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to Her Majesty's dominions, be detained or tried in that foreign state for any offence committed prior to his surrender other than the extradition crime proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded:

- (3.) A fugitive criminal who has been accused of some offence within English jurisdiction not being the offence for which his surrender is asked, or is undergoing sentence under any conviction in the United Kingdom, shall not be surrendered until after he has been discharged, whether by acquittal or on expiration of his sentence or otherwise:
- (4.) A fugitive criminal shall not be surrendered until the expiration of fifteen days from the date of his being committed to prison to await his surrender.

4. An Order in Council for applying this Act in the case of any foreign state shall not be made unless the arrangement—

- (1.) provides for the determination of it by either party to it after the expiration of a notice not exceeding one year; and,
- (2.) is in conformity with the provisions of this Act, and in particular with the restrictions on the surrender of fugitive criminals contained in this Act.

5. When an order applying this Act in the case of any foreign state has been published in the London Gazette, this Act (after the date specified in the order, or if no date is specified, after the date of the publication,) shall, so long as the order remains in force, but subject to the limitations, restrictions, conditions, exceptions, and qualifications, if any, contained in the order, apply in the case of such foreign state. An Order in Council shall be conclusive evidence that the arrangement therein referred to complies with the requisitions of this Act, and that this Act applies in the case of the foreign state mentioned in the order, and the validity of such order shall not be questioned in any legal proceedings whatever.

6. Where this Act applies in the case of any foreign state, every fugitive criminal of that state who is in or suspected of being in any part of Her Majesty's dominions, or that part which is specified in the order applying this Act (as the case may be), shall be liable to be apprehended and surrendered in manner provided by this Act, whether the crime in respect of which the surrender is sought was committed before or after the date of the order, and whether there is or is not any concurrent jurisdiction in any court of Her Majesty's dominions over that crime.

7. A requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal of any foreign state, who is in or suspected of being in the United Kingdom, shall be made to a Secretary of State by some person recognised by the Secretary of State as a diplomatic representative of that foreign state. A Secretary of State may, by order under his hand and seal, signify to a police magistrate that such requisition has been made, and require him to issue his warrant for the apprehension of the fugitive criminal.

If the Secretary of State is of opinion that the offence is one of a political character, he may, if he think fit, refuse to send any such order, and may also at any time order a fugitive criminal accused or convicted of such offence to be discharged from custody.

8. A warrant for the apprehension of a fugitive criminal, whether accused or convicted of crime, who is in or suspected of being in the United Kingdom, may be issued—

1. by a police magistrate on the receipt of the said order of the Secretary of State, and on such evidence as would in his opinion justify the issue of the warrant if the crime had been committed or the criminal convicted in England; and
2. by a police magistrate or any justice of the peace in any part of the United Kingdom, on such information or complaint and such evidence or after such proceedings as would in the opinion of the person issuing the warrant justify the issue of a warrant if the crime had been committed or the criminal convicted in that part of the United Kingdom in which he exercises jurisdiction.

Any person issuing a warrant under this section without an order from a Secretary of State shall forthwith send a report of the fact of such issue, together with the evidence and information or complaint, or certified copies thereof, to a Secretary of State, who may if he think fit order the warrant to be cancelled, and the person who has been apprehended on the warrant to be discharged.

A fugitive criminal, when apprehended on a warrant issued without the order of a Secretary of State, shall be brought before some person having power to issue a warrant under this section, who shall by warrant order him to be brought and the prisoner shall accordingly be brought before a police magistrate.

A fugitive criminal apprehended on a warrant issued without the order of a Secretary of State shall be discharged by the police magistrate, unless the police magistrate within such reasonable time as, with reference to the circumstances of the case, he may fix, receives from a Secretary of State an order signifying that a requisition has been made for the surrender of such criminal.

9. When a fugitive criminal is brought before the police magistrate, the police magistrate shall hear the case in the same manner, and have the same jurisdiction and powers, as near as may be, as if the prisoner were brought before him charged with an indictable offence committed in England.

The police magistrate shall receive any evidence which may be tendered to show that the crime of which the prisoner is accused or alleged to have been convicted is an offence of a political character or is not an extradition crime.

10. In the case of a fugitive criminal accused of an extradition crime, if the foreign warrant authorising the arrest of such criminal is duly authenticated, and such evidence is produced as (subject to the provisions of this Act) would, according to the law of England, justify the committal for trial of the prisoner if the crime of which he is accused had been committed in England, the police magistrate shall commit him to prison, but otherwise shall order him to be discharged.

In the case of a fugitive criminal alleged to have been convicted of an extradition crime, if such evidence is produced as (subject to the provisions of this Act) would, according to the law of England, prove that the prisoner was convicted of such crime, the police magistrate shall commit him to prison, but otherwise shall order him to be discharged.

If he commits such criminal to prison, he shall commit him to the Middlesex House of Detention, or to some other prison in Middlesex, there to await the warrant of a Secretary of State for his surrender, and shall forthwith send to a Secretary of State a certificate of the committal, and such report upon the case as he may think fit.

11. If the police magistrate commits a fugitive criminal to prison, he shall inform such criminal that he will not be surrendered until after the expiration of fifteen days, and that he has a right to apply for a writ of Habeas corpus.

Upon the expiration of the said fifteen days, or, if a writ of Habeas corpus is issued, after the decision of the court upon the return to the writ, as the case may be, or after such further period as may be allowed in either case by a Secretary of State, it shall be lawful for a Secretary of State, by warrant under his hand and seal, to order the fugitive criminal (if not delivered on the decision of the court) to be surrendered to such person as may in his opinion be duly authorised to receive the fugitive criminal by the foreign state from which the requisition for the surrender proceeded, and such fugitive criminal shall be surrendered accordingly.

It shall be lawful for any person to whom such warrant is directed and for the person so authorised as aforesaid to receive, hold in custody, and convey within the jurisdiction of such foreign state the criminal mentioned in the warrant; and if the criminal escapes out of any custody to which he may be delivered on or in pursuance of such warrant, it shall be lawful to retake him in the same manner as any person accused of any crime against the laws of that part of Her Majesty's dominions to which he escapes may be retaken upon an escape.

12. If the fugitive criminal who has been committed to prison is not surrendered and conveyed out of the United Kingdom within two months after such committal, or, if a writ of Habeas corpus is issued, after the decision of the court upon the return to the writ, it shall be lawful for any judge of one of Her Majesty's Superior Courts at Westminster, upon application made to him by or on behalf of the criminal, and upon proof that reasonable notice of the intention to make such application has been given to a Secretary of State, to order the criminal to be discharged out of custody, unless sufficient cause is shown to the contrary.

13. The warrant of the police magistrate issued in pursuance of this Act may be executed in any part of the United Kingdom in the same manner as if the same had been originally issued or subsequently indorsed by a justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place where the same is executed.

14. Depositions or statements on oath, taken in a foreign state, and copies of such original depositions or statements, and foreign certificates of or judicial documents stating the fact of conviction, may, if duly authenticated, be received in evidence in proceedings under this Act.

15. Foreign warrants and depositions or statements on oath, and copies thereof, and certificates of or judicial documents stating the fact of a conviction, shall be deemed duly authenticated for the purposes of this Act if authenticated in manner provided for the time being by law or authenticated as follows:

- (1.) If the warrant purports to be signed by a judge, magistrate, or officer of the foreign state where the same was issued;
- (2.) If the depositions or statements or the copies thereof purport to be certified under the hand of a judge, magistrate, or officer of the foreign state where the same were taken to be the original depositions or statements, or to be true copies thereof, as the case may require; and
- (3.) If the certificate of or judicial document stating the fact of conviction purports to be certified by a judge, magistrate, or officer of the foreign state where the conviction took place; and if in every case the warrants, depositions, statements, copies, certificates, and judicial documents (as the case may be) are authenticated by the oath of some witness or by being sealed with the official seal of the minister of justice, or some other minister of state: And all courts of justice, justices, and magistrates shall take judicial notice of such official seal, and shall admit the documents so authenticated by it to be received in evidence without further proof.

Crimes committed at sea.

16. Where the crime in respect of which the surrender of a fugitive criminal is sought was committed on board any vessel on the high seas which comes into any port of the United Kingdom, the following provisions shall have effect:

1. This Act shall be construed as if any stipendiary magistrate in England or Ireland, and any sheriff or sheriff substitute in Scotland, were substituted for the police magistrate throughout this Act, except the part relating to the execution of the warrant of the police magistrate:
2. The criminal may be committed to any prison to which the person committing him has power to commit persons accused of the like crime:
3. If the fugitive criminal is apprehended on a warrant issued without the order of a Secretary of State, he shall be brought before the stipendiary magistrate, sheriff, or sheriff substitute who issued the warrant, or who has jurisdiction in the port where the vessel lies, or in the place nearest to that port.

Fugitive criminals in British Possessions.

17. this Act, when applied by Order in Council, shall, unless it is otherwise provided by such order, extend to every British possession in the same manner as if throughout this Act the British possession were substituted for the United Kingdom or England, as the case may require, but with the following modifications; namely,

- (1.) The requisition for the surrender of a fugitive criminal who is in or suspected of being in a British possession may be made to the governor of that British possession by any person recognised by that governor as a consul general, consul, or vice-consul, or (if the fugitive criminal has escaped from a colony or dependency of the foreign state on behalf of which the requisition is made) as the governor of such colony or dependency:
- (2.) No warrant of a Secretary of State shall be required, and all powers vested in or acts authorised or required to be done under this Act by the police magistrate and the Secretary of State, or either of them, in relation to the surrender of a fugitive criminal, may be done by the governor of the British possession alone :

- (3.) Any prison in the British possession may be substituted for a prison in Middlesex :
- (4.) A judge of any court exercising in the British possession the like powers as the Court of Queen's Bench exercises in England may exercise the power of discharging a criminal when not conveyed within two months out of such British possession.

18. If by any law or ordinance, made before or after the passing of this Act by the Legislature of any British possession, provision is made for carrying into effect within such possession the surrender of fugitive criminals who are in or suspected of being in such British possession, Her Majesty may, by the Order in Council applying this Act in the case of any foreign state, or by any subsequent order, either suspend the operation within any such British possession of this Act, or of any part thereof, so far as it relates to such foreign state, and so long as such law or ordinance continues in force there, and no longer ;

or direct that such law or ordinance, or any part thereof, shall have effect in such British possession, with or without modifications and alterations, as if it were part of this Act.

General Provisions.

19. Where, in pursuance of any arrangement with a foreign state, any person accused or convicted of any crime which, if committed in England, would be one of the crimes described in the first schedule to this Act is surrendered by that foreign state, such person shall not, until he has been restored or had an opportunity of returning to such foreign state, be triable or tried for any offence committed prior to the surrender in any part of Her Majesty's dominions other than such of the said crimes as may be proved by the facts on which the surrender is grounded.

20. The forms set forth in the second schedule to this Act, or forms as near thereto as circumstances admit, may be used in all matters to which such forms refer, and in the case of a British possession may be so used, mutatis mutandis, and when used shall be deemed to be valid and sufficient in law.

21. Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, revoke or alter, subject to the restrictions of this Act, any Order in Council made in pursuance of this Act, and all the provisions of this Act with respect to the original order shall (so far as applicable) apply, mutatis mutandis, to any such new order.

22. This Act (except so far as relates to the execution of warrants in the Channel Islands) shall extend to the Channel Islands and Isle of Man in the same manner as if they were part of the United Kingdom; and the royal courts of the Channel Islands are hereby respectively authorised and required to register this Act.

23. Nothing in this Act shall affect the lawful powers of Her Majesty or of the Governor General of India in Council to make treaties for the extradition of criminals with Indian native states, or with other Asiatic states conterminous with British India, or to carry into execution the provisions of any such treaties made either before or after the passing of this Act.

24. The testimony of any witness may be obtained in relation to any criminal matter pending in any court or tribunal in a foreign state in like manner as it may be obtained in relation to any civil matter under the Act of the session of the nineteenth and twentieth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and thirteen, intituled "An Act to provide for taking evidence in Her Majesty's Dominions in relation to civil and commercial matters pending before foreign tribunals;" and all the provisions of that Act shall be construed as if the term civil matter included a criminal matter, and the term cause included a proceeding against a criminal: Provided that nothing in this section shall apply in the case of any criminal matter of a political character.

25. For the purposes of this Act, every colony, dependency, and constituent part of a foreign state, and every vessel of that state, shall (except where expressly mentioned as distinct in this Act) be deemed to be within the jurisdiction of and to be part of such foreign state.

26. In this Act, unless the context otherwise requires,—

The term "British possession" means any colony, plantation, island, territory, or settlement within Her Majesty's dominions, and not within the United Kingdom, the Channel Islands, and Isle of Man; and all colonies, plantations, islands, territories, and settlements under one legislature, as herein-after defined, are deemed to be one British possession :

The term "legislature" means any person or persons who can exercise legislative authority in a British possession, and where there are local legislatures as well as a central legislature, means the central legislature only :

The term "governor" means any person or persons administering the government of a British possession, and includes the governor of any part of India:

The term "extradition crime" means a crime which, if committed in England or within English jurisdiction, would be one of the crimes described in the first schedule to this Act:

The terms "conviction" and "convicted" do not include or refer to a conviction which under foreign law is a conviction for contumacy, but the term "accused person" includes a person so convicted for contumacy:

The term "fugitive criminal" means any person accused or convicted of an extradition crime committed within the jurisdiction of any foreign state who is in or is suspected of being in some part of Her Majesty's dominions; and the term "fugitive criminal of a foreign state" means a fugitive criminal accused or convicted of an extradition crime committed within the jurisdiction of that state:

The term "Secretary of State" means one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State:

The term "police magistrate" means a chief magistrate of the metropolitan police courts, or one of the other magistrates of the metropolitan police court in Bow Street:

The term "justice of the peace" includes in Scotland any sheriff, sheriff's substitute, or magistrate:

The term "warrant," in the case of any foreign state, includes any judicial document authorising the arrest of a person accused or convicted of crime.

Repeal of Acts.

27. The Acts specified in the third schedule to this Act are hereby repealed as to the whole of Her Majesty's dominions; and this Act (with the exception of anything contained in it which is inconsistent with the treaties referred to in the Acts so repealed) shall apply (as regards crimes committed either before or after the passing of this Act), in the case of the foreign states with which those treaties are made, in the same manner as if an Order in Council referring to such treaties had been made in pursuance of this Act, and as if such order had directed that every law and ordinance which is in force in any British possession with respect to such treaties should have effect as part of this Act.

Provided that if any proceedings for or in relation to the surrender of a fugitive criminal have been commenced under the said Acts previously to the repeal thereof, such proceedings may be completed, and the fugitive surrendered, in the same manner as if this Act had not passed.

SCHEDULES.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

LIST OF CRIMES.

The following list of crimes is to be construed according to the law existing in England, or in a British possession, (as the case may be,) at the date of the alleged crime, whether by common law or by statute made before or after the passing of this Act:

CHAP. 53.

The Sanitary Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. All hospitals in metropolis held to be within district of every nuisance authority for purposes of sect. 26. of the Sanitary Act, 1866.
3. How notices shall be given in special drainage districts consisting of part of a parish or made up by more than one parish.
4. How orders and demands are to be served or sent in special drainage districts.

An Act to amend certain provisions in the Sanitary and Sewage Utilization
Acts. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient further to amend the Sanitary Act, 1866, in order to facilitate the removal of persons suffering from any dangerous, contagious, or infectious disorder who are without proper lodging or accommodation, or are lodged in a room occupied by more than one family, or are on board ship, and to make further provision with respect to special drainage districts consisting of part of a parish or made up out of more parishes than one, and with respect to service of orders and demands of any of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State under the Sanitary and Sewage Utilization Acts:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as The Sanitary Act, 1870.

2. For the purposes of the twenty-sixth section of the Sanitary Act, 1866, every hospital or place for the reception of the sick situate within the limits of the metropolis, as defined by the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, shall be deemed to be within the district of every one of the nuisance authorities in the metropolis.

3. Any notice which by virtue of such provisions of the Act of the fifty-eighth year of the reign of King George the Third, chapter sixty-nine, or any of the Acts amending the same or incorporated therewith, as are incorporated by the fifth section of the Sanitary Act, 1866, is required to be signed by the rector, vicar, or curate, or by a churchwarden or overseer of the poor of the parish, shall in the case of any special drainage district made up of, including part of a parish only, or more than one parish, be signed by the rector, vicar, or curate, or by a churchwarden or overseer of the poor of any parish wholly or partly included in the district, and any notice which by the said Acts or any of them is required to be affixed on or near to the doors of all churches and chapels within the parish shall be affixed to the doors of any church or chapel in the special drainage district, or if there be no such church or chapel, then on the doors of all churches and chapels in the parish or parishes out of which the district has been constituted.

4. Any order or demand of any of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State under the Sanitary and Sewage Utilization Acts shall be deemed to have been duly served on the sewer authority of any district for the purposes of those Acts if served on or sent through the post in a registered letter addressed to any person appointed at a meeting of the sewer authority to receive service, of which appointment notice shall be given to such Secretary of State, or if no such person shall have been appointed, or no notice of such appointment given to the Secretary of State as aforesaid, or if the person so appointed shall refuse, neglect, or be unable to receive such service, then if served on or sent by the post as aforesaid to the rector, curate, or overseer, or the churchwarden or overseer of any parish wholly or partly included in the district: Provided that nothing in this Act shall be taken to affect the provisions of the fifth section of the Sanitary Loans Act, 1869.

CHAP. 54.

Dublin City Voters Disfranchisement.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Disfranchisement of certain voters of the city of Dublin.
2. Evidence of report.

An Act to disfranchise certain Voters of the City of Dublin.

WHEREAS the Commissioners appointed by the Act passed in the session of Parliament held in the thirty-second and thirty-third years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act for appointing Commissioners to inquire into the existence of corrupt practices amongst the Freemen Electors of the city of Dublin," and by the said Act empowered and directed to make inquiry into the existence, nature, and extent of such corrupt practices, and into the conduct of all persons aiding in or abetting such corrupt practices, have, by their report, dated the third day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy, reported to Her Majesty that the several persons named in the schedule marked H. annexed to their report were guilty of corrupt practices at the election of one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight by receiving or contracting to receive money or other valuable consideration for having given or to induce them to give their votes; that the several persons named in the schedule marked I. annexed to their report were proved to have aided in or abetted corrupt practices at the election of one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight by giving or contracting to give money or other valuable consideration to purchase or for the purpose of purchasing the votes of freemen; that the several persons named in the schedule marked L. annexed to their report were guilty of corrupt practices at the election of one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight either by stipulating for employment for reward as the consideration for their votes or as having been employed for reward for the purposes of the election, and subsequently voting at the same for the candidates on whose behalf they were so employed; that the several persons named in the schedule marked M. annexed to their report aided and abetted the corrupt practices of which the persons named in the schedule marked L. annexed to their report were guilty; and that the several persons named in the schedule marked N. annexed to their report were guilty of personating or aiding in the personation of freemen at the election of one thousand eight hundred and sixty-eight:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. From and after the passing of this Act, none of the persons so named in the said schedules, or any of them, shall at any time hereafter have the right of voting at any election of a member or members to serve in Parliament for the city of Dublin.

2. Any copy of the said report by the said Commissioners appointed for the purpose of making inquiries into the existence of corrupt practices amongst the freemen electors of the said city of Dublin, with the schedules thereunto annexed, purporting to be printed by the Queen's authority, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be sufficient evidence of the said report and of the schedules annexed thereto.

CHAP. 55.

The Siam and Straits Settlements Jurisdiction Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Jurisdiction in certain matters arising in Siam vested in Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements.
3. Powers of Her Majesty in respect to said Supreme Court.

An Act to vest Jurisdiction in matters arising within the Dominions of the Kings of Siam in the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS doubts have been entertained whether the Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements has the jurisdiction over matters arising in Siam which was vested in the then existing Supreme Court of Her Majesty's Possession of Singapore, by an Order in Council dated the twenty-eighth day of July one thousand eight hundred and fifty-six, and by an Act of the twentieth and twenty-first years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter seventy-five, intituled "An Act to confirm an Order in Council concerning the exercise of jurisdiction in matters arising within the kingdom of Siam:"

And whereas it is expedient that such doubts should be removed, and that such jurisdiction should be vested in the said Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as the Siam and Straits Settlements Jurisdiction Act, 1870.

2. All the powers and jurisdiction in respect of matters civil and criminal arising within the dominions of the kings of Siam which were vested in the said Supreme Court of Singapore by the herein-before recited Order in Council and Act of Parliament shall be and the same are hereby vested in the said Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements.

3. Her Majesty may, by Order in Council, exercise in respect to the said Supreme Court of the Straits Settlements all the powers which under the said Act Her Majesty might have exercised in respect to the Supreme Court at Singapore.

CHAP. 56.

Limited Owners Residences Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Act to be construed with 27 & 28 Vict. c. 114., "Improvement of Land Act, 1864."
3. What to be deemed improvements within meaning of "Improvement of Land Act, 1864."
4. Limit as to sum to be charged for mansion houses.
5. Mode of calculating increased value resulting from outlay.
6. In such calculation, other lands settled to same uses may be taken into account.
7. Discretionary power of certifying where erection of mansion house suitable, &c.
8. Insurance against fire.
9. Priority of charges.
10. Extent of Act.

An Act to enable the owners of Settled Estates in England and Ireland to charge such estates, within certain limits, with the expense of building mansions as residences for themselves.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Act of the tenth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third, chapter fifty-one, heirs of entail in Scotland are enabled to charge their estates with sums of money laid out by them in building mansions as residences for themselves:

And whereas such enactment having been found beneficial in that part of the United Kingdom, it is expedient to enable limited owners in other parts of the United Kingdom to build mansions on their estates as residences for themselves:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as the "Limited Owners Residences Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall be construed as one with the Act of the session of the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "Improvement of Land Act, 1864," and the words used in this Act shall be construed in like manner as in the said Act; and the provisions of the said Act shall be applicable, as far as the nature of the case requires, except as is herein otherwise provided, to proceedings under this Act.

3. The erection of mansion houses and such other usual and necessary buildings, outhouses, and offices as are commonly appurtenant thereto and held and enjoyed therewith, and completion of mansion houses and such appurtenances as aforesaid, and improvement of and addition to mansion houses and such appurtenances as aforesaid already erected, or the improvement of and addition to houses which are capable of being converted into mansion houses suitable to the estate on which they stand, so as such improvement and addition be of a permanent nature, provided the mansion houses so erected or enlarged or converted are suitable to the estate on which they stand as residences for the owners of such estate, shall be improvements within the meaning of the "Improvement of Land Act, 1864."

4. The sum charged on any estate under settlement in respect of mansion and other buildings herein-before mentioned shall not exceed two years rental of the said estate, after deducting all public charges and interest of debts and other incumbrances and annuities affecting or which may affect the inheritance after the death of the limited owner, or, in the case of different estates settled to the same uses, and on which charges may have been imposed which affect the whole of such estates, after deducting from the rental of such of the said estates as may be charged with the cost of erecting mansion houses and appurtenances as aforesaid in the manner herein-after provided, so much of the debts and other incumbrances affecting the whole of the estates as shall bear to the whole of the said debts and incumbrances the same proportion as the rental of the estates to be charged with the cost of erecting a mansion house and appurtenances shall bear to the rental of the whole of the estates settled to the same uses.

5. In calculating whether the improvement would effect a permanent increase of the yearly value of the lands exceeding the yearly amount proposed to be charged thereon, the commissioners shall take into account the effect on such value of any sum expended by the landowner in erecting or adding to such mansion house and appurtenances beyond the sum proposed to be charged.

6. In making such calculation as aforesaid, and in considering the suitability of such mansion house and appurtenances so erected or enlarged as aforesaid to the estate, the commissioners may take into consideration any other lands in the neighbourhood of such estate settled to the same uses as the estate on which such mansion house and appurtenances stand, which, if enjoyed together therewith, would add to the letting value of such mansion house.

7. If the commissioners shall find that the erection or improvement of or addition to any such mansion house and appurtenances are suitable to the estate, but would not in their estimation effect an increase of the yearly value of the lands exceeding the yearly amount proposed to be charged, it shall be in their discretion to certify such improvement.

8. The provision in the Improvement of Land Act respecting assurance of buildings against fire shall apply to mansion houses and appurtenances improved or added to, as well as to those erected under this Act.

9. A charge on land made under this Act shall not take priority of any mortgage or other incumbrance affecting the land charged at the time such charge is made.

10. This Act shall not apply to Scotland.

CHAP. 57.

The Gun Licence Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Definition of terms.
3. Duty on licence to use a gun.
4. Duty and licence to be under the management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

5. Form and date of licence.
6. Register of licences to be kept.
7. Penalty for using or carrying a gun without licence.
8. Provision where a gun is carried in parts by two or more persons.
9. Licence to be produced on demand, or name and address declared, under penalty of 10l.
10. Authorised officers may enter upon lands.
11. Licence to be void if person be convicted of any offence under sec. 30. of 1 & 2 W. 4. c. 32., or under 2 & 3 W. 4. c. 68.
12. Not to interfere with any other Act requiring authority to keep fire-arms.

An Act to grant a Duty of Excise on Licences to use Guns.

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland in Parliament assembled, towards raising the necessary supplies to defray Your Majesty's public expenses, and making an addition to the public revenue, have freely and voluntarily resolved to give and grant unto Your Majesty the rate and duty herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Gun Licence Act, 1870."

2. In this Act the term "gun" includes a fire-arm of any description and an air gun or any other kind of gun from which any shot, bullet, or other missile can be discharged.

The term "Commissioners" means the Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

3. After the first day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy there shall be granted and paid unto and for the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, for and in respect of every licence to be taken out yearly by every person who shall use or carry a gun in the United Kingdom, the sum of ten shillings.

4. The said duty and licence shall be an excise duty and licence, and shall be under the management of the Commissioners, and all the provisions in any Act relating to excise duties or licences or to penalties under Excise Acts, and now or hereafter in force, shall apply to the said duty hereby granted, and the licence relating thereto, and the penalties hereby imposed, so far as the same are applicable and not inconsistent with the express provisions of this Act.

5. Every licence to be granted under this Act shall be in such form and shall be granted by such officer of inland revenue and at such place as the Commissioners shall direct, and shall contain the Christian and surname and place of residence of the person to whom the same shall be granted, and shall be dated on the day on which the same shall be granted, and shall expire on the thirty-first day of March next following; but no licence under this Act shall be granted upon payment of a less sum than the duty for a whole year, nor shall any such licence be transferable.

6. Every officer who shall grant licences under this Act shall keep a register of all such licences granted by him, specifying the Christian and surname and place of residence of every person licensed, and the date of each licence, and any justice of the peace or officer of constabulary or constable, or any person licensed under this Act, may at any convenient time inspect such register of licences for the current or preceding year.

7. Every person who shall use or carry a gun elsewhere than in a dwelling house or the curtilage thereof without having in force a licence duly granted to him under this Act shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

Provided always, that the said penalty shall not be incurred by the following persons; namely,

- (1.) By any person in the naval, military, or volunteer service of Her Majesty, or in the constabulary or other police force, using or carrying any gun in the performance of his duty, or when engaged in target practice.
- (2.) By any person having in force a licence or certificate to kill game granted to him under the laws of excise in that behalf.
- (3.) By any person carrying a gun belonging to a person having in force a licence or certificate to kill game or a licence under this Act, and by order of such licensed or certificated person and for the use of such licensed or certificated person only, if the person carrying the gun shall, upon the request of any officer of inland revenue or constabulary, or any constable, owner or occupier of the land on which such gun shall be used or carried, give his true name and address, and also the true name and address of his employer.

- (4.) By the occupier of any lands using or carrying a gun for the purpose only of scaring birds or of killing vermin on such lands, or by any person using or carrying a gun for the purpose only of scaring birds or of killing vermin on any lands by order of the occupier thereof, who shall have in force a licence or certificate to kill game or a licence under this Act.
- (5.) By any gunsmith or his servant carrying a gun in the ordinary course of the trade of a gunsmith, or using a gun by way of testing or regulating its strength or quality in a place specially set apart for the purpose.
- (6.) By any person carrying a gun in the ordinary course of his trade or business as a common carrier.

In any information for the recovery of the penalty imposed by this section, it shall be sufficient to allege that the defendant used or carried a gun without having a licence in force under this Act, and it shall lie upon the defendant to prove that he is a person not incurring the penalty by virtue of the proviso contained in this section.

8. Where a gun is carried in parts by two or more persons in company, each and every one of such persons shall be deemed to carry the gun.

9. It shall be lawful for any officer of inland revenue or for any officer of constabulary or any constable to demand from any person using or carrying a gun (not being a person in the naval, military, or volunteer service of Her Majesty, or in the constabulary or other police force, using or carrying a gun in the performance of his duty) the production of a licence granted to such person under this Act.

If the person upon whom the demand is made shall not produce a licence duly granted to him under this Act, or a licence or certificate to kill game granted to him under the laws of excise, and permit the officer or constable demanding the production thereof to read such licence or certificate, it shall be lawful for such officer or constable to require such person to declare to him immediately his Christian and surname and place of residence, and if such person shall refuse to declare his Christian and surname and place of residence as aforesaid, he shall for such refusal forfeit the penalty of ten pounds over and above any other penalty to which he may be liable under this or any other Act of Parliament; and it shall be lawful for such officer or constable to arrest such person so refusing, and to convey him before any justice of the peace having jurisdiction at the place where the offence shall be committed, and such justice shall, upon due proof on oath of the offence, or upon the confession of the accused person, convict such person in the penalty aforesaid, or in some mitigated portion thereof, not being less than one fourth; and if such penalty be not immediately paid into the hands of the officer or constable (who is hereby required to receive and pay over the same to the Commissioners), such justice shall commit the offender to hard labour in the proper house of correction for any period not exceeding one month nor less than seven days, or until the penalty shall be sooner paid.

10. It shall be lawful for any officer of inland revenue, officer of constabulary, or constable, who may see any person using or carrying a gun, to enter and remain so long as may be necessary upon any lands or upon any premises (other than a dwelling house or the curtilage thereof) for the purpose of making the demand specified in the preceding section.

11. If any person having obtained a licence under this Act shall be convicted of any offence under section thirty of the Act of the first and second years of King William the Fourth, chapter thirty-two, or under the Act of the second and third years of King William the Fourth, chapter sixty-eight, the said licence shall thenceforth be null and void.

12. No licence granted under this Act shall entitle the person to whom the same is granted to use, carry, or have in his custody or possession any firearm in any part of the United Kingdom where such person is by any other Act now or hereafter in force forbidden to use, carry, or have in his custody or possession any firearm, nor to entitle such person to use, carry, or have in his custody or possession any firearm unless he shall have obtained a licence or permission so to do from any authority empowered by any such other Act to grant such licence or permission.

An Act to further amend the Law relating to indictable offences by Forgery.
(9th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as The Forgery Act, 1870.

2. This Act shall have effect as one Act with the Act described in the schedule to this Act, but shall extend to the United Kingdom.

3. If any person forges or alters, or offers, utters, disposes of, or puts off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any stock certificate or coupon, or any document purporting to be a stock certificate or coupon, issued in pursuance of Part V. of The National Debt Act, 1870, or of any former Act,—or demands or endeavours to obtain or receive any share or interest of or in any stock as defined in The National Debt Act, 1870, or to receive any dividend or money payable in respect thereof, by virtue of any such forged or altered certificate or coupon, or document purporting as aforesaid, knowing the same to be forged or altered,—with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to defraud, he shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life or for any term not less than five years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

4. If any person falsely and deceitfully personates any owner of any share or interest of or in any such stock as aforesaid, or of any such stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid, and thereby obtains or endeavours to obtain any such stock certificate or coupon,—or receives or endeavours to receive any money due to any such owner, as if such person were the true and lawful owner,—he shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life or for any term not less than five years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

5. If any person, without lawful authority or excuse, the proof whereof shall lie on the party accused, engraves or makes on any plate, wood, stone, or other material any stock certificate or coupon purporting to be such a stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid, or to be such a stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid in blank, or to be a part of such a stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid,—or uses any such plate, wood, stone, or other material for the making or printing of any such stock certificate or coupon, or blank stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid, or any part thereof respectively,—or knowingly has in his custody or possession any such plate, wood, stone, or other material,—or knowingly offers, utters, disposes of, or puts off, or has in his custody or possession, any paper on which any such blank stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid, or part of any such stock certificate or coupon as aforesaid, is made or printed,—he shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than five years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

6. If any person forges or alters, or offers, utters, disposes of, or puts off, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any certificate or duplicate certificate required by Part VI. of The National Debt Act, 1870, or by any former like enactment with intent in any of the cases aforesaid to defraud, he shall be guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the Court, to be kept in penal servitude for life, or for any term not less than five years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, with or without hard labour, and with or without solitary confinement.

7. Sections two and four and all provisions relative thereto of the Act described in the schedule to this Act, and all enactments amending those sections and provisions, or any of them, shall extend to Scotland.

8. In the application to Scotland of this Act, and of the enactments by this Act extended to Scotland, the term "high crime and offence" shall be substituted for the term "felony."

CHAP. 59.

East India Contracts.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Deeds, contracts, and instruments executed in India valid notwithstanding certain defects of execution.
2. Power to authorities in India to vary forms of execution.

An Act to render valid certain Contracts informally executed in India.

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the twenty-second and twenty-third years of the reign of Her present Majesty, amending an Act passed in the twenty-first and twenty-second years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intitled "An Act for the better Government of India," it was provided that any deed, contract, or other instrument made by the authorities therein named for the purpose of disposing of real and personal estate in India vested in Her Majesty under the said last-mentioned Act, or of raising money on such real estate by way of mortgage, or of making proper assurance for that purpose, or of purchasing and acquiring any lands and hereditaments, or any interest therein, stores, goods, chattels, and other property in India, and of entering into any contracts whatsoever for the purposes of the said first-mentioned Act, may be expressed to be executed as on behalf of the Secretary of State for India in Council, by or by order of the Governor General in Council, or the Governor of Fort Saint George or of Bombay in Council:

And whereas by an Act passed in the thirty-second and thirty-third years of Her said Majesty it was recited, that certain deeds had been issued for Inam lands in the Presidency of Fort Saint George by the Inam commissioner in the execution of his office in that respect, which, by reason of certain defects in the expression of the execution thereof, it was apprehended might be invalid; and provision was thereupon made by the said last-mentioned Act that the said title deeds should not be deemed invalid by reason of such defects:

And whereas it is apprehended that other deeds, contracts, and instruments made for the purpose expressed in the said first-recited Act, besides such title deeds as aforesaid, may be invalid or deemed invalid for the like reason, and such provision as aforesaid should therefore be made more general:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. Every deed, contract, or other instrument made in India for the purposes and by the authorities expressed in the said first-recited Act up to the date of the passing of this Act, and for any further period within the limit of one year to which the Governor General in Council may deem it advisable to extend the operation of this Act, which is expressed to be executed by or by order of or on behalf of the Governor General of India in Council, the Governor of Fort Saint George in Council, or the Governor of Bombay in Council, or by any Lieutenant-Governor or Chief Commissioner, or any other officer for the time being entrusted with the government, charge, or care of any presidency, province, or district of British India within the limits of their respective governments, provinces, or districts, and every deed, contract, or other instrument so executed in British India by any person authorised in this behalf by the Secretary of State for India in Council, shall be and be deemed to have been as valid as if it had been executed in conformity with the provisions of the said first-recited Act; provided that such deed, contract, or other instrument has been in other respects duly executed according to the law in force at the date of its execution.

2. It shall be lawful for the Governor General, by resolution in Council, from time to time to vary the form of execution prescribed by the said first-recited Act for the deeds, contracts, and other instruments to which it relates, and to empower such authorities as to him may seem expedient to vary it within the respective limits of their local jurisdiction; and deeds, contracts, and other instruments executed according to forms so altered shall have in all respects the like validity as if they had been executed according to the provisions of the said first-recited Act.

CHAP. 60.

London Brokers Relief Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Jurisdiction of the court of aldermen over brokers to cease.
3. No bond to be enforced so far as relates to jurisdiction of court over brokers.
4. Pending proceedings not to be prejudiced.
5. Saving existing rights.
6. Brokers committing fraud to be disqualified from acting as brokers.

An Act to relieve the Brokers of the City of London from the supervision of the Court of Mayor and Aldermen of the said City. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Act of Parliament made in the sixth year of the reign of Queen Anne, intituled "An Act for repealing the Act of the first year of King James the First, intituled 'An Act for the well garbling of spices and for granting an equivalent to the city of London by admitting brokers,'" it was amongst other things enacted that from and after the determination of the then session of Parliament all persons that should act as brokers within the city of London and liberties thereof should from time to time be admitted so to do by the court of mayor and aldermen of the said city for the time being under such restrictions and limitations for their honest and good behaviour as the said court should think fit and reasonable, and should upon such their admission pay to the chamberlain of the said city for the time being, for the uses therein-after mentioned, the sum of forty shillings, and should also yearly pay to the said uses the sum of forty shillings upon the twenty-ninth day of September in every year; and it was further enacted that if any person or persons from and after the determination of the then session of Parliament should take upon him to act as a broker or employ any other under him to act as such within the said city and liberties not being admitted as aforesaid, every such person so offending should forfeit and pay to the use of the said mayor and commonalty and citizens of the said city for every such offence the sum of twenty-five pounds, to be recovered as in the said Act is mentioned:

And whereas by an Act (local and personal) made and passed in the fifty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, intituled "An Act for granting an equivalent for the diminution of the profits of the office of gauger of the city of London, and increasing the payments to be made by brokers," after reciting amongst other things the before-mentioned Act, it was amongst other things enacted that all persons that from and after the first day of July next after the passing of that Act should be admitted to act as brokers within the city of London and liberties thereof by the said court in pursuance of the said recited Act of Parliament should upon such their admission, over and above the sum of forty shillings required to be paid by the said recited Act, pay to the chamberlain of the said city for the time being the sum of three pounds, and should also yearly pay to the said chamberlain, over and above the said yearly sum of forty shillings required to be paid by the said recited Act, the sum of three pounds on the twenty-ninth day of September in every year; and it was amongst other things further enacted that so much of the said recited Act as imposed a penalty of twenty-five pounds upon any person who should take upon him to act as a broker, or employ any person under him to act as such not being admitted in pursuance of the said recited Act, should be and the same was thereby repealed; and that from and after the passing of the now reciting Act if any person should take upon him to act as a broker, or employ, or cause, permit, or suffer any person or persons to be employed with, under, or for him, to act as such within the said city and liberties, not being admitted in pursuance of the said recited Act, every such person so offending should forfeit and pay to the use of the mayor and commonalty and citizens of the said city for every such offence the sum of one hundred pounds, to be recovered as in the now reciting Act is mentioned:

And whereas the said court of mayor and aldermen of the said city (herein-after called "the court"), acting by virtue of the powers conferred upon them by the said recited Acts, or one of them, or by virtue of some other authority, have from time to time made and established rules and regulations for the admission of brokers within the city of London and liberties thereof, and have imposed restrictions and limitations on the manner in which the persons whom they have admitted into the office and employment of a broker within the said city and liberties thereof were and are to carry on their business as brokers, and have exercised and claim a right to exercise jurisdiction and control over such brokers for the purpose of enforcing the observance of the said regulations, restrictions, and limitations:

And whereas the said court have also required every broker admitted by them to find two sureties to be approved of by the said court to enter into a bond for the due and just execution by the broker of his said office and employment, or in place of such sureties have required such broker to transfer into the joint names of himself and the chamberlain of the said city stock in the public funds to the nominal amount of one thousand pounds:

And whereas the said court have also required each broker admitted by them to enter into his own bond in the penal sum of one thousand pounds to secure the due performance of his duties as a broker, and also to secure the annual payment of the sums of two pounds and three pounds to the chamberlain of the city pursuant to the provisions of the said Acts of the sixth year of the reign of Queen Anne and of the fifty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third:

And whereas it is expedient to relieve the said brokers from the necessity of providing such sureties or entering into such personal bond, and from the jurisdiction and supervision exercised by the said court over the brokers, in manner herein-after provided:

May it therefore please Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as the "London Brokers Relief Act, 1870."

2. After the passing of this Act the court shall not require a broker, by himself or sureties, to give any bond on his admission as a broker, and the jurisdiction, supervision, and control of the said court over brokers in the said city of London and the liberties thereof shall cease, and the said court shall not have power to make or enforce any rules, orders, regulations, restrictions, limitations, or penalties affecting, except as herein-after mentioned, the admission of such brokers, or the manner in which the business of such brokers shall be carried on.

3. No bond or declaration of trust executed by any broker in pursuance of any rules, orders, or regulations heretofore in force shall after the passing of this Act be put in suit or enforced, and all sums of stock transferred by way of security as aforesaid shall, from and after the passing of this Act, be held in trust for the broker transferring the same, and upon no other trust.

4. Nothing in this Act contained shall prejudice any proceedings actually commenced before the passing of this Act upon any such bond or declaration of trust.

5. Except as herein expressly enacted, this Act shall not extend to take away from the said court such right as they now have under the recited Acts to require brokers to be admitted, or to repeal the penalty of one hundred pounds imposed by the said Act of the fifty-seventh George the Third, in the case therein mentioned, or affect the liability of brokers when admitted to pay to the chamberlain of the said city, for the uses mentioned in the said recited Acts respectively, the sums of forty shillings and three pounds on admission, and the yearly sums of forty shillings and three pounds, which are made payable by the said recited Acts respectively; and the said yearly sums of two pounds and three pounds may be recovered by the chamberlain of the said city for the time being in the Mayor's Court of the City of London, or in the City of London Court.

6. The court shall keep a list containing the names and addresses of all brokers who shall from time to time have been admitted, and if any such broker shall be convicted in any criminal court of felony or fraud, or if a judge of any of the superior courts of law or equity, or a judge in bankruptcy, shall in any action, suit, or other proceeding prosecuted or depending before such judge, and to which such broker shall be a party, certify (as he is hereby empowered to do) that such broker has been guilty of fraud, and that he ought to be disqualified from acting as a broker altogether, or for such period as such judge shall name in the certificate, such broker shall accordingly be disqualified as from the date of such conviction or certificate, and his name shall thereupon be removed by the court of aldermen from the list of brokers either absolutely or for the time mentioned in such certificate.

An Act to amend the law relating to Life Assurance Companies.
(9th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Life Assurance Companies Act, 1870."

2. In this Act—

The term "company" means any person or persons, corporate or unincorporate, not being registered under the Acts relating to friendly societies, who issue or are liable under policies of assurance upon human life within the United Kingdom, or who grant annuities upon human life within the United Kingdom:

The term "chairman" means the person for the time being presiding over the court or board of directors of the company:

The term "policy holder" means the person who for the time being is the legal holder of the policy for securing the life assurance, endowment, annuity, or other contract with the company:

The term "financial year" means each period of twelve months at the end of which the balance of the accounts of the company is struck, or if no such balance is struck, then each period of twelve months ending with the thirty-first day of December:

The term "Court" means, in the case of a company registered or having its head office in England, the High Court of Chancery; in the case of a company registered or having its head office in Ireland, the Court of Chancery in Ireland; in all cases of companies registered or having its head office in Scotland, the Court of Session, in either division thereof:

The term "registrar" means the Registrar of Joint Stock Companies in England and Scotland, and the Assistant Registrar of Joint Stock Companies in Ireland.

3. Every company established after the passing of this Act within the United Kingdom, and every company established or to be established out of the United Kingdom which shall after the passing of this Act commence to carry on the business of life assurance within the United Kingdom, shall be required to deposit the sum of twenty thousand pounds with the Accountant General of the Court of Chancery, to be invested by him in one of the securities usually accepted by the Court for the investment of funds placed from time to time under its administration, the company electing the particular security and receiving the income therefrom, and the registrar shall not issue a certificate of incorporation unless such deposit shall have been made, and the Accountant General shall return such deposit to the company so soon as its life assurance fund accumulated out of the premiums shall have amounted to forty thousand pounds.

4. In the case of a company established after the passing of this Act transacting other business besides that of life assurance, a separate account shall be kept of all receipts in respect of the life assurance and annuity contracts of the company, and the said receipts shall be carried to and form a separate fund to be called the life assurance fund of the company, and such fund shall be as absolutely the security of the life policy and annuity holders as though it belonged to a company carrying on no other business than that of life assurance, and shall not be liable for any contracts of the company for which it would not have been liable had the business of the company been only that of life assurance; and in respect to all existing companies, the exemption of the life assurance fund from liability for other obligations than to its life policy holders shall have reference only to the contracts entered into after the passing of this Act, unless by the constitution of the company such exemption already exists: Provided always, that this section shall not apply to any contracts made by any existing company by the terms of whose deed of settlement the whole of the profits of all the business are paid exclusively to the life policy holders, and on the face of which contracts the liability of the assured distinctly appears.

5. From and after the passing of this Act, every company shall, at the expiration of each financial year of such company, prepare a statement of its revenue account for such year, and of its balance sheet at the close of such year, in the forms respectively contained in the first and second schedules to this Act.

6. Every company which, concurrently with the granting of policies of assurance or annuities on human life, transacts any other kind of assurance or other business, shall, at the expiration of each such financial year as aforesaid, prepare statements of its revenue account for such year, and of its balance sheet at the close of such year, in the forms respectively contained in the third and fourth schedules of this Act.

7. Every company shall, once in every five years if established after the passing of this Act, and once every ten years if established before the passing of this Act, or at such shorter intervals as may be prescribed by the instrument constituting the company, or by its regulations or by-laws, cause an investigation to be made into its financial condition by an actuary, and shall cause an abstract of the report of such actuary to be made in the form prescribed in the fifth schedule to this Act.

8. Every company shall, on or before the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, and thereafter within nine months after the date of each such investigation as aforesaid into its financial condition, prepare a statement of its life assurance and annuity business in the form contained in the sixth schedule to this Act, each of such statements to be made up as at the date of the last investigation, whether such investigation be made previously or subsequently to the passing of this Act: Provided as follows:

- (1.) If the next financial investigation after the passing of this Act of any company fall during the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-three, the said statement of such company shall be prepared within nine months after the date of such investigation, instead of on or before the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two:
- (2.) If such investigation be made annually by any company, such company may prepare such statement at any time, so that it be made at least once in every three years.

The expression date of each such investigation in this section shall mean the date to which the accounts of each company are made up for the purposes of each such investigation.

9. The Board of Trade, upon the applications of or with the consent of a company, may alter the forms contained in the schedules to this Act, for the purpose of adapting them to the circumstances of such company, or of better carrying into effect the objects of this Act.

10. Every statement or abstract herein-before required to be made shall be signed by the chairman and two directors of the company and by the principal officer managing the life assurance business, and, if the company has a managing director, by such managing director, and shall be printed; and the original, so signed as aforesaid, together with three printed copies thereof, shall be deposited at the Board of Trade within nine months of the dates respectively herein-before prescribed as the dates at which the same are to be prepared. And every annual statement so deposited after the next investigation shall be accompanied by a printed copy of the abstract required to be made by section seven.

11. A printed copy of the last deposited statement, abstract, or other document by this Act required to be printed shall be forwarded by the company, by post or otherwise, on application, to every shareholder and policy holder of the company.

12. Every company which is not registered under "The Companies Act, 1862," and which has not incorporated in its deed of settlement section ten of "The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845," shall keep a "Shareholders Address Book," in accordance with the provisions of that section, and shall furnish, on application, to every shareholder and policy holder of the company, a copy of such book, on payment of a sum not exceeding sixpence for every hundred words required to be copied for such purpose.

13. Every company which is not registered under "The Companies Act, 1862," shall cause a sufficient number of copies of its deed of settlement to be printed, and shall furnish, on application, to every shareholder and policy holder of the company, a copy of such deed of settlement on payment of a sum not exceeding two shillings and sixpence.

14. Where it is intended to amalgamate two or more companies, or to transfer the life assurance business of one company to another, the directors of any one or more of such companies may apply to the Court, by petition, to sanction the proposed arrangement, notice of such application being published in the Gazette, and the Court, after hearing the directors and other persons whom it considers entitled to be heard upon the petition, may confirm the same if it is satisfied that no sufficient objection to the arrangement has been established.

Before any such application is made to the Court, a statement of the nature of the amalgamation or transfer, as the case may be, together with an abstract containing the material facts embodied in the agreement or deed under which such amalgamation or transfer is proposed to be effected, and copies of the actuarial or other reports upon which such agreement or deed is founded, shall be forwarded to each policy holder of both companies in case of amalgamation, or to each policy holder of the transferred company in case of transfer, by the same being transmitted in manner provided by section one hundred and thirty-six of The Companies Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, for the transmission to shareholders of notices not requiring to be served personally; and the agreement or deed under which such amalgamation or transfer is effected shall be open for the inspection of the policy holders and shareholders at the office or offices of the company or companies for a period of fifteen days after the issuing of the abstract herein provided.

The Court shall not sanction any amalgamation or transfer in any case in which it appears to the Court that policy holders representing one tenth or more of the total amount assured in any company which it is proposed to amalgamate, or in any company the business of which it is proposed to transfer, dissent from such amalgamation or transfer.

No company shall amalgamate with another, or transfer its business to another, unless such amalgamation or transfer is confirmed by the Court in accordance with this section.

Provided always, that this section shall not apply in any case in which the business of any company which is sought to be amalgamated or transferred does not comprise the business of life assurance.

15. When an amalgamation takes place between any companies, or when the business of one company is transferred to another company, the combined company or the purchasing company, as the case may be, shall, within ten days from the date of the completion of the amalgamation or transfer, deposit with the Board of Trade certified copies of statements of the assets and liabilities of the companies concerned in such amalgamation or transfer, together with a statement of the nature and terms of the amalgamation or transfer, and a certified copy of the agreement or deed under which such amalgamation or transfer is effected, and certified copies of the actuarial or other reports upon which such agreement or deed is founded; and the statement and agreement or deed of amalgamation or transfer shall be accompanied by a declaration under the hand of the chairman of each company and the principal managing officer of each company, that to the best of their belief every payment made or to be made to any person whatsoever on account of the said amalgamation or transfer is therein fully set forth, and that no other payments beyond those set forth have been made or are to be made either in money, policies, bonds, valuable securities, or other property by or with the knowledge of any parties to the said amalgamation or transfer.

16. The Board of Trade may direct any printed or other documents required by this Act, or certified copies thereof, to be kept by the registrar of Joint Stock Companies or other officer of the Board of Trade; and any person may, on payment of such fees as the Board of Trade may direct, inspect the same at his office, and procure copies thereof.

17. Every statement, abstract, or other document deposited with the Board of Trade or with the registrar of Joint Stock Companies under this Act shall be receivable in evidence; and every document purporting to be certified by one of the secretaries or assistant secretaries of the Board of Trade, or by the said registrar, to be such deposited document, and every document purporting to be similarly certified to be a copy of such deposited document, shall, if produced out of the custody of the Board of Trade or of the said registrar, be deemed to be such deposited document as aforesaid, or a copy thereof, and shall be received in evidence as if it were the original document, unless some variation between it and the original document shall be proved.

18. Every company which makes default in complying with the requirements of this Act shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds for every day during which the default continues; and if default continue for a period of three months after notice of default by the Board of Trade, which notice shall be published in one or more newspapers as the Board of Trade may direct, and after such publication the Court may order the winding up of the company, in accordance with The Companies Act, 1862, upon the application of one or more policy holders or shareholders.

19. If any statement, abstract, or other document required by this Act is false in any particular to the knowledge of any person who signs the same, such person shall be liable on conviction thereof on indictment to fine and imprisonment, or on summary conviction thereof to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds.

20. Every penalty imposed by this Act shall be recovered and applied in the same manner as penalties imposed by The Companies Act, 1862, are recoverable and applicable.

21. The Court may order the winding up of any company, in accordance with The Companies Act, 1862, on the application of one or more policy holders or shareholders, upon its being proved to the satisfaction of the Court that the company is insolvent, and in determining whether or not the company is insolvent the Court shall take into account its contingent or prospective liability under policies and annuity and other existing contracts; but the Court shall not give a hearing to the petition until security for costs for such amount as the judge shall think reasonable shall be given, and until a prima facie case shall also be established to the satisfaction of the judge; and in the case of a proprietary company having an uncalled capital of an amount sufficient with the future premiums receivable by the company to make up the actual invested assets equal to the amount of the estimated liabilities, the Court shall suspend further proceedings on the petition for a reasonable time (in the discretion of the Court) to enable the uncalled capital, or a sufficient part thereof, to be called up; and if at the end of the original or any extended time for which the proceedings shall have been suspended such an amount shall not have been realized by means of calls as, with the already invested assets, to be equal to the liabilities, an order shall be made on the petition as if the company had been proved insolvent.

22. The Court, in the case of a company which has been proved to be insolvent, may, if it thinks fit, reduce the amount of the contracts of the company upon such terms and subject to such conditions as the Court thinks just, in place of making a winding-up order.

23. Any notice which is by this Act required to be sent to any policy holder may be addressed and sent to the person to whom notices respecting such policy are usually sent, and any notice so addressed and sent shall be deemed and taken to be notice to the holder of such policy.

24. The Board of Trade shall lay annually before Parliament the statements and abstracts of reports deposited with them under this Act during the preceding year.

25. This Act shall not affect the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, nor the Postmaster General, acting under the authorities vested in them respectively by the Acts tenth George the Fourth, chapter forty-one, third and fourth William the Fourth, chapter fourteen, sixteenth and seventeenth Victoria, chapter forty-five, and twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth Victoria, chapter forty-three.

PART I.—PRINT WORKS AND BLEACHING AND DYEING WORKS.

2. *Construction of Act.*3. *Definition of terms.*4. *Application of Factory Acts to print works and bleaching and dyeing works.*5. Repeal of Acts.

PART II.—FRUIT AND FISH PRESERVES.

6. Modification as regards manufactures of preserves of fruit and fish of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 103. and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 146. Schedules.

An Act to amend and extend the Acts relating to Factories and Workshops.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to extend the Acts relating to factories to print works and bleaching and dyeing works, and to amend the Acts relating to factories and workshops:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Factory and Workshop Act, 1870."

PART I.—PRINT WORKS AND BLEACHING AND DYEING WORKS.

2. This part of this Act shall be construed as one with the Factory Acts Extension Act, 1867, in this part of this Act referred to as the principal Act.

3. In this Act—

The term "print works" means any premises in which any persons are employed to print figures, patterns, or designs upon any cotton, linen, woollen, worsted, or silken yarn, or upon any woven or felted fabric, not being paper:

The term "bleaching and dyeing works" means any premises, whether in the open air or not, in which the processes of bleaching, beetling, dyeing, calendering, finishing, hooking, lap-ping, and making up and packing any yarn or cloth of any material, or the dressing or finishing of lace, or any one or more of such processes, or any process incidental thereto, are or is carried on.

4. After the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, the principal Act and the schedule thereto (containing the permanent modifications) shall apply to print works and bleaching and dyeing works, in the same manner in all respects as if the word "factory" had been defined by section three of the principal Act to mean print works and bleaching and dyeing works, subject, nevertheless, to the following qualification:

The schedule to the principal Act shall be construed as if there were contained in that schedule the permanent modifications contained in the first schedule to this Act.

Provided that during the year beginning on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one the following regulations shall be observed in print works, in Turkey-red dyeing works, and in the process of open-air bleaching; (that is to say,)

1. Children shall be employed only for the same time and subject to the same conditions for and subject to which young persons exceeding thirteen years of age will be allowed to be employed therein after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two:
2. No woman and no female child or young person shall be employed at night except so far as she will be allowed to be so employed after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two:

And for the purpose of enforcing the said regulations the principal Act shall apply to such works and process in the same manner and subject to the same qualification as it will apply thereto after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

5. After the first of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, the Acts mentioned in the first part of the third schedule to this Act shall be repealed, and the Act mentioned in the second part of the same schedule shall be repealed to the extent in the third column of that schedule mentioned.

PART II.—FRUIT AND FISH PRESERVES.

6. The schedule to the Factory Acts Extension Act, 1867, and the schedule to the Workshop Regulation Act, 1867, shall be construed as if there were contained in each of those schedules the permanent modification contained in the second schedule to this Act.

FIRST SCHEDULE.

PERMANENT MODIFICATIONS.

1. Whereas the customs or exigencies of the trade require that in print works and bleaching and dyeing works male young persons of the age of sixteen years and upwards should be occasionally employed beyond the hours allowed by the Factory Acts: It shall be lawful for one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, on due proof to his satisfaction that such customs or exigencies exist in the case of any print works, or bleaching and dyeing works, and that such occasional employment is not injurious to the health of such male young persons, from time to time, by order to be advertised in the London Gazette, or otherwise published in such manner as he may think fit, to give permission that in the case of any particular factory or class of factories male young persons of sixteen years of age and upwards may be employed for a period not exceeding fifteen hours on any one day:

Provided that—

- 1st. They are not so employed except between the hours of six in the morning and nine in the evening.
 - 2d. In addition to the time allowed under the Factory Acts for meals, they shall be allowed half an hour for a meal after the hour of six in the evening.
 - 3d. They are not so employed on the whole for more than seventy-two days in any period of twelve months, or for more than five consecutive days in any one week.
2. Where it is shown to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State that, by reason of the nature of any process in any print works or bleaching and dyeing works, the time for the completion of such process cannot be accurately fixed, it shall be lawful for such Secretary of State from time to time, by order, to be advertised in the London Gazette or otherwise published in such manner as he may think fit, to give permission in the case of any factory or class of factories that if, during the time limited by the order or during the continuance of the order, such process is in an incomplete state at the hour at which any child, young person, or woman employed in such process is required by this Act to cease work, such child, young person, or woman may be employed in such process for a period not exceeding thirty minutes beyond the said hour.

3. In bleaching and dyeing works time lost by the breakage of machinery or by reason of frost or snow may be recovered in the same manner and subject to the same conditions as time lost by stoppages from want of water or from too much water may be recovered under the Factory Acts.

4. So much of the Factory Acts as provides that all the young persons employed in a factory shall have the time for meals at the same period of the day shall not apply to male young persons employed in that part of any print works or bleaching and dyeing works in which the process of dyeing or open-air bleaching is carried on; and nothing in the Factory Acts shall be deemed to prevent in any such part any male young person, during the time allowed for meals to any other young person or to any child or woman, from being employed or allowed to remain in any room in which any manufacturing process is carried on, or to prevent, during the time allowed for meals to any male young person, any other young person or any child or woman from being employed or allowed to remain in any room in which any manufacturing process is carried on.

5. So much of the Factory Acts as provides that in any factory in which the labour of young persons is restricted to ten hours in any one day a child may be employed ten hours in any one day on three alternate days of every week, subject to the conditions specified in the said Factory Acts, shall extend to authorise, in print works and bleaching and dyeing works in which the labour of young persons is restricted to ten hours and a half in any one day, the employment of children for ten hours and a half in any one day on three alternate days of every week, subject to the said conditions.

6. In the operation of bleaching by the open-air process, and in the process of Turkey-red dyeing, whenever emergencies arising from the state of the weather or the nature of the processes render it necessary, any woman or young person may, subject to the provisions of the principal Act and this Act, work according to the accustomed hours of the trade: Provided that—

- (1.) The hours of actual work do not exceed ten and a half hours in any one day:
- (2.) The hours of actual work do not exceed sixty hours in any one week, such week to be reckoned between midnight on Saturday night and midnight on the succeeding Saturday night:
- (3.) Reasonable intervals for meals, amounting in the whole to not less than the amount of time required for such intervals by the Factory Acts, shall be allowed to such woman or young person:
- (4.) No such woman or young person shall be so employed between seven o'clock in the evening and five o'clock next morning.

Provided that, for the purpose only of preventing any damage which may arise from spontaneous combustion in the process of Turkey-red dyeing, or from any extraordinary atmospheric influence in the process of open-air bleaching, women and young persons may be employed so far as is necessary for the purpose of preventing such damage.

7. Whereas the exigencies of the processes of Turkey-red dyeing require that the hours between which young persons, and women, or certain sets of them, may be employed, should be varied so as to correspond to the accustomed hours of the trade: It is hereby declared, that it shall be lawful for one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State from time to time, by order, to be advertised in the London Gazette, or otherwise published in such manner as he may think fit, to give permission that in the case of any particular factory or class of factories in which the process of Turkey-red dyeing is carried on, young persons and women, or any of them, or any sets of them, or of any of them, may, during the time specified in the order, or until further order, or on any day or days named in such order, be employed in such process between the hours specified in the order instead of between the hours prescribed by the Factory Acts; and, so far as respects the persons referred to in any such order, the Factory Acts shall, during the continuance of such order, be read as if the hours specified in the order were throughout such Acts substituted for the hours prescribed by the Factory Acts: Provided that—

- (1.) No young person or woman shall be employed in pursuance of such order after half-past four o'clock in the afternoon of Saturday:
- (2.) Notice of the hours between which women and young persons are to be employed in pursuance of this modification, in such form as the inspectors of factories may direct, and signed by one of such inspectors, and the occupier or his agent, shall, during the continuance of the order, be kept hung up in such conspicuous place in the factory as may be required by one of such inspectors.

8. Where, under the modifications contained in any schedule to the principal Act or to this Act, any child, young person, or woman is employed otherwise than under an order of the Secretary of State, during any hours different from those of the Factory Acts, the day on which and the period during which he or she is so employed shall be entered by the occupier of the factory in a register, which shall be in such form as the Inspectors of Factories may direct, and shall be deemed to be a register within the meaning of the Factory Acts.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

PERMANENT MODIFICATION.

In the manufacture of preserves from fruit, and in the processes of preserving or curing fish, women may be employed between the first of June and the twenty-fourth day of December for a period not exceeding fourteen hours on any one day:

Provided that—

- 1st. They shall not be so employed except between the hours of six in the morning and eight in the evening, or in a factory in which permission has been given by the Secretary of State to work between the hours of seven in the morning and seven in the evening, or of eight in the morning and eight in the evening, then except between the hours of seven in the morning and nine in the evening, or eight in the morning and ten in the evening, as the case may be.
- 2d. In addition to the time allowed under the Factory Acts for meals, they shall be allowed half an hour for a meal after the hour of five in the evening.
- 3d. They shall not be so employed on the whole for more than ninety-six days during the said period between the first day of June and the twenty-fourth day of December.

4th. They shall not be so employed for more than five consecutive days in any one week.

The Wages Arrestment Limitation (Scotland) Act.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Wages of artificers not to be liable to arrestment for debts contracted after 1 January 1871.
2. Limitation of liability of wages to arrestment.
3. As to debts incurred before passing of Act.
4. Act not to affect decrees for alimentary allowances or for rates and taxes.
5. Short title.

An Act to limit Wages Arrestment in Scotland.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS great evils have arisen through the arrestment of wages of labourers, manufacturers, artificers, and other workpeople, and also by the provisions relating to such arrestment in the Act first of Victoria, chapter forty-one, and it is desirable to remedy these evils :

Be it hereby enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same :

1. That from and after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one the wages of all labourers, farm servants, manufacturers, artificers, and workpeople shall cease to be liable to arrestment for debts contracted subsequent to the passing of this Act, save as herein-after excepted.

2. If the amount of wages earned exceeds twenty shillings per week, any surplus above that amount shall still be liable to arrestment as before the passing of this Act, but the expense or cost of any such arrestment shall not be chargeable against the debtor unless in virtue of such arrestment the arresting creditor shall recover a sum larger than the amount of such expense or cost.

3. No arrestment of wages shall hereafter attach more than the amount of any surplus above twenty shillings per week, unless it shall be stated on the face of the arrestment or indorsed thereon that the debt in respect of which it is used was incurred prior to the passing of this Act; and such statement may be made by a memorandum on the arrestment subscribed by the officer executing the same.

4. This Act shall in no way affect arrestments in virtue of decrees for alimentary allowances or payments, or for rates and taxes imposed by law, but every arrestment used after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one for such alimentary allowances or payments, or for rates and taxes imposed by law, shall set forth the nature of the debt for which it has been used, otherwise the same shall not be effectual.

5. This Act may be cited as "The Wages Arrestment Limitation (Scotland) Act."

CHAP. 64.

The Petty Sessions Clerk (Ireland) Act, 1858, Amendment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Order for amalgamation of districts may be rescinded.

An Act to amend the Petty Sessions Clerk (Ireland) Act, 1858.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Petty Sessions Clerk (Ireland) Act, 1858 :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Petty Sessions Clerk (Ireland) Act, 1858, Amendment Act, 1870."

2. Where any order has been made by the Lord Lieutenant under the provisions of the said Petty Sessions Clerk (Ireland) Act, 1858, that two or more petty sessions districts shall be served by one and the same person as clerk, and if after the making of the same the justices at quarter sessions for the division of the county in which such districts, or any of the same, are situate, shall represent to the Lord Lieutenant that the service of such districts by one clerk is inconvenient, the Lord Lieutenant may rescind the said order by notice to be published in the Dublin Gazette, and to be notified to the clerk of the peace of the county in which the said districts are situate, by the chief or under secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, and thereupon such order shall be null and void.

CHAP. 65.

The Larceny (Advertisements) Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

3. Limitation of actions for advertisements of reward for return of stolen property.
4. Stay of proceedings in action brought before passing of the Act.

An Act to amend the Law relating to Advertisements respecting Stolen Goods. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS under section one hundred and two of the Act of the session of the twenty-fourth and twenty-fifth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter ninety-six, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the Statute Law of England and Ireland relating to Larceny and other similar offences," any person who prints or publishes advertisements for the return of stolen goods without questions being asked, or the like advertisements therein mentioned, forfeits the sum of fifty pounds to any person who will sue for the same by action of debt:

And whereas the provision in the said section has given occasion to many vexatious proceedings at the instance of common informers against printers and publishers of newspapers, and it is expedient to discourage the same:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as The Larceny (Advertisements) Act, 1870, and shall be construed as one with the recited Act, which may be cited as The Larceny Act, 1861, and that Act and this Act may be cited together as the Larceny Acts, 1861 and 1870.

2. In this Act the term "newspaper" means a newspaper as defined for the purposes of the Acts for the time being in force relating to the carriage of newspapers by post.

3. Every action against the printer or publisher of a newspaper to recover a forfeiture under section one hundred and two of The Larceny Act, 1861, shall be brought within six months after the forfeiture is incurred, and no such action against the printer or publisher of a newspaper shall be brought unless the assent in writing of Her Majesty's Attorney General or Solicitor General for England, if the action is brought in England, or for Ireland, if the action is brought in Ireland, has been first obtained to the bringing of such action.

4. Where any action has been brought before the passing of this Act against the printer or publisher of any newspaper for the recovery of any forfeiture incurred under section one hundred and two of The Larceny Act, 1861, the defendant in such action may apply to a judge, if the action is brought in England, of one of the Superior Courts at Westminster, and if the action is brought in Ireland, of one of the Superior Courts at Dublin, and such judge upon such application and upon proof that sufficient notice of the application has been given to the plaintiff or his attorney, shall order that upon payment by the defendant of the plaintiff's costs out of pocket, incurred in the action up to the time of the application, the action shall be discontinued, or (if the forfeiture was incurred within six months before the passing of this Act) shall be discontinued unless the plaintiff before the expiration of six months from the date of the forfeiture obtain the assent required by this Act to the bringing of such action, and shall be stayed until such assent is obtained.

The British Columbia Government Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Interpretation of term "Governor."
3. Power to Her Majesty by Order in Council to constitute a Legislature.
4. Power to Her Majesty to delegate certain powers to the Governor of British Columbia.

An Act to make further provision for the Government of British Columbia.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS in pursuance of the powers vested in Her Majesty by an Act passed in the session holden in the twenty-first and twenty-second years of Her Majesty's reign, intituled "An Act to provide for the Government of British Columbia," Her Majesty did, by an Order in Council, bearing date the eleventh day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three, constitute a Legislature consisting of the Governor and a Legislative Council in the said colony of British Columbia:

And whereas by the British Columbia Act of 1866 Vancouver Island was united to British Columbia and made subject to the said Legislature, and the number of the Legislative Council was increased so as to provide for the representation of Vancouver Island:

And whereas it is expedient to alter the constitution of the said Legislature:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The British Columbia Government Act, 1870."

2. For the purposes of this Act, the term "Governor" shall mean the officer for the time being administering the government of British Columbia.

3. Her Majesty may, by any Order or Orders in Council, revoke the said recited Order in Council, and may from time to time make, and when made revoke or alter, Orders in Council for constituting a Legislature consisting of the Governor and a Legislative Council for the said colony, and may by any such Order make such provisions and regulations respecting the constitution, powers, and proceedings of the said Legislature or either branch thereof, the number, the appointment, and election of the members of the Legislative Council, their tenure of office, and generally in respect to such Legislature or either branch thereof, as may seem to her expedient.

4. Her Majesty may from time to time, by any such Order or Orders in Council, empower the Governor of the said colony, with or without any conditions or restrictions, by proclamation, to determine the qualification of electors and of elective members of the Legislative Council, and to make provision for the division of the said colony into convenient electoral districts; for the registration of persons qualified to vote, and the compilation and revision of lists of all such persons; for the appointment of returning officers; for the issuing, executing, and returning the necessary writs for the election of members to the said Legislative Council; for taking the poll thereat, and determining the validity of all disputed returns; and generally for securing the orderly, effective, and impartial conduct of such elections, and to revoke any proclamation previously made.

An Act to shorten the time of Active Service in the Army, and to amend in certain respects the Law of Enlistment.

WHEREAS it is expedient to shorten the period of army service of soldiers enlisted to serve in Her Majesty's army, and to establish a reserve force which may be called into active service in a time of emergency; and also to amend in certain respects the law of enlistment in Her Majesty's army:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Army Enlistment Act, 1870."

2. From and after the passing of this Act, no person shall be enlisted for the first term of his engagement to serve Her Majesty as a soldier for a longer period than twelve years, to be reckoned from the day on which the recruit is attested for service.

3. Enlistments under this Act shall be as follows: either

- (1.) For the whole of the said period, in army service; or
- (2.) For a portion of the said period, to be fixed from time to time by the Secretary of State and specified in the attestation paper, in army service, and for the residue thereof in the first class of the reserve force established under the provisions of the Reserve Force Act, 1867; but nothing in this clause shall interfere with the power of

Her Majesty to enlist men for a less period than twelve years in army service alone.

4. The Secretary of State may from time to time by general or special regulations vary the conditions of service so as to permit a soldier who has served not less than three years in army service, with such soldier's free assent, either

- (1.) To enter the reserve force at once for the residue unexpired of his term of twelve years; or
- (2.) To extend his army service for the residue unexpired of his term of twelve years.

5. It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, in case of imminent national danger or of great emergency, the occasion being first communicated to Parliament if Parliament be then sitting, or declared by proclamation, in pursuance of an order of Her Majesty in Council, if Parliament be not then sitting, to direct that any soldier enlisted under this Act shall at any time within the period of twelve years for which he has been enlisted continue in or re-enter upon army service for such periods from time to time, not exceeding in the whole the unexpired residue of the term of his enlistment, as Her Majesty may determine; and upon such order being issued every soldier to whom it applies shall be bound to obey the same in the same manner as if it had formed part of this Act. When any such soldier is directed to re-enter upon army service under this section, it shall be lawful for the military authorities to attach him to any regiment of that arm or branch of the service in which he has previously served.

6. From and after the passing of this Act, all enlistments, except as herein-after mentioned, shall be for general service; and it shall be lawful for the military authorities to post any recruit so enlisted to any regiment or corps, and at any time within fifteen months after his attestation to direct him to be attached to any regiment or corps; but the Secretary of State may, from time to time, by any general or special regulations, permit recruits to be enlisted for particular regiments, and in such case they shall at once be attached to such regiments.

7. When a soldier has been attached to a regiment or corps he shall serve therein for the period of his army service; provided that it shall be lawful for the military authorities to transfer him to any regiment or corps of the same arm or branch of the service serving in the United Kingdom, in the following cases;

(1.) When he has been invalided from foreign service;

(2.) When, in the case of his regiment or corps being ordered on foreign service, he is either unfit for foreign service by reason of his health, or is within two years of the termination of the period of his army service, or of his enlistment, or of such re-engagement as is herein-after mentioned; and to a regiment or corps of the same arm or branch of the service serving abroad, when, in the case of his regiment or corps being on foreign service, and ordered to return home, he has more than two years to serve previous to the termination of the period of his army service: Provided that the power of transfer in this case shall not apply to any man who enlists for the whole of the period of twelve years in army service, or to any man who, having enlisted for a portion of the said period in army service, has extended his army service for the residue unexpired of his term of twelve years, or to any man who has re-engaged.

Provided also, that nothing in this section contained shall affect the powers of transferring soldiers contained in any Act for punishing mutiny and desertion, and for the better payment of the army and for their quarters, for the time being in force.

8. Any soldier

(1.) Who being in army service has commenced the twelfth year from his first enlistment, or

(2.) Who being within three years of the expiration of his first enlistment and in army service has been ordered but has not yet proceeded on foreign service, may, with the approval of his commanding officer or of some other competent military authority, and subject to such regulations as may from time to time be made by the Secretary of State, be re-engaged for such further period of army service as will make up a total continuous period of twenty-one years in Her Majesty's service, reckoning from the time of his first enlistment.

9. The number of men serving in the militia reserve under the Militia Reserve Act, 1867, and in the army reserve, first class, under the Reserve Force Act, 1867, and this Act, shall not exceed in the whole sixty thousand.

10. Any soldier who has completed a total period of twenty-one years service may give notice to his commanding officer of his desire to continue in Her Majesty's service; and if his commanding officer or any other competent military authority approve of such application he may be continued as a soldier in the same manner in all respects as if his term of service were still unexpired, except that it shall be lawful for him to claim his discharge at the expiration of any period of three months after he has given notice to his commanding officer of his wish to be discharged.

11. Any soldier whose period of army service or whose whole period of enlistment, as the case may be, expires while a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, or while he is serving on foreign service, or on any colonial or Indian station, may be detained and his service may be prolonged for such further period not exceeding twelve months as the Secretary of State or the commanding officer at the station may direct; but at the expiration of such prolonged service, or sooner, if the said Secretary of State or commanding officer see fit, such soldier shall be transferred to the reserve force or discharged, as the case may be, and if serving abroad he shall, unless he desires to remain at the place where he is serving, be sent home at the public charge, with all convenient speed, and after his arrival he shall be transferred to the reserve force or discharged, as the case may be.

12. In reckoning the service of a soldier for the purposes of discharge under the provisions of this Act, all periods of time shall be excluded during which he has been absent from his duty for any of the following causes; that is to say,

1. Imprisonment; provided that imprisonment shall not for the purposes of this section include detention in respect of any trial which results in the acquittal or discharge of the prisoner.

2. Desertion.

3. Absence without leave exceeding five days.

4. Detention as a prisoner of war, unless it appear to the satisfaction of a court-martial to be summoned on his rejoining Her Majesty's service that he was not taken prisoner through his own wilful neglect of duty, and that he rejoined as soon as he could and ought to have done.

13. Every soldier who has completed his period of service or of army service, according to the provisions of this Act, shall be entitled to his discharge, or transfer to the reserve force, as the case may be, unless at the time of the expiration of such period of service he stands charged with the commission of any offence, in which case his discharge or transfer to the reserve force shall be deferred, until he has undergone his trial and any punishment awarded to him.

14. Whereas by the Reserve Force Act, 1867, section ten, it is provided that in case of actual invasion or imminent danger thereof, or in case a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty by proclamation to direct that the reserve force by that Act constituted, or such part thereof as Her Majesty may think fit, be called out on permanent service:

And whereas by the Militia Reserve Act, 1867, section eight, it is provided that whenever a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, and in all cases of actual invasion or imminent danger thereof, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty to order that the men enlisted under the said Act or such of them as Her Majesty may judge necessary shall enter upon army service:

And whereas it is expedient to assimilate the conditions under which men of the reserve force established under the said Acts of one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven may be called to enter upon army service to those under which men enlisted under this Act may be directed to continue in or re-enter upon army service:

Be it enacted as follows:

1. Section ten of the Reserve Force Act, 1867, shall be construed as if the words "in case of imminent national danger or of great emergency, the occasion being first communicated to Parliament if Parliament be then sitting, or declared by proclamation," were inserted in the said section in place of the words "in case of actual invasion or imminent danger thereof, or in case a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power."
2. Section eight of the Militia Reserve Act, 1867, shall be construed as if the words "in case of imminent national danger or of great emergency, the occasion being first communicated to Parliament if Parliament be then sitting, or declared by proclamation," were inserted in the said section in place of the words "when-

" ever a state of war exists between Her Majesty and any foreign power, and in all cases of actual invasion or imminent danger thereof."

Provided that nothing in this section contained shall affect any person enlisted under the said Acts of one thousand eight hundred and sixty-seven before this Act comes into operation, except with his own consent.

15. From and after the passing of this Act, any soldier who is serving or has served in any of Her Majesty's regular forces, and whose service (or past service) has exceeded the first term of his enlistment, may be enrolled to serve in the first class of the reserve force established under the Army Reserve Act, 1867; provided that no such soldier is when so enrolled above the age of thirty-four years.

16. The Secretary of State may from time to time issue such orders and forms for enlisting recruits and for otherwise carrying into effect this Act as he thinks expedient, and any orders and forms so issued shall be of the same force as if expressly enacted in this Act.

17. All provisions of any Act of Parliament for the time being in force relating to the enlistment of recruits for Her Majesty's army shall, in so far as they are not inconsistent with this Act, be deemed to be incorporated with this Act, and to apply accordingly to any enlistments made in pursuance of this Act.

18. This Act shall apply to men serving for the first term of their enlistment under the Act of the session holden in the tenth and eleventh years of Her Majesty's reign, chapter thirty-seven, intituled "An Act for limiting the term of service in the army," and the Army Enlistment Act, 1867, in the same manner as if they had been enlisted under this Act; provided that this Act shall not be applied to any man enlisted under such last-mentioned Act, except with his own consent.

19. The Secretary of State may from time to time make regulations for the training of persons serving in pursuance of this Act in the first class of the reserve force in such manner and during such periods as he may consider to interfere as little as possible with their ordinary trades or occupations, and as do not exceed in any one year twelve whole days or twenty drills.

20. The Secretary of State may require the chief officer of police in every district in the United Kingdom to cause to be served within his district any notice the Secretary of State may desire to be served on any members of the reserve forces in such district; and all officers and men of every police force shall conform to the orders of the said Secretary of State in relation to the service of such notices given through such officer.

"The reserve forces" shall mean the army reserve, the militia reserve, and any other reserve forces as defined by Act of Parliament, also the militia, yeomanry, volunteers, and any other land forces whatever within the United Kingdom, serving or liable to be called upon to serve

Her Majesty in any military capacity and not forming part of the regular army.

21. From and after the passing of this Act, section eight of the Reserve Force Act, 1867, and all enactments inconsistent with this Act, shall be repealed.

22. The Secretary of State shall mean any one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

CHAP. 68.

Militia Acts Amendment.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Amendment of the Acts relating to the Militia in cases of emergency.
2. Parliament to be summoned within ten days.

An Act to amend the Acts relating to the Militia of the United Kingdom.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS under the Acts in force concerning the Militia of the United Kingdom the Militia can be drawn out and embodied in England and Scotland respectively only in case of actual invasion or of imminent danger of invasion, or in case of rebellion or insurrection, or in case of a state of war existing between Her Majesty and a foreign power; and in Ireland only in case of actual invasion, rebellion, or insurrection, or of immediate danger thereof, or in case of a state of war existing between Her Majesty and a foreign power:

And whereas under the Acts aforesaid additional Militia can be raised only in case of actual invasion or imminent danger thereof:

And whereas it is expedient to amend the aforesaid Acts as herein-after mentioned:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. In case of imminent national danger or of great emergency, the occasion being first communicated to Parliament, if Parliament be then sitting, or declared by proclamation in pursuance of an Order of Her Majesty in Council if Parliament be not then sitting, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty and for the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland respectively to cause the whole or any part of the respective Militias of England, Scotland, and Ireland to be drawn out and embodied, or to cause additional Militia to be raised for England, Scotland, or Ireland in the manner by the said Acts authorised in the cases mentioned in the said Acts; and all the provisions of the said Acts and of any Acts amending the said Acts applicable to the drawing-out, embodying, and raising such respective Militias, and to such Militias when so drawn out, embodied, and raised, shall apply in the case of the Militias to be drawn out, embodied, or raised in pursuance of the provisions of this Act; but this Act shall not apply to any man enlisted under any of the said Acts without his own consent.

2. Whenever in pursuance of the provision of this Act Her Majesty causes any Militia to be drawn out, embodied, or raised as aforesaid, if Parliament be then separated by such adjournment or prorogation as will not expire within ten days, a proclamation shall be issued for the meeting of Parliament within ten days, and Parliament shall accordingly meet and sit upon such day as may be appointed by such proclamation, and shall continue to sit and act in like manner as if it had stood adjourned or prorogued to such day.

The Statute Law Revision Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Enactments in schedule repealed, but not to affect validity of certain Acts.
2. Short title.
Schedule.

An Act for further promoting the revision of the Statute Law by repealing certain enactments that have ceased to be in force or are consolidated by certain Acts of the present Session.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS the enactments described in the schedule to this Act have ceased to be in force, or on the commencement of Acts of the present session relating to the National Debt and to Forgery will cease to be in force, and, with a view to the revision of the Statute Law, and particularly to the preparation of the revised edition of the Statutes now in progress, it is expedient that the same enactments be expressly repealed:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The enactments described in the schedule to this Act are hereby repealed, subject to the exceptions in the schedule mentioned:

Provided that this Act shall not affect the validity, invalidity, effect or consequences of any letter or power of attorney or other instrument or thing already made, done or suffered,—or any right or title already acquired or accrued, or any remedy or proceeding in respect thereof,—or any release or discharge of or from any debt, penalty, claim or demand,—or any indemnity,—or the proof of any past act or thing;

and the repeal by this Act of any enactment shall not affect any Act in which such enactment has been applied, incorporated or referred to;

nor shall such repeal affect any jurisdiction or procedure given or authorized by any Act hereby repealed with reference to questions arising in consequence of any commutation or payment under such Act, or affect any protection conferred by such Act in reference to any act, matter or thing done by any trustee, executor, administrator or other person;

nor shall such repeal affect any right to any hereditary revenues of the Crown, or affect any charges thereupon, or prevent any enactment from being put in force for the collection of any such revenues, or otherwise in relation thereto.

2. This Act may be cited as the Statute Law Revision Act, 1870.

Schedules.

An Act to facilitate in certain cases the obtaining of powers for the construction of Gas and Water Works and for the supply of Gas and Water.

(9th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Gas and Water Works Facilities Act, 1870."

2. For the purposes of this Act, the terms herein-after mentioned shall have the meanings herein-after assigned to them; that is to say,

The term "local authority" shall mean the bodies of persons named in the table in the Schedule (A.) to this Act annexed :

The term "road" shall mean any carriageway being a public highway, and any bridge forming part of the same :

The term "road authority" shall mean any local authority, board, town council, body corporate, commissioners, trustees, vestry, or other body or persons in whom a road as defined by this Act is vested, or who have the power to maintain or repair such road :

The term "district," in relation to a local authority, shall mean the area within the jurisdiction of such local authority :

The term "The Lands Clauses Acts" means, so far as the Provisional Order in which that term is used relates to England or Ireland, the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845; and, so far as the same relates to Scotland, the Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845; together with, in each case, the Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts Amendment Act, 1860.

Description of Cases within this Act.

3. This Act shall apply where powers are required for all or any of the purposes following :—

- (1.) To construct or to maintain and continue gasworks and works connected therewith, or to manufacture and supply gas in any district within which there is not an existing company, corporation, body of commissioners, or person empowered by Act of Parliament to construct such works or to manufacture and supply gas :
- (2.) To construct or to maintain and continue waterworks and works connected therewith, or to supply water in any district within which there is not an existing company, corporation, body of commissioners, or person empowered by Act of Parliament to construct such works and to supply water:

- (3.) To raise additional capital necessary for any of the purposes aforesaid:
- (4.) To enable two or more companies or persons duly authorised to supply gas or water in any district or in adjoining districts to enter into agreements jointly to furnish such supply, or to amalgamate their undertakings:
- (5.) To authorise two or more companies or persons supplying gas or water in any district or in adjoining districts to manufacture and supply gas or to supply water, and to enter into agreements jointly to furnish such supply and to amalgamate their undertakings:

and such purposes, or any one or more of them, as the case may be, shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed to be included in the term "gas undertaking" or "water undertaking," according as the same relate to the supply of gas or water; provided that any gas or water company empowered as aforesaid may apply for and avail themselves of the facilities of this Act within their own districts respectively.

Provisional Orders authorising Gas and Water Undertakings.

4. Provisional Orders authorising any gas undertaking or water undertaking under the authority of this Act may be obtained in any district by any company, companies, or person; and in the construction of this Act the term "the undertakers" shall be deemed to include any such company, companies, or person.

Where the undertakers require powers for the purpose of constructing gasworks or waterworks, or works connected therewith within any district, the consent of the local authority of such district shall be necessary before any Provisional Order can be obtained; and where in such district there is a road authority distinct from the local authority, the consent of such road authority shall also be necessary in any case where power is sought to break up any road of such road authority, before any Provisional Order can be obtained, unless the Board of Trade in any case in which the consent of the local authority or road authority is refused are of opinion, after inquiry, that, having regard to all the circumstances of the case, such consent ought to be dispensed with, and in such case they shall make a special report, stating the grounds upon which they have dispensed with such consent.

5. The undertakers intending to make an application for a Provisional Order in pursuance of this Act shall proceed as follows:—

- (1.) On or before the first of November next before their application they shall give notice in writing of their intention to make the same to every company, corporation, or person (if any) supplying gas (if the proposed application relates to gasworks) or water (if the proposed application relates to waterworks) within the district to which the proposed application refers:
- (2.) In the months of October and November next before their application, or in one of those months, they shall publish notice of their intention to make such application by advertisement, according to the regulations contained in Part One of the Schedule (B.) to this Act; and where it is proposed to abstract water from any stream for any waterwork, they shall give notice in writing of their intention to make such application to the owners or reputed owners, leasees or reputed leasees, and occupiers of all mills and manufactories or other works using the waters of such stream for a distance of twenty miles below the point at which such water is intended to be abstracted, such distance to be measured along the course of such stream, unless such waters shall within a less distance than twenty miles fall into or unite with any navigable stream, and then only to the owners or reputed owners, leasees or reputed leasees, and occupiers of such mills and manufactories as aforesaid which shall be situate between the point at which such water is proposed to be abstracted and the point at which such water shall fall into or unite with such navigable stream; and such notice shall state the name (if any) by which the stream is known at the point at which such water shall be immediately abstracted, and also the parish in which such point is situate, and the time and place of deposit of the plans and sections required by this Act to be deposited:
- (3.) On or before the thirtieth day of the same month of November they shall deposit the documents described in Part Two of the same schedule, according to the regulations therein contained:
- (4.) On or before the twenty-third day of December in the same year they shall deposit the documents described in Part Three of the same schedule, according to the regulations therein contained.

All maps, plans, and documents required by this Act to be deposited for the purposes of any Provisional Order may be deposited with the persons and in the manner directed by the Act of the session of Parliament held in the seventh year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth and the first year of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to compel clerks of the peace for counties and other persons to take the custody of such documents as shall be directed to be deposited with them under the standing orders of either House of Parliament;" and all the provisions of that Act shall apply accordingly.

6. The Board of Trade shall consider the application, and also any objection thereto that may be lodged with them on or before such day as they from time to time appoint, and shall determine whether or not the undertakers may proceed with the application.

7. Where it appears to the Board of Trade expedient and proper that the application should be granted, with or without addition or modification, or subject or not to any restriction or condition, and it has been proved to their satisfaction that all the requisitions of section five of this Act have been in all respects complied with, the Board of Trade may settle and make a Provisional Order accordingly.

Every such Provisional Order if it relates to gasworks shall expressly restrict the undertakers from manufacturing gas or any residual products arising in the manufacture of gas on any land except such as is specified in that behalf in the order, and shall also expressly restrict them from storing gas on any land except such as is specified in that behalf in the order within three hundred yards from any dwelling-house existing at the time when the undertakers propose to store gas on such land, without the consent in writing of the owner, lessee, and occupier of such dwelling-house.

Every such Provisional Order shall contain such other provisions as, according to the nature of the application and the facts and circumstances of each case, the Board of Trade thinks fit to submit to Parliament for confirmation in manner provided by this Act; but so that any such Provisional Order shall not contain any provision for empowering the undertakers or any other person to acquire lands otherwise than by agreement, or to acquire any lands, even by agreement, except to an extent therein limited.

The costs of and connected with the preparation and making of each Provisional Order shall be paid by the undertakers, and the Board of Trade may require the undertakers to give security for such costs before they proceed with the Provisional Order.

8. When a Provisional Order has been made as aforesaid and delivered to the undertakers, the undertakers shall forthwith deposit and publish the same by advertisement according to the regulations contained in Part Four of the Schedule (B.) to this Act.

9. On proof to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade of the completion of such publication as aforesaid, the Board of Trade shall, as soon as they conveniently can after the expiration of seven days from the completion of such publication in relation to any Provisional Order which shall have been published as aforesaid, not later than the twenty-fifth of April in any year, procure a Bill to be introduced into either House of Parliament for an Act to confirm the Provisional Order, which shall be set out at length in the schedule to the Bill; but until confirmation by Act of Parliament a Provisional Order under this Act shall not have any operation.

If while any such Bill is pending in either House of Parliament a petition is presented against any Provisional Order comprised therein, the Bill, so far as it relates to the order petitioned against, may be referred to a select committee, and the petitioner shall be allowed to appear and oppose as in the case of a Bill for a special Act.

The Act of Parliament confirming any Provisional Order under this Act shall be deemed a Public General Act.

10. The provisions of The Lands Clauses Acts shall be incorporated with every Provisional Order under this Act, save where the same are expressly varied or excepted by any such Provisional Order, and except as to the following provisions, namely,—

- (1.) With respect to the purchase and taking of lands otherwise than by agreement;
- (2.) With respect to the entry upon lands by the promoters of the undertaking.

Where a Provisional Order authorises a gas undertaking the provisions of "The Gasworks Clauses Act, 1847," shall be incorporated with such Provisional Order, save where the same are thereby expressly varied or excepted.

Where a Provisional Order authorises a water undertaking the provisions of "The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1847," and of "The Waterworks Clauses Act, 1863," shall be incorporated with such Provisional Order, save where the same are thereby expressly varied or excepted.

For the purposes of such incorporation a Provisional Order under this Act shall be deemed the special Act.

11. If any undertakers empowered by any Provisional Order under this Act to make works do not, within three years from the date of such Provisional Order, or within any shorter period prescribed therein, complete the works; or,

If within one year from the date of the Provisional Order, or within such shorter time as is prescribed in the Provisional Order, the works are not substantially commenced; or, If the works are commenced, but whilst the powers to carry them on exist are suspended without a reason sufficient in the opinion of the Board of Trade to warrant such suspension;

the powers given by the Provisional Order to the undertakers for executing such works, or otherwise in relation thereto, shall cease to be exercised, except as to so much of the same as is then completed, unless the time be prolonged by the special direction of the Board of Trade.

A statement in writing by the Board of Trade to the effect that such works have not been completed, or that the works have not been substantially commenced, or that they have been suspended without sufficient reason, shall be conclusive evidence for the purposes of this section of such non-completion, non-commencement, or suspension.

12. The undertakers empowered by any Provisional Order under this Act may demand and take, in respect of gas or water supplied by them under the authority of such Provisional Order, rents and rates respectively not exceeding the sums specified in such Provisional Order, subject and according to the regulations therein specified.

13. Nothing in any Provisional Order, or Act confirming the same, shall exempt the undertaking, or the company, corporation, or person to whom it belongs, from the provisions of any general Act of Parliament relating to gasworks or waterworks passed after the passing of this Act, or from any revision or alteration under the authority of Parliament of the maximum rents and rates allowed to be taken under the Provisional Order.

14. For the purpose of carrying into effect the provisions of this Act, it shall be lawful for Her Majesty at any time after the passing of this Act, by Order in Council, to substitute for the Board of Trade any other department of Her Majesty's Government, and from and after such time as may be specified for the purpose in any such order, or if no time be specified therein from and after the date of such order, all matters to be done in pursuance of this Act by or in connexion with the Board of Trade shall be done by or in connexion with such substituted department.

15. This Act shall not apply to any place within the Metropolis, as the same is defined in the Metropolis Management Act, 1855.

An Act for consolidating, with Amendments, certain Enactments relating to the National Debt.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS with a view to the revision of the Statute Law, and particularly to the preparation of the revised edition of the Statutes now in progress, it is expedient to consolidate, with amendments, certain enactments relating to the National Debt:

Be it therefore declared and enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

PART I.—PRELIMINARY.

1. This Act may be cited as The National Debt Act, 1870.

2. This Act is divided into parts as follows:—

Part I.—Preliminary.

Part II.—Denominations and Incidents of Stock.

Part III.—Payment of Dividends.

Part IV.—Transfer.

Part V.—Stock Certificates.

Part VI.—Transfer between England and Ireland.

Part VII.—Unclaimed Dividends.

Part VIII.—Miscellaneous.

3. In this Act—

“The Bank of England” means the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, and includes their successors:

“The Bank of Ireland” means the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, and includes their successors:

“Stock” means the several capital or joint stocks of perpetual annuities described in the first schedule to this Act, and includes any share or interest therein respectively:

“Stockholder” means a person holding stock, being entered as proprietor thereof in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland:

“Warrant” includes draft, order, cheque, or other document used as a medium for payment of dividends:

“Accountant General” includes chief accountant:

“The Treasury” means the Commissioners of Her Majesty’s Treasury, or two of them:

“The National Debt Commissioners” means the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt:

“The Consolidated Fund” means the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland:

“The Court of Chancery” means the Court of Chancery in England or the Court of Chancery in Ireland, as the case requires:

“Person” includes corporation:

“Representatives” means executors, administrators, or successors, and assigns.

4. The schedules to this Act shall be deemed part of this Act.

PART II.—DENOMINATIONS AND INCIDENTS OF STOCK.

5. The perpetual annuities described in the first schedule to this Act, to the respective amounts thereof subsisting at the passing of this Act, and the several capital sums in respect whereof those several annuities are payable, do and shall form part of the National Debt, due to the several persons who at the passing of this Act are entitled thereto, and their representatives.

All the annuities aforesaid shall, until redemption, continue to be payable in manner in this Act provided, at the respective rates in the same schedule mentioned, by equal half-yearly dividends on the respective days therein mentioned.

All the annuities aforesaid shall respectively continue redeemable by Parliament at the periods and in the manner in the same schedule mentioned, at the rate of one hundred pounds sterling for every one hundred pounds of the capital sums in respect whereof they are payable, and (subject to the provisions of part V. of this Act) shall continue transferable in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland by the several stockholders for the time being and their representatives.

6. The annuities and dividends aforesaid shall continue to be charged on and payable out of the Consolidated Fund.

7. The annuities and dividends aforesaid shall continue to be free from all taxes, charges, and impositions, in like manner as heretofore.

8. The interests of stockholders and their representatives in the annuities aforesaid shall continue to be indefeasible.

9. The annuities aforesaid shall continue to be personal estate, and not descendible to heirs.

10. The annuities aforesaid shall continue to be not liable to foreign attachment by the custom of London or otherwise.

11. The annuities of each denomination mentioned in the first schedule to this Act taken together shall continue to constitute one capital or joint stock; and all persons for the time being entitled thereto shall continue to have a proportional interest in every such capital or joint stock.

PART III.—PAYMENT OF DIVIDENDS.

12. Sufficient money to pay the dividends on all stock, with the charges attending the same, shall continue to be from time to time issuable for that purpose out of the Consolidated Fund.

13. Until all stock is redeemed, the Banks of England and Ireland shall each continue to employ within their office a fit person as their chief cashier, and another fit person as their accountant general.

14. The money from time to time and at any time issuable out of the Consolidated Fund and by this Act made applicable to the payment of the dividends on stock, shall, by order of the Treasury, without other warrant, from time to time be issued and paid to the respective chief cashiers of the Banks of England and Ireland by way of imprest and on account for the payment of those dividends.

15. The chief cashier to whom money is from time to time so issued shall from time to time without delay apply the same in payment of the dividends on stock.

16. The chief cashier to whom money is so issued shall from time to time render his accounts thereof, and the same shall be audited, as the Treasury from time to time direct; but the Treasury may, if they think fit, dispense with such audit.

The respective accountants general of the Banks of England and Ireland shall from time to time inspect and examine all receipts and payments of the respective chief cashiers of those Banks, and the vouchers relating thereto, in order to prevent fraud, negligence, or delay.

17. The Bank of England or of Ireland shall not be required to allow any executors or administrators to receive any dividend on stock held by their testator or intestate until the probate of the will or the letters of administration has or have been left with the Bank for registration.

18. The Banks of England and Ireland respectively before allowing the receipt of any dividend on any stock may, if the circumstances of the case appear to them to make it expedient, require evidence of the title of any person claiming a right to receive the dividend.

That evidence shall be the declaration of competent persons under the Act described in the second schedule to this Act, part I., or of such other nature as the Banks respectively require.

19. Where stock is standing in the name of an infant or person of unsound mind, jointly with any person not under legal disability, a letter of attorney for the receipt of the dividends on the stock shall be sufficient authority in that behalf, if given under the hand and seal of the person not under disability, attested by two or more credible witnesses.

The Bank of England or of Ireland, before acting on the letter of attorney, may require proof to their satisfaction of the alleged infancy or unsoundness of mind, by the declaration of competent persons under the Act described in the second schedule to this Act, part I.

20. The Banks of England and Ireland respectively may from time to time, with the sanction of the Treasury, make arrangements for payment of dividends on stock by sending warrants through the post.

Arrangements so made before the passing of this Act shall continue unless and until altered by arrangements made after the passing thereof under this part thereof.

Every warrant so sent by post shall be deemed a cheque on the Bank of England or of Ireland within the Act mentioned in the second schedule to this Act, part II.

21. Where a stockholder desires to have his dividend warrants sent to him by post, he shall make a request for that purpose to the Bank of England or of Ireland in writing, signed by him, in a form approved by the Bank and the Treasury, and shall give to the Bank an address in the United Kingdom, or in the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man, to which the letters containing the warrants are from time to time to be sent.

The posting by the Bank of a letter containing a dividend warrant addressed to a stockholder at his request under this or any former Act at the address given by him to the Bank, shall as respects the liability of the Bank be equivalent to the delivery of the warrant to the stockholder himself.

PART IV.—TRANSFER.

22. In the offices of the respective accountants general of the Banks of England and Ireland books shall continue to be kept wherein all transfers of stock shall be entered.

Every such entry shall be conceived in proper words for the purpose of transfer, and shall be signed by the party making the transfer,—or, if he is absent, by his attorney thereunto lawfully authorised by writing under his hand and seal, attested by two or more credible witnesses.

The person to whom a transfer is so made may, if he thinks fit, underwrite his acceptance thereof.

Except as otherwise provided by Act of Parliament, no other mode of transferring stock shall be good in law.

23. The interest of a stockholder dying (before or after the passing of this Act) in stock shall be transferable by his executors or administrators, notwithstanding any specific bequest thereof.

The Bank of England or of Ireland shall not be required to allow any executors or administrators to transfer any stock until the probate of the will of or the letters of administration to the deceased has or have been left with the Bank for registration, and may require all the executors who have proved the will to join in the transfer.

24. The Banks of England and Ireland respectively before allowing any transfer of stock may, if the circumstances of the case appear to them to make it expedient, require evidence of the title of any person claiming a right to make the transfer.

That evidence shall be the declaration of competent persons under the Act described in the second schedule to this Act, part I., or of such other nature as the Banks respectively require.

25. The Banks of England and Ireland respectively may close their books for the transfer of stock on any day in the month next preceding that in which the dividends on that stock are payable; but so that the books be not at any time so closed for more than fifteen days.

The persons who on the day of such closing are inscribed as stockholders shall as between them and their transferees of stock be entitled to the then current half year's dividend thereon.

PART V.—STOCK CERTIFICATES.

26. A stockholder may obtain a stock certificate, that is to say, a certificate of title to his stock or any part thereof, with coupons annexed, entitling the bearer of the coupons to the dividends on the stock.

27. Stock certificates shall be issued only in respect of Consolidated Three pounds per centum annuities, Reduced Three pounds per centum annuities, and New Three pounds per centum annuities.

But the Treasury may by warrant declare that any other stock specified in the warrant shall be subject to this part of this Act, and thereupon stock certificates may be issued in respect of that stock also.

28. A stock certificate shall not be issued in respect of any sum of stock not being fifty pounds or a multiple of fifty pounds, or exceeding one thousand pounds.

29. A trustee of stock shall not apply for or hold a stock certificate unless authorised to do so by the terms of his trust; and any contravention of this section by a trustee shall be deemed a breach of trust.

But this section shall not impose on the Bank of England or of Ireland any obligation to inquire whether a person applying for a stock certificate is or is not a trustee, or subject either Bank to any liability in the event of their issuing a stock certificate to a trustee, or invalidate any stock certificate issued.

30. No notice of any trust in respect of any stock certificate or coupon shall be receivable by the Bank of England or of Ireland.

31. Where a stock certificate is outstanding the stock represented thereby shall cease to be transferable in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland.

32. A stock certificate, unless a name is inscribed therein, shall entitle the bearer to the stock therein described, and shall be transferable by delivery.

The bearer of a stock certificate may convert the same into a nominal certificate by inserting therein, in manner prescribed by any regulation made in pursuance of this part of this Act, the name, address, and quality of some person.

A stock certificate when it becomes nominal shall not be transferable, and the person named therein (in this part of this Act called the nominee), or some person deriving title from him by devolution in law, as in this part of this Act mentioned, shall alone be recognised by the Bank of England or of Ireland as entitled to the stock described in the certificate.

On the death of the nominee, his personal representative, and on his bankruptcy his assignee, and on the marriage of the nominee, being a female, her husband, shall alone be recognised by the Bank of England or of Ireland as entitled to the stock described in the certificate, and shall be deemed the nominee in that certificate.

33. The nominee in a nominal stock certificate shall not be entitled to have the same renewed as nominal, but he shall, on delivery up of his certificate, and of all unpaid coupons belonging thereto, to the Bank of England or of Ireland by whom the certificate was issued, and on compliance with any regulation made in pursuance of this part of this Act, be entitled to receive in exchange from that Bank a stock certificate to bearer.

The nominee in a nominal stock certificate, and the bearer of a stock certificate to bearer, may, on the like delivery, and on compliance with any regulation made in pursuance of this part of this Act, require to be registered in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland as a holder of the stock described in the certificate under which he derives title, and thereupon the stock shall be re-entered in the books kept by that Bank for the entry of transferable stock, and shall become transferable, and the dividends thereon shall be payable, as if no certificate had been issued in respect of such stock.

34. The coupons annexed to a stock certificate shall comprise the dividends to be payable in respect of the stock therein described, for not less than five years from the date of the certificate.

At the expiration of that period fresh coupons shall be issued for a further period of not less than five years, and so for successive periods of not less than five years each, during the continuance in force of the stock certificate.

But the Bank of England or of Ireland may, if they think fit, in lieu of issuing fresh coupons in respect of a stock certificate, give in exchange a fresh stock certificate with coupons annexed.

35. Coupons payable by the Bank of England or of Ireland shall be payable at the chief establishment of the respective Bank at the expiration of three clear days from the day of presentation, and at any branch establishment of the same Bank, situate more than ten miles from the chief establishment, at the expiration of five clear days from the day of presentation.

The payment to the bearer of a coupon of the amount expressed therein shall be a full discharge to the Bank of England or of Ireland from all liability in respect of that coupon and the dividend represented thereby.

36. Income tax shall be deducted from coupons in the same manner and subject to the same regulations in and subject to which it may by law be deducted from dividends payable by the Bank of England or of Ireland in respect of stock of stockholders inscribed in the books of that Bank; save only that income tax shall be deducted from a coupon, although the dividend represented thereby does not amount to fifty shillings.

37. No fee shall be charged on the issue of a stock certificate to bearer, in exchange for a like certificate, but there shall be charged with respect to the several other proceedings in relation to stock authorised by this part of this Act the fees specified in the third schedule to this Act, or such less fees as may be determined by the Treasury.

All fees received in pursuance of this part of this Act shall be paid into the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer.

38. If a stock certificate or coupon is lost or destroyed, the Bank of England or of Ireland (as the case requires) shall issue a new certificate or coupon, on receiving indemnity to their satisfaction against the claims of all persons deriving title under the certificate or coupon lost or destroyed.

39. The Banks of England and Ireland respectively, with the sanction of the Treasury, may from time to time issue any forms that may be required for carrying into effect this part of this Act, and may from time to time make any regulations not inconsistent with this part of this Act relative to the following things:

1. The time for which coupons are to be given:

2. The conversion of a stock certificate to bearer into a nominal certificate:

3. The authority under which and the mode in which the Bank are to act in issuing stock certificates or exchanging nominal certificates for certificates to bearer, or registering in their books the holders of stock certificates, or taking any other proceedings in relation to stock authorised to be taken under this part of this Act:

4. The mode of proving the title of or identifying any person applying for a stock certificate or deriving any title under a stock certificate:

5. The mode of proof of the death or bankruptcy of the nominee or of the marriage of the nominee being a female:

6. The mode of proof of the loss or destruction of a stock certificate or coupon:

7. Any other matter necessary to carry this part of this Act into effect.

Regulations so made before the passing of this Act shall continue in force unless and until altered by regulations made after the passing of this Act under this part thereof.

Any regulation so made before or after the passing of this Act shall be deemed to be part of this Act in the same manner as if it were enacted in this part of this Act.

40. There shall be paid to the Banks of England and Ireland respectively out of the Consolidated Fund, on account of the additional trouble, expense, and responsibility, if any, imposed on them by this part of this Act, in addition to the remuneration otherwise payable to them in respect of the management of the National Debt, such remuneration as the Treasury and they agree on.

41. Stock described in a stock certificate shall be charged on the same securities, and be subject to the same powers of redemption, and save as relates to the mode of transfer and payment of dividends thereon, shall be subject to the same incidents in all respects, including the remuneration payable to the Bank of England or of Ireland, as if it had continued registered in the books of that Bank as stock transferable therein.

42. Where a stock certificate has been issued under any former Act, this part of this Act shall have effect in relation thereto, and to the coupons annexed thereto and to the stock and dividends represented thereby respectively, in like manner, as nearly as may be, as if the certificate were issued after the passing of this Act under this part thereof.

PART VI.—TRANSFER BETWEEN ENGLAND AND IRELAND.

43. A stockholder holding stock transferable in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland may make application in writing to that Bank for permission to transfer the same for the purpose of having the same amount of stock of the same denomination written into the books of the other Bank.

Thereupon, and on the applicant transferring the stock to which the application relates to the National Debt Commissioners, the Bank from whose books the transfer is to be made shall grant to the transferor a certificate of the facts of and connected with the transfer, directed to the other Bank.

Every application for permission to transfer, and every certificate of transfer, under this section, shall be according to a form established by the Bank of England in concurrence with the Bank of Ireland.

44. It shall not be lawful for any person to make any transfer for the purposes of this part of this Act of any stock from England to Ireland, or from Ireland to England, during three clear days before the day or days on which the books of the Banks of England and Ireland respectively or of either of those Banks are from time to time closed for dividend under part IV. of this Act.

45. Where such a transfer is made from the books of the Bank of England, that Bank shall on the day of transfer give notice thereof to the National Debt Commissioners at their office, who shall on receipt of the notice send it to the Bank of Ireland.

Where such a transfer is made from the books of the Bank of Ireland, that Bank shall on the day of transfer send notice thereof to the National Debt Commissioners at their office in London, who shall on receipt of the notice deliver it to the Bank of England.

46. Immediately on any such transfer being made to the National Debt Commissioners, the stock transferred shall be cancelled by them, and shall be for ever discharged from the account of the National Debt in Great Britain or in Ireland, as the case requires.

47. In the offices of the respective accountants general of the Banks of England and Ireland books shall be kept, wherein the names of all persons making under this part of this Act transfers to the National Debt Commissioners shall be entered, which books all such persons and their representatives may at all reasonable times inspect without fee.

48. On a transfer being made under this part of this Act, then on the production of a certificate under this part of this Act of the Bank from whose books the transfer is made the other Bank shall write into their books, in the name of the person in the certificate named for that purpose, stock of the denomination and amount therein specified.

Every such sum of stock shall carry dividend from the day on which dividend became due next before the transfer under this part of this Act.

49. In case of the loss or destruction of a certificate of the Bank of England or of Ireland under this part of this Act, that Bank, on proof of the same to their satisfaction, may grant a duplicate thereof, which shall stand in the place of the original, if the original has not been previously acted on; but on tender of such a duplicate the Bank to whom it is tendered may demand and take from the person tendering it sufficient security to Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, to indemnify that Bank against the production of or any claim under the original.

If at any time after a duplicate has been produced and acted on the original is surrendered to the Bank to whom the security was given, they shall detain and cancel the original, and send it cancelled to the other Bank, and deliver up the security to the persons by whom it was entered into, or such of them as require it.

50. In the enactments described in the second schedule to this Act, part III., this part of this Act shall be deemed to be substituted for the Act of the fifth year of the reign of King George the Fourth in those enactments mentioned.

PART VII.—UNCLAIMED DIVIDENDS.

51. All stock, no dividend whereon is claimed for ten years before the last day on which a dividend thereon becomes payable (except where payment of dividend has been restrained by a Court of Equity) shall be transferred in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland (as the case may be) to the National Debt Commissioners.

52. Immediately after every such transfer the name in which the stock stood immediately before the transfer, the residence and description of the parties, the amount transferred, and the date of transfer, shall be entered in a list to be kept for the purpose by the Bank in whose books the stock stands, which list shall be open for inspection at the usual hours of transfer.

A duplicate of each list shall be kept at the office of the National Debt Commissioners.

53. Every such transfer shall be made and signed by the accountant general or deputy accountant general or secretary or deputy or assistant secretary of the Bank in whose books the stock stands at the transfer, and shall be as effectual to all intents as if signed by the person in whose name the stock then stands.

54. Where stock is transferred under this part of this Act all dividends accruing thereon after the transfer shall be paid to the National Debt Commissioners, and shall be from time to time invested by them in the purchase of other like stock to be placed to their account of unclaimed dividends.

All such dividends and the stock arising from the investment thereof shall be held by those Commissioners for the public, subject to the claims of the parties entitled thereto.

55. The Governor or Deputy Governor of the Bank of England or of Ireland may direct the accountant general or deputy accountant general or secretary or deputy or assistant secretary of that Bank to re-transfer any stock transferred under this part of this Act to any person showing his right thereto to the satisfaction of the Governor or Deputy Governor, and to pay the dividends due thereon, as if the same had not been transferred or paid to the National Debt Commissioners.

But in case the Governor or Deputy Governor is not satisfied of the right of any person claiming to be entitled to any such stock or dividends, the claimant may, by petition in a summary way, state and verify his claim to the Court of Chancery.

The petition shall be served on Her Majesty's Attorney General and on the National Debt Commissioners, and the Court shall make such order thereon (either for re-transfer of the stock to which the petition relates and payment of the dividends accrued thereon, or otherwise), and touching the costs of the application, as to the Court seems just.

All costs and expenses incurred by or on behalf of the Attorney General, or the National Debt Commissioners, in resisting or appearing on any such petition, if not ordered by the Court to be paid out of the stock and dividends thereby claimed, shall be paid by the National Debt Commissioners, out of unclaimed dividends.

Where any re-transfer or payment is made to any such claimant, either with or without the authority of the Court, the Bank of England or of Ireland (as the case requires) shall give notice thereof to the National Debt Commissioners, within three days after making the same.

56. Stock exceeding the sum of twenty pounds shall not be re-transferred from the National Debt Commissioners under this part of this Act, nor shall dividends exceeding twenty pounds in the whole be paid to a claimant under this part of this Act, until three months after application made for the same, nor until public notice has been given thereof as in this part of this Act provided.

57. The Bank of England or of Ireland shall require the applicant to give such public notice as they think fit by advertisements, in the case of either Bank in one or more newspapers circulating in London and elsewhere, and in the case of the Bank of Ireland also in one or more newspapers circulating in Dublin and elsewhere in Ireland.

Every such notice shall state the name, residence, and description of the person in whose name the stock stood when transferred to the National Debt Commissioners, the amount thereof, the name of the claimant, and the time at which the re-transfer thereof and payment of dividends will be made if no other claimant sooner appears and makes out his claim.

Where any such re-transfer or payment is ordered by the Court of Chancery the notice shall also state the purport of the order.

58. At any time before re-transfer of stock or payment of dividend as aforesaid to a claimant any person may apply to the Court of Chancery, by motion or petition, to rescind or vary any order made for re-transfer or payment thereof.

59. Where any stock or dividends having been re-transferred or paid as aforesaid to a claimant by either Bank is or are afterwards claimed by another person, the Bank and their officers shall not be responsible for the same to such other claimant, but he may have recourse against the person to whom the re-transfer or payment was made.

60. Provided, that if in any case a new claimant establishes his title to any stock or dividends re-transferred or paid to a former claimant, and is unable to obtain transfer or payment thereof from the former claimant, the Court of Chancery shall, on application by petition by the new claimant, verified as the Court requires, order the National Debt Commissioners to transfer to him such sum in stock, and to pay to him such sum in money for dividend, as the Court thinks just.

Such transfer shall be made from stock transferred to the National Debt Commissioners under this part of this Act; and such money for dividend shall be paid from dividends received by those Commissioners on stock so transferred, or the accumulations thereof, or from the sale of stock purchased with such dividends or accumulations, or from other money at their disposal.

61. Where any dividend accrued due on any sum of stock is not claimed for ten years before the last day on which a dividend thereon becomes payable, the dividend so unclaimed, and all dividends subsequently accrued due in respect of the same sum of stock, and unclaimed, shall be paid to the National Debt Commissioners.

All such dividends shall be held and dealt with in like manner, as nearly as may be, as stock transferred to those Commissioners under this part of this Act, or the dividends accruing thereon after the transfer (as the case requires); and this part of this Act shall accordingly have effect in relation thereto and to the investment and payment of and claims to the same, as if the foregoing provisions of this part of this Act were repeated and in terms made applicable thereto respectively.

62. All stock described in a stock certificate in respect of which no coupon is presented for payment for ten years shall be dealt with in like manner, as nearly as may be, as stock no dividend whereon is claimed for ten years.

Sums due and unclaimed on coupons shall be dealt with in like manner, as nearly as may be, as unclaimed dividends due in respect of stock.

63. The Treasury may from time to time empower the Bank of England or of Ireland to investigate the circumstances of any stock or dividends remaining unclaimed, with a view to ascertain the owners thereof, and allow to them such compensation as to the Treasury seems just for their trouble and expenses in that behalf.

64. The Treasury may from time to time allow to the Bank of England or of Ireland a reasonable compensation for all expenses incurred by them in and about notices and advertisements directed by this part of this Act, and other services required or authorised by this part of this Act.

65. Compensation allowed by the Treasury under this part of this Act may be deducted rateably from the stock and dividends from time to time re-transferred or paid, with reference to which the trouble, expenses, and services have been incurred and performed by the Bank, or the same may be paid by the National Debt Commissioners out of unclaimed stock or dividends transferred to or received by them.

66. The Banks of England and Ireland, and their respective governors, deputy governors, and officers, are hereby indemnified in respect of every transfer or re-transfer of stock or payment of dividends under this part of this Act, and shall not be in any manner responsible to any person having or claiming any interest therein.

67. Where under any former Act relating to unclaimed stock or unclaimed dividends any stocks, funds, or annuities, or any principal or other sums, have, in consequence of the same or of the dividends thereon being unclaimed, been transferred to the National Debt Commissioners, or any unclaimed dividends have been paid to those Commissioners, this part of this Act shall have effect in relation to the stocks, funds, annuities, principal or other sums, and dividends so transferred and paid, and to any stock or security representing the same or any of them, and to all accumulations and investments of those dividends, in like manner, as nearly as may be, as if such transfer, payment, and investment were made after the passing of this Act under this part thereof.

68. This part of this Act shall apply to unclaimed annuities for terms of years forming part of the National Debt.

In the application thereto of this part of this Act, a terminable annuity exceeding one pound per annum shall be deemed to be substituted for stock exceeding twenty pounds.

In the enactment described in the second schedule to this Act, part IV., this part of this Act shall be deemed to be substituted for the Act of the fifty-sixth year of the reign of King George the Third in that enactment mentioned.

PART VIII.—MISCELLANEOUS.

69. In respect of each sum of one hundred and ten pounds of the two pounds ten shillings per centum annuities there shall continue to be paid to the National Debt Commissioners on the fifth day of July in each year until and inclusive of the fifth day of July one thousand eight hundred and ninety-four the sum of five shillings, and so in proportion for any less sum of such annuities.

That yearly sum shall continue to be charged on the Consolidated Fund and to be issued and paid thereout either to the Bank of England or to the Bank of Ireland to the account of the National Debt Commissioners, as those Commissioners from time to time direct, and to be applied towards the reduction of the National Debt as other money paid to them for that purpose is by law applicable.

A separate account shall continue to be kept by the National Debt Commissioners of the application of that yearly sum.

For the purposes of the Acts for regulating the reduction of the National Debt, that yearly sum shall be deemed part of the expenditure of the United Kingdom.

70. No fee, reward, or gratuity shall be demanded or taken for paying any dividend, or for any transfer of stock, or for receiving any certificate or duplicate certificate under part VI. of this Act, on pain that any person offending by demanding or taking any such fee, reward, or gratuity shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of twenty pounds to the party aggrieved, with full costs of suit, to be recovered in any of Her Majesty's Superior Courts of Law in England or Ireland.

71. No stamp duty shall be payable in respect of any dividend, warrant, transfer of stock, stock certificate, or coupon.

72. The Bank of England shall continue a corporation for the purposes of this Act until all stock is duly redeemed by Parliament.

73. Such of the provisions of parts III. and IV. of this Act as relate to receipt of dividends and transfer of stock by executors or administrators, and to evidence of title to dividends or stock, and to receipt of dividends on stock standing in the names of infants or persons of unsound mind, and to payments of dividends on stock by sending warrants through the post, shall apply to all stock of any company or corporation, funds or annuities, transferable in the books of the Bank of England or of Ireland.

74. The Bank of England or of Ireland, or any member of the corporation thereof respectively, shall not incur any disability for or by reason of those Banks respectively doing anything in pursuance of this Act.

Schedule.

An Act for granting Certificates to Pedlars. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to pedlars:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited as The Pedlars Act, 1870.

2. This Act shall not come into operation until the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, which date is in this Act referred to as the commencement of this Act.

3. In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context, the following terms have the meanings herein-after respectively assigned to them; that is to say,

The term "pedlar" means any hawker, pedlar, petty chapman, tinker, caster of metals, mender of chairs, or other person who, without any horse or other beast bearing or drawing burden, travels and trades on foot and goes from town to town or to other men's houses, carrying to sell or exposing for sale any goods, wares, or merchandise, or procuring orders for goods, wares, or merchandise immediately to be delivered, or selling or offering for sale his skill in handicraft:

The term "police district" means—

In England,—

- (1.) The city of London and the liberties thereof:
- (2.) The metropolitan police district:
- (3.) Any county, riding, part, division, or liberty of a county, borough, burgh, city, town, place, or union, or combination of places maintaining a separate police force; and all the police under one chief constable shall be deemed to constitute one force for the purposes of this section:

In Scotland,—

Any area maintaining a separate police force, and all the police under one chief constable, shall be deemed to constitute one force for the purposes of this section:

In Ireland,—

- (1.) The police district of Dublin metropolis:
- (2.) Any district, whether city, town, or country, over which is appointed a sub-inspector of the Royal Irish Constabulary.

The term "chief officer of police" means—

In England,—

- (1.) In the city of London and the liberties thereof the commissioner of city police:
- (2.) In the metropolitan police district, the commissioner of metropolitan police:
- (3.) Elsewhere the chief constable, or head constable, or other officer, by whatever name called, having the chief command of the police in the police district in reference to which such expression occurs :

In Scotland,—

The chief constable, superintendent of police, or other officer, by whatever name called, having the chief command of the police in the police district in reference to which such expression occurs :

In Ireland,—

(1.) In the police district of Dublin metropolis, either of the commissioners of police for the said district :

(2.) In any other police district the sub-inspector of the Royal Irish Constabulary :

Any act or thing by this Act authorised to be done by the chief officer of police may be done by any person authorised by him in that behalf.

The term "court" includes the justice or justices, magistrate or magistrates, to whom jurisdiction is given by this Act.

Certificates to be obtained by Pedlars.

4. After the commencement of this Act no person shall act as a pedlar without such certificate as in this Act mentioned, or in any district where he is not authorised by his certificate so to act.

Any person who—

1. Acts as a pedlar without having obtained a certificate under this Act authorising him so to act :

2. Acts as a pedlar in any district in which he is not authorised so to act by a certificate granted under this Act, shall be liable for a first offence to a penalty not exceeding ten shillings, and for any subsequent offence to a penalty not exceeding one pound.

5. The following regulations shall be made with respect to the grant of pedlars certificates :

1. Subject as in this Act mentioned a pedlar's certificate shall be granted to any person by the chief officer of police of the police district in which the person applying for a certificate resides, on such officer being satisfied that the applicant is a person of good character :

2. An application for a pedlar's certificate shall be in the form specified in the schedule to this Act, or as near thereto as circumstances admit :

3. There shall be paid for a pedlar's certificate previously to the delivery thereof to the applicant a sum not exceeding sixpence :

4. A pedlar's certificate shall be in the form specified in the schedule hereto, or as near thereto as circumstances admit :

5. A pedlar's certificate shall remain in force for one year from the date of the issue thereof and no longer :

6. On the delivery up of the old certificate or on sufficient evidence being produced to the satisfaction of the chief officer of police that the old certificate has been lost, that officer may either at the expiration of the current year, or during the currency of any year, grant a new certificate in the same manner as upon a first application for a pedlar's certificate.

6. A pedlar's certificate granted under this Act shall, during the time for which it continues in force, authorise the person to whom it is granted to act as a pedlar, within the police district in which such pedlar resides and the certificate is taken out.

7. Any pedlar who, having obtained a pedlar's certificate, desires to act as a pedlar in any other police district than that in which he resides, or who goes to reside in any other district, may, while his certificate remains in force, apply to the chief officer of police of such other district to indorse his certificate, and such officer shall, unless he is satisfied that the applicant is not a person of good character, on payment by the pedlar of a fee not exceeding sixpence, indorse such certificate, and such indorsed certificate shall, while it continues in force, authorise the pedlar to act as a pedlar in such other district, and have in all respects the same effect as a certificate granted under this Act by an officer of such district to a person resident therein would have.

The indorsement shall be in the form specified in the schedule to this Act, or as near thereto as circumstances admit.

8. There shall be kept in each police district a register of the certificates and of the indorsement of certificates granted and made in such district under this Act, in such form and with such particulars as may from time to time be directed by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

The entries in such register, and any copy of any of such entries, if such copy shall have been certified by the chief officer of police, shall be evidence in any court of law of the facts stated therein.

9. Forms of application for certificates shall be kept at every police office in every police district, and shall be given gratis to any person applying for the same ; and all applications for certificates shall be delivered at the police office of the division or sub-division of the police district within which the applicant resides, and certificates, when duly signed by the chief officer of police, shall be issued at such office.

10. A person to whom a pedlar's certificate is granted under this Act shall not lend, transfer, or assign the same to any other person, and any person who lends, transfers, or assigns such certificate to any other person shall for each offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

11. No person shall borrow or make use of a pedlar's certificate granted to any other person, and any person who borrows or makes use of such certificate shall for each offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

12. Any person who commits any of the following offences; (that is to say,)

1. Makes false representations with a view to obtain a pedlar's certificate under this Act;
2. Forges or counterfeits a pedlar's certificate granted under this Act;
3. Forges or counterfeits an indorsement made under this Act on such a certificate;
4. Aids in making or procures to be made such forged or counterfeited certificate or indorsement;
5. Travels with, produces, or shows any such forged or counterfeited certificate or indorsement, shall for the first offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding two pounds, and for any subsequent offence, either instead of or in addition to such penalty, to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding six months with or without hard labour.

13. No certificate under this Act shall be granted to any person convicted of felony or of any misdemeanor involving dishonesty.

14. If any pedlar is convicted of any offence under this Act, the court before which he is convicted shall indorse or cause to be indorsed on his certificate a record of such conviction.

The indorsements made under this Act on a pedlar's certificate shall be evidence in any court of law of the facts stated therein.

15. If the chief officer of police refuses to grant or indorse a certificate, he shall, on demand, forthwith give to the applicant in writing his reasons for such refusal, and the applicant may appeal to a court having jurisdiction in the place in which the applicant resides, in accordance with the following provisions:—

1. The applicant shall, within one week after the refusal, give to the chief officer of police notice in writing of the appeal, and at the same time shall deposit with him five shillings, for which such officer shall give a written receipt:

2. The appeal shall be heard at the sitting of the court which happens next after the expiration of the said week, but the court may, on the application of either party, adjourn the case;
3. The court shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal, and make such order thereon, with or without costs to either party, as to the court seems just;
4. If the appeal is dismissed the court may order the costs of the appeal, or any part thereof, to be paid out of the said deposit, but, subject to any such order, the deposit shall be repaid to the appellant;
5. The enactments relating to proceedings before the court shall apply to proceedings under this section, and any order made by the court in pursuance of this section may be enforced in the same manner as an order made by the court in the exercise of their ordinary jurisdiction, and any certificate, or indorsement of a certificate, granted or made in pursuance of an order of the court, shall have the same effect as if it had been originally granted or made by the chief officer of police.

For the purposes of this section the "court" shall be any court before which a penalty under this Act can be recovered.

16. Any court before which any pedlar is convicted of any offence, whether under this or any other Act, may, if he or they think fit, deprive such pedlar of his certificate.

Duties of Pedlars.

17. Any pedlar shall at all times on demand produce and show his certificate to any of the following persons; (that is to say,)

1. Any justice of the peace; or
2. Any constable or officer of police; or
3. Any person to whom such pedlar offers his goods for sale; or
4. Any person in whose private grounds or premises such pedlar is found:

And any pedlar who refuses on demand to show his certificate to, and allow it to be read and a copy thereof to be taken by, any of the persons hereby authorised to demand it, shall for each offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five shillings; and it shall be lawful for any person so authorised, and also for any other person acting by his order or at his request and in his aid, to apprehend such offender and forthwith to convey or cause him to be conveyed before a justice of the peace; provided that no pedlar so apprehended shall on any pretence whatever be detained for a longer period than twelve hours from the time of his apprehension until he is brought before a justice of the peace.

18. It shall be lawful for any constable or officer of police at any time to open and inspect any pack, box, bag, trunk, or case in which a pedlar carries his goods, wares, and merchandise, and any pedlar who refuses to allow such constable or officer to open or inspect such pack, box, bag, trunk, or case, or prevents or attempts to prevent him from opening or inspecting the same, shall be liable for each offence to a penalty not exceeding twenty shillings.

Temporary Provisions.

19. Any license to act as a hawker granted to any person before the commencement of this Act shall, notwithstanding the passing of this Act, continue in force till the date at which such license expires, and no person acting or trading as a hawker under such license shall during the time for which such license continues in force be required to obtain a pedlar's certificate under this Act, or be liable to any penalty for trading or acting as a pedlar without having obtained a certificate under this Act.

Summary Proceedings for Offences.

20. Any penalty under this Act may be recovered as follows:

In England, before two justices of the peace in manner directed by the Act of the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary convictions and orders," and any Act amending the same:

In Scotland, in manner directed by the "Summary Procedure Act, 1864:"

In Dublin, in manner directed by the Acts regulating the powers of justices of the peace, or of the police of Dublin metropolis, and in all other parts of Ireland by the "Petty Sessions, Ireland, Act, 1851."

21. All fees received under this Act shall be applied in manner in which penalties recoverable under this Act are applicable.

Saving.

22. Nothing in this Act shall render it necessary for a certificate to be obtained by the following persons; (that is to say,)

1. Commercial travellers or other persons selling or seeking orders for goods, wares, or merchandise to or from persons who are dealers therein and who buy to sell again:

2. Sellers of vegetables, fish, fruit, or victuals.
3. Persons selling or exposing to sale goods, wares, or merchandise in any public mart, market, or fair legally established.

23. Nothing in this Act shall take away or diminish any of the powers vested in any local authority by any general or local Act in force in the district of such local authority.

An Act to continue certain Turnpike Acts in Great Britain, to repeal certain other Turnpike Acts, and to make further Provisions concerning Turnpike Roads.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to continue for limited times some of the Acts herein-after specified, and to repeal others:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The Acts specified in the first schedule annexed hereto shall be repealed on and after the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

2. The Acts specified in the second schedule annexed hereto shall expire at the time in that behalf mentioned in "The Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1869."

3. The Acts specified in the third schedule annexed hereto shall be repealed on and after the date in that behalf mentioned in "The Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1869."

4. The Acts specified in the fourth schedule annexed hereto shall continue in force until the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and no longer.

5. The Acts specified in the fifth schedule annexed hereto shall be repealed on and after the thirty-first day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

6. The Acts specified in the sixth schedule annexed hereto shall continue in force until the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and no longer, unless Parliament in the meantime otherwise provides.

7. The Acts specified in the seventh schedule annexed hereto shall be repealed on and after the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, unless Parliament in the meantime otherwise provides.

8. The Acts specified in the eighth and ninth schedules annexed hereto shall continue in force until the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in the case of each trust for such further time, if any, as may be required to complete the term of one year, not later than the first day of June one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, from the time for which the tolls, or any of them, shall have been let at the last meeting of such trust held for that purpose, unless Parliament in the meantime otherwise provides.

9. All other Acts now in force for regulating, making, amending, or repairing any turnpike road in Great Britain which will expire at or before the end of the next session of Parliament shall continue in force until the first day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and to the end of the then next session of Parliament, unless Parliament in the meantime otherwise provides, except the three following Acts, namely, An Act of the seventh year of King George the Fourth, chapter ninety, "for making a turnpike road from Saint John's Chapel, in the parish of Saint Marylebone, to the north-east end of Ballard's Lane, abutting upon the north road in the parish of Finchley, with a branch therefrom in the county of Middlesex;" An Act of the fifth year of King William the Fourth, chapter twenty-three, "to incorporate the Avenue Road in the parish of Saint Marylebone with the Marylebone and Finchley Turnpike Roads in the county of Middlesex;" An Act of the thirteenth and fourteenth years of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and three, "for continuing the term of an Act passed in the seventh year of the reign of His Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled An Act for making a turnpike road from Saint John's Chapel in the parish of Saint Marylebone to the north-east end of Ballard's Lane, abutting upon the north road in the parish of Finchley, with a branch therefrom in the county of Middlesex, for the purpose of paying off the debt now due on the said roads, and providing for the future management thereof," which shall continue until the several debts have been paid off and discharged, and no longer; and except the three following Acts, namely, An Act of the ninth year of King George the Fourth, chapter one hundred and twelve, "for more effectually repairing and improving the several roads called the Cannon Street Roads, the Commercial Road, the Horse-ferry Branch of Road, the East India Dock Road, the Barking Road, and the Shadwell and Mile End Branch of Road in the counties of Middlesex and Essex, and for laying down a stoneway on the said Commercial, East India Dock, and Barking roads;" An Act of the twelfth and thirteenth years of Her present Majesty, chapter seventy-six, "for more effectually repairing the Commercial Road, and other roads connected therewith, in the counties of Middlesex and Essex;" An Act of the eighteenth year of Her present Majesty, chapter sixty-seven, "for amending The Commercial Roads Act, 1828, and The Commercial Roads Continuation Act, 1849, and for other purposes," which shall continue in force till the fifth day of August one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and no longer.

10. With regard to any highway which within seven years previous to the passing of this Act has ceased, or which hereafter may cease to be a turnpike road, the cost of maintaining so much thereof as passes through any highway district constituted under the Highway Acts, 1862 and 1864, shall after the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy, or after the date of the said highway ceasing to be a turnpike road, whichever shall last happen, be a charge on the common fund of such highway district, and shall be annually provided for in the same manner as is enacted in the thirty-second section of the Highway Act, 1864, in respect to the salaries of the officers appointed for the district.

11. It shall be lawful for any surveyor of any highway district to raise stone or other material within any highway district for the repair of any turnpike road which may be thrown upon any highway district by the preceding clause of this Bill, in the same manner and with the like powers, and on payment of such compensation for the same, as the trustees of a turnpike road are now empowered by law to do.

12. Where a turnpike road shall have become an ordinary highway, all bridges which were previously repaired by the trustees of such turnpike road shall become county bridges, and shall be kept in repair accordingly.

Provided that for the purposes of this Act such bridges shall be treated as if they were bridges built subsequently to the passing of the Act of the fifth and sixth years of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, chapter fifty, intituled "An Act to consolidate and amend the laws relating to Highways in that part of Great Britain called England."

13. Where a turnpike road extending into two or more counties shall become an ordinary highway, in lieu of the certificate required by the seventh section of "The Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1868," to be given by two justices before the trustees can award compensation to their officers, there shall be required a certificate by two justices of each county into which such turnpike road may extend, and each of such certificates shall certify that such part of the road as lies within the county for which the justices giving the certificate are acting, was, at the time at which it became an ordinary highway, in complete and effectual repair.

14. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Annual Turnpike Acts Continuance Act, 1870."

An Act to confirm the Award under "The Curragh of Kildare Act, 1868," and for other purposes relating thereto.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by "The Curragh of Kildare Act, 1868," it was enacted that three Commissioners should be appointed to ascertain and decide, amongst others, the following things; namely,

What (if any) rights of common of pasture, rights of way, or other rights (except the rights of the Crown and public rights of way) exist in, over, or affecting the Curragh, or any part thereof, either by grant, charter, or prescription;

To what persons, and for what terms, estates, or interests, the rights aforesaid respectively belong;

What (if any) are the lands in respect of which the rights aforesaid respectively are exercisable;

What (if any) compensation should be given to any party whose rights are or may be injuriously affected by the said Act; and

What (if any) public rights of way exist in, over, or affecting the Curragh or any part thereof:

And whereas Henry H. Joy, Esquire, one of Her Majesty's counsel, Alexander Stewart, Esquire, and Edmund A. Mansfield, Esquire, were duly appointed the Curragh Commissioners in manner provided by the said Act, and are hereafter referred to by the term "the Commissioners:"

And whereas the Commissioners, having given the necessary notices and taken the steps required by the said Act, proceeded in discharge of their duties as by the said Act directed, and in pursuance of the provisions of the said Act did hold meetings at such places and at such times as they considered most convenient for the accommodation of claimants and suitors, and did hold such a number of meetings in the neighbourhood of the Curragh as were sufficient for hearing local claimants:

And whereas, after hearing all claimants and suitors in manner by the said Act directed, the Commissioners did decide upon all claims made before them:

And whereas no appeal was made by any claimant or objector admitted to be heard before the Commissioners:

And whereas the Commissioners thereupon, in manner by the said Act prescribed, did on the thirtieth day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine duly make their award in duplicate, which award is set forth in the schedule to this Act annexed, and did, in accordance with the provisions of the said Act, on the first day of July one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, present one part of the said award to the chief secretary to the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland, and did deposit the other part with the clerk of the peace for the county of Kildare, and did also publish a copy of such award once in each of three successive weeks next after the making thereof in the Dublin Gazette and in the Leinster Express, a newspaper circulating in the county of Kildare:

And whereas it is provided by the said Act that "the chief secretary to the Lord Lieutenant shall as soon as conveniently may be after the publication of the said award take all necessary steps for the confirmation of the same by Act of Parliament, and that previously to such confirmation the said award shall not be of any validity whatever:"

And whereas it is expedient that the said award should be so confirmed, and further provision made in relation thereto:

May it therefore please Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The award, a copy of which is set forth in the schedule to this Act annexed, is hereby confirmed, and made effectual to all intents and purposes, and shall be as binding and of the like force and effect as if the provisions of the same had been expressly enacted in this Act.

2. The map referred to in and deposited with the copy of the said award at the office of the clerk of the peace for the county of Kildare on the thirtieth day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, showing the rights of way existing in, over, or affecting the Curragh, shall be deemed to be and shall form part of the said award.

3. No animal other than sheep shall at any time after the passing of this Act depasture on the Curragh, or be turned out to depasture thereon.

4. No sheep shall depasture on the Curragh, or be turned out to depasture thereon, unless they be respectively marked in a distinctive manner, and according to such regulations as the ranger may from time to time direct.

5. It shall be lawful for the ranger of the Curragh, by and with the sanction of the Lords Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, to appoint assistant bailiffs (not exceeding four in number) to assist the deputy ranger in the discharge of his duties, and for the protection of the said Curragh, at such salaries and remuneration as may be approved by the said Lords Commissioners of the Treasury.

6. The ranger of the Curragh shall, for the purpose of preventing the trespass of animals upon the Curragh, have and may exercise all the same rights as if he were the occupier of the same, and shall, for the purposes of section twenty of "The Summary Jurisdiction (Ireland) Act, 1851," be deemed to be the occupier of the Curragh.

7. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Curragh of Kildare Act, 1870."

SCHEDULE to which the foregoing Act refers.

"Curragh of Kildare Act, 1868."

AWARD OF COMMISSIONERS.

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the session of Parliament in the thirty-first and thirty-second years of Her present Majesty, intituled "An Act to make better provision for the management and use of the Curragh of Kildare," it is enacted that three Commissioners should be appointed to ascertain and decide, amongst other things, the following, namely:—

What (if any) rights of common of pasture, rights of way, or other rights (except the rights of the Crown and public rights of way) exist in, over, or affecting the Curragh, or any part thereof, either by grant, charter, or prescription:

To what persons and for what terms, estates, or interests the rights aforesaid respectively belong:

What (if any) are the lands in respect of which the rights aforesaid respectively are exercisable:

What (if any) compensation should be given to any party whose rights are or may be injuriously affected by the said Act:

We, the Commissioners duly appointed, having taken the necessary steps and given the notices required by the said Act, and having heard and examined the evidence, oral and documentary, produced before us, do make our award, as follows:—

We have in the first schedule hereunto annexed, to be taken and considered as part of this our award, stated the names of the several persons on whose behalf claims have been made before us under the said Act, the townlands (county of Kildare) in which the lands are respectively situate, and in respect of which the claims have been made, the substance of each claim lodged and brought before us, the compensation claimed (if any), and the terms, estates, or interests, and number of acres, Irish plantation measure, in respect of which such claims are made, with our allowance or disallowance, wholly or in part, of such claims respectively.

We find that no rights of persons legally claiming under the said Act are substantially altered, varied, or injuriously affected by the said Act, and, as a matter of fact on the evidence adduced before us, that no right to compensation has been established by any of the claimants, either in respect of the site of the camp, or the rifle-ground, or otherwise.

We further find that, from want of proper authority and neglect on the part of those having the care and management of the Curragh, numerous parties have, from time to time, without having any right so to do, pastured sheep on the Curragh, to the prejudice, loss, and injury of those parties who have acquired legal rights to pasture thereon. We find, from the evidence adduced before us, to such an extent has this taken place, that the pasturage of the Curragh has been rendered to a great extent useless, and that many of the persons whose claims to pasture are by this our award allowed have for many years past been deprived of the use of the pasturage on the Curragh, and it does not appear that the persons so deprived ever took any effective steps to remove those who so prejudicially interfered with the pasturage.

We further find that large quantities of sheep manure have been from time to time taken off the Curragh by divers parties without any right or privilege so to do; and that the removal of such manure has practically deteriorated the pasturage of the Curragh to a considerable extent.

We further find, on the evidence adduced before us, that the right of use of pasturage for any animals other than sheep is unsustainable, and that the pasturage on the Curragh is adapted for sheep only (such pasturage being supplementary to the lands in respect of which same is by this our award allowed); and, for the benefit of those entitled to the enjoyment of pasture on the Curragh, we award accordingly that such pasturage shall be confined to sheep.

We further award that all persons whose claims of right to the use of a well or pond on the Curragh are by this our award recognised and allowed shall respectively enjoy such right and access to such well and pond in the way and by the means particularly shown in and by a map or plan lodged by us with the clerk of the peace for the county of Kildare.

In pursuance of the provisions of the said Act, and to prevent in future the cutting up and injuring of the pasturage of the Curragh, we prescribe, award, and determine that the specific ways in respect of rights of way (other than public rights of way) in, over, or affecting the Curragh, or any part thereof, shall be in the direction and lines particularly shown in and by the said map or plan so lodged by us in the office of the clerk of the peace for the said county of Kildare; such specific rights of way being those only which we have determined, and do hereby determine, as necessary and proper for convenience of the owners and occupiers of lands in respect of which such rights are exercisable; and we accordingly award that all rights of way (other than public rights of way) in, over, or affecting the Curragh shall, after this our award, be exercisable only in, along, or across the specific ways laid out on the said map; and that all ways (other than public ways, and hereinbefore referred to as such) in, over, or affecting the Curragh, except the specific ways aforesaid, shall be stopped up.

We further award that the tenants and occupiers of the lands in respect of which claims have been made and allowed by this our award are to be considered only as entitled to the common of pasture, rights of way, or other rights by this our award allowed, in right of their several landlords, and so long only as their interests as such tenants and occupiers respectively continue, and that such rights are not transferable apart from the occupation of the lands.

And we do by this our award ascertain and decide that the public rights of way existing in, over, or affecting the Curragh are those mentioned in the second schedule hereunto annexed, and to be taken as part of our award, and particularly shown in the said map.

We further award and determine that there are no other rights in or over the Curragh save those by this our award allowed.

In witness whereof we have this 30th day of June 1869 affixed our signatures hereto.

HENRY H. JOY, ALEXANDER STEWART, EDMUND A. MANSFIELD,	}	Curragh Commissioners.

An Act to provide for public Elementary Education in England and Wales.
(9th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows; (that is to say,)

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited as "The Elementary Education Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall not extend to Scotland or Ireland.

3. In this Act—

The term "metropolis" means the places for the time being within the jurisdiction of the Metropolitan Board of Works under the Metropolis Management Act, 1855:

The term "borough" means any place for the time being subject to the Act of the session of the fifth and sixth years of the reign of King William the Fourth, chapter seventy-six, intituled "An Act to provide for the regulation of municipal corporations in England and Wales," and the Acts amending the same:

The term "parish" means a place for which for the time being a separate poor rate is or can be made:

The term "person" includes a body corporate: The term "Education Department" means "the Lords of the Committee of the Privy Council on Education:"

The term "Her Majesty's inspectors" means the inspectors of schools appointed by Her Majesty on the recommendation of the Education Department:

The term "managers" includes all persons who have the management of any elementary school, whether the legal interest in the schoolhouse is or is not vested in them:

The term "teacher" includes assistant teacher, pupil teacher, sewing mistress, and every person who forms part of the educational staff of a school:

The term "parent" includes guardian and every person who is liable to maintain or has the actual custody of any child:

The term "elementary school" means a school or department of a school at which elementary education is the principal part of the education there given, and does not include any school or department of a school at which the ordinary payments in respect of the instruction, from each scholar, exceed ninepence a week:

The term "schoolhouse" includes the teacher's dwelling house, and the playground (if any) and the offices and all premises belonging to or required for a school:

The term "vestry" means the ratepayers of a parish meeting in vestry according to law:

The term "ratepayer" includes every person who, under the provisions of the Poor Rate Assessment and Collection Act, 1869, is deemed to be duly rated:

The term "parliamentary grant" means a grant made in aid of an elementary school, either annually or otherwise, out of moneys provided by Parliament for the civil service, intituled 'For public education in Great Britain.'

(I.) LOCAL PROVISION FOR SCHOOLS.

4. For the purposes of this Act, the respective districts, boards, rates, and funds, and authorities described in the first schedule to this Act shall be the school district, the school board, the local rate and the rating authority.

Supply of Schools.

5. There shall be provided for every school district a sufficient amount of accommodation in public elementary schools (as herein-after defined) available for all the children resident in such district for whose elementary education efficient and suitable provision is not otherwise made, and where there is an insufficient amount of such accommodation, in this Act referred to as "public school accommodation," the deficiency shall be supplied in manner provided by this Act.

6. Where the Education Department, in the manner provided by this Act, are satisfied and have given public notice that there is an insufficient amount of public school accommodation for any school district, and the deficiency is not supplied as herein-after required, a school board shall be formed for such district and shall supply such deficiency, and in case of default by the school board the Education Department shall cause the duty of such board to be performed in manner provided by this Act.

7. Every elementary school which is conducted in accordance with the following regulations shall be a public elementary school within the meaning of this Act; and every public elementary school shall be conducted in accordance with the following regulations (a copy of which regulations shall be conspicuously put up in every such school); namely,

(1.) It shall not be required, as a condition of any child being admitted into or continuing in the school, that he shall attend or abstain from attending any Sunday school, or any place of religious worship, or that he shall attend any religious observance or any instruction in religious subjects in the school or elsewhere, from which observance or instruction he may be withdrawn by his parent, or that he shall, if withdrawn by his parent, attend the school on any day exclusively set apart for religious observance by the religious body to which his parent belongs :

- (2.) The time or times during which any religious observance is practised or instruction in religious subjects is given at any meeting of the school shall be either at the beginning or at the end or at the beginning and the end of such meeting, and shall be inserted in a time table to be approved by the Education Department, and to be kept permanently and conspicuously affixed in every schoolroom ; and any scholar may be withdrawn by his parent from such observance or instruction without forfeiting any of the other benefits of the school :
- (3.) The school shall be open at all times to the inspection of any of Her Majesty's inspectors, so, however, that it shall be no part of the duties of such inspector to inquire into any instruction in religious subjects given at such school, or to examine any scholar therein in religious knowledge or in any religious subject or book :
- (4.) The school shall be conducted in accordance with the conditions required to be fulfilled by an elementary school in order to obtain an annual parliamentary grant.

Proceedings for Supply of Schools.

8. For the purpose of determining with respect to every school district the amount of public school accommodation, if any, required for such district, the Education Department shall, immediately after the passing of this Act, cause such returns to be made as in this Act mentioned, and on receiving those returns, and after such inquiry, if any, as they think necessary, shall consider whether any and what public school accommodation is required for such district, and in so doing they shall take into consideration every school, whether public elementary or not, and whether actually situated in the school district or not, which in their opinion gives, or will when completed give, efficient elementary education to, and is, or will when completed be, suitable for the children of such district.

9. The Education Department shall publish a notice of their decision as to the public school accommodation for any school district, setting forth with respect to such district the description thereof, the number, size, and description of the schools (if any) available for such district, which the Education Department have taken into consideration as above mentioned, and the amount and description of the public school accommodation, if any, which appears to them to be required for the district, and any other particulars which the Education Department think expedient.

If any persons being either—

- (1.) Ratepayers of the district, not less than ten, or if less than ten being rated to the poor rate upon a rateable value of not less than one third of the whole rateable value of the district, or,
- (2.) The managers of any elementary school in the district, feel aggrieved by such decision, such persons may, within one month after the publication of the notice, apply in writing to the Education Department for and the Education Department shall direct the holding of a public inquiry in manner provided by this Act.

At any time after the expiration of such month, if no public inquiry is directed, or after the receipt of the report made after such inquiry, as the case may be, the Education Department may, if they think that the amount of public school accommodation for the district is insufficient, publish a final notice stating the same particulars as were contained in the former notice, with such modifications (if any) as they think fit to make, and directing that the public school accommodation therein mentioned as required be supplied.

10. If after the expiration of a time, not exceeding six months, to be limited by the final notice, the Education Department are satisfied that all the public school accommodation required by the final notice to be supplied has not been so supplied, nor is in course of being supplied with due despatch, the Education Department shall cause a school board to be formed for the district as provided in this Act, and shall send a requisition to the school board so formed requiring them to take proceedings forthwith for supplying the public school accommodation mentioned in the requisition, and the school board shall supply the same accordingly.

11. If the school board fail to comply with the requisition within twelve months after the sending of such requisition in manner aforesaid, they shall be deemed to be in default, and if the Education Department are satisfied that such board are in default they may proceed in manner directed by this Act with respect to a school board in default.

12. In the following cases, (that is to say,)

- (1.) Where application is made to the Education Department with respect to any school district by the persons who, if there were a school board in that district, would elect the school board, or with respect to any borough, by the council:

- (2.) Where the Education Department are satisfied that the managers of any elementary school in any school district are unable or unwilling any longer to maintain such school, and that if the school is discontinued the amount of public school accommodation for such district will be insufficient, the Education Department may, if they think fit, without making the inquiry or publishing the notices required by this Act before the formation of a school board, but after such inquiry, public or other, and such notice as the Education Department think sufficient, cause a school board to be formed for such district, and send a requisition to such school board in the same manner in all respects as if they had published a final notice.

An application for the purposes of this section may be made by a resolution passed by the said electing body after notice published at least a week previously, or by the Council, and the provisions of the second part of the second schedule to this Act with respect to the passing of such resolution shall be observed.

13. After the receipt of any returns under this Act subsequently to the first with respect to any school district, and after such inquiry as the Education Department think necessary, the Education Department shall consider whether any and what public school accommodation is required in such district, in the same manner as in the case of the first returns under this Act, and where in such district there is no school board acting under this Act they may issue notices and take proceedings in the same manner as they may after the receipt of the first returns under this Act, and where there is a school board in such district they shall proceed in manner directed by this Act.

Management and Maintenance of Schools by School Board.

14. Every school provided by a school board shall be conducted under the control and management of such board in accordance with the following regulations:

- (1.) The school shall be a public elementary school within the meaning of this Act:
- (2.) No religious catechism or religious formula which is distinctive of any particular denomination shall be taught in the school.

15. The school board may, if they think fit, from time to time delegate any of their powers under this Act except the power of raising money, and in particular may delegate the control and management of any school provided by them, with or without any conditions or restrictions, to a body of managers appointed by them, consisting of not less than three persons.

The school board may from time to time remove all or any of such managers, and within the limits allowed by this section add to or diminish the number of or otherwise alter the constitution or powers of any body of managers, formed by it under this section.

Any manager appointed under this section may resign on giving written notice to the board. The rules contained in the third schedule to this Act respecting the proceedings of bodies of managers appointed by a school board shall be observed.

16. If the school board do or permit any act in contravention of or fail to comply with the regulations according to which a school provided by them is required by this Act to be conducted, the Education Department may declare the school board to be and such board shall accordingly be deemed to be a board in default, and the Education Department may proceed accordingly, and every act or omission of any member of the school board, or manager appointed by them, or any person under the control of the board, shall be deemed to be permitted by the board, unless the contrary be proved.

If any dispute arises as to whether the school board have done or permitted any act in contravention of or have failed to comply with the said regulations, the matter shall be referred to the Education Department, whose decision thereon shall be final.

17. Every child attending a school provided by any school board shall pay such weekly fee as may be prescribed by the school board, with the consent of the Education Department, but the school board may from time to time, for a renewable period not exceeding six months, remit the whole or any part of such fee in the case of any child when they are of opinion that the parent of such child is unable from poverty to pay the same, but such remission shall not be deemed to be parochial relief given to such parent.

18. The school board shall maintain and keep efficient every school provided by such board, and shall from time to time provide such additional school accommodation as is, in their opinion, necessary in order to supply a sufficient amount of public school accommodation for their district.

A school board may discontinue any school provided by them, or change the site of any such school, if they satisfy the Education Department that the school to be discontinued is unnecessary, or that such change of site is expedient.

If at any time the Education Department are satisfied that a school board have failed to perform their duty, either by not maintaining or keeping efficient every school provided by them, or by not providing such additional school accommodation as in the opinion of the Education Department is necessary in order to supply a sufficient amount of public school accommodation in their district, the Education Department may send them a requisition requiring them to fulfil the duty which may have so failed to perform; and if the school board fail within the time limited by such requisition, not being less than three months, to comply therewith to the satisfaction of the Education Department, such board shall be deemed to be a school board in default, and the Education Department may proceed accordingly.

19. Every school board for the purpose of providing sufficient public school accommodation for their district, whether in obedience to any requisition or not, may provide, by building or otherwise, schoolhouses properly fitted up, and improve, enlarge, and fit up any schoolhouse provided by them, and supply school apparatus and everything necessary for the efficiency of the schools provided by them, and purchase and take on lease any land, and any right over land, or may exercise any of such powers.

20. With respect to the purchase of land by school boards for the purposes of this Act the following provisions shall have effect; (that is to say,)

(1.) The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the Acts amending the same, shall be incorporated with this Act, except the provisions relating to access to the special Act; and in construing those Acts for the purposes of this section the special Act shall be construed to mean this Act, and the promoters of the undertaking shall be construed to mean the school board, and land shall be construed to include any right over land:

(2.) The school board, before putting in force any of the powers of the said Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of land otherwise than by agreement, shall—

(a.) Publish during three consecutive weeks in the months of October and November, or either of them, a notice describing shortly the object for which the land is proposed to be taken, naming a place where a plan of the land proposed to be taken may be seen at all reasonable hours, and stating the quantity of land that they require; and shall further,

(b.) After such publication, serve a notice in manner mentioned in this section on every owner or reputed owner, lessee or reputed lessee, and occupier of such land, defining in each case the particular land intended to be taken, and requiring an answer stating whether the person so served assents, dissents, or is neuter in respect of taking such land;

(c.) Such notice shall be served—

(a.) By delivery of the same personally on the person required to be served, or, if such person is absent abroad, to his agent; or

(b.) By leaving the same at the usual or last known place of abode of such person as aforesaid, or by forwarding the same by post in a registered letter, addressed to the usual or last known place of abode of such person:

(3.) Upon compliance with the provisions contained in this section with respect to notices the school board may, if they think fit, present a petition under their seal to the Education Department, praying that an order may be made authorising the school board to put in force the powers of the said Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of land otherwise than by agreement, so far as regards the land therein mentioned; the petition shall state the land intended to be taken and the purposes for which it is required, and the names of the owners, lessees, and occupiers of land who have assented, dissented, or are neuter in respect of the taking of such land, or who have returned no answer to the notice, and shall be supported by such evidence as the Education Department may from time to time require:

(4.) If, on consideration of the petition and proof of the publication and service of the proper notices, the Education Department think fit to proceed with the case, they may, if they think fit, appoint some person to inquire in the district in which the land is situate respecting the propriety of the proposed order, and also direct such person to hold a public inquiry:

(5.) After such consideration and proof, and after receiving a report made upon any such inquiry, the Education Department may make the order prayed for, authorising the school board to put in force with reference to the land referred to in such order the powers of the said Acts with respect to the purchase and taking of land otherwise than by agreement, or any of them, and either absolutely or with such conditions and modifications as they may think fit, and it shall be the duty of the school board to serve a copy of any order so made in the manner and upon the persons in which and upon whom notices in respect of the land to which the order relates are required by this Act to be served :

- (6.) No order so made shall be of any validity unless the same has been confirmed by Act of Parliament; and it shall be lawful for the Education Department, as soon as conveniently may be, to obtain such confirmation, and the Act confirming such order shall be deemed to be a public general Act of Parliament :
- (7.) The Education Department, in case of their refusing or modifying such order, may make such order as they think fit for the allowance of the costs, charges, and expenses of any person whose land is proposed to be taken of and incident to such application and inquiry respectively :
- (8.) All costs, charges, and expenses incurred by the Education Department in relation to any order under this section shall, to such amount as the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury think proper to direct, and all costs, charges, and expenses of any person which shall be so allowed by the Education Department as aforesaid shall, become a charge upon the school fund of the district to which such order relates, and be repaid to the said Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury or to such person respectively, by annual instalments not exceeding five, together with interest after the yearly rate of five pounds in the hundred, to be computed from the date of any such direction of the said Commissioners, or allowance of such costs, charges, and expenses respectively, upon so much of the principal sum due in respect of the said costs, charges, and expenses as may from time to time remain unpaid.

The School Sites Acts as defined in the fourth schedule to this Act shall apply in the same manner as if the school board were trustees or managers of a school within the meaning of those Acts, and land may be acquired under any of the Acts mentioned in this section, or partly under one and partly under another Act.

21. For the purpose of the purchase by the managers of any public elementary school of a schoolhouse for such school, or a site for the same, "The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845," and the Acts amending the same, (except so much as relates to the purchase of land otherwise than by agreement,) shall be incorporated with this Act; and in construing those Acts for the purposes of this section the special Act shall be construed to mean this Act, and the promoters of the undertaking shall be construed to mean such managers, and land shall be construed to include any right over land.

The conveyance of any land so purchased may be in the form prescribed by the School Sites Acts, or any of them, with this modification, that the conveyance shall express that the land shall be held upon trust for the purposes of a public elementary school within the meaning of this Act, or some one of such purposes which may be specified, and for no other purpose whatever.

Land may be acquired under the Acts incorporated with this section, or under the School Sites Acts, or any of them, or partly under one and partly under another Act.

Any persons desirous of establishing a public elementary school shall be deemed to be managers for the purpose of this section if they obtain the approval of the Education Department to the establishment of such school.

22. The provisions of the Charitable Trusts Acts, 1853 to 1869, which relate to the sale, leasing, and exchange of lands belonging to any charity, shall extend to the sale, leasing, and exchange of the whole or any part of any land or schoolhouse belonging to a school board which may not be required by such board, with this modification, that the Education Department shall for the purposes of this section be deemed to be substituted in those Acts for the Charity Commissioners.

23. The managers of any elementary school in the district of a school board may, in manner provided by this Act, make an arrangement with the school board for transferring their school to such school board, and the school board may assent to such arrangement.

An arrangement under this section may be made by the managers by a resolution or other act as follows; (that is to say.)

- (1.) Where there is any instrument declaring the trusts of the school, and such instrument provides any manner in which or any assent with which a resolution or act binding the managers is to be passed or done, then in accordance with the provisions of such instrument :
- (2.) Where there is no such instrument, or such instrument contains no such provisions, then in the manner and with the assent, if any, in and with which it may be shown to the Education Department to have been usual for a resolution or act binding such managers to be passed or done :

- (3.) If no manner or assent can be shown to have been usual, then by a resolution passed by a majority of not less than two thirds of those members of their body who are present at a meeting of the body summoned for the purpose, and vote on the question, and with the assent of any other person whose assent under the circumstances appears to the Education Department to be requisite.

And in every case such arrangement shall be made only—

- (1.) With the consent of the Education Department; and,
 (2.) If there are annual subscribers to such school, with the consent of a majority, not being less than two thirds in number, of those of the annual subscribers who are present at a meeting duly summoned for the purpose, and vote on the question.

Provided that where there is any instrument declaring the trusts of the school, and such instrument contains any provision for the alienation of the school by any persons or in any manner or subject to any consent, any arrangement under this section shall be made by the persons in the manner and with the consent so provided.

Where it appears to the Education Department that there is any trustee of the school who is not a manager, they shall cause the managers to serve on such trustee, if his name and address are known, such notice as the Education Department think sufficient; and the Education Department shall consider and have due regard to any objections and representations he may make respecting the proposed transfer.

The Education Department shall consider and have due regard to any objections and representations respecting the proposed transfer which may be made by any person who has contributed to the establishment of such school.

After the expiration of six months from the date of transfer the consent of the Education Department shall be conclusive evidence that the arrangement has been made in conformity with this section.

An arrangement under this section may provide for the absolute conveyance to the school board of all the interest in the schoolhouse possessed by the managers or by any person who is trustee for them or for the school, or for the lease of the same, with or without any restrictions, and either at a nominal rent or otherwise, to the school board, or for the use by the school board of the schoolhouse during part of the week, and for the use of the same by the managers or some other person during the remainder of the week, or for any arrangement that may be agreed on. The arrangement may also provide for the transfer or application of any endowment belonging to the school, or for the school board undertaking to discharge any debt charged on the school not exceeding the value of the interest in the schoolhouse or endowment transferred to them.

When an arrangement is made under this section the managers may, whether the legal interest in the schoolhouse or endowment is vested in them or in some person as trustee for them or the school, convey to the school board all such interest in the schoolhouse and endowment as is vested in them or in such trustee, or such smaller interest as may be required under the arrangement.

Nothing in this section shall authorise the managers to transfer any property which is not vested in them, or a trustee for them, or held in trust for the school; and where any person has any right given him by the trusts of the school to use the school for any particular purpose independently of such managers, nothing in this section shall authorise any interference with such right except with the consent of such person.

Every school so transferred shall, to such extent and during such times as the school board have under such arrangement any control over the school, be deemed to be a school provided by the school board.

24. Where any school or any interest therein has been transferred by the managers thereof to the school board of any school district in pursuance of this Act, the school board of such district may, by a resolution passed as hereinafter mentioned, and with the consent of the Education Department, re-transfer such school or such interest therein to a body of managers qualified to hold the same under the trusts of the school as they existed before such transfer to the school board, and upon such re-transfer may convey all the interest in the schoolhouse and in any endowment belonging to the school vested in the school board.

A resolution for the purpose of this section may be passed by a majority of not less than two thirds of those members of the school board who are present at a meeting duly convened for the purpose, and vote on the question.

The Education Department shall not give their consent to any such re-transfer unless they are satisfied that any money expended upon such school out of a loan raised by the school board of such district has been or will on the completion of the re-transfer be repaid to the school board.

Every school so re-transferred shall cease to be a school provided by a school board, and shall be held upon the same trusts on which it was held before it was transferred to the school board.

Miscellaneous Powers of School Board.

25. The school board may, if they think fit, from time to time, for a renewable period not exceeding six months, pay the whole or any part of the school fees payable at any public elementary school by any child resident in their district whose parent is in their opinion unable from poverty to pay the same; but no such payment shall be made or refused on condition of the child attending any public elementary school other than such as may be selected by the parent; and such payment shall not be deemed to be parochial relief given to such parent.

26. If a school board satisfy the Education Department that, on the ground of the poverty of the inhabitants of any place in their district, it is expedient for the interests of education to provide a school at which no fees shall be required from the scholars, the board may, subject to such rules and conditions as the Education Department may prescribe, provide such school, and may admit scholars to such school without requiring any fee.

27. A school board shall have the same powers of contributing money in the case of an industrial school as is given to a prison authority by section twelve of "The Industrial Schools Act, 1866;" and upon the election of a school board in a borough the council of that borough shall cease to have power to contribute under that section.

28. A school board may, with the consent of the Education Department, establish, build, and maintain a certified industrial school within the meaning of the Industrial Schools Act, 1866, and shall for that purpose have the same powers as they have for the purpose of providing sufficient school accommodation for their district: Provided that the school board, so far as regards any such industrial school, shall be subject to the jurisdiction of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State in the same manner as the managers of any other industrial school are subject, and such school shall be subject to the provisions of the said Act, and not of this Act.

Constitution of School Boards.

29. The school board shall be elected in manner provided by this Act,—in a borough by the persons whose names are on the burgess roll of such borough for the time being in force, and in a parish not situate in the metropolis by the ratepayers.

At every such election every voter shall be entitled to a number of votes equal to the number of the members of the school board to be elected, and may give all such votes to one candidate, or may distribute them among the candidates, as he thinks fit.

The school board in the metropolis shall be elected in manner herein-after provided by this Act.

30. With respect to the constitution of a school board the following provisions shall have effect:

- (1.) The school board shall be a body corporate, by the name of the school board of the district to which they belong, having a perpetual succession and a common seal, with power to acquire and hold land for the purposes of this Act without any licence in mortmain:
- (2.) No act or proceeding of the school board shall be questioned on account of any vacancy or vacancies in their body:
- (3.) No disqualification of or defect in the election of any persons or person acting as members or member of the school board shall be deemed to vitiate any proceedings of such board in which they or he have taken part, in cases where the majority of members parties to such proceedings were duly entitled to act:
- (4.) Any minute made of proceedings at meetings of the school board, if signed by any person purporting to be the chairman of the board, either at the meeting of the board at which such proceedings took place or at the next ensuing meeting of the board, shall be receivable in evidence in all legal proceedings without further proof, and until the contrary is proved every meeting of the school board, in respect of the proceedings of which minutes have been so made, shall be deemed to have been duly convened and held, and all the members thereof to have been duly qualified to act:
- (5.) The members of a school board may apply any money in their hands for the purpose of indemnifying themselves against any law costs or damages which they may incur in or in consequence of the execution of the powers granted to them:
- (6.) The rules contained in the third schedule to this Act with respect to the proceedings of school boards, and the other matters therein contained, shall be observed.

31. With respect to the election under this Act of a school board, except in the metropolis, the following provisions shall have effect:

- (1.) The number of members of a school board shall be such number, not less than five nor more than fifteen, as may be determined in the first instance by the Education Department, and afterwards from time to time by a resolution of the school board approved by the Education Department:
- (2.) The regulations contained in the second schedule to this Act with respect to the election and retirement of the members of the school board, and the other matters therein contained, shall be of the same force as if they were enacted as part of this section :

- (3.) The Education Department may, at any time after the date at which they are authorised under this Act to cause a school board to be formed, send a requisition to the mayor or other officer or officers who have power to take proceedings for holding the election requiring him or them to take such proceedings, and the mayor or other officer or officers shall comply with such requisition; and in case of default some person appointed by the Education Department may take such proceedings, and shall have for that purpose the same powers as the person in default.

32. If from any cause in any school district the school board either are not elected at the time fixed for the first election, or at any time cease to be in existence, or to be of sufficient number to form a quorum by reason of non-election, resignation, or otherwise, or neglect or refuse to act, the Education Department may proceed in the same manner as if there were a school board acting in such district, and that board were a board in default.

33. In case any question arises as to the right of any person to act as a member of a school board under this Act, the Education Department may, if they think fit, inquire into the circumstances of the case, and make such order as they deem just for determining the question, and such order shall be final unless removed by writ of certiorari during the term next after the making of such order.

34. No member of a school board, and no manager appointed by them, shall hold or accept any place of profit the appointment to which is vested in the school board or in any managers appointed by them, nor shall in any way share or be concerned in the profits of any bargain or contract with or any work done under the authority of such school board or managers appointed by them: Provided that this section shall not apply to—

- (1.) Any sale of land or loan of money to a school board; or,
 - (2.) Any bargain or contract made with or work done by a company in which such member holds shares;
 - (3.) The insertion of any advertisement relating to the affairs of any such school board in any newspaper in which such member has a share or interest,
- if he does not vote with respect to such sale, loan, bargain, contract, work, or insertion.

Any person who acts in contravention of this section shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds, and the said place of profit and his office as member or manager shall be vacant.

35. A school board may appoint a clerk and a treasurer and other necessary officers, including the teachers required for any school provided by such board, to hold office during the pleasure of the board, and may assign them such salaries or remuneration (if any) as they think fit, and may from time to time remove any of such officers; but no such appointment shall be made, except at the first meeting of such board, unless notice in writing has been sent to every member of the board.

Two or more school boards may arrange for the appointment of the same person to be an officer to both or all such boards.

Such officers shall perform such duties as may be assigned to them by the board or boards who appoint them.

36. Every school board may, if they think fit, appoint an officer or officers to enforce any bye-laws under this Act with reference to the attendance of children at school, and to bring children who are liable under the Industrial Schools Act, 1866, to be sent to a certified industrial school before two justices in order to their being so sent, and any expenses incurred under this section may be paid out of the school fund.

School Board in Metropolis.

37. The provisions of this Act with respect to the formation and the election of school boards in boroughs and parishes shall not extend to the metropolis; and with respect to a school board in the metropolis the following provisions shall have effect:

- (1.) The school board shall consist of such number of members elected by the divisions specified in the fifth schedule to this Act as the Education Department may by order fix:
- (2.) The Education Department, as soon as may be after the passing of this Act, shall by order determine the boundaries of the said divisions for the purposes of this Act, and the number of members to be elected by each such division:
- (3.) The provisions of this Act with respect to the constitution of the school board shall extend to the constitution of the school board under this section, and the name of the school board shall be the School Board for London:
- (4.) The first election of the school board shall take place on such day, as soon as may be after the passing of this Act, as the Education Department may appoint, and subsequent elections shall take place in the month of November every third year on the day from time to time appointed by the school board:

- (5.) At every election for each division every voter shall be entitled to a number of votes equal to the number of the members of the school board to be elected for such division, and may give all such votes to one candidate, or may distribute them among the candidates, as he thinks fit:
- (6.) Subject to the provisions contained in this section and in any order made by the Education Department under the power contained in the second schedule to this Act, the members of the board shall, in the city of London, be elected by the same persons and in like manner as common councilmen are elected, and in the other divisions of the metropolis shall be elected by the same persons and in the same manner as vestrymen under The Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and the Acts amending the same; and, subject as aforesaid, the Acts relating to the election of common councilmen, and sections fourteen to nineteen, and twenty-one to twenty-seven, all inclusive, of The Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and section thirty-six of The Metropolis Management Amendment Act, 1862, shall, so far as is consistent with the tenor thereof, apply in the case of the election of members of the school board:
- (7.) The school board shall proceed at once to supply their district with sufficient public school accommodation, and any requisition sent by the Education Department to such board may relate to any of the divisions mentioned in the fifth schedule to this Act in like manner as if it were a school district, and it shall not be necessary for the Education Department to publish any notices before sending such requisition:
- (8.) The Education Department may, in the order fixing the boundaries of such divisions, name some person who shall be the returning officer for the purposes of the first election of the school board, and the person who is to be the deputy returning officer in each such division:
- (9.) The chairman of the school board shall be elected by the school board, and any chairman who may be elected by the board may be elected either from the members of the board or not, and any chairman who is not an elected member of the board shall, by virtue of his office, be a member of the board as if he had been so elected:
- (10.) The school board shall apportion the amount required to be raised to meet the deficiency in the school fund among the different parts of the metropolis mentioned in the third column of the first schedule to this Act in proportion to the rateable value of such parts as shown by the valuation lists for the time being in force under "The Valuation (Metropolis) Act, 1869," or, if any amount is so required before any such valuation list comes into force, in the same proportion and according to the same basis in and according to which the then last rate made by the Metropolitan Board of Works was assessed:
- (11.) For obtaining payment of the amount specified in any precept sent by the school board to the rating authority for any part of the metropolis, the school board, in addition to any other powers and remedies, shall have the like powers as the Metropolitan Board of Works have for obtaining payment of any sum assessed by them on the same part of the metropolis.

38. The school board for London may pay to the chairman of such board such salary as they may from time to time, with the sanction of the Education Department, fix.

39. If at any time application is made to the Education Department by the school board for London, or by any six members of that board, and it is shown to the satisfaction of the Education Department that the population of any of the divisions mentioned in the fifth schedule to this Act, as shown by any census taken under the authority of Parliament, has varied materially from that shown by the previous census, or that the rateable value of any of the said divisions has materially varied from the rateable value of the same division ten years previously, the Education Department, after such inquiry as they think necessary, may, if they think fit, make an order altering, by way of increase or decrease, the number of members of that and any other division.

United School Districts.

40. Where the Education Department are of opinion that it would be expedient to form a school district larger than a borough or a parish or any school district formed under this Act, they may, except in the metropolis, by order made after such inquiry and notice as herein-after mentioned, form a united school district by uniting any two or more adjoining school districts, and upon such union cause a school board to be formed for such united school district.

A united school district shall for all the purposes of this Act be deemed to be a school district, and shall throughout this Act be deemed to be substituted for the school districts out of which it is constituted, and the school board of the united school district shall be the school board appointed under this Act, and the local rate and rating authority for the united district shall be in each of the constituent districts thereof the same as if such constituent district did not form part of the united school district.

41. The Education Department, as soon as may be after the passing of this Act, may cause inquiry to be made into the expediency of uniting any two or more school districts, and if after such inquiry they are of opinion that it would be expedient to unite any such school districts, they shall in the notice of their decision as to the public school accommodation for such districts state that they propose to unite such districts, and the provisions of this Act with respect to the application for a public inquiry by persons aggrieved by the said notice, and to the holding of such public inquiry, and to the final notice, shall apply in the case of the proposed union of districts, with this qualification, that it shall not be necessary to cause a public inquiry to be held with respect to the union of districts until after the expiration of the period allowed by the final notice for the supply of the school accommodation. The order for the union may be made at the time when the Education Department are first authorised to cause a school board to be formed or subsequently. Where a union of districts is proposed the Education Department shall consider whether any public school accommodation is required for the area proposed as the united district instead of for each of the districts constituting such area, and their decision as to the public school accommodation and the notice of such decision shall accordingly refer to such area, and not separately to each of the constituent districts.

42. The Education Department may, by order made after such inquiry and notice as herein-after mentioned, dissolve a united school district, and may deal with the constituent districts thereof in the same manner as if they had never been united, and may cause school boards to be elected therein.

43. The Education Department may at any time, after any proceedings after the first returns under this Act, if they think fit, cause inquiry to be made into the expediency of forming or dissolving a united school district, and where they propose at any time after such inquiry to form or dissolve a united school district, they shall publish notice of the proposed order not less than three months before the order is made; the like persons as are authorised to apply for a public inquiry after the first returns made under this Act may, if they feel aggrieved by the proposed order, apply in like manner for a public inquiry, and the Education Department shall cause a public inquiry to be held, and shall consider the report made to them upon such inquiry before they make the order for such formation or dissolution.

44. Any order of the Education Department forming or dissolving a united district shall be evidence of the formation or dissolution of such district, and after the expiration of three months from the date of such order the district shall be presumed to have been duly formed or dissolved, as the case may be, and no objection to the formation or dissolution thereof shall be entertained in any legal proceedings whatever.

45. The provisions in this Act respecting the constitution of the school board shall apply to the constitution of the school board in a united school district, and the name of the district shall be such as may be prescribed by the Education Department.

46. In a united school district the school board shall be such number of members elected by the electors of the district as may be specified in the order forming the district, subject nevertheless to alteration in the same manner as in the case of any other school board; and every person who in any of the districts constituting such united district would be entitled if it were not united to vote at the election of members of a school board for such constituent district shall be an elector for the purposes of this section, and the provisions of this Act respecting the election of a school board in a district shall extend to the election of such members.

47. Where any part of a proposed united school district includes any district or part of a district in which there is a school board already acting under this Act, or where a united school district is dissolved, the Education Department may by order dissolve the then existing school board, or make all necessary changes in the constitution of such existing school board, and may by order make proper arrangements respecting the schools, property, rights, and liabilities of such board, and all arrangements which may be necessary.

48. If the Education Department are of opinion that any parish in a united school district has too few ratepayers to be entitled to act as a separate parish for the purposes of this Act, they may by order direct that it shall, for the purpose of voting for a member or members of the school board, and for all or any of the purposes of this Act, be added to another parish, and thereupon the persons who would be entitled to vote and attend the vestry if it were a parish shall be entitled for the purpose of voting and for such purposes to vote in and attend the vestry of the parish to which their parish is so added. All the parishes comprised in a united district, or any two or more of them, may be added together in pursuance of this section.

Contributory Districts.

49. The Education Department may by order direct that one school district shall contribute towards the provision or maintenance of public elementary schools in another school district or districts, and in such case the former (or contributing district) shall pay to the latter (or school owning district or districts) such proportion of the expenses of such provision or maintenance or a sum calculated in such manner as the Education Department may from time to time prescribe.

50. Where one school district contributes to the provision or maintenance of any school in another school district, such number of persons as the Education Department (having regard to the amount to be contributed by the contributing district) direct shall be elected in the contributing district, and shall be members of the school board of the school owning district, but such last-mentioned district shall, except so far as regards the raising of money and the attendance of children at school, be deemed alone to be the district of such school board; such members shall be elected by the school board, if any, or, if there is none, by the persons who would elect a school board if there were one, in the same manner as a school board would be elected.

51. The provisions of this Act with respect to the notices to be published, and the application for and the holding of a public inquiry in the case of an order for the formation of a united district, shall apply, mutatis mutandis, to an order respecting a contributory district.

An order respecting a contributory district shall be evidence of the formation of such district, and after the expiration of three months from the date thereof shall be presumed to have been duly made, and no objection to the legality thereof shall be entertained in any legal proceeding whatever.

Any such order may be revoked or altered by an order of the Education Department, and a new order may be made in lieu thereof, and all the provisions of this Act respecting the making of an order for contribution shall apply to the making of an order for the revocation or alteration of an order for contribution.

52. The school boards of any two or more school districts, with the sanction of the Education Department, may combine together for any purpose relating to elementary schools in such districts, and in particular may combine for the purpose of providing, maintaining, and keeping efficient schools common to such districts. Such agreements may provide for the appointment of a joint body of managers under the provisions of this Act with respect to the appointment of a body of managers, and for the proportion of the contributions to be paid by each school district, and any other matters which, in the opinion of the Education Department, are necessary for carrying out such agreement, and the expenses of such joint body of managers shall be paid in the proportions specified in the agreement by each of the school boards out of their school fund.

Expenses.

53. The expenses of the school board under this Act shall be paid out of a fund called the school fund. There shall be carried to the school fund all moneys received as fees from scholars, or out of moneys provided by Parliament, or raised by way of loan, or in any manner whatever received by the school board, and any deficiency shall be raised by the school board as provided by this Act.

54. Any sum required to meet any deficiency in the school fund, whether for satisfying past or future liabilities, shall be paid by the rating authority out of the local rate.

The school board may serve their precept on the rating authority, requiring such authority to pay the amount specified therein to the treasurer of the school board out of the local rate, and such rating authority shall pay the same accordingly, and the receipt of such treasurer shall be a good discharge for the amount so paid, and the same shall be carried to the school fund.

If the rating authority have no moneys in their hands in respect of the local rate, they shall, or if they have paid the amount then for the purpose of reimbursing themselves they may, notwithstanding any limit under any Act of Parliament or otherwise, levy the said rate, or any contributions thereto, or any increase of the said rate or contributions, and for that purpose shall have the same powers of levying a rate and requiring contributions as they have for the purpose of defraying expenses to which the local rate is ordinarily applicable.

55. In a united district the school board shall apportion the amount required to meet the deficiency in the school fund among the districts constituting such united district in proportion to the rateable value of each such constituent district, and may raise the same by a precept sent to the rating authority of each constituent district.

Where one school district contributes to the expenses of the schools in another school district, the authority of the school owning district may send their precept either to the school board, if any, or to the rating authority of the contributing district, requiring them to pay to their treasurer the amount therein specified, and such authority or board shall pay the same accordingly, and the receipt of the treasurer shall be a good discharge for the same, and such amount, if paid by the school board, shall be paid out of the school fund.

The precept, if sent to the rating authority, either on the default of the school board or otherwise, shall be deemed to be a precept for meeting a deficiency in the school fund, and the provisions of this Act shall apply accordingly.

56. In either of the following cases, that is to say,

- (1.) If the rating authority of any place make default in paying the amount specified in any precept of the school board; or
- (2.) Where a school board require to raise a sum from any place which is part of a parish, then, without prejudice to any other remedy, the school board may appoint an officer or officers to act within such place; and the officer or officers so from time to time appointed shall have within the said place, for the purpose of defraying the sum due from such place, all the powers of the rating authority of levying the local rate and any contributions thereto, and also all the powers of making and levying a rate which he or they would have if the said place were a parish, and such rate were a rate for the relief of the poor, and he or they were duly appointed an overseer or overseers of such parish, and he and they shall have such access to and use of the documents of the rating authority of such place relative to the local rate, and of all the valuation lists and rate books of the parish or parishes comprised in or comprising such place, as he or they may require.

57. Where a school board incur any expense in providing or enlarging a schoolhouse, they may, with the consent of the Education Department, spread the payment over several years, not exceeding fifty, and may for that purpose borrow money on the security of the school fund and local rate, and may charge that fund and the local rate with the payment of the principal and interest due in respect of the loan. They may, if they so agree with the mortgagee, pay the amount borrowed, with the interest, by equal annual instalments, not exceeding fifty, and if they do not so agree, they shall annually set aside one fiftieth of the sum borrowed as a sinking fund.

For the purpose of such borrowing the clauses of "The Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847," with respect to the mortgages to be executed by the commissioners, shall be incorporated with this Act; and in the construction of those clauses for the purpose of this Act, this Act shall be deemed to be the special Act, and the school board which is borrowing shall be deemed to be the commissioners.

The Public Works Loan Commissioners may, on the recommendation of the Education Department, lend any money required under this section on the security of the school fund and local rate without requiring any further or other security, such loan to be repaid within a period not exceeding fifty years, and to bear interest at the rate of three and a half per centum per annum.

58. Any sum borrowed by the school board for London in pursuance of this Act, with the approval of the Education Department, may be borrowed from and may be lent by the Metropolitan Board of Works, and section thirty-seven of The Metropolitan Board of Works Loan Act, 1869, shall apply to such loan in the same manner as if the managers therein mentioned were the school board for London, and there were added to the sum therein authorised to be borrowed the sum authorised by the Education Department to be borrowed under this section.

Accounts and Audit.

59. The accounts of the school board shall be made up and balanced to the twenty-fifth of March and twenty-ninth of September in every year. The accounts shall be examined by the school board and signed by the chairman within fourteen days after the day to which they are made up.

As soon as practicable after the accounts are so signed they shall be audited.

60. With respect to the audit of accounts of the school board the following provisions shall have effect:

- (1.) The auditor shall be the auditor of accounts relating to the relief of the poor for the audit district in which the school district is situate, or if it is situate in more than one audit district by the auditor of such of the said audit districts as the Poor Law Board may direct, and the term audit district in this provision shall be construed to include a parish for which an auditor is separately appointed to audit the accounts for the relief of the poor. The auditor shall receive such remuneration as the Poor Law Board direct, and such remuneration, together with the expenses of or incident to the audit, shall be paid by the school board out of the school fund, and if unpaid may be recovered in a summary manner:

- (2.) The audit shall be held at the office of the school board, or some other place sanctioned by the Poor Law Board within the school district, or within the union within which the school district or some part thereof is situate, and at a time which is fixed by the auditor, but which shall be as soon as may be after the account is signed by the chairman:
- (3.) The auditor, at least fourteen days before holding the audit, shall serve on the school board, and publish notice of the time and place of holding the same:
- (4.) The clerk of the school board, or some person authorised by the school board, shall attend the audit, and produce to the auditor all books, bills, vouchers, and documents relating to the account:
- (5.) Any ratepayer of the school district may be present at the audit, and may object to the account:
- (6.) The auditor shall, as nearly as may be, have the like powers and be under the like obligation to allow and disallow items in the account, and to charge the school board, or any member or officer thereof, or any person accountable to them or him, with any sum for which they or he may be accountable, as in the case of an audit of the accounts relating to the relief of the poor in any union or parish; and any person aggrieved by the decision of the auditor shall have the like rights and remedies as in the case of such last-mentioned audit:
- (7.) The auditor shall have the like powers of requiring the attendance of persons, the production of books, bills, vouchers, and documents, and a declaration respecting vouchers and documents, as in the case of such last-mentioned audit; and any person who refuses or neglects to comply with any such requisition, or wilfully makes or signs a false declaration so required, shall be liable to the same penalties as in the case of such last-mentioned audit:
- (8.) Any moneys, books, documents, and chattels certified by the auditor to be due from any person may be recovered from such person in like manner as in the case of such last-mentioned audit, and the expenses incurred in such recovery shall be deemed to be part of the expenses of the audit:

- (9.) Subject to the provisions of this section the Poor Law Board may from time to time make such regulations as may be necessary respecting the form of keeping the accounts and the audit thereof.

61. Any member or officer of a school board, or manager appointed by them, who authorises or makes, or concurs in authorising or making, any payment or any entry in accounts for the purpose of defraying or making up to himself or any other person the whole or any part of any sum of money unlawfully expended from the school fund, or disallowed or surcharged by any auditor, shall, on summary conviction, be liable to pay a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds and double the amount of such sum.

62. When the auditor has completed the audit he shall sign the balance sheet.

The school board shall cause a statement showing their receipts and expenditure to be printed in such form and with such particulars as may be from time to time prescribed by the Education Department, and shall send the same within thirty days after the balance sheet is signed by the auditor to each member of the rating authority, and to the overseers of every parish in the district, and to the Education Department; and the school board may, if they think fit, publish such statement or an abstract thereof in any local newspaper or newspapers circulating in the district, and shall furnish a copy of such statement to any ratepayer in the district, on his application, and on the payment of a sum not exceeding sixpence.

Defaulting School Board.

63. Where the Education Department are, after such inquiry as they think sufficient, satisfied that a school board is in default as mentioned in this Act, they may by order declare such board to be in default, and by the same or any other order appoint any persons, not less than five or more than fifteen, to be members of such school board, and may from time to time remove any member so appointed, and fill up any vacancy in the number of such members, whether caused by removal, resignation, death, or otherwise, and, subject as aforesaid, add to or diminish the number of such members.

After the date of the order of appointment the persons (if any) who were previously members of the school board shall be deemed to have vacated their offices as if they were dead, but any such member may be appointed a member by the Education Department. The members so appointed by the Education Department shall be deemed to be members of the school board in the same manner in all respects as if, by election or otherwise, they had duly become members of the school board under the other provisions of this Act, and may perform all the duties and exercise all the powers of the school board under this Act.

The members appointed by the Education Department shall hold office during the pleasure of the Education Department, and when that department consider that the said default has been remedied, and everything necessary for that purpose has been carried into effect, they may, by order, direct that members be elected for the school board in the same manner as in the case of the first formation of the school board. After the date fixed by any such order the members appointed by the Education Department shall cease to be members of the school board, and the members so elected shall be members of the school board in their room, but the members appointed by the Education Department shall not be disqualified from being so elected. Until any such order is made no person shall become a member of the school board otherwise than by the appointment of the Education Department.

Where a school board is not elected at the time fixed for the first election, or has ceased to be in existence, the Education Department may proceed in the same manner as if such board had been elected and were in existence.

64. The Education Department may from time to time certify the appointment of any persons appointed to be members of a school board in default, and the amount of expenses that have been incurred by such persons, and the amount of any loan required to be raised for the purpose of defraying any expenses so incurred, or estimated as about to be incurred; and such certificate shall be conclusive evidence that all the requirements of this Act have been duly complied with, and that the persons so appointed have been duly appointed, and that the amounts therein mentioned have been incurred or are required.

65. The expenses incurred in the performance of their duties by the persons appointed by the Education Department to be members of a school board, including such remuneration (if any) as the Education Department may assign to such persons, shall, together with all expenses incurred by the board, be paid out of the school fund; and any deficiency in the school fund may be raised by the school board as provided by this Act; and where the Education Department have, either before or after the payment of such expenses, certified that any expenses have been incurred by a school board, or any members appointed by them, such expenses shall be deemed to have been so incurred, and to have been properly paid out of the school fund.

Where the members of a school board have been appointed by the Education Department, such school board shall not borrow or charge the school fund with the principal and interest of any loan exceeding such amount as the Education Department certify as mentioned in this Act to be required.

66. Where the Education Department are of opinion that in the case of any school district the school board for such district are in default, or are not properly performing their duties under this Act, they may by order direct that the then members of the school board of such district shall vacate their seats, and that the vacancies shall be filled by a new election; and after the date fixed by any such order the then members of such board shall be deemed to have vacated their seats, and a new election shall be held in the same manner, and the Education Department shall take the same proceedings for the purpose of such election as if it were the first election; and all the provisions of this Act relating to such first election shall apply accordingly.

The Education Department shall cause to be laid before both Houses of Parliament in every year a special report stating the cases in which they have made any order under this section during the preceding year, and their reasons for making such order.

Returns and Inquiry.

67. On or before the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, or in the case of the metropolis before the expiration of four months from the date of the election of the chairman of the school board, every local authority herein-after mentioned, and subsequently any such local authority whenever required by the Education Department, but not oftener than once in every year, shall send to the Education Department a return containing such particulars with respect to the elementary schools and children requiring elementary education in their district as the Education Department may from time to time require.

68. For the purpose of obtaining such returns the Education Department shall draw up forms, and supply to the local authority such number of forms as may be required; and the managers or principal teacher of every school required to be included in any such return shall fill up the form, and return the same to the local authority within the time specified in that behalf in the form.

69. The returns shall be made in the metropolis by the school board appointed under this Act, in boroughs by the council, and in every parish not situated in a borough or the metropolis by persons appointed for the purpose or by the overseers of such parish. Where a school board is formed under this Act, the returns shall be made by such school board within their district, instead of by the council, persons appointed as aforesaid, or overseers, as the case may be.

The persons appointed for the purpose may be appointed as follows; namely, the Education Department may, if they think fit, send to the overseers or other officers who have power to summon a vestry in such parish a requisition to summon, and such overseers or other officers shall summon, a vestry in such parish for the purpose of this section; and such vestry shall appoint two or more persons who shall be the local authority for the purpose of the returns under this Act.

The local authority may, with the sanction of the Education Department, employ persons to assist in making such returns, and may pay those persons such remuneration as the Treasury may sanction. That remuneration, and all such other reasonable expenses incurred by the local authority in making such returns as the Treasury may sanction, shall be paid by the Education Department.

70. If any local authority fail to make the returns required under this Act, the Education Department may appoint any person or persons to make such returns, and the person or persons so appointed shall for that purpose have the same powers and authorities as the local authority.

71. The Education Department may appoint any persons to act as inspectors of returns, who shall proceed to inquire into the accuracy and completeness of any one or more returns made in pursuance of this Act, and into the efficiency and suitability of any school mentioned in any such return, or which ought to have been mentioned therein, and to inspect and examine the scholars in every such school. Where there is no return the inspector shall proceed as if there had been a defective return.

72. If the managers or teacher of any school refuse or neglect to fill up the form required for the said return, or refuse to allow the inspector to inspect the schoolhouse or examine any scholar, or examine the school books and registers, or make copies or extracts therefrom, such school shall not be taken into consideration among the schools giving efficient elementary education to the district.

Public Inquiry.

73. Where a public inquiry is held in pursuance of the provisions of this Act, the following provisions shall have effect:

- (1.) The Education Department shall appoint some person who shall proceed to hold the inquiry:
- (2.) The person so appointed shall for that purpose hold a sitting or sittings in some convenient place in the neighbourhood of the school district to which the subject of inquiry relates, and thereat shall hear, receive, and examine any evidence and information offered, and hear and inquire into any objections or representations made respecting the subject of the inquiry, with power from time to time to adjourn any sitting.
- Notice shall be published in such manner as the Education Department direct of every such sitting (except an adjourned sitting) seven days at least before the holding thereof:
- (3.) The person so appointed shall make a report in writing to the Education Department setting forth the result of the inquiry, and stating his opinion on the subject thereof, and his reasons for such opinion, and the objections and representations, if any, made on the inquiry, and his opinion thereon; and the Education Department shall cause a copy of such report to be deposited with the school board (if any), or, if there is none, the town clerk of the borough, or the churchwardens or overseers of the parishes to which the inquiry relates, and notice of such deposit to be published:
- (4.) The Education Department may make an order directing that the costs of the proceedings and inquiry shall be paid, according as they think just, either by the district as if they were expenses of a school board, or by the applicants for the inquiry; and such costs may be recovered, in the former case, as a debt due from the school board, or, if there is no school board, as a debt due from the rating authority, and, in the case of the applicants, as a debt due jointly and severally from them; and the Education Department may, if they think fit, before ordering the inquiry to be held, require the applicants to give security for such expenses, and in case of their refusal may refuse to order the inquiry to be held.

Attendance at School.

74. Every school board may from time to time, with the approval of the Education Department, make byelaws for all or any of the following purposes:

- (1.) Requiring the parents of children of such age, not less than five years nor more than thirteen years, as may be fixed by the byelaws, to cause such children (unless there is some reasonable excuse) to attend school :

- (2.) Determining the time during which children are so to attend school; provided that no such byelaw shall prevent the withdrawal of any child from any religious observance or instruction in religious subjects, or shall require any child to attend school on any day exclusively set apart for religious observance by the religious body to which his parent belongs, or shall be contrary to anything contained in any Act for regulating the education of children employed in labour :
- (3.) Providing for the remission or payment of the whole or any part of the fees of any child where the parent satisfies the school board that he is unable from poverty to pay the same :
- (4.) Imposing penalties for the breach of any byelaws :
- (5.) Revoking or altering any byelaw previously made.

Provided that any byelaw under this section requiring a child between ten and thirteen years of age to attend school shall provide for the total or partial exemption of such child from the obligation to attend school if one of Her Majesty's inspectors certifies that such child has reached a standard of education specified in such byelaw.

Any of the following reasons shall be a reasonable excuse; namely,

- (1.) That the child is under efficient instruction in some other manner :
- (2.) That the child has been prevented from attending school by sickness or any unavoidable cause :
- (3.) That there is no public elementary school open which the child can attend within such distance, not exceeding three miles, measured according to the nearest road from the residence of such child, as the byelaws may prescribe.

The school board, not less than one month before submitting any byelaw under this section for the approval of the Education Department, shall deposit a printed copy of the proposed byelaws at their office for inspection by any ratepayer, and supply a printed copy thereof gratis to any ratepayer, and shall publish a notice of such deposit.

The Education Department before approving of any byelaws shall be satisfied that such deposit has been made and notice published, and shall cause such inquiry to be made in the school district as they think requisite.

Any proceeding to enforce any byelaw may be taken, and any penalty for the breach of any byelaw may be recovered, in a summary manner; but no penalty imposed for the breach of any byelaw shall exceed such amount as with the costs will amount to five shillings for each offence, and such byelaws shall not come into operation until they have been sanctioned by Her Majesty in Council.

It shall be lawful for Her Majesty, by Order in Council, to sanction the said byelaws, and thereupon the same shall have effect as if they were enacted in this Act.

All byelaws sanctioned by Her Majesty in Council under this section shall be set out in an appendix to the annual report of the Education Department.

Miscellaneous.

75. Where any school or any endowment of a school was excepted from The Endowed Schools Act, 1869, on the ground that such school was at the commencement of that Act in receipt of an annual parliamentary grant, the governing body (as defined by that Act) of such school or endowment may frame and submit to the Education Department a scheme respecting such school or endowment.

The Education Department may approve such scheme with or without any modifications as they think fit.

The same powers may be exercised by means of such scheme as may be exercised by means of any scheme under The Endowed Schools Act, 1869; and such scheme, when approved by the Education Department, shall have effect as if it were a scheme made under that Act.

A certificate of the Education Department that a school was at the commencement of The Endowed Schools Act, 1869, in receipt of an annual parliamentary grant, shall be conclusive evidence of that fact for all purposes.

76. Where the managers of any public elementary school not provided by a school board desire to have their school inspected or the scholars therein examined, as well in respect of religious as of other subjects, by an inspector other than one of Her Majesty's inspectors, such managers may fix a day or days not exceeding two in any one year for such inspection or examination.

The managers shall, not less than fourteen days before any day so fixed, cause public notice of the day to be given in the school, and notice in writing of such day to be conspicuously affixed in the school.

On any such day any religious observance may be practised, and any instruction in religious subjects given at any time during the meeting of the school, but any scholar who has been withdrawn by his parent from any religious observance or instruction in religious subjects shall not be required to attend the school on any such day.

77. Where a parish is situated partly within and partly without a borough, the part situate outside of the borough shall be taken to be for all the purposes of this Act, except as otherwise expressly mentioned, a parish by itself, and the ratepayers thereof may meet in vestry in the same manner in all respects as if they were the inhabitants of a parish; every such meeting, and also the meeting for the purposes of this Act of the ratepayers of any parish (the ratepayers of which have not usually met in vestry), shall be deemed to be a vestry, and, save as provided by this Act, be subject to the Act of the fifty-eighth year of the reign of King George the Third, chapter sixty-nine, and the Acts amending the same, and, subject as aforesaid, shall be summoned by the persons and in the mode prescribed by the Education Department; and the overseers of the whole parish shall be deemed to be the overseers of any such part of a parish.

78. The Education Department shall, for the purposes of The Charitable Trusts Acts, 1853 to 1869, be deemed to be persons interested in any elementary school to which those Acts are applicable, and the endowment thereof.

79. The rateable value of any parish or school district shall for the purposes of this Act be the rateable value as stated in the valuation lists, if any, and if there are none, then as stated in the rate book for the time being in force in such parish and in the parishes constituting the district; and the overseers and other persons having the custody of such valuation lists and rate book shall, when required by the school board, produce such lists and rate book to the school board, and allow the school board and any person appointed by them to inspect the same, and take copies of or extracts therefrom.

80. Notices and other matters required by this Act to be published shall, unless otherwise expressly provided, be published,—

- (1.) By advertisement in some one or more of the newspapers circulating in the district or place to which such notice relates :
- (2.) By causing a copy of such notices or other matter to be published to be affixed, during not less than twelve hours in the day, on Sunday on or near the principal doors of every church and chapel in such district or place to which notices are usually affixed, and at every other place in such district or place at which notices are usually affixed.

81. Certificates, notices, requisitions, orders, precepts, and all documents required by this Act to be served or sent may, unless otherwise expressly provided, be served and sent by post, and, till the contrary is proved, shall be deemed to have been served and received respectively at the time when the letter containing the same would be delivered in the ordinary course of post; and in proving such service or sending it shall be sufficient to prove that the letter containing the certificate, notice, requisition, order, precept, or document was prepaid, and properly addressed, and put into the post.

82. Certificates, notices, requisitions, orders, and other documents may be served on a school board by serving the same on their clerk, or by sending the same to or delivering the same at the office of such board.

Certificates, notices, requisitions, orders, precepts, and other documents may be in writing or in print, or partly in writing and partly in print, and if requiring authentication by a school board may be signed by their clerk.

83. All orders, minutes, certificates, notices, requisitions, and documents of the Education Department, if purporting to be signed by some secretary or assistant secretary of the Education Department, shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been so signed and to have been made by the Education Department, and may be proved by the production of a copy thereof purporting to have been so signed.

The Documentary Evidence Act, 1868, shall apply to the Education Department in like manner as if the Education Department were mentioned in the first column of the schedule to that Act, and any member of the Education Department, or any secretary or assistant secretary of the Education Department, were mentioned in the second column of that schedule.

84. After the expiration of three months from the date of any order or requisition of the Education Department under this Act, such order or requisition shall be presumed to have been duly made, and to be within the powers of this Act, and no objection to the legality thereof shall be entertained in any legal proceeding whatever.

85. A school board may appear in all legal proceedings by their clerk, or by some member of the board authorised by a resolution of the board; and every such resolution shall appear upon the minutes of the proceedings of the board, but every such resolution shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed in any legal proceeding to appear upon such minutes.

86. The provisions of the School Sites Acts with respect to the tenure of the office of the schoolmaster or schoolmistress, and to the recovery of possession of any premises held over by a master or mistress who has been dismissed or ceased to hold office, shall extend to the case of any school provided by a school board, and of any master or mistress of such school, in the same manner as if the school board were the trustees or managers of the school as mentioned in those Acts.

87. Every ratepayer in a school district may at all reasonable times, without payment, inspect and take copies of and extracts from all books and documents belonging to or under the control of the school board of such district.

Any person who hinders a ratepayer from so inspecting or taking copies of or extracts from any book or document, or demands a fee for allowing him so to do, shall be liable, on summary conviction, to a penalty not exceeding five pounds for each offence.

88. If any returning officer, clerk, or other person engaged in an election of a school board under this Act wilfully makes or causes to be made an incorrect return of the votes given at such election, every such offender shall, upon summary conviction, be liable to a penalty not exceeding fifty pounds.

89. If any person wilfully personates any person entitled to vote in the election of a school board under this Act, or answers falsely any question put to him in voting in pursuance of an order made under the second schedule to this Act, or falsely assumes to act in the name or on the behalf of any person so entitled to vote, he shall be liable, on summary conviction, for every such offence to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

90. If any person knowingly personate and falsely assume to vote in the name of any person entitled to vote in any election under this Act, or forge or in any way falsify any name or writing in any paper purporting to contain the vote or votes of any person voting in any such election, or by any contrivance attempt to obstruct or prevent the purposes of any such election, or wilfully contravene any regulation made by the Education Department under the second schedule to this Act with respect to the election, the contravention of which is expressed to involve a penalty, the person so offending shall upon summary conviction be liable to a penalty of not more than fifty pounds, and in default of payment thereof to be imprisoned for a term not exceeding six months.

91. Any person who at the election of any member of a school board or any officer appointed for the purpose of such election is guilty of corrupt practices shall, on conviction, for each offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding two pounds, and be disqualified for the term of six years after such election from exercising any franchise at any election under this Act, or at any municipal or parliamentary election.

The term corrupt practices in this section includes all bribery, treating, and undue influence which under any Act relating to a parliamentary election renders such election void.

92. Any penalty and any money which under this Act is recoverable summarily, and all proceedings under this Act which may be taken in a summary manner, may be recovered and taken before two justices in manner directed by an Act of the session of the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter forty-three, intituled "An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary convictions and orders," and the Acts amending the same.

93. In the case of the borough of Oxford, the provisions of this Act relating to boroughs shall be construed as if the local board were therein mentioned instead of the council; if a school board is formed in the borough of Oxford, one third of the school board shall be elected by the university of Oxford, or the colleges and halls therein, in such manner as may be directed by the Education Department by an order made under the power contained in the second schedule to this Act.

94. The schedules to this Act shall be of the same force as if they were enacted in this Act, and the Acts mentioned in the fourth schedule to this Act may be cited in the manner in that schedule mentioned.

95. Every school board shall make such report and returns and give such information to the Education Department as the department may from time to time require.

(II.) PARLIAMENTARY GRANT.

96. After the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one no parliamentary grant shall be made to any elementary school which is not a public elementary school within the meaning of this Act.

No parliamentary grant shall be made in aid of building, enlarging, improving, or fitting up any elementary school, except in pursuance of a memorial duly signed, and containing the information required by the Education Department for enabling them to decide on the application, and sent to the Education Department on or before the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

97. The conditions required to be fulfilled by an elementary school in order to obtain an annual parliamentary grant shall be those contained in the minutes of the Education Department in force for the time being, and shall amongst other matters provide that after the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one—

(1.) Such grant shall not be made in respect of any instruction in religious subjects:

(2.) Such grant shall not for any year exceed the income of the school for that year which was derived from voluntary contributions, and from school fees, and from any sources other than the parliamentary grant;

but such conditions shall not require that the school shall be in connexion with a religious denomination, or that religious instruction shall be given in the school, and shall not give any preference or advantage to any school on the ground that it is or is not provided by a school board:

Provided that where the school board satisfy the Education Department that in any year ending the twenty-ninth of September the sum required for the purpose of the annual expenses of the school board of any school district, and actually paid to the treasurer of such board by the rating authority, amounted to a sum which would have been raised by a rate of threepence in the pound on the rateable value of such district, and any such rate would have produced less than twenty pounds, or less than seven shillings and sixpence per child of the number of children in average attendance at the public elementary schools provided by such school board, such school board shall be entitled, in addition to the annual parliamentary grant in aid of the public elementary schools provided by them, to such further sum out of moneys provided by Parliament as, when added to the sum actually so paid by the rating authority, would, as the case may be, make up the sum of twenty pounds, or the sum of seven shillings and sixpence for each such child, but no attendance shall be reckoned for the purpose of calculating such average attendance unless it is an attendance as defined in the said minutes:

Provided that no such minute of the Education Department not in force at the time of the passing of this Act shall be deemed to be in force until it has lain for not less than one month on the table of both Houses of Parliament.

98. If the managers of any school which is situate in the district of a school board acting under this Act, and is not previously in receipt of an annual parliamentary grant, whether such managers are a school board or not, apply to the Education Department for a parliamentary grant, the Education Department may, if they think that such school is unnecessary, refuse such application.

The Education Department shall cause to be laid before both Houses of Parliament in every year a special report stating the cases in which they have refused a grant under this section during the preceding year, and their reasons for each such refusal.

99. The managers of every elementary school shall have power to fulfil the conditions required in pursuance of this Act to be fulfilled in order to obtain a parliamentary grant, notwithstanding any provision contained in any instrument regulating the trusts or management of their school, and to apply such grant accordingly.

Report.

100. The Education Department shall in every year cause to be laid before both Houses of Parliament a report of their proceedings under this Act during the preceding year.

SECOND SCHEDULE.

FIRST PART.

Rules respecting Election and Retirement of Members of a School Board.

1. The election of a school board shall be held at such time, and in such manner, and in accordance with such regulations as the Education Department may from time to time by order prescribe, and the Education Department may by order appoint or direct the appointment of any officers requisite for the purpose of such election, and do all other necessary things preliminary or incidental to such election: Provided, that any poll shall be taken in the metropolis in like manner as a poll is taken under "The Metropolis Management Act, 1855," and shall be taken in any other district in like manner as a poll of burgesses or ratepayers (as the case may be) is usually taken in such district.

2. The expenses of the election and taking the poll in any district other than the metropolis shall be paid by the school board out of the school fund.

3. An order made by the Education Department under the power contained in this part of this schedule shall, as regards any election held before the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, be deemed to be within the powers of this schedule, and to have been duly made and have effect as if it were enacted in this schedule, but shall not be of any force as regards any election after the said date unless it has been confirmed by Parliament.

4. Any such order so far as relates to the metropolis shall supersede any provisions contained in the Acts relating to the election of common councilmen, and in the Metropolis Management Act, 1855, and the Acts amending the same.

5. If from any cause no members are elected at the time at which they ought to be elected in accordance with this Act, then—

(a.) In the case of the first election the Education Department may appoint another day for the election, or may proceed as in the case of a school board in default:

(b.) In the case of a triennial election the retiring members, or so many as are willing to serve, shall be deemed to be re-elected, or, if all the retiring members refuse to serve, the Education Department may appoint another day for the election, or may proceed as in the case of a school board in default.

6. If an insufficient number of members are elected, or if, in the case of no members being elected, some of the retiring members are and some are not willing to serve, the school board, so far as it is constituted, shall elect a person to fill each vacancy.

7. No election under this Act shall be questioned on the ground of the title of the returning officer, or any person presiding at the poll, or any officer connected with the election.

8. Notice of the election of a person to be a member of the school board shall be sent to that person by the returning officer: in the case of the first election such notice shall be accompanied by a summons to attend the first meeting of the school board at the prescribed time.

9. The day for the triennial retirement of members shall be the prescribed day.

10. The first members shall retire from office on the day for retirement which comes next after the expiration of three years from the day fixed for the first election.

11. Members chosen to fill the offices of retiring members shall come into office on the day for retirement, and shall hold office for three years only.

12. Any person who ceases to be a member of the school board shall, unless disqualified as herein-after mentioned, be re-eligible.

13. A member of the school board may resign on giving to the board one month's previous notice in writing of his intention so to do.

14. If a member of the school board absents himself during six successive months from all meetings of the board, except from temporary illness or other cause to be approved by the board, or is punished with imprisonment for any crime, or is adjudged bankrupt, or enters into a composition or arrangement with his creditors, such person shall cease to be a member of the school board, and his office shall thereupon be vacant.

15. If any casual vacancy in office occurs by death, resignation, disqualification, or otherwise, an election shall be held in manner directed by an order made under the power contained in this part of this schedule.

16. If by any means the number of members of a school board is reduced to less than the number required for a quorum, the Education Department may proceed as if such board were a board in default, or may direct an election to be held to fill up the vacancies in manner directed by an order made under the power contained in this part of this schedule.

17. The member chosen to fill up a casual vacancy shall retain his office so long only as the vacating member would have retained the same if no vacancy had occurred.

18. If the number of the board is reduced in pursuance of the provisions of this Act, the chairman of the board shall at some meeting, as soon as may be after such reduction, determine by ballot on the members who shall retire, so as to reduce the number of the board to the number to which it is so reduced.

19. The term "prescribed" in this schedule means prescribed by some minute or order of the Education Department.

SECOND PART.

Rules respecting Resolutions for Application for School Board.

1. The meeting of a council for the purpose of passing such a resolution shall be summoned in the manner in which a meeting of the council is ordinarily summoned, and the resolution shall be passed by a majority of the members present and voting on the question.

2. The resolution passed by the persons who would elect the school board shall be passed in like manner as near as may be as that in which a member of the school board is elected, with such necessary modifications as may be contained in any order made under the powers of the first part of this schedule, and such powers shall extend to the passing of the resolution in like manner as if it were an election, but the expenses incurred with reference to such a resolution shall be paid by the overseers out of the poor rate.

3. If a resolution is rejected, the resolution shall not be again proposed until the lapse of twelve months from the date of such rejection.

THIRD PART.

Rules for Election of School Board in Metropolis.

1. If any person be returned for more than one division he shall, at or before the first meeting of the school board after such election, signify in writing to the board his decision as to the division which he may desire to represent on such return, and if he fails so to do the school board shall decide the division which he shall represent; and upon any such decision the office of member for the other division shall be deemed vacant. Such vacancy shall be filled up by an election to be held in manner directed by an order made under the power contained in the first part of this schedule.

2. The provisions in the first part of this schedule shall apply in the case of the school board in the metropolis.

3. The provisions in the first part of this schedule with respect to the proceedings in the case of no members being elected for a school district shall not only apply to the whole of the metropolis, but shall apply to the case of no members being elected for any particular division, with this qualification, that the Education Department shall not proceed as in the case of a school board in default, but may direct that persons may be elected by the school board to be members for such division.

4. In the places named in schedule (C.) to "The Metropolis Management Act, 1855," the expenses of the election shall be paid out of the local rate, and such rate, or any increase of the rate, may be levied for the purpose.

5. The day for the retirement of members from office shall be the first day of December.

6. Any casual election shall be held on the day fixed by the school board, and shall be an election for the division a member for which has created the vacancy.

7. If any vacancy is filled up by the school board the election shall be by the whole school board.

THIRD SCHEDULE.

Proceedings of School Board.

1. The board shall meet for the despatch of business, and shall from time to time make such regulations with respect to the summoning, notice, place, management, and adjournment of such meetings, and generally with respect to the transaction and management of business, including the quorum at meetings of the board, as they think fit, subject to the following conditions:—

- (a.) The first meeting shall be held on the third Thursday after the election of the board, and if not held on that day shall be held on some day to be fixed by the Education Department:
 - (b.) Not less than one ordinary meeting shall be held in each month; one meeting shall be held as soon as possible after every triennial election of members:
 - (c.) An extraordinary meeting may be held at any time on the written requisition of three members of the board addressed to the clerk of the board:
 - (d.) The quorum to be fixed by the board shall consist of not less than three members, and in the case of the metropolis not less than nine members:
 - (e.) Every question shall be decided by a majority of votes of the members present and voting on that question:
 - (f.) The names of the members present, as well as of those voting upon each question, shall be recorded:
 - (g.) No business involving the appointment or dismissal of a teacher, any new expense, or any payment (except the ordinary periodical payments), or any business which under this Act requires the consent of the Education Department, shall be transacted unless notice in writing of such business has been sent to every member of the board seven days at least before the meeting.
2. The board shall at their first meeting, and afterwards from time to time at their first meeting after each triennial election, appoint some person to be chairman, and one other person to be vice-chairman, for the three years for which the board hold office.

3. If any casual vacancy occurs in the office of chairman or vice-chairman the board shall, as soon as they conveniently can after the occurrence of such vacancy, choose one of their members to fill such vacancy, and every such chairman or vice-chairman so elected as last aforesaid shall continue in office so long only as the person in whose place he may be so elected would have been entitled to continue if such vacancy had not happened.

4. If at any meeting the chairman is not present at the time appointed for holding the same the vice-chairman shall be the chairman of the meeting, and if neither the chairman nor vice-chairman shall be present then the members present shall choose some one of their number to be chairman of such meeting.

5. In case of an equality of votes at any meeting the chairman for the time being of such meeting shall have a second or casting vote.

6. All orders of the board for payment of money, and all precepts issued by the board, shall be deemed to be duly executed if signed by two or more members of the board authorised to sign them by a resolution of the board, and countersigned by the clerk; but in any legal proceeding it shall be presumed, until the contrary is proved, that the members signing any such order or precept were authorised to sign them.

7. The appointment of any officer of the board may be made by a minute of the board, signed by the chairman of the board, and countersigned by the clerk (if any) of the board, and any appointment so made shall be as valid as if it were made under the seal of the board.

8. Precepts of the board may be in the form given at the end of this schedule.

Proceedings of Managers appointed by a School Board.

The managers may elect a chairman of their meetings. If no such chairman is elected, or if the chairman elected is not present at the time appointed for holding the same, the members present shall choose one of their number to be chairman of such meeting. The managers may meet and adjourn as they think proper. The quorum of the managers shall consist of such number of members as may be prescribed by the school board that appointed them, or, if no number be prescribed, of three members. Every question at a meeting shall be determined by a majority of votes of the members present and voting on that question, and in case of an equal division of votes the chairman shall have a second or casting vote.

The proceedings of the managers shall not be invalidated by any vacancy or vacancies in their number.

An Act to facilitate the Arrest of Absconding Debtors.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS the laws now in force for the arrest of debtors absconding from England are insufficient for that purpose :

And whereas frauds may be perpetrated upon creditors by insolvent debtors departing for distant countries before the necessary proceedings can be taken to make them bankrupt :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. That the provisions of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, be extended in manner following :

The Court may, by warrant addressed to any constable or prescribed officer of the Court, cause a debtor to be arrested and safely kept as prescribed until such time as the Court may order, if, after a debtor's summons has been granted in the manner prescribed by the said Act, and before a petition of bankruptcy can be presented against him, it appear to the Court that there is probable reason for believing that he is about to go abroad, with a view of avoiding payment of the debt for which the summons has been granted, or of avoiding service of a petition of bankruptcy, or of avoiding appearing to such petition, or of avoiding examination in respect of his affairs, or otherwise avoiding, delaying, or embarrassing proceedings in bankruptcy: Provided always, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to alter or qualify the right of the debtor to apply to the Court in the prescribed manner to dismiss the said summons as in the said Act is provided, or to pay, secure, or compound for the said debt within the time by the said Act provided, without being deemed to have committed an act of bankruptcy; and provided also, that upon any such payment or composition being made, or such security offered as the Court shall think reasonable, the said debtor shall be discharged out of custody, unless the Court shall otherwise order.

2. No arrest shall be valid or protected under this Act unless the debtor, before or at the time of his arrest, shall be served with the debtor's summons.

3. No payment or composition of a debt made or security for the same given after an arrest made under the provisions of this Act shall be exempted from the provisions of the said Act relating to fraudulent preferences.

4. The terms used in this Act shall have the same meaning as they have in the said recited Act, and this Act shall be read and construed therewith.

5. The costs and fees to be charged in respect of any proceedings authorised shall be prescribed in the like manner in which costs and fees to be charged in respect of proceedings under the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, are respectively directed by that Act to be prescribed.

6. In citing this Act in other Acts of Parliament, or in any instrument, document, or proceeding, it shall be sufficient to use the expression "The Absconding Debtors Act, 1870."

Schedule.

An Act to amend the Laws relating to the qualifications, summoning, attendance, and remuneration of Special and Common Juries. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the laws regulating the qualification, summoning, attendance, and remuneration of special and common juries in England and Wales, and otherwise to amend the laws as to trials by jury in England and Wales:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act shall not come into force till the second day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

2. This Act shall not apply to Scotland or Ireland.

3. The Acts herein-after mentioned may be cited for all purposes by the short titles following; that is to say,

An Act of the session of the sixth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, chapter fifty, and intituled "An Act for consolidating and amending the Laws relative to Jurors and Juries," by the short title of "The County Juries Act, 1825;"
this Act by the short title of "The Juries Act, 1870."

4. This Act shall be construed as one with "The County Juries Act, 1825," and any Act amending the same; and such parts of the said Act and of any other Act or Acts as are inconsistent with this Act are hereby repealed.

5. In this Act—

The term "overseers" shall include churchwardens, and the term "quarter sessions" shall include general sessions:

The word "juror" shall mean male persons only.

6. Every man whose name shall be in the jurors book for any county in England or Wales, or for the county of the city of London, and who shall be legally entitled to be called an esquire, or shall be a person of higher degree, or shall be a banker or merchant, or who shall occupy a private dwelling house rated or assessed to the poor rate or to the inhabited house duty on a value of not less than one hundred pounds in a town containing, according to the census next preceding the preparation of the jury list, twenty thousand inhabitants and upwards, or rated or assessed to the poor rate or to the inhabited house duty on a value of not less than fifty pounds elsewhere, or who shall occupy premises other than a farm rated or assessed as aforesaid on a value of not less than one hundred pounds, or a farm rated or assessed as aforesaid on a value of not less than three hundred pounds, shall be qualified and liable to serve on special juries in every such county in England and Wales, and in London respectively.

7. So much of the said first section of the County Juries Act, 1825, as relates to the qualification of persons as jurors in Wales is hereby repealed, and it is hereby enacted, that the qualification of persons as jurors in Wales shall be the same as the qualification of persons as jurors in England.

8. Aliens having been domiciled in England or Wales for ten years or upwards, if in other respects duly qualified, shall be qualified and shall be liable to serve on juries or inquests in England and Wales as if they had been natural-born subjects of the Queen; but, save as aforesaid, no man not being a natural-born subject of the Queen shall be qualified to serve on juries or inquests in any court or on any occasion whatsoever.

9. The inhabitants of the city and liberty of Westminster shall, as heretofore, be exempt from serving on any jury at the sessions of the peace for the county of Middlesex.

The persons described in the schedule hereto shall be severally exempt as therein specified from being returned to serve and from serving upon any juries or inquests whatsoever, and their names shall not be inserted in the lists of the persons qualified and liable to serve on the same, but, save as aforesaid, no man otherwise qualified to serve on such juries or inquests shall be exempt from serving thereon, any enactment, prescription, charter, grant, or writ to the contrary notwithstanding.

10. Provided always, and it is hereby enacted, that no man who has been or shall be attainted of any treason or felony, or convicted of any crime that is infamous, unless he shall have obtained a free pardon, nor any man who is under outlawry, is or shall be qualified to serve on juries or inquests in any court or on any occasion whatsoever.

11. In making out the lists of persons within their respective parishes and townships qualified to serve as jurors, the overseers shall specify which of such persons are, in the judgment of such overseers, qualified as special jurors, and shall also specify in every case the nature of the qualification and also the occupation and the amount of the rating or assessment of every such person.

12. No person whose name shall be in the jury book as a juror shall be entitled to be excused from attendance on the ground of any disqualification or exemption other than illness not claimed by him at or before the revision of the list by the justices of the peace, and a notice to that effect shall be printed at the bottom of every jury list.

13. If any overseer, without reasonable excuse to be allowed by the justice or justices having cognizance of the case, insert in the list of persons qualified to serve as jurors prepared by him the name of any person whose name ought not to have been inserted therein, or omit therefrom the name of any person whose name ought not to have been omitted, he shall, on summary conviction, be liable to a penalty for each offence not exceeding forty shillings.

14. Upon completing the revision of the jury lists, the justices at petty sessions shall certify in writing that they have examined such lists, and that the same are, to the best of their knowledge and belief, true and proper lists of the special and common jurors; and the decision of such justices as to the qualifications of persons marked as special jurors in the lists so revised by them shall, as respects those lists, be final.

15. And whereas by the thirty-first section of "The County Juries Act, 1825," it is enacted, that "the sheriff of every county in England and Wales or his under sheriff, and the sheriffs of London or their secondary, shall, within ten days after the delivery of the jurors book for the current year to either of them, take from such book the names of all men who shall be described therein as esquires, persons of higher degree, or as bankers or merchants;" Be it enacted, that nothing in this said section contained shall be deemed to authorise the said sheriffs or any of them, or any under sheriff, or any secondary, to remove from the jurors book the name of any person by reason of his being therein described as an esquire or person of higher degree, or as a banker or merchant, nor shall the said sheriffs or any sheriff or under sheriff or secondary remove from the jurors book the name of any person by reason of his being otherwise qualified to serve on special juries.

16. In London and Middlesex, on the occasion of any sittings of the superior courts, or any of them, for the trial of issues, a sufficient number of special jurymen, not less than thirty for each court, shall be summoned to try the special jury causes triable at such sittings.

The said jurymen shall be summoned in pursuance of a precept under the hand of any one of the judges of the said superior courts in the same manner in all respects in which special jurymen are summoned in pursuance of precepts issued by the judges of assize.

The persons summoned in pursuance of such precept shall be the jury for the trial of special jury causes at such sittings in the said courts respectively, subject to such right of challenge as the parties shall be entitled to.

A printed panel of the jurors so summoned shall be made and kept, and a copy thereof delivered and annexed to the nisi prius record at the like time, in the same manner, and upon the same terms as are by law prescribed with reference to the panel of common jurors in the case of London and Middlesex.

Upon the trial the special jury shall be ballotted for and called in the order in which they are drawn from the box in the same manner as common jurors.

Any special jurymen summoned to serve in any one of the said superior courts shall be qualified and be liable, in case of necessity, to serve in any other of the said courts as if he had been originally summoned as one of the jurymen for the trial of special jury causes in such last-mentioned court.

17. The present practice of nominating and reducing special jurors in London and Middlesex shall cease to be followed as regards the trial of any cause at any of the said sittings of the said courts, subject to this proviso, that any of the said superior courts or any judge thereof may, if it seems expedient, order that a special jury be struck according to the present practice, and such order shall be a sufficient warrant for striking such jury and making a panel thereof for the trial of the particular cause.

18. In London and Middlesex, subject to any rules which may be made by any of the superior courts in that behalf, any party to any action triable at any of the aforesaid sittings of the superior courts shall be entitled to have the cause tried by a special jury upon the same conditions as would entitle him to have it so tried in any county other than London and Middlesex.

In London and Middlesex every court or judge shall have the same power of ordering that a cause be tried by a special jury as the like court or judge would have if the cause were tried in any county other than London and Middlesex.

19. The following regulations shall be enacted with respect to the summoning of jurors:

1. That no person shall be summoned to serve on any jury or inquest (except a grand jury) more than once in any one year, unless all the jurors upon the list shall have been already summoned to serve during such year: Provided that nothing herein contained shall prejudice the operation of any certificate granted under the County Juries Act, 1825, secs. 41 and 42:
2. No person shall be exempted from serving as a common juror by reason of his being on any special jurors list, or being qualified to serve as a grand juror:
3. No person shall be summoned or liable to serve as a juror in more than one court on the same day.

20. No juror shall be liable to any penalty for non-attendance on any jury unless the summons requiring him to attend be duly served six days at least before the day on which he is required to attend, but no longer period than such six days shall in any case be required between the service and such last-mentioned day.

21. It shall be lawful for any sheriff or other officer to whom any precept for summoning jurors shall be addressed, with the consent of the person or persons by whom such precept shall have been issued, to make regulations as to the attendance of jurors during the time for which they shall be summoned, and in particular as to the days on which, and the time during which, they are to attend.

Such regulations may be sent to any juror, together with the summons requiring him to attend on any jury, and when so sent shall be deemed to be part of such summons.

22. Jurors shall be entitled to the following remuneration for their services; that is to say,

Every special juror, when summoned for the purpose of trying special jury cases, at the rate of one pound one shilling for every day of his attendance.

The remuneration of a juror, when trying common jury cases, shall be at the rate of ten shillings for every day of his attendance.

The above-mentioned remuneration shall be paid by the parties to the causes to be tried, and for that purpose each of the said parties shall deposit such sum of money as may be determined by any rule of the court in which the cause is depending; and such deposit shall be made in such manner, at such time, and with such officer as the said court may prescribe.

23. Jurors, after having been sworn, may, in the discretion of the judge, be allowed at any time before giving their verdict the use of a fire when out of court, and be allowed reasonable refreshment, such refreshment to be procured at their own expense.

24. The judges of Her Majesty's superior courts of common law are hereby empowered by general orders to make rules, not inconsistent with this Act, for the purpose of carrying out the several provisions of this Act.

25. This Act shall not alter or affect the mode of procedure pursued in the making out of jury lists for the city of London, nor the provisions of the ninth and tenth Victoria, chapter ninety-five, section seventy-two.

Schedules.

An Act to facilitate the construction and to regulate the working of Tramways.
(9th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Preliminary.

- 1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Tramways Act, 1870."
- 2. This Act shall not extend to Ireland.

3. For the purposes of this Act, the terms herein-after mentioned shall have the meanings herein-after assigned to them; that is to say,

The terms "local authority" and "local rate" shall mean respectively the bodies of persons and rate named in the table in Part One of the schedule (A.) to this Act annexed:

The term "road" shall mean any carriageway being a public highway, and the carriageway of any bridge forming part of or leading to the same:

The term "road authority" shall mean, in the districts specified in the table in Part Two of the schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, the bodies of persons named in the same table, and elsewhere any local authority, board, town council, body corporate, commissioners, trustees, vestry, or other body or persons in whom a road as defined by this Act is vested, or who have the power to maintain or repair such road:

The term "district," in relation to a local authority or road authority, shall mean the area within the jurisdiction of such local authority or road authority:

The term "prescribed" shall mean prescribed by any rules made in pursuance of this Act:

The term "the Lands Clauses Acts" means, so far as the Provisional Order in which that term is used relates to England, The Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845; and, so far as the same relates to Scotland, The Lands Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845; together with, in each case, The Lands Clauses Consolidation Acts Amendment Act, 1860:

The term "two justices" shall, in addition to its ordinary signification, mean one stipendiary or police magistrate acting in any police court for the district.

PART I.

Provisional Orders authorising the construction of Tramways.

4. Provisional Orders authorising the construction of tramways in any district may be obtained by—

- (1.) The local authority of such district; or by—
- (2.) Any person, persons, corporation, or company, with the consent of the local authority of such district; or of the road authority of such district where such district is or forms part of a highway district formed under the provisions of "The Highway Acts:"

And any such local authority, person, persons, corporation, or company shall be deemed to be promoters of a tramway, and are in this Act referred to as "the promoters."

Application for a Provisional Order shall not be made by any local authority until such application shall be approved in the manner prescribed in Part III. of the schedule A. to this Act amended.

Where in any district there is a road authority distinct from the local authority, the consent of such road authority shall also be necessary in any case where power is sought to break up any road subject to the jurisdiction of such road authority, before any Provisional Order can be obtained.

5. Where it is proposed to lay down a tramway in two or more districts, and any local or road authority having jurisdiction in any of such districts does not consent thereto, the Board of Trade may, nevertheless, make a Provisional Order authorising the construction of such tramway if they are satisfied, after inquiry, that two thirds of the length of such tramway is proposed to be laid in a district or in districts the local and road authority or the local and road authorities of which district or districts do consent thereto; and in such case they shall make a special report stating the grounds upon which they have made such order.

6. The promoters intending to make an application for a Provisional Order shall proceed as follows:—

- (1.) In the months of October and November next before their application, or in one of those months, they shall publish notice of their intention to make such application by advertisement; and they shall, on or before the fifteenth day of the following month of December, serve notice of such intention, in accordance with the standing orders (if any) of both Houses of Parliament for the time being in force with respect to Bills for the construction of tramways:
- (2.) On or before the thirtieth day of the same month of November they shall deposit the documents described in Part Two of the same schedule, according to the regulations therein contained:
- (3.) On or before the twenty-third day of December in the same year they shall deposit the documents described in Part Three of the same schedule, according to the regulations therein contained:

All maps, plans, and documents required by this Act to be deposited for the purposes of any Provisional Order may be deposited with the persons and in the manner directed by the Act of the session of Parliament held in the seventh year of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth and the first year of Her present Majesty, intitled "An Act to compel clerks of "the peace for counties and other persons to "take the custody of such documents as shall "be directed to be deposited with them under "the standing orders of either House of Parliament;" and all the provisions of that Act shall apply accordingly.

7. The Board of Trade shall consider the application, and may, if they think fit, direct an inquiry in the district to which the same relates, or may otherwise inquire as to the propriety of proceeding upon such application, and they shall consider any objection thereto that may be lodged with them on or before such day as they from time to time appoint, and shall determine whether or not the promoters may proceed with the application.

8. Where it appears to the Board of Trade expedient and proper that the application should be granted, with or without addition or modification, or subject or not to any restriction or condition, the Board of Trade may settle and make a Provisional Order accordingly.

Every such Provisional Order shall empower the promoters therein specified to make the tramway upon the gauge and in manner therein described, and shall contain such provisions as (subject to the requirements of this Act) the Board of Trade, according to the nature of the application and the facts and circumstances of each case, think fit to submit to Parliament for confirmation in manner provided by this Act; but so that any such Provisional Order shall not contain any provision for empowering the promoters or any other person to acquire lands otherwise than by agreement, or to acquire any lands, even by agreement, except to an extent therein limited, or to construct a tramway elsewhere than along or across a road, or upon land taken by agreement.

9. Every tramway in a town which is hereafter authorised by Provisional Order shall be constructed and maintained as nearly as may be in the middle of the road; and no tramway shall be authorised by any Provisional Order to be so laid that for a distance of thirty feet or upwards a less space than nine feet and six inches shall intervene between the outside of the footpath on either side of the road and the nearest rail of the tramway if one third of the owners or one third of the occupiers of the houses, shops, or warehouses abutting upon the part of the road where such less space shall intervene as aforesaid shall in the prescribed manner and at the prescribed time express their dissent from any tramway being so laid.

10. Every such Provisional Order shall specify the nature of the traffic for which such tramway is to be used, and the tolls and charges which may be demanded and taken by the promoters in respect of the same, and shall contain such regulations relating to such traffic and such tolls and charges as the Board of Trade shall deem necessary and proper.

11. The costs of and connected with the preparation and making of each Provisional Order shall be paid by the promoters, and the Board of Trade may require the promoters to give security for such costs before they proceed with the Provisional Order.

12. After a Provisional Order is ready, and before the same is delivered by the Board of Trade, the promoters, unless they are a local authority, shall within the prescribed time and in the prescribed manner, and subject to the prescribed conditions as to interest, repayment, or forfeiture, pay, as a deposit, into the prescribed bank, the sum of money prescribed, which shall not be less than four pounds per centum on the amount of the estimate by the promoters of the expense of the construction of the tramway, or deposit in such bank any security of the prescribed nature the then value of which is not less than such sum of money.

13. When a Provisional Order has been made as aforesaid and delivered to the promoters, the promoters shall forthwith publish the same by deposit and advertisement, according to the regulations contained in Part Four of the schedule (B.) to this Act.

14. On proof to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade of the completion of such publication as aforesaid, the Board of Trade shall, as soon as they conveniently can after the expiration of seven days from the completion of such publication, procure a Bill to be introduced into either House of Parliament in relation to any Provisional Order which shall have been published as aforesaid not later than the twenty-fifth of April in any year, for an Act to confirm the Provisional Order, which shall be set out at length in the schedule to the Bill; and until confirmation, with or without amendment, by Act of Parliament, a Provisional Order under this Act shall not have any operation.

If while any such Bill is pending in either House of Parliament a petition is presented against any Provisional Order comprised therein, the Bill, so far as it relates to the order petitioned against, may be referred to a select committee, and the petitioner shall be allowed to appear and oppose as in the case of a Bill for a special Act.

The Act of Parliament confirming a Provisional Order under this Act shall be deemed a Public General Act.

15. The provisions of The Lands Clauses Acts shall be incorporated with every Provisional Order under this Act, save where the same are expressly varied or excepted by any such Provisional Order, and except as to the following provisions, namely,—

- (1.) With respect to the purchase and taking of lands otherwise than by agreement;
- (2.) With respect to the entry upon lands by the promoters of the undertaking.

For the purposes of such incorporation a Provisional Order under this Act shall be deemed the special Act.

16. The Board of Trade on the application of any promoters empowered by a Provisional Order may from time to time revoke, amend, extend, or vary such Provisional Order by a further Provisional Order.

Every application for such further Provisional Order shall be made in like manner and subject to the like conditions as the application for the former Provisional Order.

Every such further Provisional Order shall be made and confirmed in like manner in every respect as the former Provisional Order, and until such confirmation such further Provisional Order shall not have any operation.

17. Subject and according to the provisions of this Act, the Board of Trade may, on a joint application, or on two or more separate applications, settle and make a Provisional Order empowering two or more local authorities, respectively, jointly to construct the whole, or separately to construct parts, of a tramway, and jointly or separately to own the whole or parts thereof; and all the provisions of this Act which relate to the construction of tramways shall extend and apply to the construction of the whole and the separate parts of such tramway as last aforesaid; and the form of the Provisional Order may be adapted to the circumstances of the case.

18. If the promoters, empowered by any Provisional Order under this Act to make a tramway, do not, within two years from the date of the same, or within any shorter period prescribed therein, complete the tramway, and open it for public traffic; or,

If within one year from the date of the Provisional Order, or within such shorter time as is prescribed in the same, the works are not substantially commenced; or,

If the works having been commenced are suspended without a reason sufficient in the opinion of the Board of Trade to warrant such suspension;

the powers given by the Provisional Order to the promoters for constructing such tramway, executing such works, or otherwise in relation thereto, shall cease to be exercised, except as to so much of the same as is then completed, unless the time be prolonged by the special direction of the Board of Trade; and as to so much of the same as is then completed the Board of Trade may allow the said powers to continue and to be exercised if they shall think fit, but failing such permission the same shall cease to be exercised, and where such permission is withheld then so much of the said tramway as is then completed shall be deemed to be a tramway to which all the provisions of this Act relating to the discontinuance of tramways after proof of such discontinuance shall apply, and may be dealt with accordingly.

A notice purporting to be published by the Board of Trade in the London or Edinburgh Gazette, accordingly as the district to which it relates is situate in England or Scotland, to the effect that a tramway has not been completed and opened for public traffic, or that the works have not been substantially commenced, or that they have been suspended without sufficient reason, shall be conclusive evidence for the purposes of this section of such non-completion, non-commencement, or suspension.

19. When a tramway has been completed under the authority of a Provisional Order by any local authority, or where any local authority has under the provisions of this Act acquired possession of any tramway, such authority may, with the consent of the Board of Trade, and subject to the provisions of this Act, by lease, to be approved of by the Board of Trade, demise to any person, persons, corporation, or company the right of user by such person, persons, corporation, or company of the tramway, and of demanding and taking in respect of the same the tolls and charges authorised; or such authority may leave such tramway open to be used by the public, and may in respect of such user demand and take the tolls and charges authorised; but nothing in this Act contained shall authorise any local authority to place or run carriages upon such tramway, and to demand and take tolls and charges in respect of the use of such carriages.

Notice of the intention to make such lease shall be published by the local authority by advertisement, and a copy of such lease shall be deposited according to the regulations contained in Part I. of the Schedule (C.) to this Act annexed; and unless such notice is given, and such copy deposited, such lease shall not be approved of by the Board of Trade.

Every such lease shall be made for a term or for terms not exceeding in the whole twenty-one years.

On the determination of any lease made under this Act, the local authority may from time to time, with the consent of the Board of Trade, by lease, demise such rights for such further term or terms, not exceeding in any case twenty-one years, as the said Board may approve.

Every such lease shall imply a condition of re-entry if at any time after the making of the same the lessees discontinue the working of the tramway leased, or of any part thereof, for the space of three calendar months (such discontinuance not being occasioned by circumstances beyond the control of such lessees, for which purpose the want of sufficient funds shall not be considered a circumstance beyond their control).

The person, persons, corporation, or company to whom any such lease may be made are in this Act referred to as "lessees."

20. Where the local authority in any district are the promoters of any tramway, they shall pay all expenses incurred by them in applying for and obtaining a Provisional Order, and carrying into effect the purposes of such Provisional Order, out of the local rate, and any such expenses shall be deemed to be purposes for which such local rate may be made, and to which the same may be applied.

Where the local rate is limited by law to a certain amount, and is by reason of such limitation insufficient for the payment of such expenses, the Board of Trade may, by the Provisional Order, extend the limit of such local rate to such amount as they shall think fit, and prescribe for the payment of such expenses.

Such local authority may, for the purposes of such Provisional Order, borrow and take up at interest, on the credit of such local rate, any sums of money necessary for defraying any such expenses; and for the purpose of securing the repayment of any sums so borrowed, together with such interest as aforesaid, such local authority may mortgage to the persons by or on behalf of whom such sums are advanced such local rate; but the exercise of the above-mentioned power shall be subject to the following regulations:

- (1.) The money so borrowed shall not exceed such sum as may be sanctioned by the Board of Trade:
- (2.) The money may be borrowed for such time, not exceeding thirty years, as such local authority, with the sanction of the Board of Trade, shall determine; and, subject as aforesaid to the repayment within thirty years, such local authority may either pay off the moneys so borrowed by equal annual instalments, or they may in every year set apart as a sinking fund, and accumulate in the way of compound interest by investing the same in the purchase of exchequer bills or other government securities, such sum as will be sufficient to pay off the moneys so borrowed, or a part thereof, at such times as the local authority may determine.

The provisions of "The Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847," with respect to the mortgages to be executed by the Commissioners, shall apply to any mortgage executed under the foregoing provisions of this section, and for the purposes of such application the said provisions shall be incorporated with this Act.

For the purposes of such incorporation, the terms "the special Act," and "the Commissioners," shall be construed to mean respectively a Provisional Order under this Act, and the local authority.

Such local authority shall keep separate accounts of all moneys paid by them in applying for, obtaining, and carrying into effect any such Provisional Order, and in the repayment of moneys borrowed, and of all moneys received by them by way of rent or tolls in respect of the tramway authorised thereby.

When, after payment of all charges incurred under the authority of this Act, and necessary for giving effect to such Provisional Order, there shall be remaining in the hands of such local authority any of the moneys received by them by way of rent or tolls in respect of the tramway authorised by such Provisional Order, such moneys shall be applied by them to the purposes for which the local rate may be by them applied.

21. The Metropolitan Board of Works may, in order to raise money for the purpose of carrying into effect the purposes of any Provisional Order obtained by them, create additional stock, not exceeding in the whole three hundred thousand pounds, under "The Metropolitan Board of Works (Loans) Act, 1869," in like manner, and with the like sanction, in and with which they may create stock in order to raise money for the purposes of the Acts mentioned in the first schedule to that Act; and all the provisions of that Act shall apply as if that money were raised and that stock were created for the purposes of the last-mentioned Acts, with the exception that the money required for the purposes of any such Provisional Order may be borrowed by them in addition to the sum limited by section thirty-eight of "The Metropolitan Board of Works (Loans) Act, 1869."

PART II.

Construction of Tramways

22. Part II. and Part III. of this Act shall apply to every tramway which is hereafter authorised by any Provisional Order or Act of Parliament, and shall be incorporated with such Provisional Order or Act, and all the said provisions of this Act, save so far as they shall be expressly varied or excepted by any such Provisional Order or Act, shall apply to the undertaking authorised thereby, so far as the same shall be applicable to such undertaking, and shall, with the provisions of every other Act or part of any Act which shall be incorporated therewith, form part of the said Provisional Order or Act, and be construed therewith as forming one Provisional Order or Act, as the case may be.

23. In Part II. and Part III. of this Act, the term "special Act" shall be construed to mean any Act of Parliament which shall be hereafter passed or any Provisional Order authorising the construction of a tramway, and with which the said parts of this Act shall be incorporated as aforesaid.

24. The term "the promoters" shall mean any person, persons, corporation, company, or local authority authorised by special Act to construct a tramway.

25. Every tramway which is hereafter authorised by special Act shall be constructed on such gauge as may be prescribed by such special Act, and if no gauge is thereby prescribed, on such gauge as will admit of the use upon such tramways of carriages constructed for use upon railways of a gauge of four feet eight inches and half an inch, and shall be laid and maintained in such manner that the uppermost surface of the rail shall be on a level with the surface of the road, and shall not be opened for public traffic until the same has been inspected and certified to be fit for such traffic, in the prescribed manner.

26. The promoters from time to time, for the purpose of making, forming, laying down, maintaining, and renewing any tramway duly authorised, or any part or parts thereof respectively, may open and break up any road, subject to the following regulations:

1. They shall give to the road authority notice of their intention, specifying the time at which they will begin to do so, and the portion of road proposed to be opened or broken up, such notice to be given seven days at least before the commencement of the work:
2. They shall not open, or break up, or alter the level of any road, except under the superintendence and to the reasonable satisfaction of the road authority, unless that authority refuses or neglects to give such superintendence at the time specified in the notice, or discontinues the same during the work:
3. They shall pay all reasonable expenses to which the road authority is put on account of such superintendence:
4. They shall not, without the consent of the road authority, open or break up at any one time a greater length than one hundred yards of any road which does not exceed a quarter of a mile in length, and in the case of any road exceeding a quarter of a mile in length the promoters shall leave an interval of at least a quarter of a mile between any two places at which they may open or break up the road, and they shall not open or break up at any such place a greater length than one hundred yards.

Where the carriageway over any bridge forms part of or is a road within the jurisdiction of a road authority, but such bridge is vested in some person or persons, corporation, or company, distinct from such road authority, any work which the promoters may be empowered to construct, and which affects or in anywise interferes with the structural works of such bridge, shall be constructed under the superintendence (at the cost of the promoters) and to the reasonable satisfaction of such person, persons, corporation, or company, unless after notice to be given by the promoters seven days at least before the commencement of such work such superintendence is refused or withheld.

Where the carriageway in or upon which any tramway is proposed to be formed or laid down is crossed by any railway or tramway on the level, any work which the promoters may be empowered to construct, and which affects or in anywise interferes with such railway or tramway, or the traffic thereon, shall be constructed and maintained under the superintendence (at the cost of the promoters) and to the reasonable satisfaction of the person, corporation, or company owning such railway or tramway, unless after notice to be given by the promoters seven days at least before the commencement of such work such superintendence is refused or withheld.

27. When the promoters have opened or broken up any portion of any road, they shall be under the following further obligations; namely,

1. They shall, with all convenient speed, and in all cases within four weeks at the most (unless the road authority otherwise consents in writing) complete the work on account of which they opened or broke up the same, and (subject to the formation, maintenance, or renewal of the tramway) fill in the ground and make good the surface, and to the satisfaction of the road authority, restore the portion of the road to as good condition as that in which it was before it was opened or broken up, and clear away all surplus paving or metalling material or rubbish occasioned thereby:
2. They shall in the meantime cause the place where the road is opened or broken up to be fenced and watched, and to be properly lighted at night:
3. They shall bear or pay all reasonable expenses of the repair of the road for six months after the same is restored, as far as those expenses are increased by the opening or breaking up.

If the promoters aforesaid fail to comply in any respect with the provisions of the present section, they shall for every such offence (without prejudice to the enforcement of specific performance of the requirements of this Act or to any other remedy against them) be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds, and to a further penalty not exceeding five pounds for each day during which any such failure continues after the first day on which such penalty is incurred.

28. The promoters shall, at their own expense, at all times maintain and keep in good condition and repair, with such materials and in such manner as the road authority shall direct, and to their satisfaction, so much of any road whereon any tramway belonging to them is laid as lies between the rails of the tramway and (where two tramways are laid by the same promoters in any road at a distance of not more than four feet from each other) the portion of the road between the tramways, and in every case so much of the road as extends eighteen inches beyond the rails of and on each side of any such tramway. If the promoters abandon their undertaking, or any part of the same, and take up any tramway or any part of any tramway belonging to them, they shall with all convenient speed, and in all cases within six weeks at the most (unless the road authority otherwise consents in writing), fill in the ground and make good the surface, and, to the satisfaction of the road authority, restore the portion of the road upon which such tramway was laid to as good a condition as that in which it was before such tramway was laid thereon, and clear away all surplus paving or metalling material or rubbish occasioned by such work; and they shall in the meantime cause the place where the road is opened or broken up to be fenced and watched, and to be properly lighted at night: Provided always, that if the promoters fail to comply with the provisions of this section, the road authority, if they think fit, may themselves at any time, after seven days notice to the promoters, open and break up the road, and do the works necessary for the repair and maintenance or restoration of the road, to the extent in this section above mentioned, and the expense incurred by the road authority in so doing shall be repaid to them by the promoters.

29. The road authority on the one hand and the promoters on the other hand may from time to time enter into and carry into effect, and from time to time alter, renew, or vary, contracts, agreements, or arrangements with respect to the paving and keeping in repair of the whole or any portion of the roadway of any road on which the promoters shall lay any tramway, and the proportion to be paid by either of them of the expense of such paving and keeping in repair.

30. For the purpose of making, forming, laying down, maintaining, repairing, or renewing any of their tramways, the promoters may from time to time, where and as far as it is necessary, or may appear expedient for the purpose of preventing frequent interruption of the traffic by repairs or works in connexion with the same, alter the position of any mains or pipes for the supply of gas or water, or any tube, wires, or apparatus for telegraphic or other purposes, subject to the provisions of this Act, and also subject to the following restrictions; (that is to say,)

1. Before laying down a tramway in a road in which any mains or pipes, tubes, wires, or apparatus may be laid, the promoters shall, whether they contemplate altering the position of any such mains or pipes, wires, or apparatus, or not, give seven days notice to the company, persons, or person to whom such mains or pipes, tubes, wires, or apparatus may belong or by whom they are controlled, of their intention to lay down or alter the tramway, and shall at the same time deliver a plan and section of the proposed work. If it should appear to any such company or person that the construction of the tramway as proposed would endanger any such main or pipe, tube, wire, or apparatus, or interfere with or impede the supply of water or gas or the telegraphic or other communication, such company or person (as the case may be) may give notice to the promoters to lower or otherwise alter the position of the said mains or pipes, tubes, wires, or apparatus in such manner as may be considered necessary, and any difference as to the necessity of any such lowering or alteration shall be settled in manner provided by this Act for the settlement of differences between the promoters and other companies or persons, and all alterations to be made under this section shall be made with as little detriment and inconvenience to the company or person to whom such mains or pipes, tubes, wires, or apparatus may belong, or by whom the same are controlled, or to the inhabitants of the district, as the circumstances will admit, and under the superintendence of a surveyor or engineer if they or he think fit, and after receiving not less than forty-eight hours notice for that purpose, the promoters are hereby required to give:
2. The promoters shall not remove or displace any of the mains or pipes, valves, syphons, plugs, tubes, wires, or apparatus, or works belonging to or controlled by such company or person, or do any thing to impede the passage of water or gas, or the telegraphic or other communication, into or through such mains or pipes, without the consent of such company, person, or in any other manner than such company or person shall approve, until good and sufficient mains, pipes, valves, syphons, plugs, and other works necessary or proper for continuing the supply of water or gas or telegraphic or other communication, as sufficiently as the same was supplied by the mains or pipes, tubes, wires, or apparatus proposed to be removed or displaced, shall at the expense of the promoters have been first made and laid down in lieu thereof and ready for use, and to the satisfaction of the surveyor or engineer of such water or gas or other company, or of such person, or, in case of disagreement between such surveyor or engineer and the promoters, as an engineer appointed by the Board of Trade shall direct:

3. The promoters shall not lay down any such pipes contrary to the regulations of any Act of Parliament relating to such water or gas or other company, or relating to telegraphs:

4. The promoters shall make good all damage done by them to property belonging to or controlled by any such company or person, and shall make full compensation to all parties for any loss or damage which they may sustain by reason of any interference with such property, or with the private service pipes of any person supplied by any such company or person with water or gas:

5. If by any such operations as aforesaid the promoters interrupt the supply of water or gas in or through any main or main pipe they shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds for every day upon which such supply shall be so interrupted.

31. Where in any district any tramway or any work connected therewith interferes with any sewer, drain, watercourse, subway, defence, or work in such district, or in any way affects the sewerage or drainage of such district, the promoters shall not commence any tramway or work until they shall have given to the proper authority fourteen days previous notice in writing of their intention to commence the same, by leaving such notice at the principal office of such authority with all necessary particulars relating thereto, nor until such authority shall have signified their approval of the same, unless such authority do not signify their approval, disapproval, or other directions within fourteen days after service of the said notice and particulars as aforesaid, and the promoters shall comply with and conform to all reasonable directions and regulations of the said authority in the execution of the said works, and shall provide by new, altered, or substituted works, in such manner as such authority shall reasonably require, for the proper protection of and for preventing injury or impediment to the sewers and works herein-before referred to, by or by reason of the tramways, and shall save harmless the said authority against all and every the expense to be occasioned thereby; and all such works shall be done under the direction, superintendence, and control of the engineer or other officer or officers of the said authority, at the reasonable costs, charges, and expenses in all respects of the promoters; and when any new, altered, or substituted work as aforesaid, or any works or defence connected therewith, shall be completed by or at the costs, charges, or expenses of the promoters, under the provisions of this Act, the same shall thereafter be as fully and completely under the direction, jurisdiction, and control of the said authority and be maintained by them as any sewers or works.

32. Nothing in this Act shall take away or abridge any power to open or break up any road along or across which any tramway is laid, or any other power vested in any local authority or road authority for any of the purposes for which such authority is respectively constituted, or in any company, body, or person for the purpose of laying down, repairing, altering, or removing any pipe for the supply of gas or water, or any tubes, wires, or apparatus for telegraphic or other purposes, but in the exercise of such power every such local authority, road authority, company, body, or person shall be subject to the following restrictions; (that is to say.)

1. They shall cause as little detriment or inconvenience to the promoters and lessees as circumstances admit:

2. Before they commence any work whereby the traffic on the tramway will be interrupted they shall (except in cases of urgency, in which cases no notice shall be necessary) give to the promoters and lessees, if there be any, notice of their intention to commence such work, specifying the time at which they will begin to do so, such notice to be given eighteen hours at least before the commencement of the work:

3. They shall not be liable to pay to the promoters or lessees any compensation for injury done to the tramway by the execution of such work, or for loss of traffic occasioned thereby, or for the reasonable exercise of the powers so vested in them as aforesaid:

4. Whenever for the purpose of enabling them to execute such work the local authority or the road authority shall so require, the promoters or lessees shall either stop traffic on the tramway to which the notice shall refer, where it would otherwise interfere with such work, or shore up and secure the same at their own risk and cost during the execution of the work there: Provided that such work shall always be completed by the local authority or the road authority, as the case may be, with all reasonable expedition:

5. Any company, body, or person shall not execute such work so far as it immediately affects the tramway except under the superintendence of the promoters, unless they refuse or neglect to give such superintendence at the time specified in the notice for the commencement of the work or discontinue the same during the progress of the work; and they shall execute such work at their own expense, and to the reasonable satisfaction of the promoters: Provided that any additional expense imposed upon them by reason of the existence of the tramway in any road or place where any such mains, pipes, tubes, wires, or apparatus shall have been laid before the construction of such tramway shall be borne by the promoters.

33. If any difference arises between the promoters or lessees on the one hand and any local authority or road authority, or any gas or water company, or any company, body, or person to whom any sewer, drain, tube, wires, or apparatus for telegraphic or other purposes may belong, or any other company, on the other hand, with respect to any interference or control exercised, or claimed to be exercised, by them or him, or on their or his behalf, or by the promoters or lessees by virtue of this Act, in relation to any tramway or work, or in relation to any work or proceeding of the local authority, road authority, body, company, or person, or with respect to the propriety of or the mode of execution of any work relating to any tramway, or with respect to the amount of any compensation to be made by or to the promoters or lessees, or on the question whether any work is such as ought reasonably to satisfy the local authority, road authority, body, company, or person concerned, or with respect to any other subject or thing regulated by or comprised in this Act, the matter in difference shall (unless otherwise specially provided by this Act) be settled by an engineer or other fit person nominated as referee by the Board of Trade on the application of either party, and the expenses of the reference shall be borne and paid as the referee directs.

PART III.

GENERAL PROVISIONS.

Carriages.

34. The promoters of tramways authorised by special Act and their lessees may use on their tramways carriages with flange wheels, or wheels suitable only to run on the rail prescribed by such Act; and, subject to the provisions of such special Act and of this Act, the promoters and their lessees shall have the exclusive use of their tramways for carriages with flange wheels or other wheels suitable only to run on the prescribed rail.

All carriages used on any tramway shall be moved by the power prescribed by the special Act, and where no such power is prescribed, by animal power only.

No carriage used on any tramway which is hereafter authorised by special Act shall extend beyond the outer edge of the wheels of such carriage more than eleven inches on each side.

Licenses to use Tramways.

35. If at any time after any tramway or part of any tramway shall have been for three years opened for public traffic in any district it shall be represented in writing to the Board of Trade by the local authority of such district or by twenty inhabitant ratepayers of such district, or by the road authority of any road in which such tramway or part of a tramway is laid, that the public are deprived of the full benefit of the tramway, the Board of Trade may (if they consider that, prima facie, the case is one for inquiry) direct an inquiry by a referee under this Act into the truth of the representation, and if the referee reports that the truth of the representation has been proved to his satisfaction, the Board may from time to time grant licenses to any company or person to use such tramway in addition to the promoters or their lessees, for such traffic as is authorised by the special Act, with carriages to be approved by the Board, subject to the following provisions, conditions, and restrictions; that is to say,

1. The license shall be for any period not less than one year nor more than three years from the date of the license, but shall be renewable by the Board, if they upon inquiry think fit:
2. The license shall be to use the whole of such tramway for the time being opened for public traffic, or such part or parts of such tramway as the Board, having reference to the cause for granting the license, shall think right:
3. The license shall direct the number of carriages which the licensee or licensees shall run upon such tramway, and the mode in which and times at which such carriages shall be run :

4. The licensee shall specify the tolls to be paid to the promoters or to their lessees by the licensee or licensees for the use of the tramways :
5. The licensee or licensees, and their officers and servants, shall permit one person duly authorised for that purpose by the promoters, or by their lessees, to ride free of charge in or upon each carriage of the licensee or licensees run upon the tramways for the whole or any part of the journey :
6. The Board of Trade may at any time after the granting of any license revoke, alter, or modify the same for good cause shown to them.

36. If on demand any licensee fail to pay the tolls due in respect of any passengers carried in any carriage it shall be lawful for the promoters or their lessees, to whom the same are payable, to detain and sell such carriage, or if the same shall have been removed from the tramway or premises of such promoters or lessees, to detain and sell any other carriages on such tramway or premises belonging to such licensee, and out of the moneys arising from such sale to retain the tolls payable as aforesaid, and all charges and expenses of such detention and sale, rendering the overplus (if any) of such moneys and such of the carriages as shall remain unsold to the person entitled thereto.

37. Every licensee shall on demand give to an officer or servant authorised in that behalf by the promoters or their lessees entitled to be paid tolls by such licensee, an exact account in writing signed by such licensee of the number of passengers conveyed by any and every carriage used by him on the tramways.

38. If any such licensee fails to give such account to such officer or servant demanding the same as aforesaid, or if any such licensee with intent to avoid the payment of any tolls gives a false account, he shall for every such offence forfeit to the promoters, or to their lessees entitled to be paid tolls by such licensee, a sum not exceeding five pounds, and such penalty shall be in addition to any tolls payable in respect of the passengers carried by any such carriage.

39. If any dispute arise concerning the amount of the tolls due to the promoters or to their lessees from any licensee, or concerning the charges occasioned by any detention or sale of any carriage under the provisions herein contained, the same shall be settled in England by two justices, and in Scotland by the sheriff or two justices, and it shall be lawful for the promoters or their lessees in the meanwhile to detain the carriage, or (if the case so require) the proceeds of the sale thereof.

40. Every licensee shall be answerable for any trespass or damage done by his carriages or horses, or by any of the servants or persons employed by him, to or upon the tramway, or to or upon the property of any other person, and, without prejudice to the right of action against the licensee or any other person, every such servant or other person may lawfully be convicted of such trespass or damage in England before two justices, and in Scotland before the sheriff or two justices, either by the confession of the party offending or by the oath of some credible witness; and upon such conviction every such licensee shall pay to the promoters, lessees, or persons injured, as the case may be, the damage, to be ascertained by such justices, so that the same do not exceed fifty pounds.

Discontinuance of Tramways.

41. If at any time after the opening of any tramway in any district for traffic the promoters discontinue the working of such tramway, or of any part thereof, for the space of three calendar months (such discontinuance not being occasioned by circumstances beyond the control of such promoters, for which purpose the want of sufficient funds shall not be considered a circumstance beyond their control), and such discontinuance is proved to the satisfaction of the Board of Trade, the said Board, if they think fit, may by order declare that the powers of the promoters in respect of such tramway or the part thereof so discontinued shall, from the date of such order, be at an end, and thereupon the said powers of the promoters shall cease and determine, unless the same are purchased by the local authority in manner by this Act provided. Where any such order has been made, the road authority of such district may at any time after the expiration of two months from the date of such order, under the authority of a certificate to that effect by the Board of Trade, remove the tramway or part of the tramway so discontinued, and the promoters shall pay to the road authority the cost of such removal and of the making good of the road by the road authority, such cost to be certified by the clerk for the time being, or by some other authorised officer of the road authority, whose certificate shall be final and conclusive; and if the promoters fail to pay the amount so certified within one calendar month after delivery to them of such certificate or a copy thereof, the road authority may, without any previous notice to the promoters (but without prejudice to any other remedy which they may have for the recovery of the amount), sell and dispose of the materials of the tramway or part of tramway removed, either by public auction or private sale, and for such sum or sums, and to such person or persons, as the road authority may think fit, and may out of the proceeds of such sale pay and reimburse themselves the amount of the cost certified as aforesaid and of the cost of sale, and the balance (if any) of the proceeds of the sale shall be paid over by the road authority to the promoters.

Insolvency of Promoters.

42. If at any time after the opening of any tramway in any district for traffic, it appears to the local authority or the road authority of such district that the promoters of such tramway are insolvent, so that they are unable to maintain such tramway, or work the same with advantage to the public, and such road authority makes a representation to that effect to the Board of Trade, the Board of Trade may direct an inquiry by a referee into the truth of the representation, and if the referee shall find that the promoters are so insolvent as aforesaid, the Board of Trade may, by order, declare that the powers of the promoters shall, at the expiration of six calendar months from the making of the order, be at an end, and the powers of the promoters shall cease and determine at the expiration of the said period, unless the same are purchased by the local authority in manner by this Act provided; and thereupon such road authority may remove the tramway in like manner and subject to the same provisions as to the payment of the costs of such removal, and to the same remedy for recovery of such costs, in every respect as in cases of removal under the next preceding section.

Purchase of Tramways.

43. Where the promoters of a tramway in any district are not the local authority, the local authority, if, by resolution passed at a special meeting of the members constituting such local authority, they so decide, may within six months after the expiration of a period of twenty-one years from the time when such promoters were empowered to construct such tramway, and within six months after the expiration of every subsequent period of seven years, or within three months after any order made by the Board of Trade under either of the two next preceding sections, with the approval of the Board of Trade, by notice in writing require such promoters to sell, and thereupon such promoters shall sell to them their undertaking, or so much of the same as is within such district, upon terms of paying the then value (exclusive of any allowance for past or future profits of the undertaking, or any compensation for compulsory sale, or other consideration whatsoever) of the tramway, and all lands, buildings, works, materials, and plant of the promoters suitable to and used by them for the purposes of their undertaking within such district, such value to be, in case of difference determined by an engineer or other fit person nominated as referee by the Board of Trade on the application of either party, and the expenses of the reference to be borne and paid as the referee directs. And when any such sale has been made, all the rights, powers, and authorities of such promoters in respect to the undertaking sold, or where any order has been made by the Board of Trade under either of the next preceding sections, all the rights, powers, and authorities of such promoters previous to the making of such order in respect to the undertaking sold, shall be transferred to, vested in, and may be exercised by the authority to whom the same has been sold, in like manner as if such tramway was constructed by such authority under the powers conferred upon them by a Provisional Order under this Act, and in reference to the same they shall be deemed to be the promoters.

No such resolution shall be valid unless a month's previous notice of the meeting, and of the purpose thereof, has been given in manner, in which notices of meetings of such local authority are usually given, nor unless two thirds of the members constituting such local authority are present and vote at the meeting, and a majority of those present and voting concur in the resolution; provided that if in Scotland the local authority be the road trustees, it shall not be necessary that two thirds of such trustees shall be present at the meeting, but the resolution shall not be valid unless two thirds of the members present vote in favour of such resolution, and unless the said resolution is confirmed in like manner at another meeting called as aforesaid, and held not less than three weeks and not more than six weeks thereafter; and it shall be lawful for the chairman of any such meeting, with the consent of a majority of the members present, to adjourn the same from time to time.

The local authority in any district may pay the purchase money and all expenses incurred by them in the purchase of any undertaking under the authority of this section out of the like rate, and shall have the like powers to borrow on the security of the same as if such expenses were incurred in applying for, obtaining, and carrying into effect any Provisional Order obtained by them under this Act.

Where the local rate is limited by law to a certain amount, and is by reason of such limitation insufficient for the payment of such purchase money and expenses, the Board of Trade may by Provisional Order extend the limit of such local rate to such amount as they shall think fit and prescribe for the payment of such purchase money and expenses.

Every such Provisional Order shall be confirmed in like manner as a Provisional Order under the authority of Part I. of this Act, and until such confirmation such Provisional Order shall not have any operation.

Subject and according to the preceding provisions of this section two or more local authorities may jointly purchase any undertaking or so much of the same as is within their districts.

44. Where any tramway in any district has been opened for traffic for a period of six months the promoters may, with the consent of the Board of Trade, sell their undertaking to any person, persons, corporation, or company, or to the local authority of such district; and when any such sale has been made all the rights, powers, authorities, obligations, and liabilities of such promoters in respect to the undertaking sold shall be transferred to, vested in, and may be exercised by, and shall attach to the person, persons, corporation, company, or local authority to whom the same has been sold, in like manner as if such tramway was constructed by such person, persons, corporation, company, or local authority under the powers conferred upon them by special Act, and in reference to the same they shall be deemed to be the promoters.

Provided always, that a local authority shall not purchase any undertaking under the provisions of this section unless they shall decide to make such purchase by resolution passed at a special meeting of the members constituting such local authority, which resolution shall be made in the same manner and shall be subject to the same conditions as to validity as resolutions made in regard to the purchases by the next preceding section authorised.

Where any purchase is made by any local authority under the provisions of this section, such local authority may pay the purchase money and all expenses incurred by them in making such purchase out of the like funds, and for such purposes shall have all and the like powers and be subject to all the like conditions as if such purchase were made under the authority of the next preceding section.

Tolls.

45. The promoters or lessees of a tramway authorised by special Act may demand and take, in respect of such tramway, tolls and charges not exceeding the sums specified in such special Act, subject and according to the regulations therein specified. A list of all the tolls and charges authorised to be taken shall be exhibited in a conspicuous place inside and outside each of the carriages used upon the tramways.

Byelaws.

46. Subject to the provisions of the special Act authorising any tramway and this Act,

The local authority of any district in which the same is laid down may, from time to time, make regulations as to the following matters:

The rate of speed to be observed in travelling upon the tramway:

The distances at which carriages using the tramway shall be allowed to follow one after the other:

The stopping of carriages using the tramway:

The traffic on the road in which the tramway is laid.

The promoters of any tramway and their lessees may from time to time make regulations,—

For preventing the commission of any nuisance in or upon any carriage, or in or against any premises belonging to them:

For regulating the travelling in or upon any carriage belonging to them.

And for better enforcing the observance of all or any of such regulations, it shall be lawful for such local authority and promoters respectively to make byelaws for all or any of the aforesaid purposes, and from time to time repeal or alter such byelaws, and make new byelaws, provided that such byelaws be not repugnant to the laws of that part of the United Kingdom where the same are to have effect.

Notice of the making of any byelaw under the provisions of this Act shall be published by the local authority or the promoters making the same by advertisement, according to the regulations contained in Part II. of the schedule (C.) to this Act annexed, and unless such notice is published in manner aforesaid such byelaw shall be disallowed by the Board of Trade.

No such byelaw shall have any force or effect which shall be disallowed by the Board of Trade within two calendar months after a true copy of such byelaw shall have been laid before the Board, and a true copy of every such proposed byelaw shall, not less than two calendar months before such byelaw shall come into operation, be sent to the Board of Trade, and shall be delivered to the promoters of such tramway if the same was made by the local authority, and to such local authority if made by the promoters.

47. Any such byelaw may impose reasonable penalties for offences against the same, not exceeding forty shillings for each offence, with or without further penalties for continuing offences, not exceeding for any continuing offence ten shillings for every day during which the offence continues; but all byelaws shall be so framed as to allow in every case part only of the maximum penalty being ordered to be paid.

48. The local authority shall have the like power of making and enforcing rules and regulations, and of granting licenses with respect to all carriages using the tramways, and to all drivers, conductors, and other persons having charge of or using the same, and to the standings for the same, as they are for the time being entitled to make, enforce, and grant with respect to hackney carriages, and the drivers and other persons having the charge thereof, and to the standings for the same in the streets and district of or under the control of the local authority: Provided always, that in any district in which any of the powers aforesaid in relation to hackney carriages and the matters aforesaid in connexion therewith are vested in any authority other than the local authority of such district, such authority shall have and may exercise the powers by this section conferred upon the local authority.

Offences.

49. If any person wilfully obstructs any person acting under the authority of any promoters in the lawful exercise of their powers in setting out or making, forming, laying down, repairing, or renewing a tramway, or defaces or destroys any mark made for the purposes of setting out the line of the tramway, or damages or destroys any property of any promoters, lessees, or licensees, he shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

50. If any person, without lawful excuse (the proof whereof shall lie on him), wilfully does any of the following things; (namely,)

Interferes with, removes, or alters any part of a tramway or of the works connected therewith;

Places or throws any stones, dirt, wood, refuse, or other material on any part of a tramway;

Does or causes to be done anything in such manner as to obstruct any carriage using a tramway, or to endanger the lives of persons therein or thereon;

Or knowingly aids or assists in the doing of any such thing;

he shall for every such offence be liable (in addition to any proceedings by way of indictment or otherwise to which he may be subject) to a penalty not exceeding five pounds.

51. If any person travelling or having travelled in any carriage on any tramway avoids or attempts to avoid payment of his fare, or if any person having paid his fare for a certain distance knowingly and wilfully proceeds in any such carriage beyond such distance, and does not pay the additional fare for the additional distance, or attempts to avoid payment thereof, or if any person knowingly and wilfully refuses or neglects on arriving at the point to which he has paid his fare to quit such carriage, every such person shall, for every such offence, be liable to a penalty not exceeding forty shillings.

52. It shall be lawful for any officer or servant of the promoters or lessees of any tramway, and all persons called by him to his assistance, to seize and detain any person discovered either in or after committing or attempting to commit any such offence as in the next preceding section is mentioned, and whose name or residence is unknown to such officer or servant, until such person can be conveniently taken before a justice, or until he be otherwise discharged by due course of law.

53. No person shall be entitled to carry or to require to be carried on any tramway any goods which may be of a dangerous nature, and if any person send by any tramway any such goods without distinctly marking their nature on the outside of the package containing the same, or otherwise giving notice in writing to the book-keeper or other servant with whom the same are left at the time of such sending, he shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds for every such offence, and it shall be lawful for such promoters or lessees to refuse to take any parcel that they may suspect to contain goods of a dangerous nature, or require the same to be opened to ascertain the fact.

54. If any person (except under a lease from or by agreement with the promoters, or under license from the Board of Trade, as by this Act provided,) uses a tramway or any part thereof with carriages having flange wheels or other wheels suitable only to run on the rail of such tramway, such person shall for every such offence be liable to a penalty not exceeding twenty pounds.

Miscellaneous.

55. The promoters or lessees, as the case may be, shall be answerable for all accidents, damages, and injuries happening through their act or default, or through the act or default of any person in their employment by reason or in consequence of any of their works or carriages, and shall save harmless all road and other authorities, companies, or bodies, collectively and individually, and their officers and servants, from all damages and costs in respect of such accidents, damages, and injuries.

56. All tolls, penalties, and charges under this Act, or under any bylaw made in pursuance of this Act, may be recovered and enforced as follows; in England before two justices of the peace in manner directed by the Act of the session of the eleventh and twelfth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter forty-three, intituled "An Act to facilitate the performance of the duties of justices of the peace out of sessions within England and Wales with respect to summary convictions and orders," and any Act amending the same, and in Scotland before the sheriff or two justices as penalties under The Railways Clauses Consolidation (Scotland) Act, 1845.

57. Notwithstanding anything in this Act contained, the promoters of any tramway shall not acquire or be deemed to acquire any right other than that of user of any road along or across which they lay any tramway, nor shall anything contained in this Act exempt the promoters of any tramway laid along any turnpike road, or any other person using such tramway, from the payment of such tolls as may be levied in respect of the use of such road by the trustees thereof.

58. The trustees of any turnpike road and the promoters of any tramway proposed to be laid or laid along the same may, with the approval of the Board of Trade, enter into agreements with each other for the payment of a composition to such trustees in respect of the user of such road for such tramway and the conveyance of traffic thereon, and may with the same approval alter such agreements from time to time.

59. Nothing in this Act shall limit or interfere with the rights of any owner, lessee, or occupier of any mines or minerals lying under or adjacent to any road along or across which any tramway shall be laid to work such mines and minerals, nor shall any such owner, lessee, or occupier be liable to make good or pay compensation for any damage which may be occasioned to such tramway by the working in the usual and ordinary course of their mines or minerals.

60. Nothing in this Act shall take away or affect any power which any road authority, or the owners, commissioners, undertakers, or lessees of any railway, tramway, or inland navigation, may have by law to widen, alter, divert, or improve any road, railway, tramway, or inland navigation.

61. Nothing in this Act shall limit the powers of the local authority or police in any district to regulate the passage of any traffic along or across any road along or across which any tramways are laid down, and such authority or police may exercise their authority as well on as off the tramway, and with respect as well to the traffic of the promoters or of lessees as to the traffic of other persons.

62. Nothing in this Act or in any byelaw made under this Act shall take away or abridge the right of the public to pass along or across every or any part of any road along or across which any tramway is laid, whether on or off the tramway, with carriages not having flange wheels or wheels suitable only to run on the rail of the tramway.

63. Every inquiry which by this Act the Board of Trade are empowered to make or direct shall be made in accordance with the following provisions:

1. The inquiry shall be held in public before an officer to be appointed in that behalf by the Board, herein-after called the referee, and whose appointment shall be by writing, which shall specify all the matters referred to him:
2. Ten days notice at the least shall be given by the referee to the parties upon whose representation the Board of Trade shall have directed the inquiry, of the time and place at which the inquiry is to be commenced:
3. The inquiry shall be commenced at the time and place so appointed, and the referee may adjourn the inquiry from time to time as may be necessary to such time and place as he may think fit:
4. The referee by summons shall, on the application of any party interested in the inquiry, require the attendance before himself, at a place and time to be mentioned in the summons, of any person to be examined as a witness before him, and every person summoned shall attend the referee, and answer all questions touching the matter to be inquired into, and any person who wilfully disobeys any such summons or refuses to answer any question put to him by such referee for the purposes of the said inquiry shall be liable to a penalty not exceeding five pounds: Provided always, that no person shall be required to attend in obedience to any such summons unless the reasonable charges of his attendance shall have been paid or tendered to him, and no person shall be required in any case in obedience to any such summons to travel more than ten miles from his place of abode:
5. The referee may and shall administer an oath, or an affirmation where an affirmation in lieu of an oath would be admitted in a court of justice, to any person tendered or summoned as a witness on the inquiry:
6. Any person who upon oath or affirmation wilfully gives false evidence before the referee shall be deemed guilty of perjury:
7. The referee shall make his report to the Board of Trade in writing, and shall deliver copies of the report upon request to all or any of the parties to the inquiry.

64. The Board of Trade may from time to time make, and, when made, may rescind, annul, or add to, rules with respect to the following matters :

1. The proceedings to be had before the Board under this Act :
2. The payment of money or lodgment of securities by way of deposits, the repayment and forfeiture of the same, the investment of the same, the amount and payment of interest or dividends from time to time accruing due on such deposits :
3. The plans and sections of any works to be deposited by promoters under this Act :

4. As to any other matter of thing in respect of which it may be expedient to make rules for the purpose of carrying this Act into execution.

Any rules made in pursuance of this section shall be deemed to be within the powers conferred by this Act, and shall be of the same force as if enacted in this Act, and shall be judicially noticed.

Any rules made in pursuance of this section shall be laid before Parliament within three weeks after they are made, if Parliament be then sitting, and if Parliament be not then sitting, within three weeks after the beginning of the then next session of Parliament.

PART III.

Approval of Application by Local Authority for a Provisional Order.

The approval of any intended application for a Provisional Order by a local authority shall be in manner following; that is to say,

A resolution approving of the intention to make such application shall be passed at a special meeting of the members constituting such local authority.

Such special meeting shall not be held unless a month's previous notice of the same, and of the purpose thereof, has been given in manner in which notices of meetings of such local authority are usually given.

Such resolution shall not be passed unless two thirds of the members constituting such local authority are present and vote at such special meeting and a majority of those present and voting concur in the resolution; provided that if in Scotland the local authority be the road trustees, it shall not be necessary that two thirds of such trustees shall be present at the meeting, but the resolution shall not be valid unless two thirds of the members present vote in favour of such resolution, and unless the said resolution is confirmed in like manner at another meeting called as aforesaid and held not less than three weeks and not more than six weeks thereafter. Where any such resolution relating to the Metropolis as the same is defined in Part I. of this schedule, or to any district in Scotland of which road trustees are the local authority, has been passed in manner aforesaid, the intended application to which such resolution relates shall be deemed to be approved.

An Act for further regulation of Duties of Postage, and for other purposes relating to the Post Office.

(9th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as The Post Office Act, 1870.

2. In this Act—

“The Treasury” means the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury or two of them:

“Treasury warrant” means a warrant under the hands of the Treasury:

“The Postmaster General” means Her Majesty's Postmaster General:

“Post Office regulations” means regulations made by the Postmaster General.

3. For the purposes of this Act, the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man shall be deemed parts of the United Kingdom.

4. The enactments described in the first schedule to this Act shall, from and immediately after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy, be repealed; but that repeal shall not affect the past operation of any of those enactments, or the force or operation of any Treasury warrant or Post Office regulations made, or the validity or invalidity of anything done or suffered, or any right, title, obligation, or liability accrued, before that repeal takes effect; nor shall this Act interfere with the prosecution or institution of any proceeding in respect of any right, title, obligation, or liability accrued under, or any offence committed against, or any penalty or forfeiture incurred under, any of those enactments before that repeal takes effect; and section four of and schedule (A.) to the Act first described in the first schedule to this Act, or either of them, shall not be deemed to contain or affect the definition of a newspaper for the purposes of this Act or of any other enactment regulating the sending of newspapers by post.

5. Where any person is possessed of any newspaper stamps made useless by this Act, the Commissioners of Inland Revenue, on application within six months after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy, may cancel and make allowance for the same as in case of spoiled stamps.

6. Any publication coming within the following description shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed a newspaper, (that is to say,) any publication consisting wholly or in great part of political or other news, or of articles relating thereto, or to other current topics, with or without advertisements; subject to these conditions—

That it be printed and published in the United Kingdom;

That it be published in numbers at intervals of not more than seven days;

That it be printed on a sheet or sheets unstitched;

That it have the full title and date of publication printed at the top of the first page, and the whole or part of the title and the date of publication printed at the top of every subsequent page.

And the following shall, for the purposes of this Act, be deemed a supplement to a newspaper, (that is to say,) a publication consisting wholly or in great part of matter like that of a newspaper, or of advertisements, printed on a sheet or sheets or a piece or pieces of paper, unstitched, or consisting wholly or in part of engravings, prints, or lithographs illustrative of articles in the newspaper; such publication in every case being published with the newspaper, and having the title and date of publication of the newspaper printed at the top of every page, or at the top of every sheet or side on which any such engraving, print, or lithograph appears.

7. The proprietor or printer of any newspaper within the description aforesaid, and the proprietor or printer of any publication which, regard being had to the proportion of advertisements to other matter therein, is not within the description aforesaid, but which was stamped as a newspaper before the passing of the Act lastly mentioned in the first schedule to this Act, may register it at the General Post Office in London, at such time in each year and in such form and with such particulars as the Postmaster General from time to time directs, paying on each registration such fee not exceeding five shillings as the Postmaster General, with the approval of the Treasury, from time to time directs.

The Postmaster General may from time to time revise the register and remove therefrom any publication not being a newspaper.

The decision of the Postmaster General on the admission to or removal from the register of a publication shall be final, save that the Treasury may, if they think fit, on the application of any person interested, reverse or modify the decision, and order accordingly.

Any publication for the time being on the register shall for the purposes of this Act be deemed a registered newspaper.

8. From and after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy:

registered newspapers, book packets, pattern or sample packets, and post cards, may be sent by post between places in the United Kingdom, at the following rates of postage:

On a registered newspaper, with or without a supplement or supplements - One halfpenny.

On each registered newspaper in a packet of two or more, with or without a supplement or supplements - One halfpenny.

On a book packet or pattern or sample packet:—
If not exceeding two ounces in weight - One halfpenny.

If exceeding two ounces in weight, for the first two ounces and for every additional two ounces or fractional part of two ounces - One halfpenny.

On a post card - - - One halfpenny.

Provided that a packet of two or more registered newspapers with or without a supplement or supplements shall not be liable under this section to a higher rate of postage than the rate chargeable on a book packet of the same weight.

9. The Postmaster General may from time to time, with the approval of the Treasury, make, in relation respectively to registered newspapers, book packets, pattern or sample packets, and post cards, sent by post, such regulations as he thinks fit, for all or any of the following purposes:—

For prescribing and regulating the times and modes of posting and delivery:

For prescribing prepayment and regulating the mode thereof:

For regulating the affixing of postage stamps:

For prescribing and regulating the payment again of postage in case of re-direction:

For regulating dimensions and maximum weight of packets:

For regulating the nature and form of covers:

For prohibiting or restricting the printing or writing of marks or communications or words:

For prohibiting inclosures; and such other regulations as from time to time seem expedient for the better execution of this Act.

10. Nothing in this Act or in any Treasury warrant or Post Office regulations shall repeal or alter any provision of section 13, 16, or 17 of the Act secondly described in the first schedule to this Act as far as those sections relate to printed votes or proceedings of Parliament addressed to places in the United Kingdom.

11. A registered newspaper shall be deemed a newspaper for the purposes of any arrangement or convention between Her Majesty's Government and any colonial or foreign government for securing advantages for newspapers sent by post.

12. The Treasury may from time to time, by Treasury warrant, allow any newspapers, British, colonial, or foreign, to be sent by post between the United Kingdom and places out of the United Kingdom, or between places out of the United Kingdom, whether through the United Kingdom or not, at such rates of postage, not exceeding threepence for each newspaper irrespective of any colonial or foreign postage, and on such conditions, as they think fit, and according to Post Office regulations to be from time to time made in that behalf.

Any Treasury warrant and Post Office regulations made in that behalf before the passing of this Act are hereby confirmed; and the same shall continue in force unless and until altered by Treasury warrant or Post Office regulations (as the case may be).

13. The Treasury from time to time, by Treasury warrant, may regulate the sending of book packets and pattern or sample packets by post, between the United Kingdom and places out of the United Kingdom, or between places out of the United Kingdom, whether through the United Kingdom or not, and in relation thereto may prescribe rates of postage, weights, and other matters.

Any Treasury warrant and Post Office regulations made in that behalf before the passing of this Act are hereby confirmed; and the same shall continue in force unless and until altered by Treasury warrant or Post Office regulations (as the case may be).

14. If a question arises whether any publication, not being a registered newspaper, is a newspaper or a supplement, or whether any packet is a book packet or pattern or sample packet, within this Act or any Treasury warrant or Post Office regulations, the decision thereon of the Postmaster General shall be final, save that the Treasury may, if they think fit, on the application of any person interested, reverse or modify the decision, and order accordingly.

15. If any registered or other newspaper, supplement, publication, book packet, pattern or sample packet, or post card, is sent by post otherwise than in conformity with this Act or any Treasury warrant or Post Office regulations, it shall be either returned to the sender thereof or forwarded to its destination, in either case charged with such rate of postage not exceeding the letter rate of postage, or without any additional charge, as the Postmaster General, with the approval of the Treasury, from time to time directs, having been, if necessary, detained and opened in the Post Office.

16. A book packet, pattern or sample packet, or post card sent by post shall be deemed a post letter, within the Act described in the second schedule to this Act.

17. Where the despatch or delivery from a post office of letters would be delayed by the despatch or delivery therefrom at the same time of book packets, pattern or sample packets, and post cards, or any of them, the same or any of them may, subject and according to Post Office regulations, be detained in the Post Office until the despatch or delivery next following that by which they would ordinarily be despatched or delivered.

18. The Commissioners of Inland Revenue shall from time to time provide proper dies and other implements for denoting by adhesive or embossed or impressed stamps or otherwise the duties of postage payable in the United Kingdom under this Act or any Treasury warrant thereunder.

Those duties shall be deemed stamp duties, and shall be under the management of the Commissioners of Inland Revenue.

So much of the Act secondly described in the first schedule to this Act as relates to stamp duties under that Act shall apply to the stamp duties under this Act.

A newspaper or packet sent by post and the cover thereof (if any) shall be deemed a letter or cover (as the case may be) within section twenty-three of the Act secondly described in the first schedule to this Act; and a post card shall be deemed a letter within that section, and the duties under this Act shall be deemed to be comprised in the duties in that section referred to.

19. It shall not be lawful for any person to affix to a letter, newspaper, supplement, publication, packet, or card sent by post or to the cover thereof (if any), by way of prepayment of postage thereon, an embossed or impressed stamp cut out or otherwise separated from the cover or other paper, card, or thing on which such stamp was embossed or impressed, although such stamp has not been before sent by post or used.

If any letter, newspaper, supplement, publication, packet, or card is sent by post with a stamp affixed thereto or to the cover thereof (if any) that has been so cut out or separated, the postage thereof as far as it purports to be prepaid by that stamp shall be deemed to be not prepaid.

20. The Postmaster General may from time to time with the approval of the Treasury make such regulations as he thinks fit for preventing the sending or delivery by post of indecent or obscene prints, paintings, photographs, lithographs, engravings, books, or cards, or of other indecent or obscene articles, or of letters, newspapers, supplements, publications, packets, or post cards, having thereon, or on the covers thereof, any words, marks, or designs of an indecent, obscene, libellous, or grossly offensive character.

21. The Documentary Evidence Act, 1868, shall have effect as if the Postmaster General were mentioned in the first column, and any Secretary or Assistant Secretary of the Post Office were mentioned in the second column, of the schedule to that Act; and any approval of the Treasury under this Act shall be deemed an order within that Act.

An Act for taking the Census of Ireland. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to take the census of Ireland in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. In this Act,—

The term "Lord Lieutenant" shall mean the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governors of Ireland:

The terms "chief secretary" and "under secretary" shall mean respectively the chief secretary and under secretary to the Lord Lieutenant.

2. An account of the population of Ireland shall be taken at the time and in the manner herein-after directed.

3. Such officers and men of the police force of Dublin metropolis, and of the Royal Irish Constabulary, as the Lord Lieutenant shall direct, together with such other competent persons as the Lord Lieutenant shall appoint to assist therein, shall, upon Monday the third day of April and one or more next consecutive days in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one as the said Lord Lieutenant shall fix, severally visit every house within such districts as may be assigned to them respectively, and take an account in writing, according to such instructions as may be given to them by the chief or under secretary of the number of persons who abode therein on the night of Sunday the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and of the sex, age, religious profession, birthplace, and occupation of all such persons; and shall also take an account of the number of inhabited houses and of uninhabited houses and of houses then building within such districts respectively; and shall also distinguish those parishes and places, or parts of parishes and places, within each district respectively, which are within the limits of any city or borough returning a member or members to serve in Parliament; and shall also take an account of all such further particulars as by such instructions they may be directed to inquire into; and all the expenses which shall be incurred by authority of such Lord Lieutenant under this Act, subject to the sanction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, shall be paid out of such moneys as shall be provided by Parliament for that purpose.

4. The governor, master, or keeper of every gaol, prison, or house of correction, workhouse, hospital, or lunatic asylum, and every barrack master, and every master or keeper of every public or charitable institution which shall be determined upon by the Lord Lieutenant, shall act as the enumerator of the inmates thereof, and shall be bound to conform to such instructions as shall be sent to him by the authority of the Lord Lieutenant for obtaining the returns required by this Act, so far as may be practicable with respect to such inmates.

5. For the more effectual obtaining of such accounts, the chief or under secretary shall prepare and cause to be printed such forms and instructions for the use of the several persons who shall be appointed as aforesaid to take or certify the said accounts as he shall deem necessary.

6. The better to enable such persons to take the said accounts, they are hereby authorised and empowered to ask all such questions of all persons within their respective districts, respecting themselves or the persons constituting their respective families, and of all such further particulars as shall be necessary for the purpose of taking the said accounts.

7. Every person refusing to answer or wilfully giving a false answer to any such questions, and every person in any way wilfully obstructing such persons in the execution of the duties required of them under this Act, shall for every such refusal, false answer, or wilful obstruction, on proof thereof being made before any justice or justices at petty sessions for the district in which such person shall reside, or, if such person shall reside within the police district of Dublin metropolis, before any of the divisional justices of such district, on the testimony of one or more credible witnesses, forfeit a sum not exceeding five pounds, at the discretion of the said justice or justices before whom such complaint shall be so made.

8. Every member of the said police force or of the Royal Irish Constabulary, or other person, who shall be so appointed to take the said accounts, or to assist therein, who shall make any wilful neglect, default, or falsification in any matters relating to the said accounts, shall for every such neglect, default, or falsification, on proof thereof being made before any justice or justices at petty sessions for the district in which he shall so act, or in case such member of the police or constabulary force, or other person, shall act for the police district of Dublin metropolis, before any of the divisional justices of such district, on the testimony of one or more credible witnesses, forfeit a sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings, at the discretion of the said justice or justices before whom such complaint shall be so made.

9. All proceedings under this Act, as to compelling the appearance of such member of the said police force or of the Royal Irish Constabulary force, or other person, or of any witness, and as to the hearing and determination of such complaints, or any other matter relating thereto, and as to the application of fines, amerciaments, and forfeited recognizances, imposed or levied under this Act at petty sessions, shall be subject in all respects to the provisions of "The Petty Sessions (Ireland) Act, 1851," as the same is amended by "The Petty Sessions Clerk (Ireland) Act, 1858," (when the case shall be heard in any petty sessions district,) and to the provisions of the Acts relating to the divisional police offices (when the case shall be heard in the police district of Dublin metropolis), so far as the said provisions shall be consistent with any special provisions of this Act; and when any fine or penalty is imposed at any of the divisional police offices of Dublin metropolis, under the provisions of this Act, such fines and penalties shall be paid over to the same purposes and appropriated and applied in the same manner as is now by law authorised in respect of fines and penalties imposed at such divisional police offices respectively.

10. The said several persons so appointed to take the said accounts, or to assist therein, shall sign and certify the same, and make solemn affirmation before any justice of the peace within the county, to the effect that the said account has been truly and faithfully taken by him (or them), and that to the best of his (or their) knowledge the same is correct, so far as may be known, and shall deliver the same to such officer of the said police force of the Royal Irish Constabulary, or other person, as may be appointed by the Lord Lieutenant to receive the same, within each county, city, town, or place; and such officer or person shall examine the same, and cause any defect or inaccuracy which may be discovered therein to be supplied or corrected, so far as may be possible, and shall certify and transmit the same to the office of the chief or under secretary, in such manner and within such time as the Lord Lieutenant shall direct; and the same shall be digested and reduced into order under the direction of the chief or under secretary, by such persons as the Lord Lieutenant shall appoint for that purpose; and an abstract thereof shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within twelve months after the day on which the said account shall be taken or (if Parliament be not then sitting) within the first fourteen days of the session next ensuing.

11. Every solemn affirmation or declaration made or signed under the authority of this Act shall be of the same force and effect as if the person making such affirmation or declaration had taken an oath in the usual form, so that if the person making such affirmation or declaration shall be convicted of having therein wilfully and falsely affirmed or declared any matter or thing, he shall be subject to the same pains, penalties, and forfeitures to which persons convicted of wilful perjury are subject.

CHAP. 81.

The Meeting of Parliament Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Summoning of Parliament.

An Act to amend the Acts of the thirty-seventh year of King George the Third, chapter one hundred and twenty-seven, and the thirty-ninth and fortieth years of King George the Third, chapter fourteen. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS in pursuance of two Acts passed, the one in the thirty-seventh year of the reign of King George the Third, chapter one hundred and twenty-seven, intituled "An Act to shorten the time now required for giving notice of the Royal intention of His Majesty, his heirs and successors, that the Parliament shall meet and be holden for the despatch of business, and more effectually to provide for the meeting of Parliament in the case of a demise of the Crown," and the other in the session held in the thirty-ninth and fortieth years of the reign of King George the Third, chapter fourteen, intituled "An Act for empowering His Majesty to shorten the time for the meeting of Parliament in cases of adjournment," Parliament may be summoned by Royal Proclamation to meet on any day not less than fourteen days from the day of the date of such proclamation, notwithstanding that Parliament was prorogued or both Houses of Parliament stood adjourned to some later day, and it is expedient to shorten the said period of fourteen days :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as "The Meeting of Parliament Act, 1870."

2. Parliament may be summoned by a Royal Proclamation in manner provided by the recited Acts, to meet on any day not less than six days from the day of the date of such proclamation, and the recited Acts, so far as they relate to such summoning of Parliament, shall be construed as if six days were therein substituted for fourteen days.

CHAP. 82.

The Canada Defences Loan Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Power to Treasury to guarantee loan.
3. Conditions of guarantee.
4. Application of sinking fund.
5. Alteration of Act relating to guaranteed loan.
6. Issue out of Consolidated Fund.
7. Certificate of amount paid out of Consolidated Fund.
8. Accounts to be laid before Parliament.

An Act to authorise the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury to guarantee the payment of a loan to be raised by the Government of Canada for the construction of fortifications in that country.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Act of the Parliament of Canada of the year 1868, chapter forty-one, the Governor in Council was authorised to raise by way of loan upon the guarantee of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury (in this Act referred to as "the Treasury"), for the purpose of the construction of the fortifications therein mentioned, sums not exceeding one million one hundred thousand pounds, and the sums so raised, with the interest thereon, and such sums as might be necessary to repay the said loan, either by way of a sinking fund, not exceeding one per cent., or in such other way and subject to such conditions as the Governor in Council, with the assent of the Treasury, might determine, were charged on the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada next after the appropriation for the construction of the Intercolonial Railway:

And whereas it is expedient to authorise the Treasury to give such guarantee:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Canada Defence Loan Act, 1870."

2. The Treasury may guarantee, in such manner and form as they think fit, the payment of the principal of any loan raised by the Government of Canada in pursuance of the said Act, and of interest thereon at a rate not exceeding four per cent.

3. The Treasury shall not give any guarantee under this Act unless and until provision is made to the satisfaction of the Treasury—

- (1.) For the due payment, custody, and application of the money raised by the loan, in such manner as the Treasury from time to time direct:
- (2.) For remitting to the Treasury the annual sums for the sinking fund by equal half-yearly payments, in such manner as the Treasury from time to time direct, and for the investment and accumulation thereof, under their direction, in the names of four trustees nominated from time to time, two by the Treasury and two by the Government of Canada.

4. The said sinking fund may be invested only in such securities as the Government of Canada and the Treasury from time to time agree upon, and shall, whether invested or not, be applied from time to time, under the direction of the Treasury, in discharging the principal of the said loan; and the interest arising from such securities (including the interest accruing in respect of any part of the loan discharged by means of the sinking fund), and the resulting income thereof, shall be invested and applied as part of such sinking fund.

5. Every Act passed by the Parliament of Canada which in any way impairs the priority of the charge upon the Consolidated Revenue Fund of Canada created by that Parliament of the said loan and the interest and sinking fund thereof, and the sums paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, and the interest thereon, shall, so far only as it impairs such priority, be void, unless such Act has been reserved for the signification of Her Majesty's pleasure.

6. The Treasury are hereby authorised to cause to be issued from time to time out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom such sums of money as may at any time be required to be paid to fulfil the guarantee under this Act in respect either of principal or interest.

7. The Treasury may from time to time certify to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State the amount which has been paid out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom to fulfil the guarantee under this Act, and the date of such payment; such certificate shall be communicated to the Governor of Canada, and shall be conclusive evidence of the amount having been so paid and of the time when the same was so paid.

8. The Treasury shall cause to be prepared, and laid before both Houses of Parliament, a statement of any guarantee given under this Act, and an account of all sums issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom for the purposes of this Act within one month after the same are so given or issued, if Parliament be then sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within fourteen days after the then next meeting of Parliament.

An Act to make better provision for the Police Force in the City of Londonderry, and to amend the Acts relating to the Royal Irish Constabulary Force.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS the Lord Lieutenant of Ireland did, on the eleventh day of August one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, issue his warrant to certain commissioners, directing them to hold a court of inquiry at Londonderry, and to report upon the existing local arrangements for the preservation of the peace of that borough, the magisterial jurisdiction exercised within it, and the amount and constitution and efficiency of the police force usually available there, and other matters relating thereto: And whereas the said commissioners, having duly inquired into the said several matters as directed by the said warrant, have made their report thereon, dated the thirtieth day of November last, stating that the police arrangements of the borough need complete alteration: And whereas it is expedient that the police force maintained by the town council of the borough of Londonderry should cease to exist, and that with a view to provide for the more effectual preservation of the peace of the said borough a constabulary force should be appointed to be stationed therein: And whereas it is expedient to amend the Acts relating to the Royal Irish constabulary:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. From and after the commencement of this Act, it shall not be lawful for the town council of the borough of Londonderry to appoint or maintain any police force; and all persons who have been appointed superintendent, sergeants, or constables of the said force shall cease to hold their offices, and shall severally discontinue acting in such offices accordingly; and the Royal Irish constabulary force appointed to do duty in the city of Londonderry shall have and discharge all powers and duties now lawfully had and discharged by the police force of the borough.

2. The municipal borough of Londonderry shall for the purposes of this Act be constituted a distinct district, herein-after called the city of Londonderry; and all and every the provisions of the several Acts relating to the Royal Irish constabulary shall apply to the city of Londonderry.

3. It shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant to appoint as the constabulary force in the city of Londonderry a number of constables and sub-constables not exceeding thirty, and to add to the said constabulary force, under the provisions of this Act any number of men, not exceeding forty-five, which the Lord Lieutenant may think fit to provide for the more effectual preservation of the peace of the said city, and such additional number of men, together with the thirty herein-before mentioned, shall constitute the ordinary constabulary force of the said city.

4. The expense of the said additional force, save as to the additional pay herein-after mentioned, shall, in the first instance, be advanced and defrayed in like manner as the expense of the force appointed under the Acts relating to the Royal Irish Constabulary is to be advanced and defrayed; one moiety of the moneys so advanced shall be repaid by the town council of the borough of Londonderry by means of rates, to be apportioned and levied in the same manner as the moneys hitherto raised and applied or which may be applicable in the said borough of Londonderry to the maintenance of a police force.

5. The Inspector General of constabulary shall, with the assistance of the receiver, twice in each year ascertain the amount of the moneys chargeable under the provisions of this Act to the said city of Londonderry, and shall make out a certificate thereof under his hand, specifying the force or service in respect whereof such charge may have been incurred, and transmit the same, when signed by the receiver and approved and certified by the chief or under secretary to the Lord Lieutenant, to the town clerk of the borough of Londonderry, who shall lay the same forthwith before the town council, and thereupon the town council shall forthwith make and levy a rate sufficient for the payment thereof, and shall thereout, or out of any moneys in their hands, pay the amount mentioned in such certificate to the Paymaster General's department in Ireland.

6. The Inspector General of constabulary shall fix the number of men who shall discharge the duties of a night watch, and for each of such men there shall be charged the sum of sixpence per diem, to be wholly defrayed by the town council of the borough of Londonderry, and such sum shall be included by the Inspector General of constabulary in the certificate to be furnished by him under this Act, and shall be raised and paid in manner therein directed; and it shall be lawful for the said Inspector General, with the approval of the Lord Lieutenant, to apply such sum to remunerate the constabulary force stationed in Londonderry, for discharging the duties of a night watch.

7. Notwithstanding any regulations requiring persons entering the constabulary force to be unmarried, or to be under a certain age, the Inspector General of the Royal Irish Constabulary force may, if he shall so think fit, admit into the said force any constable of the police force at the time of the passing of this Act maintained by the town council of the borough of Londonderry, whose age shall not exceed forty years, and who within one calendar month after the commencement of this Act shall apply to be admitted, and who in other respects shall be eligible according to the said regulations.

8. It shall be lawful for the town council of the said borough of Londonderry (if they shall so think fit) to grant to the superintendent, or to any serjeant or constable belonging to the police force at the time of the passing of this Act maintained by the said town council, whose office shall cease or become unnecessary by means of the provisions of this Act, such an adequate compensation, by way of yearly allowance or other gratuity, as shall to them seem just: Provided always, that any such compensation shall be wholly charged on and defrayed by the local funds which the said town council may have authority to levy.

9. The several provisions of the local Acts in force within the borough of Londonderry relating to the apportionment, levy, collection, recovery, and receipts of rates applicable wholly or in part to the support of the police force and establishment in the police district of the city of Londonderry shall continue in force notwithstanding the passing of this Act.

10. It shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant, with the advice of Her Majesty's Privy Council in Ireland, within six months after the commencement of this Act, to alter or vary the number of constables and sub-constables for each county, city, or town specified in the schedule to the Constabulary (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1865, to such number as the Lord Lieutenant, with such advice as aforesaid, may consider to be required for each such county, city, or town, but so that the total number of constables and sub-constables to be distributed and allotted to all the counties, cities, and towns in the said schedule specified, together with the thirty men by this Act authorised to be appointed for the city of Londonderry, shall not exceed the total number of constables and sub-constables fixed by the schedule of the said Act.

11. So much of the schedule annexed to the Constabulary (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1865, as fixes the number of sub-inspectors at two hundred and sixty-two and of head constables at three hundred and seventy-five, shall be and the same is hereby repealed, and the numbers of those ranks respectively shall from the commencement of this Act be two hundred and forty-four sub-inspectors and three hundred and fifty head constables for the whole of Ireland, exclusive of the reserve force, and the said inspectors and head constables of the said force may be from time to time distributed amongst the counties, cities, and towns in Ireland respectively as to the Lord Lieutenant shall seem fit.

12. Notwithstanding anything in section two of the Act passed in the twenty-ninth and thirtieth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter one hundred and three, intituled "An Act to amend an Act to consolidate the law relating to the constabulary force in Ireland," it shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant to fix and appoint such revised annual salaries as to him may from time to time seem proper, not exceeding the several sums herein-after specified, to be paid in such manner and subject to such regulations and provisions as he may direct, to the several persons herein-after mentioned; (that is to say,)

1. To the head constable major, an annual salary not exceeding ninety pounds:
2. To each head constable of the first class, an annual salary not exceeding seventy-six pounds fourteen shillings:
3. To twelve head constables of the first class, of long service or superior merit, but ineligible for further promotion, an addition to their respective salaries of ten pounds per annum each, making their total salaries respectively eighty-six pounds fourteen shillings per annum each:
4. To each head constable of the second class, an annual salary not exceeding sixty-five pounds:
5. To twelve head constables of the second class, of long service or superior merit, but ineligible for further promotion, an addition of ten pounds per annum, making their total salaries respectively seventy-five pounds per annum each:

6. To any number of constables, not exceeding sixty, of long service or superior merit, but ineligible for further promotion, an addition of four pounds per annum, making their total salaries respectively fifty-three pounds eight shillings per annum.

13. It shall be lawful for the Lord Lieutenant to appoint a veterinary surgeon to the Royal Irish constabulary, and such veterinary surgeon shall receive an annual salary of two hundred pounds per annum.

14. This Act and the several Acts now in force relating to the Royal Irish constabulary shall be construed as one Act, so far as is consistent with the tenor hereof, and nothing herein contained shall be construed to deprive the Lord Lieutenant of any power now vested in him in relation to the said constabulary force.

15. The expression "Lord Lieutenant" in this Act shall mean the Lord Lieutenant or other chief governor or governors of Ireland.

16. This Act shall commence from and after a day to be fixed by the Lord Lieutenant, and notified in the "Dublin Gazette," such day not being sooner than twenty-one days after such notification.

17. This Act may be cited for all purposes as the "Constabulary (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1870."

CHAP. 84.

The Public Schools Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Extension of powers of new governing bodies.
3. Duration of powers of Commissioners.

An Act to amend the Public Schools Act, 1868. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by the Public Schools Act, 1868, certain powers of making statutes and regulations and of making and proposing schemes are vested in the new governing bodies of the several schools to which the said Act applies:

And whereas it is provided by the said Act that all such powers shall, from and after a day named in the said Act, or such further time as may be determined by Her Majesty by Order in Council, pass to and vest in the Special Commissioners by the said Act appointed, subject as therein mentioned; and it is further provided that the powers conferred on the said Special Commissioners by the said Act shall be in force until such day as in the said Act mentioned, or a further day to which the same may be continued by Her Majesty as therein mentioned:

And whereas the powers so vested in the new governing bodies of the said schools have been continued by Her Majesty, but will, unless Parliament otherwise provides, on and after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, pass to the said Special Commissioners:

And whereas it is expedient to postpone for such further time as is herein-after mentioned the transfer of such powers as aforesaid to the said Special Commissioners, and to continue for a further time the powers of the said Special Commissioners:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Public Schools Act, 1870."

2. All powers by the Public Schools Act, 1868, or any Act amending the same, vested in the new governing bodies of the several schools to which the said Public Schools Act applies, shall continue vested in such new governing bodies respectively until the thirty-first day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and from and after the said thirty-first day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and not before, shall pass to and vest in the said Special Commissioners, subject nevertheless as in the said Act mentioned.

3. Subject to the provisions of this Act, all powers conferred on the Special Commissioners by the Public Schools Act, 1868, or any Act amending the same, shall be in force until the thirty-first day of July one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two, and it shall be lawful for Her Majesty, if she think fit, by and with the advice of her Privy Council, to continue the same until the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and seventy-two.

CHAP. 85.

The Norfolk Boundary Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Annexation of part of hamlet of South Town to the hundred of East Flegg.
3. Assessment to county rate of land annexed to hundred of East Flegg.

An Act to declare the Hundred in which a Piece of Land in the County of Norfolk is situate, and to provide for the Assessment of the said Piece of Land to the County Rate.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS the greater part of the hamlet of South Town in the parish of Gorleston is situate in the county of Suffolk, but a portion of the said hamlet is situate in the county of Norfolk; and doubts have arisen whether the last-mentioned portion is included in any of the hundreds of the said county of Norfolk, and it is expedient to remove such doubts:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Norfolk Boundary Act, 1870."

2. So much of the hamlet of South Town in the parish of Gorleston as is situate in the county of Norfolk shall be deemed for all purposes to be within and to be part of the hundred of East Flegg in the same county.

3. The committee appointed or to be hereafter appointed in the county of Norfolk, in pursuance of the Act of the session of the fifteenth and sixteenth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter eighty-one, "to consolidate and amend the statutes relating to the assessment and collection of county rates in England and Wales," for the purpose of preparing a basis or standard for county rate, may revise such basis or standard for the purpose of assessing that portion of the said hamlet of South Town which is in the county of Norfolk, in like manner as they may for the purpose of meeting any partial changes that may have occurred in the rateable value of a portion of the property liable to be assessed, and all the provisions of the said Act and any Act amending the same relating to such revision shall apply accordingly.

12. Union of counties to be complete as regards jurisdiction, &c. of sheriff, and powers, privileges, &c. of procurators.
13. Courts to be held and duties to be discharged by sheriffs.
14. Courts to be held and duties to be discharged by sheriffs substitute.

An Act to amend and extend the Act sixteenth and seventeenth Victoria, chapter ninety-two, to make further provision for uniting counties in Scotland in so far as regards the jurisdiction of the Sheriff; and also to make certain provisions regarding the duties of Sheriffs and Sheriffs Substitute in Scotland. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend and extend the Act sixteenth and seventeenth Victoria, chapter ninety-two, and to make further provision for uniting counties in Scotland in so far as regards the jurisdiction of the sheriff; and also to make certain provisions regarding the duties of sheriffs and sheriffs substitute in Scotland:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and

Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The county of Kincardine, the office of sheriff whereof is now vacant, shall be and is hereby united with the county of Aberdeen into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Aberdeen and Kincardine, and the functions of the sheriff of the said county of Kincardine shall devolve on and are hereby devolved on and shall be discharged by the sheriff of the county of Aberdeen, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Aberdeen and Kincardine, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour.

2. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of sheriff of Banff, Elgin, and Nairn, the said counties shall be disunited, and shall no longer constitute one sheriffdom, and the county of Banff shall be united with the counties of Aberdeen and Kincardine into one sheriffdom, to be thereafter called the sheriffdom of Aberdeen, Kincardine, and Banff, and the functions of the sheriff of the said county of Banff shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Aberdeen and Kincardine, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Aberdeen, Kincardine, and Banff, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour; and the counties of Elgin and Nairn shall in like manner be united with the county of Inverness into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Inverness, Elgin, and Nairn, and the functions of the sheriff of the counties of Elgin and Nairn shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of the county of Inverness, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Inverness, Elgin, and Nairn, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour.

3. The counties of Sutherland and Caithness are hereby disunited, and shall no longer constitute one sheriffdom; and the counties of Orkney and Shetland, the office of sheriff whereof is now vacant, shall be and are hereby united with the county of Caithness into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Caithness, Orkney, and Shetland; and the now existing sheriff of Sutherland and Caithness shall be and is hereby relieved and discharged of his office of sheriff, in so far as regards the county of Caithness; and the counties of Ross and Cromarty, the office of sheriff whereof is now vacant, shall be and is hereby united with the county of Sutherland into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Ross, Cromarty, and Sutherland, and the functions of the sheriff of the said counties of Ross and Cromarty shall devolve and are hereby devolved on and shall be discharged by the sheriff of Sutherland, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Ross, Cromarty, and Sutherland, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour.

4. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of sheriff of Linlithgow, Clackmannan, and Kinross, the said counties shall be disunited and shall no longer constitute one sheriffdom, and the county of Linlithgow shall be united with the county of Mid-Lothian into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Mid-Lothian and Linlithgow, and the functions of the said sheriff of Linlithgow shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Mid-Lothian, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Mid-Lothian and Linlithgow, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour; and the county of Kinross shall be united with the county of Fife into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Fife and Kinross, and the functions of the sheriff of Kinross shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Fife, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Fife and Kinross, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour; and the county of Clackmannan shall be united with the county of Stirling into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Stirling and Clackmannan, and the functions of the sheriff of Clackmannan shall thereupon be devolved on and be discharged by the sheriff of Stirling, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Stirling and Clackmannan.

5. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of sheriff of Haddington and Berwick, the said counties shall be disunited and shall no longer constitute one sheriffdom, and the county of Haddington shall be united with the county of Mid-Lothian into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Mid-Lothian and Haddington, and the functions of the sheriff of Haddington shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Mid-Lothian, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Mid-Lothian and Haddington, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour; and the county of Berwick shall be united with the counties of Roxburgh and Selkirk into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Roxburgh, Berwick, and Selkirk, and the functions of the sheriff of Berwick shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Roxburgh and Selkirk, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Roxburgh, Berwick, and Selkirk, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour.

6. So soon as the counties of Mid-Lothian, Linlithgow, and Haddington are united as hereinbefore provided, they shall constitute one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of the Lothians, and when the county of Peebles is added thereto the said four counties shall be constituted one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of the Lothians and Peebles.

7. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of sheriff of Wigtown and Kirkcudbright, the said counties shall no longer constitute one sheriffdom, but shall be united with the county of Dumfries into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Dumfries and Galloway, and the functions of the sheriff of Wigtown and Kirkcudbright shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Dumfries, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Dumfries and Galloway, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour.

8. Whenever a vacancy shall occur in the office of sheriff of Dumbarton and Bute, the said counties shall be disunited, and shall no longer constitute one sheriffdom, and the county of Dumbarton shall be united with the county of Stirling into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Stirling and Dumbarton, and the functions of the sheriff of Dumbarton shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Stirling, who shall be denominated the sheriff of Stirling and Dumbarton, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour; and the county of Bute shall be united with the county of Renfrew into one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Renfrew and Bute, and the functions of the sheriff of Bute shall thereupon devolve on and be discharged by the sheriff of Renfrew, who shall be and shall be denominated the sheriff of Renfrew and Bute, without the necessity of any new commission being issued in his favour.

9. As soon as the counties of Stirling, Dumbarton, and Clackmannan are united as herein before provided, they shall constitute one sheriffdom, to be called the sheriffdom of Stirling, Dumbarton, and Clackmannan.

10. After any union of counties shall have occurred under the provisions of this Act, no separate appointment shall be made to the office of sheriff of any county so united, but appointment shall only be made to the office of sheriff of such united counties or sheriffdoms as vacancies shall occur after such union.

11. Nothing herein contained shall give any right to the sheriff of any such united counties to any additional salary beyond that enjoyed by him as sheriff of any county or counties before such union; but on any union taking place under this Act, it shall be lawful for the Lords of Her Majesty's Treasury to make such addition to the salary of the sheriffs of the united counties as they shall deem reasonable, to be paid out of money to be provided by Parliament for that purpose.

12. Every union of counties into one sheriffdom, under the provisions of this and the recited Act or either of them, shall be deemed to be a complete union to all intents and purposes in so far as regards the jurisdiction, powers, and duties of the sheriff and his substitutes, and in so far as regards the powers, duties, rights, and privileges of procurators before the courts of the sheriff. And the several counties of any such united sheriffdom shall not thereafter be regarded as separate sheriffdoms or jurisdictions, but as one sheriffdom and jurisdiction, in so far as regards the powers, duties, rights, and privileges of the sheriff and his substitutes, and the procurators of the sheriff's court.

13. It shall be lawful to Her Majesty, by one of her Principal Secretaries of State, to prescribe from time to time the number of courts to be held by the several sheriffs of Scotland who shall be appointed after the passing of this Act, and the times and places for holding such courts, and also from time to time to prescribe the duties of the office of sheriff which such sheriffs respectively are required to perform personally; provided always, that nothing herein contained, and no order made or direction given under the authority of this clause, shall affect the validity or legal authority of any act done by any sheriff or sheriff substitute in pursuance of his jurisdiction and lawful authority; and so much of the Act of the first and second Victoria, chapter one hundred and nineteen, as provides that every sheriff, with the exception of the sheriffs of the counties of Edinburgh and Lanark, shall after his appointment be in habitual attendance upon the Court of Session during the sittings thereof, shall be and is hereby repealed; but nothing herein contained shall affect the qualification for appointment to the office of sheriff as prescribed by the said Act.

14. It shall be lawful to Her Majesty, by one of her Principal Secretaries of State, from time to time to prescribe the number of salaried sheriff substitutes of the several counties or sheriffdoms, and the places at which such salaried sheriff substitutes respectively are required generally to reside and attend for the performance of their duties, and the number of courts to be held by them, and the times and places of holding such courts.

 32. Repeal of Acts at variance with this Act.
- Schedules.

An Act to amend the Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, intituled "An Act to abolish the "Annuity Tax in Edinburgh and Montrose, and to make provision in regard to the Stipends of the "Ministers in that City and Burgh, "and also to make provision for the "Patronage of the Church of North "Leith;" and to make provision for the abolition of the Annuity Tax within the Parish of Canongate, and for the payment of the Minister of said Parish. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the Act of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, intituled "An Act to abolish the "Annuity Tax in Edinburgh and Montrose, and "to make provision in regard to the stipends "of the ministers in that city and burgh, and "also to make provision for the patronage of the "church of North Leith;" to enable the magistrates and council of Edinburgh to redeem the bond of annuity granted by them in virtue of said Act to the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners; to abolish the annuity tax within the parish of Canongate; and to make further provisions regarding the management and patronage of the parish churches of Edinburgh, and the payment of the ministers thereof and of the Canongate:

And whereas it is also expedient to repeal certain of the provisions of the said Act applicable to Montrose, and to substitute other provisions in lieu thereof:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The bond of annuity for four thousand two hundred pounds granted in virtue of the said Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, by the magistrates and council of Edinburgh to the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners, shall be redeemable on payment, as herein-after provided, by the said magistrates and council, to the said commissioners, of the sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds.

2. The said redemption may be made at the term of Martinmas one thousand eight hundred and seventy, or at any subsequent term of Whitsunday or Martinmas, upon three months previous notice in writing to the said Commissioners; and on payment of the said sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds being completely made, and receipt therefor being recorded in the register in which the said bond is recorded, the said bond and the existing securities therefor shall by virtue of this Act be deemed to be validly discharged, subject to the claim of the said Commissioners for the amount of the annuity due at the term of redemption, if such redemption take place at the term of Whitsunday, or if the redemption take place at the term of Martinmas, for the half-year's annuity due at Candlemas then next ensuing.

3. The said magistrates and council shall be entitled and are hereby authorised to take out of the estate and revenues of the city of Edinburgh under their administration, and apply towards the redemption of the said bond, such sum as they shall judge proper and expedient; and they are hereby empowered to borrow on the security of said estate and revenues any sum not exceeding the said sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds which they shall find necessary for the purpose of redeeming the said bond, and to pay the interest thereof, and from time to time as shall be proper and expedient in course of a due administration, to pay off the capital out of said estate and revenues; and it shall be lawful for them to grant all proper deeds of obligation and security for the money so borrowed; and it is declared that the estate and revenues in this clause referred to include the whole property and funds referred to in clause nine of the said Act of twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, and also the assessments by that Act and this Act authorised to be levied.

4. Nothing in this Act contained shall alter or affect the rights of the creditors of the city of Edinburgh, as secured by the Acts first and second Victoria, chapter fifty-five, seventh Victoria, chapter twenty, and thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter forty-two, and the securities for the sums to be borrowed in virtue of this Act are hereby declared to be postponed to the rights in security created by the said Acts, in so far as relates to the property thereby disposed or assigned for the security of the said creditors of the city, and the rights of the said creditors in relation thereto; nor shall any of the provisions of this Act affect the rights of any persons holding rights or securities over the special subjects or property acquired under the provisions of the Act tenth and eleventh Victoria, chapter forty-eight, or of the Act thirteenth and fourteenth Victoria, chapter seventy; and nothing in this Act contained shall authorise the creditors under this Act to interfere in any way with the administration of the property, funds, revenues, or income hereby assigned in security of the mortgages or cash credit bonds to be granted in virtue of this Act, so long as the interest and annual instalments of principal shall continue to be regularly paid.

5. All deeds of security to be granted under the provisions of this Act may be executed by the Lord Provost and the City Treasurer, as representing the said magistrates and council, and a deed of mortgage, in the form contained in the Schedule (A.) hereto annexed, or in a similar form, shall be a valid and effectual obligation and security for money borrowed under the provisions of this Act, and every such mortgage may be transferred by indorsation in the form contained in the said schedule, or in a similar form.

6. It shall be lawful for the magistrates and council to accept and take from any bank or banking company credit on a cash account to be opened and kept with such bank or banking company in the name of the magistrates and council according to the usage of bankers in Scotland, to the extent of the sum which the magistrates and council are by this Act authorised to borrow, and to make and grant mortgages and assignments of the property, income, and revenue of the city before specified, and the rates to be levied by them under the provisions hereof, in security of the payment of the amount of such credit or of the sums advanced from time to time on such cash account, with interest thereon; which mortgages and assignments may be in the form contained in Schedule (B.) to this Act annexed, or in a similar form: Provided always, that the whole sum due and owing by the magistrates and council on such cash account, and for money borrowed by them on bonds or mortgages as aforesaid, shall not, when taken together, exceed the sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds by this Act authorised to be borrowed.

7. In case notice shall be given by the said magistrates and council to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners to redeem the said bond of annuity at the term of Martinmas one thousand eight hundred and seventy, or at the term of Whitsunday one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, it shall be lawful for the said magistrates and council, at or prior to the said term of Martinmas one thousand eight hundred and seventy, or the said term of Whitsunday one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, but not thereafter, in place of raising money in the above manner, to borrow on mortgage from the Public Works Loan Commissioners, and for the said Commissioners, out of funds at their disposal under this Act, to lend and advance to the said magistrates and council, under the direction and with the consent of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, for the purposes of this Act, a sum not exceeding in the whole the sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds, on such security as may be satisfactory to the said Public Works Loan Commissioners; the said sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds to be repaid by half-yearly instalments within a period of ten years from the date of the advance, together with interest at the rate of three and a half per centum per annum on such part of the said sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds as may from time to time remain due and unpaid.

8. For the purposes of the above loan by this Act authorised, the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may from time to time, by warrant under the hands of two or more of them, cause to be issued out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom, or the growing produce thereof, to the account of the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole the sum of fifty-six thousand five hundred pounds, such money to be applied exclusively under this Act, and be at the disposal of the Public Works Loan Commissioners in like manner in all respects as money placed at their disposal under the Act of the session of the twenty-ninth and thirtieth years of Her Majesty, chapter seventy-two, and the Acts therein recited, subject nevertheless to the provisions of this Act, which provisions shall have full effect, notwithstanding anything in "The Public Works Loan Act, 1853," or any Act therein mentioned, to the contrary contained.

9. All the clauses, powers, authorities, provisions, enactments, directions, regulations, restrictions, privileges, priorities, advantages, penalties, and forfeitures contained in and conferred and imposed by the said Acts or any of them, so far as the same may be made applicable and are not varied by this Act, shall be taken to extend to this Act and to everything to be done in pursuance of this Act, as if the same were herein repeated and set forth.

10. The power of levying increased assessments conferred on the said magistrates and council by section eleven of the said Act of twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, shall, so far as now subsisting, but no farther, continue until the said bond shall be redeemed and discharged, and until the whole debt incurred by borrowing money under the authority of this Act shall be paid off, and shall then cease; and after the redemption and discharge of the said bond the said magistrates and council shall be bound to levy and collect the said increased assessments until the whole debt incurred by borrowing money under the authority of this Act shall be paid off: Provided always, that after the passing of this Act an account shall be kept, and annually published by the said magistrates and council, of the produce of said increased assessments, and the said publication shall be made at the same time and in the same manner as the account of the municipal expenditure of the city, and that after the redemption and discharge of the said bond of annuity the whole of said produce shall be used and applied to the purpose of paying off and extinguishing the debt incurred by borrowing money under the provisions of this Act, and the interest of said debt, and to no other purpose.

11. The tax imposed in the parish of Canon-gate under section four of the Act thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven, shall continue to be imposed until the said bond shall be redeemed and discharged, and until the whole debt incurred by borrowing money under the authority of this Act shall be paid off, and shall then cease to be imposed; and from and after such redemption and discharge the said tax shall be levied, collected, and applied by the magistrates and council of Edinburgh, in the same manner as the said increased assessments.

12. From and after the redemption and discharge of said bond of annuity, the stipend of the minister of the parish of Canon-gate shall be paid by the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners out of the funds in their hands, under the said Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, and thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven, and this Act.

13. From and after the redemption and discharge of said bond, one half of the ordinary church-door collections of the churches the ministers whereof are paid by the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners shall be paid to the said commissioners by the kirk sessions of said churches respectively, and shall be applicable to the payment of precentors, beadles, and door-keepers, and to defraying the expense of celebrating communion, and heating and lighting the churches; and should any balance remain, the same may be applied, in the discretion of the said commissioners, to any ecclesiastical purpose within their charge.

14. Whereas by the Act first and second Victoria, chapter fifty-five, the Commissioners for the harbour and docks of Leith (hereinafter called the Leith Dock Commissioners) are directed to pay annually out of the revenues of the harbour and docks of Leith into an account therein specified, in preference to all other payments, the sum of seven thousand six hundred and eighty pounds, and out of that sum the Remembrancer and Auditor of the Court of Exchequer in Scotland is directed to pay the sum of two thousand pounds annually to and for behoof of the ministers of the city of Edinburgh, to any person duly authorised by them to receive the same, which sum of two thousand pounds is by the Public Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, directed to be annually paid to the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners; And whereas it is expedient that the said annual sum of two thousand pounds now payable by the Leith Dock Commissioners, being part of the said annual sum of seven thousand six hundred and eighty pounds, should be redeemed on payment to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners of a capital sum of forty thousand pounds: Therefore, the Leith Dock Commissioners shall, on the fifteenth day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, pay to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners the sum of forty thousand pounds, in redemption of the said annual sum of two thousand pounds, with interest of the said sum of forty thousand pounds at the rate of five pounds per centum per annum from the date of payment till paid; and on payment of the said sum of forty thousand pounds, and any interest which may become due thereon, the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners shall grant a discharge thereof and of the said annual sum of two thousand pounds, and the said annual sum of seven thousand six hundred and eighty pounds payable out of the revenues of the said harbour and docks shall be reduced and restricted to five thousand six hundred and eighty pounds per annum, and the said annual sum of two thousand pounds shall cease to be payable by the said Remembrancer and Auditor of the Court of Exchequer to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners.

15. For the purpose of raising the said redemption money, it shall be lawful for the Leith Dock Commissioners, in addition to any money borrowed or authorised to be borrowed by them before the passing of this Act, to borrow any sums of money not exceeding forty thousand pounds, and in security of the payment of the sums so borrowed and the interest thereon, to make and grant mortgages and assignments of the said harbour and docks, and the works and property vested in or acquired or to be acquired or constructed by the Leith Dock Commissioners, and the rates and duties to be levied by them under the authority of the Acts relating to the said harbour and docks, or any of them, or to accept and take from any bank credit on a cash account to be opened and kept with such bank in the name of the Leith Dock Commissioners, according to the usage of bankers in Scotland, or in such other form as may be preferred by such bank, to the extent of the said sum of forty thousand pounds or any part thereof, and, if required, to make and grant mortgages and assignments of the said harbour and docks and the said works, and property and rates and duties, in security of the payment of the amount of such credit, or of the sums advanced from time to time on such cash account, with interest thereon; and if after having borrowed the said sum, or any part thereof, the Leith Dock Commissioners pay off the same otherwise than by means of any sinking fund, it shall be lawful for them again to borrow the amount so paid off, and so from time to time; and the mortgages and assignments to be made and granted by the Leith Dock Commissioners may be in writing or printed, or partly in writing and partly printed, and shall be sealed with their common seal, and signed at and in presence of a meeting of the Leith Dock Commissioners, in the manner prescribed by the Public Act seventh Victoria, chapter twenty..

16. The clauses of "The Commissioners Clauses Act, 1847," with respect to the mortgages to be executed by the Commissioners, with the exception of section eighty-four, are hereby incorporated with this Act, and shall be applicable to the money to be borrowed and the mortgages and assignments to be granted by the Leith Dock Commissioners under the authority of this Act.

17. The said sum of forty thousand pounds, and the mortgages and assignments or other securities to be granted therefor, and the interest payable thereon, shall be and are hereby constituted preferable burdens on the said harbour and docks and the said works and property and rates and duties, and shall have priority over all other mortgages, assignments, and securities granted or to be granted by the Leith Dock Commissioners for money borrowed or to be borrowed by them, and over all other payments out of the revenues of the said harbour and docks, except the sum of three thousand one hundred and eighty pounds payable annually to the creditors of the city of Edinburgh in terms of the said Act first and second Victoria, chapter fifty-five, being part of the said annual sum of seven thousand six hundred and eighty pounds, and which annual sum of three thousand one hundred and eighty pounds shall rank pari passu with the said sum of forty thousand pounds and the interest thereon.

18. The money borrowed by the Leith Dock Commissioners under the authority of this Act shall be applied in paying the said sum of forty thousand pounds, and in redeeming the said annual sum of two thousand pounds, and to no other purpose whatever.

19. It shall not be competent to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners, or to any patron or patrons, or to any presbytery, to nominate or present a minister to any of the five churches or charges specified in section twenty-one of the said Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, or to the parish of New Canongate, and the said churches and charges, and the said parish of New Canongate, shall not be provided with ministers or otherwise maintained as churches and charges endowed by law: Provided always, that it shall be competent to the said Commissioners, by a minute under their corporate seal, to annex for all parochial purposes such portions of such of the parishes attached to the said five churches or charges, or of the said parish of New Canongate, as may be specified in such minute to any of the other parishes in the said city or Canongate, and it shall be lawful for said Commissioners to raise to six hundred pounds the stipend of each minister of the city of Edinburgh who is now entitled to a stipend of five hundred and fifty pounds only.

Provided further, that nothing herein contained shall prevent the Tolbooth Church, and the old church, or either of them, being provided with a minister or ministers of the Church of Scotland who shall be paid or endowed from voluntary sources; and in case a permanent endowment from voluntary sources shall be provided and secured to a minister or ministers for both or either of said churches, and provision made for maintaining the church or churches, all in such manner as to warrant the erection and constitution of a church and parish quoad sacra, according to the existing law, the said Commissioners are hereby authorised and required to concur so far as may be necessary on their part in the proper proceedings, before the court of Commissioners of Teinds, in order to the erection and constitution of a church and parish quoad sacra with respect to both or either of said churches.

20. The patronage of the parish churches of the city of Edinburgh is hereby transferred to and vested in the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners as trustees for the respective congregations of said churches, and the said Commissioners shall on the occurrence of each vacancy exercise the said patronage by issuing a presentation in accordance with the desire of the congregation of the vacant church as expressed by a majority of the male communicants thereof, whose names have been on the communion roll for not less than one year immediately preceding the vacancy; and the said Commissioners shall be at liberty from time to time to make regulations with respect to the mode of taking the votes of such communicants.

21. The said Ecclesiastical Commissioners shall be entitled and bound to invest the whole money which shall be paid to them under this Act on such securities as they shall consider proper, or in the purchase of land, and shall be entitled and bound to use and apply the interest, rents, and proceeds thereof for the purposes specified in the said Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, and this Act.

22. It shall be in the power of the Commissioners to increase the stipends of the whole ministers falling under the operation of this Act, rateably according to the amount presently payable to each, and that by minute under their corporate seal.

23. The annual produce of the mortification of David Makcall, mentioned in section six of the Act of thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven, shall hereafter be paid by the magistrates and town council to the Edinburgh Ecclesiastical Commissioners, and together with the bishop's rents, kirkyard dues, and other sums, with the exception of sums contributed by the Endowment Committee of the Church of Scotland, vested in the said Commissioners by section seven of the said Act, shall be appropriated by them solely to the use of the minister of the parish of Canongate.

24. The Commissioners may, if they think fit, with the consent and approval of the presbytery of Edinburgh, or a majority of the same, sell and dispose of, or let or lease, the church situate within the new parish of Canongate, sometime called New Street Church, and the price or rents, as the case may be, to be received by the Commissioners shall be held and applied by them as herein-after directed.

25. The Commissioners shall be bound to keep accounts of their receipts and expenditure, under the Acts of twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, and the Act of thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven, and this Act, and to apply the property and income to be received by them according to the following provisions; that is to say,—

1. They shall keep two separate and distinct accounts, one to be called (and herein-after referred to as) "The Stipend Fund Account," and another to be called (and herein-after referred to as) "The General Purposes Fund Account."
2. Until the redemption moneys mentioned in sections one and fourteen of this Act shall have been paid, the following sums shall be annually paid into an account to be called "The Stipend Fund Income Account :—"

1. The present annual payment of four thousand two hundred pounds, and two thousand pounds.
2. The proceeds of the seat rents of the churches the stipends whereof are paid by the Commissioners to the extent of one thousand six hundred pounds.
3. The sum payable to the said Ecclesiastical Commissioners in terms of the fourth section of said Act thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven.

After the redemption of either of the said present annual payments, the following sums shall be paid into the "Stipend Fund Income Account :—"

1. The interest or annual proceeds of the redemption money of the payment which has been redeemed.
2. The annual payment which has not been redeemed.
3. The said seat rents to the extent of two thousand pounds in the event of its being the payment from exchequer which shall be redeemed, and to the extent of three thousand pounds in the event of its being the bond of annuity which shall be redeemed.
4. In the event of its being the payment from exchequer which shall be redeemed the sum payable to the Ecclesiastical Commissioners under the fourth section of the Act thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven.

After the redemption of both annual payments, the following sums shall be paid into the said "Stipend Fund Income Account :—"

1. The interest of the redemption moneys.
2. The seat rents to the extent of four thousand two hundred pounds.
3. The balance, if any, of the seat rents, beyond the sum of four thousand two hundred pounds, and all other funds payable to and revenues received by the Commissioners, shall be exclusively applicable to and be paid to the credit of "The General Purposes Fund."
4. Out of the Stipend Fund Account the Commissioners shall make payment, in two equal portions, at the terms of Candlemas and Whitsunday one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and annually thereafter, to each of the ministers for the time being of the parochial churches of the said city after mentioned, or to any person duly authorised to receive the same on behalf of the said ministers, a stipend or salary of six hundred pounds per annum, except as after mentioned; that is to say, to the ministers of the thirteen following churches, namely, the New North Church, Trinity College Church, Lady Yester's Church, Old Greyfriars' Church, New Greyfriars' Church, St. John's Church, St. George's Church, St. Mary's Church, St. Stephen's Church, Greenside Church, The High Church, The Tron Church, and St. Andrew's Church, provided that the portion of the said salaries or stipends to be paid at the term of Candlemas shall be for the period from Whitsunday to Michaelmas preceding, and the portion to be paid at the term of Whitsunday shall be for the period from Michaelmas to Whitsunday, and shall be subject to the whole conditions applicable by law to the stipends or salaries formerly payable to the ministers of Edinburgh from the produce of the impost or tax formerly levied under the name of the annuity tax within the ancient and extended royalties of the city of Edinburgh, as referred to in the second section of the Act of twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty; provided always, that the ministers of the following churches, viz., the Trinity College Church, the Tron Church, Old Greyfriars' Church, and St. Stephen's Church, shall not be entitled to demand a salary or stipend of more than five hundred and fifty pounds per annum until the events herein-after specified; and also provided, that, upon the death or removal of any of the present ministers of the nine remaining churches, the successor or successors of such minister or ministers shall not be entitled to demand a salary or stipend of more than five hundred and fifty pounds per annum, until the events after specified. Further, the Commissioners, while the bond of annuity and payment from exchequer remains unredeemed, shall pay to the minister of the Canongate Church the sums of money specified under the ninth section of the Act thirtieth and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven; provided always, that after the said bond and payment have been redeemed, the minister of the said Canongate Church shall not be entitled to demand more than two hundred and fifty pounds, until the events after specified; and if the Stipend Fund Account shall not be sufficient to pay in any year the stipends due to the existing incumbents, the Commissioners shall be authorised, as often as any deficiency arises, to raise and apply such portion of the capital as may be necessary to meet such payments; and after the payment of such stipends, and also after repaying any such sum as may have been contributed out of the capital to meet deficiencies, the Commissioners shall, at their option, and according to their discretion, apply the balance, if any, of the Stipend Fund Account for any of the other purposes authorised by the Acts of twenty-three and twenty-four Victoria, chapter fifty, and thirty and thirty-one Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven, and this Act, except those hereby specially charged on the "General Purposes Fund." Provided always, that if at any time the Stipend Fund Account shall not in the opinion of the Commissioners be sufficient to enable them to pay to any minister to be hereafter appointed to any church, the stipend whereof is by this Act made payable by the Commissioners, the full amount of the stipend which under this Act he is entitled to receive, they shall not be required to pay to any such minister a greater sum than such proportion of his stipend as the said Stipend Fund Account will in their opinion then enable them to pay.

5. The Commissioners shall hold the General Purposes Fund Account for the purposes following, that is to say,—

(First.) The costs, charges, and expenses properly incurred by the Commissioners, and in payment of the salaries of all officers and servants properly employed by them in carrying the provisions of this and the recited Acts into effect, and of the feu duties payable by the Commissioners; and in insuring the several churches against loss by fire, to such extent as they shall think necessary; and maintaining and upholding in repair the fabric thereof, and in payment of the proportion of the salaries of the clerk of the synod of Lothian and Tweeddale, and the clerk and officer of the presbytery of Edinburgh, payable for the said churches, or any of them.

(Second.) So far as the Commissioners may consider necessary, and in the event of the kirk sessions, or any of them, not being able to pay the same out of the church-door collections or otherwise, the whole or any part of the expenses of the celebration of Divine ordinances in the respective churches, and in the maintenance and repair of the fabrics of the said churches.

And with regard to Montrose, be it enacted as follows:

26. At or before the first term of Whitsunday following the vacancy in the second charge of the church and parish of Montrose, first occurring after the passing of this Act, the provost, magistrates, and town council of the said burgh shall pay from the first and readiest of the corporate funds of the said burgh to the kirk session of the said church and parish the sum of one thousand five hundred pounds, and shall within two months of the passing of this Act execute and deliver to the treasurer of the said kirk session for their behoof, a bond therefor in the terms contained in Schedule (C.) annexed to this Act, and shall likewise execute and deliver to the said kirk session a valid transfer in their favour of the whole pews or seats in said church now belonging to the said provost, magistrates, and town council, with entry thereto at the first term of Whitsunday following said vacancy, and the annual interest of the said sum of one thousand five hundred pounds and the annual rents of said pews or seats shall be paid by the said kirk session to the succeeding minister of the said second charge and his successors in office by equal portions at the terms of Martinmas and Whitsunday respectively.

27. From and after the first term of Whitsunday or of Martinmas following the vacancy in the second charge, out of the first and readiest of the whole rents of lands and church seats, feu duties, ground annuals, and interest of moneys now belonging to or administered by the said kirk session, their treasurer or others on their behalf, the said kirk session, treasurer, and others shall pay to the succeeding minister of the said second charge and his successors in office an annual sum of seventy pounds by equal portions at the terms of Martinmas and Whitsunday respectively, which annual sum shall be a real and preferable first charge and burden in favour of the said second minister and his successors in office upon the said lands, feu duties, ground annuals, and interests aforesaid, and upon the gross rents and revenues arising therefrom, after deduction only from such gross rents and revenues of the minister's stipend the public and local burdens and taxes and the expenses of repairs of buildings belonging to the said kirk session upon said lands.

28. From and after the said term of Whitsunday or Martinmas following the vacancy in the said second charge, the said kirk session shall, out of the first and readiest of the ordinary church-door collections, pay, by equal portions, at the terms of Martinmas and Whitsunday respectively, to the succeeding minister and his successors in office, an annual sum of not less than sixty pounds, which annual sum shall be the first charge upon the said collections; and the remainder, if any, of such collections shall belong to and be applied by the said kirk session for the payment of precentors, beadles, doorkeepers, and other officers of the said church and kirk session, and for such other purposes connected with the said church and parish as the said kirk session shall think fit.

29. From and after the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas following the vacancy in the second charge of the church and parish of Montrose first occurring after the passing of this Act, it shall be lawful for the kirk session of the said church and parish, and they are hereby required, to impose and levy pew or seat rents or assessments on not more than nine tenths of the pews or seats in the said church, at such rate as shall, in addition to the aforesaid annual interest of the said sum of one thousand five hundred pounds, the annual rents of the said pews or seats to be transferred as aforesaid, the said sum of seventy pounds, and the said sum of not less than sixty pounds, together with any stipend or salary which may arise from the interest of any endowment hereafter made for the minister of the second charge, or which may be provided for him by means of special church-door collections, yield an annual sum sufficient to provide for such minister and his successors in office a stipend not exceeding the sum of three hundred and forty pounds.

30. The said pew or seat rents or assessments so imposed and levied shall be exigible from and payable by the proprietors of said pews or seats, and that annually and in advance, from and after the first term of Whitsunday or Martinmas following said vacancy, and in the event of two years pew or seat rents or assessments so imposed being due by any proprietor at one time, such proprietor (or the person acting for him in uplifting the said seat rents) shall, upon receiving two months written notice to that effect, ipso facto, forfeit and lose all right and title to the said pews or seats, and the same shall thenceforth become the property of the said kirk session, and be used or let by them, and shall be subject to the same rent or assessment in favour of the second minister as if the same had remained the property of the original proprietor. Provided always, that such proprietor or his successors shall be entitled to redeem the same at any time thereafter, upon payment to the kirk session of all arrears of rents or assessments, and interest arising thereon at the rate of five pounds per cent. per annum, but without any claim against the said kirk session for any rents which may have been uplifted therefrom during the possession of the said kirk session.

31. Power is hereby given to the kirk session (or a majority thereof), with the sanction of the presbytery of Brechin (or a majority thereof), previous to the appointment of any clergyman to any vacancy in the said second charge, to fix the amount of stipend to be paid to such clergyman, and raised in manner aforesaid, provided that such shall not exceed the foresaid sum of three hundred and forty pounds.

32. Section six of the Act twenty-third and twenty-fourth Victoria, chapter fifty, and section eight of the Act thirty and thirty-first Victoria, chapter one hundred and seven, so far as they authorise the respective kirk sessions to retain any portion of the seat rents for any purpose, and all laws, statutes, and usages, in so far as the same are at variance with the provisions of this Act, are hereby repealed.

CHAP. 88.

The Telegraph Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title of Act.
2. Incorporation of provisions of Telegraph Acts, 1868, 1869.
3. Extension of those Acts to Channel Islands and Isle of Man.
4. Power to purchase the undertaking of the Jersey and Guernsey Telegraph Company, Limited.
5. Confirmation of agreement with the Isle of Man Electric Telegraph Company.
6. Postmaster General may purchase undertakings of companies for transmitting telegrams to Channel Islands.
7. Reservation as to the undertaking of the Submarine Telegraph Company.
8. Amendment of section 6 of the Act of 1868.
9. Saving agreements scheduled in the Act of 1868.

Schedule.

An Act to extend the Telegraph Acts of 1868, 1869, to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient for the interests of the public that the provisions of the Telegraph Acts, 1868, 1869, should be extended to the Channel Islands and the Isle of Man, and that the said Acts should be otherwise amended :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as "The Telegraph Act, 1870," and this Act and the "Telegraph Acts, 1868, 1869," may be cited together as "The Telegraph Acts, 1868 to 1870."

2. The provisions of the Telegraph Acts, 1868, 1869, save so far as they are expressly repealed or varied by or inconsistent with the provisions of this Act, shall be incorporated and construed as one with this Act.

3. The Telegraph Acts, 1868, 1869, shall extend to and be in force in the Islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Sark, Alderney, and Man, and the islands and islets adjacent thereto respectively, and for all the purposes of the said Acts and each of them the said islands and islets shall respectively be deemed to be part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland.

4. The Postmaster General shall purchase the undertaking of the Jersey and Guernsey Telegraph Company, Limited, upon terms to be settled (failing agreement) by arbitration, in manner provided by the Lands Clauses Consolidation Act, 1845, and the said company shall sell and convey the said undertaking accordingly; and the said Postmaster General shall be let into the possession of the said undertaking immediately upon the passing of this Act, and he shall pay the purchase money or compensation for the same within one month after the amount thereof shall have been ascertained, with interest at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum from the date of his taking possession until the time of payment.

5. The agreement referred to in the schedule to this Act is hereby confirmed, and the Postmaster General shall purchase, and the Isle of Man Electric Telegraph Company shall sell and convey, the undertaking of the same company upon the terms of the said agreement; and the Postmaster General shall be let into the possession of the said undertaking immediately upon the passing of this Act, and shall pay interest at four pounds per centum per annum on the purchase money from the same date until the time of payment.

6. Upon the request in writing of any telegraph company existing on the fifth day of February one thousand eight hundred and seventy, and engaged in transmitting telegrams between Great Britain or Ireland and the said islands or any of them, or between any one of the said islands and any other of them, or within any one of the said islands, or for all or any of such objects, the Postmaster General shall purchase the whole or any part of the undertaking of such company, provided such request be made within twelve months after the passing of this Act; and the Postmaster General shall accordingly, within one month after the receipt by him of any such request, give notice in writing of his intention to make such purchase, and it shall be lawful for such telegraph company and they are hereby required to sell, convey, and assure their undertaking accordingly, and to give valid discharges for the purchase money.

7. Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall authorize or require the Postmaster General to purchase the undertakings of the Submarine Telegraph Company between Great Britain and the continent of Europe, and the Submarine Telegraph Company between France and England (Société Carmichael et Co.), or either of them or any part thereof respectively.

8. Whereas doubts have been suggested as to the effect of the sixth section of the Telegraph Act, 1868, it is hereby declared that, notwithstanding anything therein contained, any company whose undertaking shall be purchased by the Postmaster General under or by virtue of this Act, and any company whose undertaking has been or shall be purchased by the Postmaster General under or by virtue of the Telegraph Acts, 1868, 1869, or either of them, may sue or be sued for any debts owing to or by or for any damages recoverable by or from such company, or for the purpose of enforcing any rights and remedies of or against such company, which shall have accrued before the date of the transfer to the Postmaster General of the undertaking of such company.

9. Nothing in this Act contained shall in anywise prejudice or affect any of the agreements referred to in the schedule to the Telegraph Act, 1868, and thereby confirmed.

CHAP. 89.

Queen Anne's Bounty (Superannuation).

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Power to governors out of their general fund to grant retired allowances.
2. Power to grant gratuities in certain cases where officers or clerks not entitled by length of service to superannuation.
3. No superannuation to be granted unless approved by Treasury.
4. Restrictions as to grant of full superannuation allowance.
5. Superannuation not to be granted to officers or clerks under 60, except upon medical certificate.
6. Superannuation not to be granted on advanced amount of salary received for less than three years.
7. Superannuations to be inserted in annual return.
8. Act not to confer right to superannuation or employment.
9. Officers appointed under this Act to be subject to regulations hereafter made by Parliament.

An Act to enable the Governors of Queen Anne's Bounty to provide Superannuation Allowances for their Officers.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient that due regulations should be made with regard to the granting of superannuation allowances to the officers and clerks employed by the Governors of the Bounty of Queen Anne:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. Subject to the exceptions and provisions herein-after contained, the said governors may pay out of their general fund allowances on retirement from the office to officers and clerks who shall have served in an established capacity in the permanent service of the governors, not exceeding the following; viz.,

To any officer or clerk who shall have served for ten years and upwards and under eleven years, an annual allowance of ten sixtieths of the annual salary and emoluments of his office:

For eleven years and under twelve years an annual allowance of eleven sixtieths of such salary and emoluments, and in like manner an additional annual allowance of one sixtieth in respect of each additional year of such service until the completion of a period of service of forty years, when the annual allowance of forty sixtieths may be granted, and no addition shall be made in respect of any service beyond forty years.

2. The said governors may grant to any officer or clerk in their service who, being the holder of an office in respect of which a superannuation allowance may be granted, but not having completed the period which would have entitled him to a superannuation allowance, is constrained from infirmity of mind or body to leave the service of the governors before the completion of the period which would entitle him to a superannuation allowance, such sum of money by way of gratuity as the said governors shall think proper, but so that no gratuity shall exceed the amount of one month's pay for each year's service.

3. No superannuation allowance or gratuity under this Act shall be granted to any officer or clerk until the application, with the certificate and the award of the said governors, shall have been submitted to and approved of by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury: Provided also, that if any question shall arise as to the claim of any officer or clerk for superannuation under this Act it shall be referred to the Commissioners of the Treasury, whose decision shall be final.

4. It shall not be lawful to grant or sanction the full amount of superannuation allowance which can be granted under this Act to any officer or clerk unless upon production of a certificate from the governors that such officer or clerk has served with diligence and fidelity to the satisfaction of the said governors; provided that the said governors may grant to any officer or clerk any such allowance of less amount than otherwise would have been awarded to him where his defaults or demerit may appear to them and the Commissioners of the Treasury to justify such diminution.

5. It shall not be lawful to grant any superannuation allowance under the provisions of this Act to any officer or clerk who shall be under sixty years of age, unless upon a medical certificate to the satisfaction of the said governors and the Commissioners of the Treasury that he is incapable from infirmity of mind or body to discharge the duties of his situation, and that such infirmity is likely to be permanent.

6. Provided always, and be it further enacted, that the superannuation allowance to be granted to any officer or clerk after the passing of this Act shall not be computed upon the amount of the salary enjoyed by him at the time of his retirement, unless he shall have been in the receipt of the same, or in the class from which he retires, for a period of at least three years immediately before the granting of such superannuation allowance; and in case he shall not have enjoyed his then existing salary or have been in such class for that period, such superannuation allowance shall be calculated upon the average amount of salary received by such officer or clerk for three years next preceding the commencement of such allowance.

7. A return of all superannuation allowances and gratuities made during the year under this Act, setting forth in each case the length of service, the salary, and the allowance or gratuity awarded, together with the special grounds, if any, on which such allowances have been awarded, shall be inserted by the governors each year in their annual return to Her Majesty in Council, and laid before both Houses of Parliament.

8. This Act shall be held only to authorise and enable the governors from time to time, if they think fit, to grant allowances and gratuities of such amount as is authorised by this Act; and nothing in this Act shall be held to confer on any officer or clerk any right to superannuation, or any greater right to permanent employment, than he would have enjoyed if this Act had not passed.

9. Every person who shall be appointed after the passing of this Act to any office or employment under the governors shall hold the same subject to all regulations and alterations affecting the same which may hereafter be made by authority of Parliament; nor shall any person by his appointment to any such office acquire any claim or title to compensation in case the same be hereafter altered or abolished by Act of Parliament.

An Act to regulate the conduct of Her Majesty's Subjects during the existence of hostilities between foreign states with which Her Majesty is at peace.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to make provision for the regulation of the conduct of Her Majesty's subjects during the existence of hostilities between foreign states with which Her Majesty is at peace:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Preliminary.

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Foreign Enlistment Act, 1870."
2. This Act shall extend to all the dominions of Her Majesty, including the adjacent territorial waters.

3. This Act shall come into operation in the United Kingdom immediately on the passing thereof, and shall be proclaimed in every British possession by the governor thereof as soon as may be after he receives notice of this Act, and shall come into operation in that British possession on the day of such proclamation, and the time at which this Act comes into operation in any place is, as respects such place, in this Act referred to as the commencement of this Act.

Illegal Enlistment.

4. If any person, without the license of Her Majesty, being a British subject, within or without Her Majesty's dominions, accepts or agrees to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any foreign state at peace with Her Majesty, and in this Act referred to as a friendly state, or whether a British subject or not within Her Majesty's dominions, induces any other person to accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any such foreign state as aforesaid,—

He shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

5. If any person, without the license of Her Majesty, being a British subject, quits or goes on board any ship with a view of quitting Her Majesty's dominions, with intent to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state, or whether a British subject or not, within Her Majesty's dominions, induces any other person to quit or to go on board any ship with a view of quitting Her Majesty's dominions with the like intent,—

He shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

6. If any person induces any other person to quit Her Majesty's dominions or to embark on any ship within Her Majesty's dominions under a misrepresentation or false representation of the service in which such person is to be engaged, with the intent or in order that such person may accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state,—

He shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

7. If the master or owner of any ship, without the license of Her Majesty, knowingly either takes on board, or engages to take on board, or has on board such ship within Her Majesty's dominions any of the following persons, in this Act referred to as illegally enlisted persons; that is to say,

- (1.) Any person who, being a British subject within or without the dominions of Her Majesty, has, without the license of Her Majesty, accepted or agreed to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state:
- (2.) Any person, being a British subject, who, without the license of Her Majesty, is about to quit Her Majesty's dominions with intent to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state:

- (3.) Any person who has been induced to embark under a misrepresentation or false representation of the service in which such person is to be engaged, with the intent or in order that such person may accept or agree to accept any commission or engagement in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state:

Such master or owner shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and the following consequences shall ensue; that is to say,

- (1.) The offender shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour: and
- (2.) Such ship shall be detained until the trial and conviction or acquittal of the master or owner, and until all penalties inflicted on the master or owner have been paid, or the master or owner has given security for the payment of such penalties to the satisfaction of two justices of the peace, or other magistrate or magistrates having the authority of two justices of the peace: and
- (3.) All illegally enlisted persons shall immediately on the discovery of the offence be taken on shore, and shall not be allowed to return to the ship.

Illegal Shipbuilding and Illegal Expeditions.

8. If any person within Her Majesty's dominions, without the license of Her Majesty, does any of the following acts; that is to say,—

- (1.) Builds or agrees to build, or causes to be built any ship: with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state: or
- (2.) Issues or delivers any commission for any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state: or
- (3.) Equips any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state: or
- (4.) Despatches, or causes or allows to be despatched, any ship with intent or knowledge, or having reasonable cause to believe that the same shall or will be employed in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state :

Such person shall be deemed to have committed an offence against this Act, and the following consequences shall ensue :

(1.) The offender shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour :

(2.) The ship in respect of which any such offence is committed, and her equipment, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty :

Provided that a person building, causing to be built, or equipping a ship in any of the cases aforesaid, in pursuance of a contract made before the commencement of such war as aforesaid, shall not be liable to any of the penalties imposed by this section in respect of such building or equipping if he satisfies the conditions following; (that is to say.)

(1.) If forthwith upon a proclamation of neutrality being issued by Her Majesty he gives notice to the Secretary of State that he is so building, causing to be built, or equipping such ship, and furnishes such particulars of the contract and of any matters relating to, or done, or to be done under the contract as may be required by the Secretary of State :

(2.) If he gives such security, and takes and permits to be taken such other measures, if any, as the Secretary of State may prescribe for ensuring that such ship shall not be despatched, delivered, or removed without the license of Her Majesty until the termination of such war as aforesaid.

9. Where any ship is built by order of or on behalf of any foreign state when at war with a friendly state, or is delivered to or to the order of such foreign state, or any person who to the knowledge of the person building is an agent of such foreign state, or is paid for by such foreign state or such agent, and is employed in the military or naval service of such foreign state, such ship shall, until the contrary is proved, be deemed to have been built with a view to being so employed, and the burden shall lie on the builder of such ship of proving that he did not know that the ship was intended to be so employed in the military or naval service of such foreign state.

10. If any person within the dominions of Her Majesty, and without the license of Her Majesty,—

By adding to the number of the guns, or by changing those on board for other guns, or by the addition of any equipment for war, increases or augments, or procures to be increased or augmented, or is knowingly concerned in increasing or augmenting the warlike force of any ship which at the time of her being within the dominions of Her Majesty was a ship in the military or naval service of any foreign state at war with any friendly state,—

Such person shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour.

11. If any person within the limits of Her Majesty's dominions, and without the license of Her Majesty,—

Prepares or fits out any naval or military expedition to proceed against the dominions of any friendly state, the following consequences shall ensue :

(1.) Every person engaged in such preparation or fitting out, or assisting therein, or employed in any capacity in such expedition, shall be guilty of an offence against this Act, and shall be punishable by fine and imprisonment, or either of such punishments, at the discretion of the court before which the offender is convicted; and imprisonment, if awarded, may be either with or without hard labour :

(2.) All ships, and their equipments, and all arms and munitions of war, used in or forming part of such expedition, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty.

12. Any person who aids, abets, counsels, or procures the commission of any offence against this Act shall be liable to be tried and punished as a principal offender.

13. The term of imprisonment to be awarded in respect of any offence against this Act shall not exceed two years.

Illegal Prize.

14. If, during the continuance of any war in which Her Majesty may be neutral, any ship, goods, or merchandise captured as prize of war within the territorial jurisdiction of Her Majesty, in violation of the neutrality of this realm, or captured by any ship which may have been built, equipped, commissioned, or despatched, or the force of which may have been augmented, contrary to the provisions of this Act, are brought within the limits of Her Majesty's dominions by the captor, or any agent of the captor, or by any person having come into possession thereof with knowledge that the same was prize of war so captured as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the original owner of such prize, or his agent, or for any person authorised in that behalf by the Government of the foreign state to which such owner belongs, to make application to the Court of Admiralty for seizure and detention of such prize, and the court shall, on due proof of the facts, order such prize to be restored.

Every such order shall be executed and carried into effect in the same manner, and subject to the same right of appeal, as in case of any order made in the exercise of the ordinary jurisdiction of such court; and in the meantime and until a final order has been made on such application the court shall have power to make all such provisional and other orders as to the care or custody of such captured ship, goods, or merchandise, and (if the same be of perishable nature, or incurring risk of deterioration,) for the sale thereof, and with respect to the deposit or investment of the proceeds of any such sale, as may be made by such court in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction.

General Provision.

15. For the purposes of this Act, a license by Her Majesty shall be under the sign manual of Her Majesty, or be signified by Order in Council or by proclamation of Her Majesty.

Legal Procedure.

16. Any offence against this Act shall, for all purposes of and incidental to the trial and punishment of any person guilty of any such offence, be deemed to have been committed either in the place in which the offence was wholly or partly committed, or in any place within Her Majesty's dominions in which the person who committed such offence may be.

17. Any offence against this Act may be described in any indictment or other document relating to such offence, in cases where the mode of trial requires such a description, as having been committed at the place where it was wholly or partly committed, or it may be averred generally to have been committed within Her Majesty's dominions, and the venue or local description in the margin may be that of the county, city, or place in which the trial is held.

18. The following authorities, that is to say, in the United Kingdom any judge of a superior court, in any other place within the jurisdiction of any British court of justice, such court, or, if there are more courts than one, the court having the highest criminal jurisdiction in that place, may, by warrant or instrument in the nature of a warrant in this section included in the term "warrant," direct that any offender charged with an offence against this Act shall be removed to some other place in Her Majesty's dominions for trial in cases where it appears to the authority granting the warrant that the removal of such offender would be conducive to the interests of justice, and any prisoner so removed shall be triable at the place to which he is removed, in the same manner as if his offence had been committed at such place.

Any warrant for the purposes of this section may be addressed to the master of any ship or to any other person or persons, and the person or persons to whom such warrant is addressed shall have power to convey the prisoner therein named to any place or places named in such warrant, and to deliver him, when arrived at such place or places, into the custody of any authority designated by such warrant.

Every prisoner shall, during the time of his removal under any such warrant as aforesaid, be deemed to be in the legal custody of the person or persons empowered to remove him.

19. All proceedings for the condemnation and forfeiture of a ship, or ship and equipment, or arms and munitions of war, in pursuance of this Act, shall require the sanction of the Secretary of State or such chief executive authority as is in this Act mentioned, and shall be had in the Court of Admiralty, and not in any other court; and the Court of Admiralty shall, in addition to any power given to the court by this Act, have in respect of any ship or other matter brought before it in pursuance of this Act all powers which it has in the case of a ship or matter brought before it in the exercise of its ordinary jurisdiction.

20. Where any offence against this Act has been committed by any person by reason whereof a ship, or ship and equipment, or arms and munitions of war, has or have become liable to forfeiture, proceedings may be instituted, contemporaneously or not, as may be thought fit, against the offender in any court having jurisdiction of the offence, and against the ship, or ship and equipment, or arms and munitions of war, for the forfeiture in the Court of Admiralty; but it shall not be necessary to take proceedings against the offender because proceedings are instituted for the forfeiture, or to take proceedings for the forfeiture because proceedings are taken against the offender.

21. The following officers, that is to say,
(1.) Any officer of customs in the United Kingdom, subject nevertheless to any special or general instructions from the Commissioners of Customs, or any officer of the Board of Trade, subject nevertheless to any special or general instructions from the Board of Trade;

- (2.) Any officer of customs or public officer in any British possession, subject nevertheless to any special or general instructions from the governor of such possession;
- (3.) Any commissioned officer on full pay in the military service of the Crown, subject nevertheless to any special or general instructions from his commanding officer;
- (4.) Any commissioned officer on full pay in the naval service of the Crown, subject nevertheless to any special or general instructions from the Admiralty or his superior officer.

may seize or detain any ship liable to be seized or detained in pursuance of this Act, and such officers are in this Act referred to as the "local authority;" but nothing in this Act contained shall derogate from the power of the Court of Admiralty to direct any ship to be seized or detained by any officer by whom such court may have power under its ordinary jurisdiction to direct a ship to be seized or detained.

22. Any officer authorised to seize or detain any ship in respect of any offence against this Act may, for the purpose of enforcing such seizure or detention, call to his aid any constable or officers of police, or any officers of Her Majesty's army or navy or marines, or any excise officers or officers of customs, or any harbour-master or dock-master, or any officers having authority by law to make seizures of ships, and may put on board any ship so seized or detained any one or more of such officers to take charge of the same, and to enforce the provisions of this Act, and any officer seizing or detaining any ship under this Act may use force, if necessary, for the purpose of enforcing seizure or detention, and if any person is killed or maimed by reason of his resisting such officer in the execution of his duties, or any person acting under his orders, such officer so seizing or detaining the ship, or other person, shall be freely and fully indemnified as well against the Queen's Majesty, her heirs and successors, as against all persons so killed, maimed, or hurt.

23. If the Secretary of State or the chief executive authority is satisfied that there is a reasonable and probable cause for believing that a ship within Her Majesty's dominions has been or is being built, commissioned, or equipped contrary to this Act, and is about to be taken beyond the limits of such dominions, or that a ship is about to be despatched contrary to this Act, such Secretary of State or chief executive authority shall have power to issue a warrant stating that there is reasonable and probable cause for believing as aforesaid, and upon such warrant the local authority shall have power to seize and search such ship, and to detain the same until it has been either condemned or released by process of law, or in manner herein-after mentioned.

The owner of the ship so detained, or his agent, may apply to the Court of Admiralty for its release, and the court shall as soon as possible put the matter of such seizure and detention in course of trial between the applicant and the Crown.

If the applicant establish to the satisfaction of the court that the ship was not and is not being built, commissioned, or equipped, or intended to be despatched contrary to this Act, the ship shall be released and restored.

If the applicant fail to establish to the satisfaction of the court that the ship was not and is not being built, commissioned, or equipped, or intended to be despatched contrary to this Act, then the ship shall be detained till released by order of the Secretary of State or chief executive authority.

The court may in cases where no proceedings are pending for its condemnation release any ship detained under this section on the owner giving security to the satisfaction of the court that the ship shall not be employed contrary to this Act, notwithstanding that the applicant may have failed to establish to the satisfaction of the court that the ship was not and is not being built, commissioned, or intended to be despatched contrary to this Act. The Secretary of State or the chief executive authority may likewise release any ship detained under this section on the owner giving security to the satisfaction of such Secretary of State or chief executive authority that the ship shall not be employed contrary to this Act, or may release the ship without such security if the Secretary of State or chief executive authority think fit so to release the same.

If the court be of opinion that there was not reasonable and probable cause for the detention, and if no such cause appear in the course of the proceedings, the court shall have power to declare that the owner is to be indemnified by the payment of costs and damages in respect of the detention, the amount thereof to be assessed by the court, and any amount so assessed shall be payable by the Commissioners of the Treasury out of any moneys legally applicable for that purpose. The Court of Admiralty shall also have power to make a like order for the indemnity of the owner, on the application of such owner to the court, in a summary way, in cases where the ship is released by the order of the Secretary of State or the chief executive authority, before any application is made by the owner or his agent to the court for such release.

Nothing in this section contained shall affect any proceedings instituted or to be instituted for the condemnation of any ship detained under this section where such ship is liable to forfeiture, subject to this provision, that if such ship is restored in pursuance of this section all proceedings for such condemnation shall be stayed; and where the court declares that the owner is to be indemnified by the payment of costs and damages for the detainer, all costs, charges, and expenses incurred by such owner in or about any proceedings for the condemnation of such ship shall be added to the costs and damages payable to him in respect of the detention of the ship.

Nothing in this section contained shall apply to any foreign non-commissioned ship despatched from any part of Her Majesty's dominions after having come within them under stress of weather or in the course of a peaceful voyage, and upon which ship no fitting out or equipping of a war-like character has taken place in this country.

24. Where it is represented to any local authority, as defined by this Act, and such local authority believes the representation, that there is a reasonable and probable cause for believing that a ship within Her Majesty's dominions has been or is being built, commissioned, or equipped contrary to this Act, and is about to be taken beyond the limits of such dominions, or that a ship is about to be despatched contrary to this Act, it shall be the duty of such local authority to detain such ship, and forthwith to communicate the fact of such detention to the Secretary of State or chief executive authority.

Upon the receipt of such communication the Secretary of State or chief executive authority may order the ship to be released if he thinks there is no cause for detaining her, but if satisfied that there is reasonable and probable cause for believing that such ship was built, commissioned, or equipped or intended to be despatched in contravention of this Act, he shall issue his warrant stating that there is reasonable and probable cause for believing as aforesaid, and upon such warrant being issued further proceedings shall be had as in cases where the seizure or detention has taken place on a warrant issued by the Secretary of State without any communication from the local authority.

Where the Secretary of State or chief executive authority orders the ship to be released on the receipt of a communication from the local authority without issuing his warrant, the owner of the ship shall be indemnified by the payment of costs and damages in respect of the detention upon application to the Court of Admiralty, in a summary way, in like manner as he is entitled to be indemnified where the Secretary of State having issued his warrant under this Act releases the ship before any application is made by the owner or his agent to the court for such release.

25. The Secretary of State or the chief executive authority may, by warrant, empower any person to enter any dockyard or other place within Her Majesty's dominions, and inquire as to the destination of any ship which may appear to him to be intended to be employed in the naval or military service of any foreign state at war with a friendly state, and to search such ship.

26. Any powers or jurisdiction by this Act given to the Secretary of State may be exercised by him throughout the dominions of Her Majesty, and such powers and jurisdiction may also be exercised by any of the following officers, in this Act referred to as the chief executive authority, within their respective jurisdictions; that is to say,

- (1) In Ireland by the Lord Lieutenant or other the chief governor or governors of Ireland for the time being, or the chief secretary to the Lord Lieutenant:
- (2) In Jersey by the Lieutenant Governor:
- (3) In Guernsey, Alderney, and Sark, and the dependent islands, by the Lieutenant Governor:
- (4) In the Isle of Man by the Lieutenant Governor:
- (5) In any British possession by the Governor.

A copy of any warrant issued by a Secretary of State or by any officer authorised in pursuance of this Act to issue such warrant in Ireland, the Channel Islands, or the Isle of Man shall be laid before Parliament.

27. An appeal may be had from any decision of a Court of Admiralty under this Act to the same tribunal and in the same manner to and in which an appeal may be had in cases within the ordinary jurisdiction of the Court as a Court of Admiralty.

28. Subject to the provisions of this Act providing for the award of damages in certain cases in respect of the seizure or detention of a ship by the Court of Admiralty, no damages shall be payable, and no officer or local authority shall be responsible, either civilly or criminally, in respect of the seizure or detention of any ship in pursuance of this Act.

29. The Secretary of State shall not, nor shall the chief executive authority, be responsible in any action or other legal proceedings whatsoever for any warrant issued by him in pursuance of this Act, or be examinable as a witness, except at his own request, in any court of justice in respect of the circumstances which led to the issue of the warrant.

Interpretation Clause.

30. In this Act, if not inconsistent with the context, the following terms have the meanings herein-after respectively assigned to them; that is to say,

"Foreign state" includes any foreign prince, colony, province, or part of any province or people, or any person or persons exercising or assuming to exercise the powers of government in or over any foreign country, colony, province, or part of any province or people:

"Military service" shall include military telegraphy and any other employment whatever, in or in connexion with any military operation:

"Naval service" shall, as respects a person, include service as a marine, employment as a pilot in piloting or directing the course of a ship of war or other ship when such ship of war or other ship is being used in any military or naval operation, and any employment whatever on board a ship of war, transport, store ship, privateer or ship under letters of marque; and as respects a ship, include any user of a ship as a transport, store ship, privateer or ship under letters of marque:

"United Kingdom" includes the Isle of Man, the Channel Islands, and other adjacent islands:

"British possession" means any territory, colony, or place being part of Her Majesty's dominions, and not part of the United Kingdom, as defined by this Act:

"The Secretary of State" shall mean any one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State:

"The Governor" shall as respects India mean the Governor General or the governor of any presidency, and where a British possession consists of several constituent colonies, mean the Governor General of the whole possession or the Governor of any of the constituent colonies, and as respects any other British possession it shall mean the officer for the time being administering the government of such possession; also any person acting for or in the capacity of a governor shall be included under the term "Governor":

"Court of Admiralty" shall mean the High Court of Admiralty of England or Ireland, the Court of Session of Scotland, or any Vice-Admiralty Court within Her Majesty's dominions:

"Ship" shall include any description of boat, vessel, floating battery, or floating craft; also any description of boat, vessel, or other craft or battery, made to move either on the surface of or under water, or sometimes on the surface of and sometimes under water:

"Building" in relation to a ship shall include the doing any act towards or incidental to the construction of a ship, and all words having relation to building shall be construed accordingly:

"Equipping" in relation to a ship shall include the furnishing a ship with any tackle, apparel, furniture, provisions, arms, munitions, or stores, or any other thing which is used in or about a ship for the purpose of fitting or adapting her for the sea or for naval service, and all words relating to equipping shall be construed accordingly:

"Ship and equipment" shall include a ship and everything in or belonging to a ship:

"Master" shall include any person having the charge or command of a ship.

Repeal of Acts, and Saving Clauses.

31. From and after the commencement of this Act, an Act passed in the fifty-ninth year of the reign of His late Majesty King George the Third chapter sixty-nine, intituled "An Act to prevent the enlisting or engagement of His Majesty's subjects to serve in foreign service, and the fitting out or equipping, in His Majesty's dominions, vessels for warlike purposes, without His Majesty's license," shall be repealed: Provided that such repeal shall not affect any penalty, forfeiture, or other punishment incurred or to be incurred in respect of any offence committed before this Act comes into operation, nor the institution of any investigation or legal proceeding, or any other remedy for enforcing any such penalty, forfeiture, or punishment as aforesaid.

32. Nothing in this Act contained shall subject to forfeiture any commissioned ship of any foreign state, or give to any British court over or in respect of any ship entitled to recognition as a commissioned ship of any foreign state any jurisdiction which it would not have had if this Act had not passed.

33. Nothing in this Act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to subject to any penalty any person who enters into the military service of any prince, state, or potentate in Asia, with such leave or license as is for the time being required by law in the case of subjects of Her Majesty entering into the military service of princes, states, or potentates in Asia.

An Act for the relief of persons admitted to the office of Priest or Deacon in the Church of England.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient that relief be given in respect of civil disabilities and in certain other respects to persons who have been admitted to the office of priest or of deacon in the Church of England:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as The Clerical Disabilities Act, 1870.

2. In this Act—

The term "The Church of England" means the Church of England as by law established;

The term "minister" means a priest or a deacon;

The terms "preferment," "bishop," and "diocese" respectively have the same meaning as in the Act thirdly mentioned in the first schedule to this Act.

3. Any person admitted (before or after the passing of this Act) to the office of minister in the Church of England may, after having resigned any and every preferment held by him, do the following things:—

(1.) He may execute a deed of relinquishment in the form given in the second schedule to this Act:

(2.) He may cause the same to be inrolled in the High Court of Chancery:

(3.) He may deliver an office copy of the inrolment to the bishop of the diocese in which he last held a preferment, or if he has not held any preferment then to the bishop of the diocese in which he is resident, in either case stating his place of residence:

(4.) He may give notice of his having so done to the archbishop of the province in which that diocese is situate.

4. At the expiration of six months after an office copy of the inrolment of a deed of relinquishment has been so delivered to a bishop, he or his successor in office shall, on the application of the person executing the deed, cause the deed to be recorded in the registry of the diocese, and thereupon and thenceforth (but not sooner) the following consequences shall ensue with respect to the person executing the deed:—

(1.) He shall be incapable of officiating or acting in any manner as a minister of the Church of England, and of taking or holding any preferment therein, and shall cease to enjoy all rights, privileges, advantages, and exemptions attached to the office of minister in the Church of England:

(2.) Every license, office, and place held by him for which it is by law an indispensable qualification that the holder thereof should be a minister of the Church of England shall be ipso facto determined and void:

(3.) He shall be by virtue of this Act discharged and free from all disabilities, disqualifications, restraints, and prohibitions to which, if this Act had not been passed, he would, by force of any of the enactments mentioned in the first schedule to this Act or of any other law, have been subject as a person who had been admitted to the office of minister in the Church of England, and from all jurisdiction, penalties, censures, and proceedings to which, if this Act had not been passed, he would or might, under any of the same enactments or any other law, have been amenable or liable in consequence of his having been so admitted and of any act or thing done or omitted by him after such admission.

5. Provided, that if within the aforesaid period of six months the bishop to whom an office copy of the enrolment of a deed of relinquishment is delivered, or his successor in office, has notice of proceedings pending against the person executing the deed as a person who had been admitted to the office of minister in the Church of England, the bishop shall, on the application of that person, cause the deed to be recorded in the registry of the diocese on the termination of those proceedings by a definitive sentence, or interlocutory decree having the force and effect of a definitive sentence, and execution thereof, but not sooner.

6. For the purposes of any proceedings instituted within the aforesaid period of six months against a person executing a deed of relinquishment under this Act, the service of any citation, notice, or other document at the place stated by him in pursuance of this Act as his place of residence shall be good service.

7. A copy of the record in the registry of a diocese of a deed of relinquishment under this Act, duly extracted and certified by the registrar of the bishop, shall be evidence of the due execution, enrolment, and recording of the deed, and of the fulfilment of all the requirements of this Act in relation thereto.

The registrar of the bishop shall, on the application of the person executing the deed, give to him a copy of the record thereof duly extracted and certified, on payment of a fee not exceeding ten shillings for the recording and copy thereof.

8. Nothing in this Act shall relieve any person or his estate from any liability in respect of dilapidations or from any debt or other pecuniary liability incurred or accrued before or after his execution of a deed of relinquishment under this Act, and the same may be enforced and recovered as if this Act had not been passed.

 9. Expense of municipal elections may be defrayed out of assessments for registration.
- Schedule.*

An Act to amend the laws for the Election of the Magistrates and Councillors of Royal and Parliamentary Burghs in Scotland.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the laws relating to the election of the magistrates and councillors of Royal and Parliamentary Burghs in Scotland :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as The Municipal Elections Amendment (Scotland) Act, 1870.

2. The following expressions in this Act shall have the meanings hereby assigned to them, unless there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction ; that is to say,

"Burgh" shall mean any Royal or Parliamentary Burgh in Scotland :

"Election Acts" shall mean the Acts third and fourth William the Fourth, chapters seventy-six and seventy-seven, and thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter one hundred and eight, and any other Acts relating to the election of magistrates and councillors of Royal and Parliamentary Burghs in Scotland which may be in force for the time :

"Registration Acts" shall mean the Act nineteenth and twentieth Victoria, chapter fifty-eight, as amended by the Act thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter forty-eight, and any other Act relating to the registration of persons entitled to vote in the election of members to serve in Parliament for burghs in Scotland which may be in force for the time :

"The assessor" shall mean the assessor of the burgh in and for which he is assessor, appointed and acting under the Acts for the valuation of lands and heritages in Scotland, or any of them.

3. Where at any election of town councillors in any burgh the number of persons whose names have been intimated to the town clerk, under the provisions of the Act thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter one hundred and eight, as persons proposed for election in such burgh, or any ward of such burgh if divided into wards, does not exceed the vacancies to be supplied in such burgh or ward, as the case may be, the town clerk shall, in the public notice to be given by him, as provided by the said Act, of the names of the persons so intimated to him, notify that in respect the number of persons proposed for election does not exceed the number of vacancies to be supplied in the burgh or ward, as the case may be, there will be no poll, and that the persons so proposed will be declared to be elected as councillors of the burgh ; and such notification may be made by an addition in the terms set forth in the schedule to this Act, or in similar terms, to the notice required by the said Act ; and on the day appointed for declaring the election the persons so proposed shall be declared to be duly elected as councillors of the burgh, in the same manner as if they had been elected as councillors under the provisions of the Election Acts, and shall be deemed to be duly elected accordingly ; and every such election of councillors under the provisions of this Act shall be in all respects valid, and notice thereof shall be given to the persons elected in the same manner and to the same effect as is provided by the Election Acts.

4. Where by any Act of Parliament it is provided that any commissioners or trustees under such Act are to be elected by the municipal electors, or at the same time or along with the town councillors of any burgh, the provisions of the Election Acts shall be applicable to every such election of commissioners or trustees ; and where at any such election the number of persons proposed for election as commissioners or trustees does not exceed the number of vacancies to be supplied, the town clerk or other person conducting such election shall notify that there will be no poll ; and such election shall be proceeded with and declared in the same manner as is herein-before provided with respect to the election of town councillors.

5. Where in any burgh or ward two or more councillors have been elected on the same day under the provisions of this Act, or have been elected by an equality of votes under the provisions of the Election Acts, the majority of the town council (including the councillors so elected) shall determine the order in which the councillors so elected shall retire from the town council.

6. In every royal burgh not now entitled to return or contribute to return a member to Parliament, the assessor shall, on or before the fifteenth day of September in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and in every year thereafter, make out or cause to be made out a list of all persons who may be entitled to vote in the election of councillors for such burgh, under the provisions of the Act thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter one hundred and eight, according to the form No. 1 of the schedule A. to the Act nineteenth and twentieth Victoria, chapter fifty-eight; and the same procedure shall be followed with respect to the preparation and publication of every such list, and the completion and revision of the register of voters for such burgh, as is provided by the Act nineteenth and twentieth Victoria, chapter fifty-eight, as amended by the Act thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter forty-eight, with respect to the lists and registers of voters to be made out and completed under the provisions and for the purposes of those Acts; and the lists of voters for any burgh made up, completed, and revised under the provisions of the said Acts and this Act shall be signed by the town clerk, and shall be the register of persons entitled to vote in such burgh at any election of town councillors which shall take place in and for such burgh between the thirty-first day of October in the year in which such register shall have been made up and the first day of November in the succeeding year; and the said register shall be printed, and copies thereof shall be kept by the town clerk and delivered to persons applying therefor, in the same manner and on the same terms as is provided by the Act nineteenth and twentieth Victoria, chapter fifty-eight.

7. The whole costs and expenses of making up, completing, revising, and printing the register of voters in any such burgh, or incident thereto, shall be ascertained and fixed, and the amount thereof shall be assessed, levied, and collected, in the same manner as the costs and expenses attending the annual registration under the Act nineteenth and twentieth Victoria, chapter fifty-eight, are by the said Act appointed to be ascertained, fixed, assessed, levied, and collected; and the provisions of the said Act shall be applicable to the costs and expenses of registration under this Act.

8. Where any burgh has been or shall be divided into wards under the provisions of the Act thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter one hundred and eight, the town councillors of such burgh shall be elected in the same manner as town councillors are elected in burghs divided into wards or districts under the provisions of the Acts third and fourth William the Fourth, chapters seventy-six and seventy-seven, and the provisions of these Acts respectively with reference to the election of councillors shall be and are hereby made applicable to elections of councillors in burghs which have been or shall be divided into wards under the provisions of the said Act thirty-first and thirty-second Victoria, chapter one hundred and eight.

9. The town council of any burgh may from time to time resolve that the costs and expenses of and incident to the election of the town councillors of such burgh, or of any trustees, commissioners, or other persons who are appointed or have been in use to be elected along with such town councillors, shall be defrayed out of the assessments imposed or levied in such burgh under the provisions and for the purposes of the Registration Acts; and after such resolution shall have been adopted, the costs and expenses of and incident to such elections, as ascertained and fixed by the town council, shall be added to the costs and expenses attending the annual registration in such burgh, and shall be included in the assessment to be imposed and levied under the provisions and for the purposes of the Registration Acts.

SCHEDULE.

And I further give notice, in terms of The Municipal Elections Amendment (Scotland) Act, 1870, that in respect the number of persons proposed for election as councillors in the burgh [or in the ward (or wards) or commissioners or trustees, as the case may be,] does not exceed the number of vacancies to be supplied in the burgh [or ward] there will be no poll, and the persons so proposed will on the day appointed for declaring the election be declared to be elected councillors of the burgh [or commissioners or trustees, as the case may be].

An Act to amend the Law relating to the Property of Married Women.
(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is desirable to amend the law of property and contract with respect to married women:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. The wages and earnings of any married woman acquired or gained by her after the passing of this Act in any employment, occupation, or trade in which she is engaged or which she carries on separately from her husband, and also any money or property so acquired by her through the exercise of any literary, artistic, or scientific skill, and all investments of such wages, earnings, money, or property, shall be deemed and taken to be property held and settled to her separate use, independent of any husband to whom she may be married, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for such wages, earnings, money, and property.

2. Notwithstanding any provision to the contrary in the Act of the tenth year of George the Fourth, chapter twenty-four, enabling the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt to grant life annuities and annuities for terms of years, or in the Acts relating to savings banks and post-office savings banks, any deposit hereafter made and any annuity granted by the said Commissioners under any of the said Acts in the name of a married woman, or in the name of a woman who may marry after such deposit or grant, shall be deemed to be the separate property of such woman, and the same shall be accounted for and paid to her as if she were an unmarried woman; provided that if any such deposit is made by, or such annuity granted to, a married woman by means of moneys of her husband without his consent, the Court may, upon an application under section nine of this Act, order such deposit or annuity, or any part thereof, to be paid to the husband.

3. Any married woman, or any woman about to be married, may apply to the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, or to the Governor and Company of the Bank of Ireland, by a form to be provided by the governor of each of the said banks and company for this purpose, that any sum forming part of the public stocks and funds, and not being less than twenty pounds, to which the woman so applying is entitled, or which she is about to acquire, may be transferred to or made to stand in the books of the governor and company to whom such application is made in the name or intended name of the woman as a married woman entitled to her separate use; and on such sum being entered in the books of the said governor and company accordingly the same shall be deemed to be the separate property of such woman, and shall be transferred and the dividends paid as if she were an unmarried woman; provided that if any such investment in the funds is made by a married woman by means of moneys of her husband without his consent, the Court may, upon an application under section nine of this Act, order such investment and the dividends thereof, or any part thereof, to be transferred and paid to the husband.

4. Any married woman, or any woman about to be married, may apply in writing to the directors or managers of any incorporated or joint stock company that any fully paid up shares, or any debenture or debenture stock, or any stock of such company, to the holding of which no liability is attached, and to which the woman so applying is entitled, may be registered in the books of the said company in the name or intended name of the woman as a married woman entitled to her separate use, and it shall be the duty of such directors or managers to register such shares or stock accordingly, and the same upon being so registered shall be deemed to be the separate property of such woman, and shall be transferred and the dividends and profits paid as if she were an unmarried woman; provided that if any such investment as last mentioned is made by a married woman by means of moneys of her husband without his consent, the Court may, upon an application under section nine of this Act, order such investment and the dividends and profits thereon, or any part thereof, to be transferred and paid to the husband.

5. Any married woman, or any woman about to be married, may apply in writing to the committee of management of any industrial and provident society, or to the trustees of any friendly society, benefit building society, or loan society, duly registered, certified, or enrolled under the Acts relating to such societies respectively, that any share, benefit, debenture, right, or claim whatsoever in, to, or upon the funds of such society, to the holding of which share, benefit, or debenture no liability is attached, and to which the woman so applying is entitled, may be entered in the books of the society in the name or intended name of the woman as a married woman entitled to her separate use, and it shall be the duty of such committee or trustees to cause the same to be so entered, and thereupon such share, benefit, debenture, right, or claim shall be deemed to be the separate property of such woman, and shall be transferable and payable with all dividends and profits thereon as if she were an unmarried woman; provided that if any such share, benefit, debenture, right, or claim has been obtained by a married woman by means of moneys of her husband without his consent, the Court may, upon an application under section nine of this Act, order the same and the dividends and profits thereon, or any part thereof, to be transferred and paid to the husband.

6. Nothing herein-before contained in reference to moneys deposited in or annuities granted by savings banks or moneys invested in the funds or in shares or stock of any company shall as against creditors of the husband give validity to any deposit or investment of moneys of the husband made in fraud of such creditors, and any moneys so deposited or invested may be followed as if this Act had not passed.

7. Where any woman married after the passing of this Act shall during her marriage become entitled to any personal property as next of kin or one of the next of kin of an intestate, or to any sum of money not exceeding two hundred pounds under any deed or will, such property shall, subject and without prejudice to the trusts of any settlement affecting the same, belong to the woman for her separate use, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for the same.

8. Where any freehold, copyhold, or customaryhold property shall descend upon any woman married after the passing of this Act as heiress or co-heiress of an intestate, the rents and profits of such property shall, subject and without prejudice to the trusts of any settlement affecting the same, belong to such woman for her separate use, and her receipts alone shall be a good discharge for the same.

9. In any question between husband and wife as to property declared by this Act to be the separate property of the wife, either party may apply by summons or motion in a summary way either to the Court of Chancery in England or Ireland according as such property is in England or Ireland, or in England (irrespective of the value of the property) the judge of the County Court of the district in which either party resides, and thereupon the judge may make such order, direct such inquiry, and award such costs, as he shall think fit; provided that any order made by such judge shall be subject to appeal in the same manner as the order of the same judge made in a pending suit or on an equitable plaint would have been, and the judge may, if either party so require, hear the application in his private room.

10. A married woman may effect a policy of insurance upon her own life or the life of her husband for her separate use, and the same and all benefit thereof, if expressed on the face of it to be so effected, shall enure accordingly, and the contract in such policy shall be as valid as if made with an unmarried woman.

A policy of insurance effected by any married man on his own life, and expressed upon the face of it to be for the benefit of his wife or of his wife and children, or any of them, shall enure and be deemed a trust for the benefit of his wife for her separate use, and of his children, or any of them, according to the interest so expressed, and shall not, so long as any object of the trust remains, be subject to the control of the husband or to his creditors, or form part of his estate. When the sum secured by the policy becomes payable, or at any time previously, a trustee thereof may be appointed by the Court of Chancery in England or in Ireland according as the policy of insurance was effected in England or in Ireland, or in England by the judge of the County Court of the district, or in Ireland by the chairman of the Civil Bill Court of the division of the county in which the insurance office is situated, and the receipt of such trustee shall be a good discharge to the office. If it shall be proved that the policy was effected and premiums paid by the husband with intent to defraud his creditors, they shall be entitled to receive out of the sum secured an amount equal to the premiums so paid.

11. A married woman may maintain an action in her own name for the recovery of any wages, earnings, money, and property by this Act declared to be her separate property, or of any property belonging to her before marriage, and which her husband shall, by writing under his hand, have agreed with her shall belong to her after marriage as her separate property, and she shall have in her own name the same remedies, both civil and criminal, against all persons whomsoever, for the protection and security of such wages, earnings, money, and property, and of any chattels or other property purchased or obtained by means thereof for her own use, as if such wages, earnings, money, chattels, and property belonged to her as an unmarried woman; and in any indictment or other proceeding it shall be sufficient to allege such wages, earnings, money, chattels, and property to be her property.

12. A husband shall not, by reason of any marriage which shall take place after this Act has come into operation, be liable for the debts of his wife contracted before marriage, but the wife shall be liable to be sued for, and any property belonging to her for her separate use shall be liable to satisfy, such debts as if she had continued unmarried.

13. Where in England the husband of any woman having separate property becomes chargeable to any union or parish, the justices having jurisdiction in such union or parish may, in petty sessions assembled, upon application of the guardians of the poor, issue a summons against the wife, and make and enforce such order against her for the maintenance of her husband as by the thirty-third section of "The Poor Law Amendment Act, 1868," they may now make and enforce against a husband for the maintenance of his wife who becomes chargeable to any union or parish. Where in Ireland relief is given under the provisions of the Acts relating to the relief of the destitute poor to the husband of any woman having separate property, the cost price of such relief is hereby declared to be a loan from the guardians of the union in which the same shall be given, and shall be recoverable from such woman as if she were a feme sole by such and the same actions and proceedings as money lent.

14. A married woman having separate property shall be subject to all such liability for the maintenance of her children as a widow is now by law subject to for the maintenance of her children: Provided always, that nothing in this Act shall relieve her husband from any liability at present imposed upon him by law to maintain her children.

15. This Act shall come into operation at the time of the passing of this Act.

16. This Act shall not extend to Scotland.

17. This Act may be cited as the "Married Women's Property Act, 1870."

CHAP. 94.

The Medical Officers Superannuation Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Power to guardians, with consent of Poor Law Board, to grant superannuation allowance to medical officers in certain cases.
2. No allowance to be allowed without a certificate of inspector.
3. Short title. Construction of Act.

An Act to provide for Superannuation Allowances to Medical Officers of Unions, Districts, and Parishes in England and Wales.

(9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient that provision should be made to enable superannuation allowances to be granted to medical officers of unions, districts, and parishes in England and Wales, who become disabled, either by infirmity or age, to discharge the duties of their offices :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. The board of guardians of any union or parish, and the board of management of any district, may, at their discretion, with the consent of the Poor Law Board, grant to any medical officer of such union, district, or parish an annual allowance, under and subject to the provisions of the Act to provide for superannuation allowances to officers of the unions, passed in the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth year of the reign of Her Majesty, chapter forty-two, notwithstanding such medical officer shall not have devoted his entire time to the services of the union, district, or parish, and such allowance shall be paid out of the common fund of the union or district, or out of the poor rate of the parish, as the case may require, exclusively, and no contribution shall be made thereto out of any moneys voted by Parliament.

2. No allowance shall be obtained by any officer under this Act on the ground of permanent infirmity of mind or body unless a poor law inspector, or some person in that behalf authorised by the Poor Law Board, shall have first certified that in his opinion such officer has by reason of such infirmity become incapable of performing the duties of his office with efficiency.

3. This Act may be called "The Medical Officers Superannuation Act, 1870," and shall be construed in like manner as in the Poor Law Amendment Act, 1834, and the subsequent Acts extending or amending the same.

CHAP. 95.

The Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Construction of Act.
3. Authority by Secretary of State to carry naval and military stores in passenger ships.

An Act to authorise the carriage of Naval and Military Stores in Passenger Ships. (9th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by section twenty-nine of the Passengers Act, 1855, it is enacted that "no passenger ship shall clear out or proceed to sea if there shall be on board as cargo, horses, cattle, gunpowder, vitriol, lucifer matches, guano, or green hides, nor if there shall be on board any other article or number of articles, whether as cargo or ballast, which, by reason of the nature or quantity or mode of stowage thereof, shall, either singly or collectively, be deemed by the emigration officer at the port of clearance likely to endanger the health or lives of the passengers, or the safety of the ship:"

And whereas it is expedient that any of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State should be empowered to authorise the carriage in passenger ships of naval and military stores whenever requisite for the public service :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as The Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1870.

2. This Act shall be construed as one with the Passengers Act, 1855, (in this Act referred to as the principal Act,) and the Passengers Act Amendment Act, 1863.

3. Any one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may, by order under his hand, authorise the carriage as cargo in any passenger ship (subject to such conditions and directions as may be specified in the order) of naval and military stores for the public service, and such stores may, notwithstanding anything contained in the principal Act, be carried accordingly in such passenger ship.

Such order shall be addressed to the emigration officer or person performing the duties of emigration officer at the port of clearance, and shall be by him countersigned, and delivered to the master of the passenger ship to which it refers, and shall be delivered up by the master to the chief officer of Customs at the port where the stores are discharged.

The master shall comply with all the conditions and directions specified in the order, and non-compliance therewith shall be deemed non-compliance with the requirements of the said section twenty-nine of the principal Act.

Schedules.

An Act to apply a sum out of the Consolidated Fund to the service of the year ending the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and to appropriate the Supplies granted in this Session of Parliament. (10th August 1870.)

Most Gracious Sovereign,

WE, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards making good the supply which we have cheerfully granted to Your Majesty in this session of Parliament, have resolved to grant unto Your Majesty the sum herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted; and be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

Grant out of Consolidated Fund.

1. The Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for the time being may issue out of the Consolidated Fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, and apply towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty for the service of the year ending on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, the sum of twenty-four million two hundred and eighty-one thousand four hundred and ninety-three pounds.

2. The Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may borrow, from time to time, on the credit of the said sum of twenty-four million two hundred and eighty-one thousand four hundred and ninety-three pounds, any sum or sums of equal or less amount in the whole, and shall repay the money so borrowed, with interest not exceeding five pounds per centum per annum, out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund, at any period not later than the next succeeding quarter to that in which the said sums were borrowed.

Any sums so borrowed shall be placed to the credit of the account of Her Majesty's Exchequer, and shall form part of the said Consolidated Fund, and be available in any manner in which such fund is available.

Appropriation of Grants.

3. All sums granted by this Act and the other Acts mentioned in Schedule (A.) annexed to this Act out of the said Consolidated Fund towards making good the supply granted to Her Majesty, amounting, as appears by the said Schedule, in the aggregate to the sum of forty-two million eight hundred and forty-five thousand six hundred and eighty-four pounds seven shillings and twopence, are appropriated and shall be deemed to have been appropriated as from the date of the passing of the first of the Acts mentioned in the said Schedule (A.) for the purposes and services expressed in Schedule (B.) annexed hereto.

The abstract of schedules and schedules annexed hereto, with the notes (if any) to such schedules, shall be deemed to be part of this Act in the same manner as if they had been contained in the body thereof.

4. If a necessity arise for incurring expenditure not provided for in the sums appropriated to naval and military services by this Act, and which it may be detrimental to the public service to postpone until provision can be made for it by Parliament in the usual course, each of the departments entrusted with the control over the said services shall forthwith make application in writing to the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury for their authority to defray temporarily such expenditure out of any surpluses which may have been or which may be effected by the saving of expenditure upon votes within the same department, and in such application the department shall represent to the Commissioners of the Treasury the circumstances which may render such additional expenditure necessary, and thereupon the said Commissioners may authorise the expenditure, unprovided for as aforesaid to be temporarily defrayed out of any surpluses which may have been or which may be effected as aforesaid upon votes within the same department; and a statement showing all cases in which the naval and military departments have obtained the sanction of the said Commissioners to any expenditure not provided for in the respective votes aforesaid, accompanied by copies of the representations made to them by the said departments, shall be laid before the House of Commons with the appropriation accounts of navy and army services for the year, in order that such proceedings may be submitted for the sanction of Parliament, and that provision may be made for the deficiencies upon the several votes for the said services in such manner as Parliament may determine.

The Commissioners of the Treasury shall not authorise any expenditure which may cause an excess upon the aggregate sums appropriated by this Act, for naval services and for army services respectively.

5. Whereas the Commissioners of the Treasury, under the powers vested in them by the Act of the session held in the thirty-first and thirty-second years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter eighty-five, have authorised expenditure not provided for in the sums appropriated to naval and military services by the said Act to be temporarily defrayed out of surpluses so far as such surpluses will extend which have arisen by the saving of expenditure upon votes within the same department for the year ended on the thirty-first day of March one thousand eight hundred and sixty-nine, as follows:

1st. One hundred and thirty-four thousand three hundred and fifty-seven pounds ten shillings and threepence for navy services unprovided for in the grants for navy services for the said year, temporarily defrayed to the extent of one hundred and thirty-four thousand three hundred and fifty-seven pounds ten shillings and threepence out of surpluses to the said last-mentioned amount, which have arisen upon certain votes for navy services for the same year:

2d. Three hundred and thirty-four thousand six hundred and forty-seven pounds seven shillings and elevenpence for army services unprovided for in the grants for army services for the said year, temporarily defrayed to the extent of three hundred and one thousand nine hundred pounds three shillings and eightpence out of surpluses to the said last-mentioned amount, which have arisen upon certain votes for army services for the same year, and by the application of the sum of thirty-two thousand seven hundred and forty-seven pounds four shillings and threepence, being the sum which has been realized in excess of the estimated appropriations in aid, the said two sums making together the sum of three hundred and thirty-four thousand six hundred and forty-seven pounds seven shillings and elevenpence:

It is enacted that the application of the said sums to cover the said deficiencies is hereby sanctioned.

Permanent Regulations as to certain Payments.

6. The following regulations shall be observed with respect to the application of any sum granted by this Act, or by any Act that may hereafter be passed, for the half pay of officers of Her Majesty's forces; that is to say,

- (1.) No person shall receive any half pay who,
 - (a.) Was under the age of sixteen years at the time when the regiment, troop, or company in which he served was reduced; or
 - (b.) Did not do actual service in some regiment, battalion, troop, or company in Her Majesty's service, except in cases in which the commission was received under circumstances which did not, according to the regulations of the Army, require the officer to serve; or
 - (c.) Has resigned his commission, and has had no commission since such resignation:
- (2.) No part of any sum granted for half pay as aforesaid shall be allowed to any person by virtue of any warrant or appointment, except to such person as would have been otherwise entitled thereto as a reduced officer:
- (3.) No person shall receive any part of any sum granted for half pay for any time during which he holds any other military employment of profit under Her Majesty or in Her Majesty's colonies or possessions beyond the seas, except the holders of any staff or garrison appointments or appointments in the militia, yeomanry, volunteer, or other reserve forces of Her Majesty, who may, with Her Majesty's approbation, signified by one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, receive the half pay to which they would respectively be entitled if they held no military employment of profit under Her Majesty:
- (4.) No person shall receive any part of any sum granted for half pay for any time during which he holds any civil employment of profit under Her Majesty, or in Her Majesty's colonies or possessions beyond the seas, except as hereafter mentioned, that is to say:
 - (a.) Such persons as hold appointments in Her Majesty's household may receive the full amount of their half pay:
 - (b.) Where the annual emoluments of any civil employment of profit held by any person entitled to half pay do not exceed three times the amount of the highest rate of half pay attached to the rank by virtue of which he claims to receive half pay, such person may, with Her Majesty's pleasure to that effect, signified by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury through one of the Principal Secretaries of State, receive the half pay to which he would be entitled if he held no such employment of profit:
 - (c.) Where the annual emoluments of any civil employment held by any person entitled to half pay exceed three times the amount of such highest rate of half pay as aforesaid, but fall short of four times such amount, the holder of such employment may, with Her Majesty's pleasure, signified in the manner aforesaid, receive so much half pay as, added to the emoluments of his civil employment, will together make up four times the amount of such half pay:

- (d.) Where the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury are of opinion that the employment of military officers in the colonies or elsewhere in civil situations of responsibility with small emoluments will be conducive to economy, and thereby beneficial to the public service, the said Commissioners may authorise the receipt of half pay by military officers notwithstanding their employment in a civil situation:
- (5.) In every case the officer authorised to receive half pay with the salary or emolument of any military or civil employment shall specify in his declaration by this Act required the other military or civil employment which he may hold:
- (6.) An account shall be laid before Parliament in every year with the army estimates of the number of officers who are allowed to receive half pay with civil employment, specifying the names of such officers, with the respective amounts of their half pay, and their emoluments, and distinguishing in every such account the officers to whom such half pay has been allowed subsequent to the last account.

7. No person shall receive any part of any grant which may be made in pursuance of this Act, or any Act hereafter to be passed, for half pay, or army, navy, or civil non-effective services, until he has subscribed such declaration as may from time to time be prescribed by the Commissioners of the Treasury; provided that whenever payment on account of any of the above-named services is made at more frequent intervals than once in the quarter, it shall be lawful for the Commissioners of the Treasury to dispense with the production of more than one declaration in respect of each quarterly period; and such declaration may be made and subscribed before any of Her Majesty's justices of the peace, notary public, or resident minister in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, or the colonies or dominions of Her Majesty; and when such declarations are taken abroad they may be made and subscribed before a British minister, secretary of embassy, secretary of legation, consul, or British chaplain, or before a notary public or some magistrate or other person competent to administer such declarations; and as regards naval services before the Lord High Admiral or a Lord Commissioner or Secretary of the Admiralty, or a superintendent of a dockyard, victualling, or medical establishment, or before an officer in command of one of Her Majesty's ships, or a chaplain serving on board one of Her Majesty's ships; and such declarations for army, navy, and civil services may also be made and subscribed before any other person now by law authorised to administer or receive such declarations, or before any of the persons appointed to examine vouchers in the office of the Paymaster General, in the manner, and under the pains, penalties, and forfeitures, specified in an Act passed in the session held in the fifth and sixth years of the reign of His late Majesty, chapter sixty-two, for the abolition of unnecessary oaths.

8. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Appropriation Act, 1870."

An Act for granting certain Stamp Duties in lieu of Duties of the same kind now payable under various Acts, and consolidating and amending provisions relating thereto.

(10th August 1870.)

Most Gracious Sovereign,

We, Your Majesty's most dutiful and loyal subjects, the Commons of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in Parliament assembled, towards raising the necessary supplies to defray Your Majesty's public expenses, and making an addition to the public revenue, have freely and voluntarily resolved to give and grant unto Your Majesty the several duties herein-after mentioned; and do therefore most humbly beseech Your Majesty that it may be enacted:

And be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as "The Stamp Act, 1870," and shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, which date is herein-after referred to as the commencement of this Act.

2. In the construction and for the purposes of this Act the following words have the meanings by this section assigned to them, unless it is otherwise provided, or there be something in the context repugnant thereto:

- (1.) "The Commissioners" means the Commissioners of Inland Revenue;
- (2.) "Material" means and includes every sort of material upon which words or figures can be expressed:

- (3.) "Write," "written," and "writing," include every mode in which words or figures can be expressed upon material;
- (4.) "Instrument" means and includes every written document;
- (5.) "Stamp" means as well a stamp impressed by means of a die as an adhesive stamp;
- (6.) "Stamped," with reference to instruments and material, applies as well to instruments and material impressed with stamps by means of a die as to instruments and material having adhesive stamps affixed thereto;
- (7.) "Executed" and "execution," with reference to instruments not under seal, mean signed and signature;
- (8.) "Money" includes all sums expressed in British or in any foreign or colonial currency;
- (9.) "Stock" means and includes any share in any stocks or funds transferable at the Bank of England or at the Bank of Ireland, and India promissory notes, and any share in the stocks or funds of any foreign or colonial state or government, or in the capital stock or funded debt of any company, corporation, or society in the United Kingdom, or of any foreign or colonial company, corporation, or society;
- (10.) "Marketable security" means a security of such a description as to be capable of being sold in any stock market in the United Kingdom;
- (11.) "Person" includes company, corporation, and society;
- (12.) "Steward" of a manor includes deputy steward.

3. From and after the commencement of this Act, and subject to the exemptions contained in the schedules to this Act, and in any other Acts for the time being in force, there shall be charged for the use of Her Majesty, her heirs and successors, upon the several instruments specified in the schedule to this Act, the several duties in the said schedule specified, and no other duties.

4. Any instrument which by any Act heretofore passed, and not relating to stamp duties, is specifically charged with the duty of thirty-five shillings, shall, from and after the commencement of this Act, be chargeable only with the duty of ten shillings in lieu of the said duty of thirty-five shillings.

5. Except where express provision to the contrary is made by this or any other Act, an instrument relating to property belonging to the Crown, or being the private property of the Sovereign, is to be charged with the same duty as an instrument of the same kind relating to property belonging to a subject.

6. (1.) All stamp duties which may from time to time be chargeable by law upon any instruments are to be paid and denoted according to the general and special regulations in this Act contained.

(2.) The said schedule, and everything therein contained, is to be read and construed as part of this Act.

GENERAL REGULATIONS.

7. (1.) Every instrument written upon stamped material is to be written in such manner, and every instrument partly or wholly written before being stamped is to be so stamped, that the stamp may appear on the face of the instrument, and cannot be used for or applied to any other instrument written upon the same piece of material.

(2.) If more than one instrument be written upon the same piece of material, every one of such instruments is to be separately and distinctly stamped with the duty with which it is chargeable.

8. Except where express provision to the contrary is made by this or any other Act,

(1.) An instrument containing or relating to several distinct matters is to be separately and distinctly charged, as if it were a separate instrument, with duty in respect of each of such matters.

(2.) An instrument made for any consideration or considerations in respect whereof it is chargeable with ad valorem duty, and also for any further or other valuable consideration or considerations, is to be charged with duty in respect of such last-mentioned consideration or considerations as if it were a separate instrument made for such consideration or considerations only.

9. (1.) A stamp which by any word or words on the face of it is appropriated to any particular description of instrument is not to be used, or, if used, is not to be available, for an instrument of any other description.

(2.) An instrument falling under the particular description to which any stamp is so appropriated as aforesaid is not to be deemed duly stamped, unless it is stamped with the stamp so appropriated.

10. All the facts and circumstances affecting the liability of any instrument to ad valorem duty, or the amount of the ad valorem duty with which any instrument is chargeable, are to be fully and truly set forth in the instrument; and every person who, with intent to defraud Her Majesty, or her heirs or successors,

(1.) Executes any instrument in which all the said facts and circumstances are not fully and truly set forth;

(2.) Being employed or concerned in or about the preparation of any instrument, neglects or omits fully and truly to set forth therein all the said facts and circumstances; shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

11. Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any money in any foreign or colonial currency, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such money in British currency according to the current rate of exchange on the day of the date of the instrument.

12. Where an instrument is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any stock or of any marketable security, such duty shall be calculated on the value of such stock or security according to the average price thereof on the day of the date of the instrument.

13. Where an instrument contains a statement of current rate of exchange, or average price, as the case may require, and is stamped in accordance with such statement, it is, so far as regards the subject matter of such statement, to be deemed duly stamped, unless or until it is shown that such statement is untrue, and that the instrument is in fact insufficiently stamped.

14. Where the duty with which an instrument is chargeable depends in any manner upon the duty paid upon another instrument, the payment of such last-mentioned duty shall, if application be made to the Commissioners for that purpose, and on production of both the instruments, be denoted in such manner as the Commissioners think fit upon such first-mentioned instrument.

15. (1.) Except where express provision to the contrary is made by this or any other Act, any unstamped or insufficiently stamped instrument may be stamped after the execution thereof, on payment of the unpaid duty and a penalty of ten pounds, and also by way of further penalty, where the unpaid duty exceeds ten pounds, of interest on such duty, at the rate of five pounds per centum per annum, from the day upon which the instrument was first executed up to the time when such interest is equal in amount to the unpaid duty.

And the payment of any penalty or penalties is to be denoted on the instrument by a particular stamp.

(2.) Provided as follows :

(a.) Any unstamped or insufficiently stamped instrument, which has been first executed at any place out of the United Kingdom, may be stamped, at any time within two months after it has been first received in the United Kingdom, on payment of the unpaid duty only :

(b.) The Commissioners may, if they think fit, at any time within twelve months after the first execution of any instrument, remit the penalty or penalties, or any part thereof.

16. (1.) Upon the production of an instrument chargeable with any duty as evidence in any court of civil judicature in any part of the United Kingdom, the officer whose duty it is to read the instrument shall call the attention of the judge to any omission or insufficiency of the stamp thereon, and if the instrument is one which may legally be stamped after the execution thereof, it may, on payment to the officer of the amount of the unpaid duty, and the penalty payable by law on stamping the same as aforesaid, and of a further sum of one pound, be received in evidence, saving all just exceptions on other grounds.

(2.) The officer receiving the said duty and penalty shall give a receipt for the same, and make an entry in a book kept for that purpose of the payment and of the amount thereof, and shall communicate to the Commissioners the name or title of the cause or proceeding in which, and of the party from whom, he received the said duty and penalty, and the date and description of the instrument, and shall pay over to the Receiver General of Inland Revenue, or to such other person as the Commissioners may appoint, the money received by him for the said duty and penalty.

(3.) Upon production to the Commissioners of any instrument in respect of which any duty or penalty has been paid as aforesaid, together with the receipt of the said officer, the payment of such duty and penalty shall be denoted on such instrument accordingly.

17. Save and except as aforesaid, no instrument executed in any part of the United Kingdom, or relating, wheresoever executed, to any property situate, or to any matter or thing done or to be done, in any part of the United Kingdom, shall, except in criminal proceedings, be pleaded or given in evidence, or admitted to be good, useful, or available in law or equity, unless it is duly stamped in accordance with the law in force at the time when it was first executed.

18. (1.) Subject to such regulations as the Commissioners may think fit to make, the Commissioners may be required by any person to express their opinion with reference to any executed instrument upon the following questions :

(a.) Whether it is chargeable with any duty :

(b.) With what amount of duty it is chargeable.

(2.) If the Commissioners are of opinion that the instrument is not chargeable with any duty, such instrument may be stamped with a particular stamp denoting that it is not chargeable with any duty.

(3.) If the Commissioners are of opinion that the instrument is chargeable with duty, they shall assess the duty with which it is in their opinion chargeable, and if or when the instrument is duly stamped in accordance with the assessment of the Commissioners, it may be also stamped with a particular stamp denoting that it is duly stamped.

(4.) Every instrument stamped with the particular stamp denoting either that it is not chargeable with any duty, or is duly stamped, shall be admissible in evidence, and available for all purposes notwithstanding any objection relating to duty.

(5.) Provided as follows :

(a.) An instrument upon which the duty has been assessed by the Commissioners shall not, if it is unstamped or insufficiently stamped, be stamped otherwise than in accordance with the assessment of the Commissioners :

(b.) Nothing in this section contained extends to any instrument chargeable with duty, and made as a security for money or stock without limit :

(c.) Nothing in this section contained shall be deemed to authorize the stamping after the execution thereof of any instrument prohibited by law from being so stamped.

19. (1.) Any person who is dissatisfied with the assessment of the Commissioners made in pursuance of the last preceding section may, within twenty-one days after the date of such assessment, and on payment of duty in conformity therewith, appeal against such assessment to Her Majesty's Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland, according to the country in which the case has arisen, and may for that purpose require the Commissioners to state and sign a case, setting forth the question upon which their opinion was required, and the assessment made by them.

(2.) The Commissioners shall thereupon state and sign a case accordingly, and deliver the same to the person by whom it is required, and on his application such case may be set down for hearing in the proper court.

(3.) Upon the hearing of such case (due notice of which is to be given to the Commissioners) the court shall determine the question submitted, and, if the instrument in question is in the opinion of the court chargeable with any duty, shall assess the duty with which it is so chargeable.

(4.) If it is decided by the court that the assessment of the Commissioners is erroneous, any excess of duty which may have been paid in conformity with such erroneous assessment, together with any penalty which may have been paid in consequence thereof, shall be ordered by the court to be repaid by the Commissioners to the appellant, together with the costs incurred by him in relation to the appeal.

(5.) But if the assessment of the Commissioners is confirmed by the court, the costs incurred by the Commissioners in relation to the appeal shall be ordered by the court to be paid by the appellant to the Commissioners.

20. (1.) In any case of application to the Commissioners with reference to any instrument the Commissioners may require to be furnished with an abstract of the instrument, and also with such evidence as they may deem necessary, in order to show to their satisfaction whether all the facts and circumstances affecting the liability of the instrument to duty, or the amount of the duty chargeable thereon, are fully and truly set forth therein, and may refuse to proceed upon any such application until such abstract and evidence has been furnished accordingly.

(2.) Provided that no affidavit or statutory declaration made in pursuance of this section shall be used against any person making the same in any proceeding whatever, except in an inquiry as to the duty with which the instrument to which it relates is chargeable; and every person by whom any such affidavit or declaration is made shall, on payment of the full duty with which the instrument to which it relates is chargeable, be relieved from any penalty, forfeiture, or disability he may have incurred by reason of the omission to state truly in such instrument any of the facts or circumstances aforesaid.

21. (1.) All public officers having in their custody any rolls, books, records, papers, documents, or proceedings, the inspection whereof may tend to secure any duty, or to the proof or discovery of any fraud or omission in relation to any duty, shall at all reasonable times permit any person thereunto authorised by the Commissioners to inspect all such rolls, books, records, papers, documents, and proceedings, and to take such notes and extracts as he may deem necessary, without fee or reward.

(2.) Every person who refuses to permit such inspection shall for every such refusal forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

22. If any person whose office it is to enrol, register, or enter in or upon any rolls, books, or records any instrument chargeable with any duty, enrolls, registers, or enters any such instrument not being duly stamped, he shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

23. Except where express provision is made to the contrary, all duties are to be denoted by impressed stamps only.

24. (1.) An instrument, the duty upon which is required, or permitted by law, to be denoted by an adhesive stamp, is not to be deemed duly stamped with an adhesive stamp unless the person required by law to cancel such adhesive stamp cancels the same by writing on or across the stamp his name or initials, or the name or initials of his firm, together with the true date of his so writing, so that the stamp may be effectually cancelled, and rendered incapable of being used for any other instrument, or unless it is otherwise proved that the stamp appearing on the instrument was affixed thereto at the proper time.

(2.) Every person who, being required by law to cancel an adhesive stamp, wilfully neglects or refuses duly and effectually to do so in manner aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

25. Any person who—

(1.) Fraudulently removes or causes to be removed from any instrument any adhesive stamp, or affixes any adhesive stamp which has been so removed to any other instrument with intent that such stamp may be used again;

(2.) Sells or offers for sale, or utters, any adhesive stamp which has been so removed, or utters any instrument having thereon any adhesive stamp which has to his knowledge been so removed as aforesaid;

- (3.) Practices or is concerned in any fraudulent act, contrivance, or device not specially provided for, with intent to defraud Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, of any duty, shall forfeit, over and above any other penalty to which he may be liable, the sum of fifty pounds.

26. (1.) Penalties incurred under this Act are to be sued for by information in the Court of Exchequer, in England in the name of the Attorney General for England, in Scotland in the name of the Lord Advocate, and in Ireland in the name of the Attorney General for Ireland, and may be recovered with full costs of suit.

(2.) The Commissioners may, at their discretion, mitigate or stay or compound proceedings for any penalty, and reward any person who may inform them of any offence against this Act, or assist in the recovery of any penalty.

27. Any affidavit or declaration to be made in pursuance or for the purposes of this Act may be made before any of the Commissioners, or any officer or person authorised by them in that behalf, or before a person appointed to administer oaths in the Court of Chancery in England or Ireland, or before any person commissioned to take affidavits by the Court of Session in Scotland, or before any justice of the peace or notary public in any part of the United Kingdom, or at any place out of the United Kingdom before any person duly authorised to administer oaths there.

28. (1.) Every person who, having received any sum of money as or for the duty upon or in respect of any instrument, neglects or omits to appropriate such money to the due payment of such duty, or otherwise improperly withholds or detains the same, shall be accountable for the amount of such duty, and the same shall be a debt from him to Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, and recoverable as such accordingly.

(2.) The Court of Exchequer in England, Scotland, or Ireland may, upon application to be made for that purpose on behalf of the Commissioners, upon such affidavit as may appear sufficient, grant a rule requiring any such person as aforesaid, or the officer of any court, or the executor or administrator of such person or officer, to show cause why he should not deliver to the Commissioners an account upon oath of all duties and sums of money received by such person or officer, and why the same should not be forthwith paid to the Receiver General of Inland Revenue, or to such other person as the Commissioners may appoint to receive the same; and the court may make absolute any such rule, and enforce by attachment or otherwise the payment of any such duties or sums of money as on such proceedings may appear to be due, together with the costs of the proceedings.

SPECIAL REGULATIONS.

As to Admissions generally.

29. The duty payable under this Act upon an admission is to be denoted on the instrument of admission delivered to the person admitted, if there be any such instrument, or if not, on the register, entry or memorandum of the admission in the rolls, books, or records of the court, inn, college, borough, burgh, company, corporation, guild, or society in which the admission is made, and in cases in which no instrument of admission is delivered, and no register, entry, or memorandum is made, on the rescript or warrant for admission.

30. If any person whose office it is to prepare or deliver out any instrument of admission chargeable with any duty, or to register, enter, or make any memorandum of any admission in respect of which no instrument of admission is delivered to the person admitted, neglects or refuses, within one month after the admission, to prepare a duly stamped instrument of admission, or to make a proper and duly stamped register, entry, or memorandum of the admission, as the case may require, he shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

As to Admissions to the Degree of a Barrister-at-Law in Ireland, and of Students to the Society of King's Inns, Dublin.

31. Distinct accounts are to be kept of the sums following; that is to say:

- (1.) Ten pounds, part of the duty of fifty pounds payable on the admission to the degree of a barrister-at-law in Ireland of a person not previously admitted to that degree in England;
- (2.) Ten pounds, payable for duty on the like admission of a person who has been previously admitted to the said degree in England;
- (3.) Ten pounds, part of the duty payable on the admission of a student into the Society of King's Inns, Dublin:

And the said sums are respectively to be paid over by the Receiver General of Inland Revenue to the treasurer of the Society of King's Inns, Dublin, to be applied by him according to the directions of the said society.

32. If any person, who has been duly admitted a member of one of the Inns of Court in England, is afterwards duly admitted a student of the Society of King's Inns in Dublin, the duty paid by him in respect of his former admission is, on application made within six months after the last admission, to be allowed and returned to him.

As to Admissions or Appointments to and Grants of Offices or Employments.

33. The fees and emoluments appertaining to any office or employment are, when practicable, to be estimated according to the average amount thereof for three years preceding the date of the admission, appointment, or grant, and in other cases according to the best information that can be obtained.

34. Where any office or employment is granted anew to any person upon the revocation of any former grant thereof or appointment thereto, in respect of which the proper duty has been paid, no duty is to be charged on the grant or appointment by way of renewal, unless the salary, fees, and emoluments of the office or employment are in any manner augmented, and in that case duty is to be charged on such last-mentioned grant or appointment in proportion to the amount of the augmentation only.

35. Upon the promotion of any person from any office or employment in Her Majesty's Customs, in respect of which he has paid the proper duty, to any other office or employment therein, the appointment of such person to the office or employment to which he is so promoted is to be charged with duty in respect only of any augmentation in his salary, fees, and emoluments.

As to Agreements.

36. The duty of sixpence upon an agreement may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the agreement is first executed.

As to Appointments, &c. to Ecclesiastical Benefices, &c.

37. The net yearly value of an ecclesiastical benefice, dignity, or promotion, or of a perpetual curacy, in England, whether the emoluments thereof consist of money or of produce, or partly of money and partly of produce, is to be ascertained and determined by the certificate of the Ecclesiastical Commissioners for England to be written on the instrument charged with duty.

Provided that two or more benefices, or a benefice and any ecclesiastical dignity or promotion episcopally or permanently united, shall be deemed one benefice only.

As to Appraisements.

38. (1.) Every appraiser, by whom an appraisement or valuation is made, shall, within fourteen days after the making thereof, write out the same, in words and figures showing the full amount thereof, upon duly stamped material, and if he neglects or omits so to do, or in any other manner delivers out, or states the amount of, any such appraisement or valuation, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

(2.) Any person who receives from any appraiser, or pays for the making of, any appraisement or valuation, unless the same be written out and stamped as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

As to Instruments of Apprenticeship.

39. Every writing relating to the service or tuition of any apprentice, clerk, or servant placed with any master to learn any profession, trade, or employment, (except articles of clerkship to attorneys and others hereby specifically charged with duty,) is to be deemed an instrument of apprenticeship.

40. The full sum of money, and the value of any other matter or thing, paid, given, or assigned, or secured to be paid, given, or assigned, to or for the benefit of the master with or in respect of any apprentice, clerk, or servant, (not being a person bound to serve in order to admission in any court,) is to be fully and truly set forth in an instrument of apprenticeship; and if any such sum, or other matter or thing, be paid, given, assigned, or secured as aforesaid, and no such instrument be made, or if any such instrument be made, and such sum, or the value of such other matter or thing, be not set forth therein as aforesaid, the master, and also the apprentice himself, if of full age, and any other person being a party to the contract, or by whom any such sum, or other matter or thing, is paid, given, assigned, or secured, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, and the contract, and the instrument (if any) containing the same, shall be null and void.

As to original Articles of Clerkship.

41. (1.) Where the same articles are a qualification for the admission of any person not only as an attorney or solicitor in any of Her Majesty's courts at Westminster, but also as an attorney or solicitor in any of the courts of the counties palatine of Lancaster and Durham, such articles are not to be charged with more than one duty of eighty pounds.

(2.) Where any person has become bound by duly stamped articles in order to his admission as an attorney or solicitor in any of the courts of the counties palatine of Lancaster and Durham, such articles shall, on payment of such further amount of duty as, together with the amount of duty previously paid thereon, will make up the sum of eighty pounds, be impressed with a stamp denoting the payment of such further duty, and shall thereupon be considered to be sufficiently stamped for the purpose of entitling such person to admission in any of the courts at Westminster.

42. (1.) Where the same articles are a qualification for the admission of any person not only as a writer to the signet, or as a solicitor, agent, or attorney in any of the Courts of Session, Justiciary, or Commission of Teinds, but also as a procurator or solicitor in any inferior court in Scotland, such articles are not to be charged with more than one duty of sixty pounds.

(2.) Where any person has become bound by duly stamped articles in order to his admission as a procurator or solicitor in any inferior court in Scotland, such articles shall, on payment of such further amount of duty as, together with the amount previously paid thereon, will make up the sum of sixty pounds, be impressed with a stamp denoting the payment of such further duty, and shall thereupon be considered to be sufficiently stamped for entitling such person to admission as a writer to the signet, or as a solicitor, agent, or attorney in the Court of Session, Justiciary, or Commission of Teinds.

43. Save as herein-before provided, articles of clerkship are not to be stamped at any time after the expiration of six months from the date thereof, except upon payment of penalties, as follows:

(1.) If brought to be stamped within one year after date, ten pounds:

(2.) If so brought after one year, and within five years after date,—

For every complete year, and also for any additional part of a year elapsed since the date, ten pounds:

(3.) In every other case, fifty pounds.

44. The sum of fourteen pounds, part of the duty payable on articles of clerkship in Ireland, shall be carried to a separate account, and paid over by the Receiver General of Inland Revenue to the treasurer of the Society of King's Inns, Dublin, to be applied by him according to the directions of the said society.

As to Bank Notes, Bills of Exchange, and Promissory Notes.

45. The term "banker" means and includes any corporation, society, partnership, and persons, and every individual person carrying on the business of banking in the United Kingdom.

The term "bank note" means and includes—

(1.) Any bill of exchange or promissory note issued by any banker, other than the Governor and Company of the Bank of England, for the payment of money not exceeding one hundred pounds to the bearer on demand:

(2.) Any bill of exchange or promissory note so issued which entitles or is intended to entitle the bearer or holder thereof, without indorsement, or without any further or other indorsement than may be thereon at the time of the issuing thereof, to the payment of money not exceeding one hundred pounds, on demand, whether the same be so expressed or not, and in whatever form, and by whomsoever such bill or note is drawn or made.

46. A bank note issued duly stamped, or issued unstamped by a banker duly licensed or otherwise authorised to issue unstamped bank notes, may be from time to time re-issued without being liable to any stamp duty by reason of such re-issuing.

47. (1.) If any banker, not being duly licensed or otherwise authorised to issue unstamped bank notes, issues, or causes or permits to be issued, any bank note not being duly stamped, he shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

(2.) If any person receives or takes any such bank note in payment or as a security, knowing the same to have been issued unstamped, contrary to law, he shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

48. (1.) The term "bill of exchange" for the purposes of this Act includes also draft, order, cheque, and letter of credit, and any document or writing (except a bank note) entitling or purporting to entitle any person, whether named therein or not, to payment by any other person of, or to draw upon any other person for, any sum of money therein mentioned.

(2.) An order for the payment of any sum of money by a bill of exchange or promissory note, or for the delivery of any bill of exchange or promissory note in satisfaction of any sum of money, or for the payment of any sum of money out of any particular fund which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed or happen, is to be deemed for the purposes of this Act a bill of exchange for the payment of money on demand.

(3.) An order for the payment of any sum of money weekly, monthly, or at any other stated periods, and also any order for the payment by any person at any time after the date thereof of any sum of money, and sent or delivered by the person making the same to the person by whom the payment is to be made, and not to the person to whom the payment is to be made, or to any person on his behalf, is to be deemed for the purposes of this Act a bill of exchange for the payment of money on demand.

49. (1.) The term "promissory note" means and includes any document or writing (except a bank note) containing a promise to pay any sum of money.

(2.) A note promising the payment of any sum of money out of any particular fund which may or may not be available, or upon any condition or contingency which may or may not be performed or happen, is to be deemed for the purposes of this Act a promissory note for the said sum of money.

50. The fixed duty of one penny on a bill of exchange for the payment of money on demand may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the bill is signed before he delivers it out of his hands, custody, or power.

51. (1.) The ad valorem duties upon bills of exchange and promissory notes drawn or made out of the United Kingdom are to be denoted by adhesive stamps.

(2.) Every person into whose hands any such bill or note comes in the United Kingdom before it is stamped shall, before he presents for payment, or indorses, transfers, or in any manner negotiates or pays such bill or note, affix thereto a proper adhesive stamp or proper adhesive stamps of sufficient amount, and cancel every stamp so affixed thereto.

(3.) Provided as follows:

(a.) If at the time when any such bill or note comes into the hands of any bona fide holder thereof there is affixed thereto an adhesive stamp effectually obliterated, and purporting and appearing to be duly cancelled, such stamp shall, so far as relates to such holder, be deemed to be duly cancelled, although it may not appear to have been so affixed or cancelled by the proper person.

(b.) If at the time when any such bill or note comes into the hands of any bona fide holder thereof there is affixed thereto an adhesive stamp not duly cancelled, it shall be competent for such holder to cancel such stamp as if he were the person by whom it was affixed, and upon his so doing such bill or note shall be deemed duly stamped, and as valid and available as if the stamp had been duly cancelled by the person by whom it was affixed.

(4.) But neither of the foregoing provisions is to relieve any person from any penalty incurred by him for not cancelling any adhesive stamp.

52. A bill of exchange or promissory note purporting to be drawn or made out of the United Kingdom is, for the purposes of this Act, to be deemed to have been so drawn or made, although it may in fact have been drawn or made within the United Kingdom.

53. (1.) Where a bill of exchange or promissory note has been written on material bearing an impressed stamp of sufficient amount but of improper denomination, it may be stamped with the proper stamp on payment of the duty, and a penalty of forty shillings if the bill or note be not then payable according to its tenor, and of ten pounds if the same be so payable.

(2.) Except as aforesaid, no bill of exchange or promissory note shall be stamped with an impressed stamp after the execution thereof.

54. (1.) Every person who issues, indorses, transfers, negotiates, presents for payment, or pays any bill of exchange or promissory note liable to duty and not being duly stamped shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds, and the person who takes or receives from any other person any such bill or note not being duly stamped either in payment or as a security, or by purchase or otherwise, shall not be entitled to recover thereon, or to make the same available for any purpose whatever.

(2.) Provided that if any bill of exchange for the payment of money on demand, liable only to the duty of one penny, is presented for payment unstamped, the person to whom it is so presented may affix thereto a proper adhesive stamp, and cancel the same, as if he had been the drawer of the bill, and may, upon so doing, pay the sum in the said bill mentioned, and charge the duty in account against the person by whom the bill was drawn, or deduct such duty from the said sum, and such bill is, so far as respects the duty, to be deemed good and valid.

(3.) But the foregoing proviso is not to relieve any person from any penalty he may have incurred in relation to such bill.

55. When a bill of exchange is drawn in a set according to the custom of merchants, and one of the set is duly stamped, the other or others of the set shall, unless issued or in some manner negotiated apart from such duly stamped bill, be exempt from duty; and upon proof of the loss or destruction of a duly stamped bill forming one of a set, any other bill of the set which has not been issued or in any manner negotiated apart from such lost or destroyed bill may, although unstamped, be admitted in evidence to prove the contents of such lost or destroyed bill.

As to Bills of Lading.

56. (1.) A bill of lading is not to be stamped after the execution thereof.

(2.) Every person who makes or executes any bill of lading not duly stamped shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

As to Bills of Sale.

57. A copy of a bill of sale is not to be filed in any court, unless the original, duly stamped, is produced to the proper officer.

As to Bonds given in relation to the Duties of Customs and Excise.

58. If any person required by any Act of Parliament, or by the direction of the Commissioners of Customs or Inland Revenue, or any of their officers, to give or enter into any bond for or in respect of any duties of customs or excise, or for preventing frauds or evasions thereof, or for any matter or thing relating thereto, includes in one and the same bond any goods or things belonging to more persons than one, not being co-partners or joint tenants, or tenants in common, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

As to the Certificates of Attorneys and others.

59. (1.) Every person who in any part of the United Kingdom—

(a.) Directly or indirectly acts or practises in any court as an attorney, solicitor, proctor, writer to the signet, agent, or procurator, or as a notary public, without having in force at the time a duly stamped certificate according to the provisions herein-after contained and referred to ;
(b.) On applying for any such certificate does not truly specify the facts and circumstances upon which the amount of duty chargeable upon his certificate depends, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, and shall be incapable of maintaining any action or suit for the recovery of any fee, reward, or disbursement on account of or in relation to any act or proceeding done or taken by him in any such capacity.

(2.) Any person in whose name, either alone or together with any other person, any proceeding is taken in any court, shall, unless the proceeding is set aside by the court as irregular, or unless the contrary is otherwise satisfactorily proved, be deemed to have acted in such proceeding.

60. Every person who (not being a serjeant-at-law, barrister, or a duly certificated attorney, solicitor, proctor, notary public, writer to the signet, agent, procurator, conveyancer, special pleader, or draftsman in equity) either directly or indirectly, for or in expectation of any fee, gain, or reward, draws or prepares any instrument relating to real or personal estate, or any proceedings in law or equity, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

Provided as follows:—

- (1.) This section does not extend to
 - (a.) Any public officer drawing or preparing instruments in the course of his duty ;
 - (b.) Any person employed merely to engross any instrument or proceedings.
- (2.) The term "instrument" in this section does not include—
 - (a.) Wills or other testamentary instruments ;
 - (b.) Agreements under hand only ;
 - (c.) Letters or powers of attorney ;
 - (d.) Transfers of stock containing no trust or limitation thereof.

61. It shall not be necessary for any person to take out in England, Scotland, or Ireland more than one certificate for any one year.

62. The certificates of attorneys, solicitors, and proctors in England and Ireland are to be applied for, taken out, issued, dated, and stamped,—

- (1.) In England, in accordance with the provisions in that behalf of an Act of the sixth and seventh years of Her Majesty, intituled "An Act for consolidating and amending several of the laws relating to attorneys and solicitors," and of an Act of the twenty-third and twenty-fourth years of Her Majesty, intituled "An Act to amend the laws relating to attorneys and solicitors and certificated conveyancers."
- (2.) In Ireland in accordance with the provisions in that behalf of "The Attorneys and Solicitors Act, Ireland, 1866."

63. Every person required to take out a certificate to authorise him to practise,—

- (1.) In Scotland, as a writer to the signet, solicitor, agent, or procurator ;
- (2.) In England or Ireland, as a conveyancer special pleader, or draftsman in equity ;
- (3.) In any part of the United Kingdom, as a notary public, shall yearly and every year, before he does any act in any of the aforesaid capacities, deliver to the Commissioners, or to their proper officer, in such manner and form as they shall direct, a note in writing stating his full name and the place where he carries on his business, and thereupon, and upon payment of the proper duty, shall be entitled to such certificate, which is to be duly stamped and issued to him by the Commissioners.

64. The certificates in this section specified are to be dated and to expire at the times herein-after in that behalf mentioned ; that is to say,

- (1.) The certificates of writers to the signet, solicitors, agents, attorneys, procurators, and notaries public in Scotland, and of conveyancers, special pleaders, and draftsmen in equity in England, are to be dated if taken out between the thirty-first of October and the first of December, on the first of November, and if taken out at any other time, on the day on which they are issued, and are in all cases to expire on the the thirty-first of October next after their date.

- (2.) The certificates of notaries public in England are to be dated, if taken out between the fifteenth of November and the sixteenth of December, on the sixteenth of November, and if taken out at any other time, on the day on which they are issued, and are in all cases to expire on the fifteenth of November next after their date.
- (3.) The certificates of conveyancers, special pleaders, draftsmen in equity, and notaries public in Ireland, are to be dated on the day on which they are issued, and are to expire, as to the certificates of notaries public, on the twenty-fifth day of March next after their date, and in all other cases on the sixth day of January next after their date.

As to the Certificate of Registration of a Design.

65. The duty of five pounds upon the certificate of the registration of a design is to be denoted by a stamp to be specially appropriated for expressing and denoting the said duty.

As to Charter-parties.

66. The duty upon an instrument chargeable with duty as a charter-party may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the instrument is last executed, or by whose execution it is completed as a binding contract.

67. Where any document chargeable with duty as a charter-party, and not being duly stamped, is first executed out of the United Kingdom, any party thereto may, within ten days after it has been first received in the United Kingdom, and before it has been executed by any person in the United Kingdom, affix thereto an adhesive stamp denoting the duty chargeable thereon, and at the same time cancel such adhesive stamp, and the instrument with an adhesive stamp thereon so affixed and cancelled shall be deemed duly stamped.

68. An executed instrument chargeable with duty as a charter-party, and not being duly stamped, may be stamped with an impressed stamp upon the following terms; that is to say,

- (1.) Within seven days after the first execution thereof, on payment of the duty and a penalty of four shillings and sixpence;
- (2.) After seven days, but within one month after the first execution thereof, on payment of the duty and a penalty of ten pounds;

and shall not in any other case be stamped with an impressed stamp.

As to Contract Notes.

69. (1.) The duty on a contract note may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the note is first executed.

(2.) Every person who makes or executes any contract note chargeable with duty, and not being duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

(3.) No broker, agent, or other person shall have any legal claim to any charge for brokerage, commission, or agency, with reference to the sale or purchase of any stock or marketable security of the value of five pounds or upwards mentioned or referred to in any contract note, unless such note is duly stamped.

As to Conveyances on Sale.

70. The term "conveyance on sale" includes every instrument, and every decree or order of any court or of any commissioners, whereby any property upon the sale thereof is legally or equitably transferred to or vested in the purchaser, or any other person on his behalf or by his direction.

71. (1.) Where the consideration, or any part of the consideration, for a conveyance on sale consists of any stock or marketable security, such conveyance is to be charged with ad valorem duty in respect of the value of such stock or security.

(2.) Where the consideration, or any part of the consideration, for a conveyance on sale consists of any security not being a marketable security, such conveyance is to be charged with ad valorem duty in respect of the amount due on the day of the date thereof for principal and interest upon such security.

72. (1.) Where the consideration, or any part of the consideration, for a conveyance on sale consists of money payable periodically for a definite period, so that the total amount to be paid can be previously ascertained, such conveyance is to be charged in respect of such consideration with ad valorem duty on such total amount.

(2.) Where the consideration, or any part of the consideration, for a conveyance on sale consists of money payable periodically in perpetuity, or for any indefinite period not terminable with life, such conveyance is to be charged in respect of such consideration with ad valorem duty on the total amount which will or may, according to the terms of sale, be payable during the period of twenty years next after the day of the date of such instrument.

(3.) Where the consideration, or any part of the consideration, for a conveyance on sale consists of money payable periodically during any life or lives, such conveyance is to be charged in respect of such consideration with ad valorem duty on the amount which will or may, according to the terms of sale, be payable during the period of twelve years next after the day of the date of such instrument.

(4.) Provided that no conveyance on sale chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of any periodical payments, and containing also provision for securing such periodical payments, is to be charged with any duty whatsoever in respect of such provision, and no separate instrument made in any such case for securing such periodical payments is to be charged with any higher duty than ten shillings.

73. Where any property is conveyed to any person in consideration, wholly or in part, of any debt due to him, or subject either certainly or contingently to the payment or transfer of any money or stock, whether being or constituting a charge or incumbrance upon the property or not, such debt, money, or stock is to be deemed the whole or part, as the case may be, of the consideration in respect whereof the conveyance is chargeable with ad valorem duty.

74. (1.) Where any property has been contracted to be sold for one consideration for the whole, and is conveyed to the purchaser in separate parts or parcels by different instruments, the consideration is to be apportioned in such manner as the parties think fit, so that a distinct consideration for each separate part or parcel is set forth in the conveyance relating thereto, and such conveyance is to be charged with ad valorem duty in respect of such distinct consideration.

(2.) Where property contracted to be purchased for one consideration for the whole by two or more persons jointly, or by any person for himself and others, or wholly for others, is conveyed in parts or parcels by separate instruments to the persons by or for whom the same was purchased for distinct parts of the consideration, the conveyance of each separate part or parcel is to be charged with ad valorem duty in respect of the distinct part of the consideration therein specified.

(3.) Where a person having contracted for the purchase of any property but not having obtained a conveyance thereof contracts to sell the same to any other person, and the property is in consequence conveyed immediately to the sub-purchaser, the conveyance is to be charged with ad valorem duty in respect of the consideration for the sale by the original purchaser to the sub-purchaser.

(4.) Where a person having contracted for the purchase of any property but not having obtained a conveyance contracts to sell the whole, or any part or parts thereof, to any other person or persons, and the property is in consequence conveyed by the original seller to different persons in parts or parcels, the conveyance of each part or parcel is to be charged with ad valorem duty, in respect only of the consideration moving from the sub-purchaser thereof, without regard to the amount or value of the original consideration.

(5.) Where a sub-purchaser takes an actual conveyance of the interest of the person immediately selling to him, which is chargeable with ad valorem duty in respect of the consideration moving from him, and is duly stamped accordingly, any conveyance to be afterwards made to him of the same property by the original seller shall be exempt from the said ad valorem duty, and chargeable only with the duty to which it may be liable under any general description, but such last-mentioned duty shall not exceed the ad valorem duty.

75. Where upon the sale of any annuity or other right not before in existence such annuity or other right is not created by actual grant or conveyance, but is only secured by bond, warrant of attorney, covenant, contract, or otherwise, the bond or other instrument, or some one of such instruments, if there be more than one, is to be charged with the same duty as an actual grant or conveyance, and is for all the purposes of this Act to be deemed an instrument of conveyance on sale.

76. Where there are several instruments of conveyance for completing the purchaser's title to the property sold, the principal instrument of conveyance only is to be charged with ad valorem duty, and the other instruments are to be respectively charged with such other duty as they may be liable to, but such last-mentioned duty shall not exceed the ad valorem duty payable in respect of the principal instrument.

77. (1.) In the cases below specified the principal instrument is to be ascertained in the following manner:

(a.) Where any copyhold or customary estate is conveyed by a deed, no surrender being necessary, the deed is to be deemed the principal instrument:

(b.) In other cases of copyhold or customary estates, the surrender or grant, if made out of court, or the memorandum thereof, and the copy of court roll of the surrender or grant, if made in court, shall be deemed the principal instrument:

(c.) Where in Scotland there is a disposition or assignation executed by the seller, and any other instrument is executed for completing the title, the disposition or assign-nation is to be deemed the principal instrument.

(2.) In any other case the parties may determine for themselves which of several instruments is to be deemed the principal instrument, and may pay the ad valorem duty thereon accordingly.

As to Conveyances on any occasion except Sale or Mortgage.

78. Every instrument, and every decree or order of any court or of any commissioners, whereby any property on any occasion, except a sale or mortgage, is transferred to or vested in any person, is chargeable with duty as a conveyance or transfer of property.

Provided that a conveyance or transfer made for effectuating the appointment of a new trustee is not to be charged with any higher duty than ten shillings.

As to attested Copies and Extracts.

79. An attested or otherwise authenticated copy or extract of or from—

- (1.) An instrument chargeable with any duty;
- (2.) An original will, testament, or codicil;
- (3.) The probate or probate copy of a will or codicil;

(4.) Letters of administration or a confirmation of a testament, may be stamped at any time within fourteen days after the date of the attestation or authentication, on payment of the duty only, without any penalty.

As to certified Copies and Extracts from Registers of Births, &c.

80. The duty upon a certified copy or extract of or from any register of births, baptisms, marriages, deaths, or burials is to be paid by the person requiring the copy or extract, and may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the copy or extract is signed before he delivers the same out of his hands, custody, or power.

As to Copyhold and Customary Estates.

81. (1.) The copy of court roll of a surrender or grant made out of court shall not be admissible or available as evidence of the surrender or grant, unless the surrender or grant, or the memorandum thereof, is duly stamped, of which fact the certificate of the steward of the manor on the face of such copy shall be sufficient evidence.

(2.) The entry upon the court rolls of a surrender or grant shall not be admissible or available as evidence of the surrender or grant unless the surrender or grant, if made out of court, or the memorandum thereof, or the copy of court roll of the surrender or grant, if made in court, is duly stamped, of which fact the certificate of the steward of the manor in the margin of such entry shall be sufficient evidence.

82. No instrument is to be charged more than once with duty by reason of relating to several distinct tenements, in respect whereof several fines or fees are due to the lord or steward of the manor.

83. (1.) All the facts and circumstances affecting the liability to ad valorem duty of the copy of court roll of any surrender or grant made in court, or the amount of ad valorem duty with which any such copy of court roll is chargeable, are to be fully and truly stated in a note to be delivered to the steward of the manor before the surrender or grant is made.

(2.) Every person who, with intent to defraud Her Majesty, her heirs or successors,—

- (a.) Makes in court any surrender before such a note as aforesaid has been delivered to the steward of the manor;
- (b.) Being employed or concerned in or about the preparation of any such note as aforesaid, neglects or omits fully and truly to state therein all the above-mentioned facts and circumstances, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

84. The steward of every manor shall refuse—

- (1.) To accept in court any surrender, or to make in court any grant, until such a note as is required by the last preceding section has been delivered to him;
- (2.) To enter on the court rolls, or accept any presentment of, or admit any person to be tenant under or by virtue of, any surrender or grant made out of court, or any deed which is not duly stamped;

And in any case in which he does not so refuse shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

85. The steward of every manor shall, within four months from the day on which any surrender or grant is made in court, make out a duly stamped copy of court roll of such surrender or grant, and have the same ready for delivery to the person entitled thereto, and if he neglects so to do shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds; and the duty payable in respect of such copy of court roll shall be a debt to Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, from such steward, whether he shall have received it or not, and shall be recoverable by the summary means provided for the recovery of duties received and not applied, and if he has not received the duty the same shall also be a debt to Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, from the party entitled to such copy, and recoverable from him in manner aforesaid.

86. The steward of any manor may, before he accepts in court any surrender or makes in court any grant, demand and insist on the payment of his lawful fees in relation to the surrender or grant, together with the duty payable on the copy of court roll thereof, and may refuse to proceed in any such matter or to deliver such copy of court roll to any person until such fees and duty are paid.

As to Delivery Orders and Warrants for Goods.

87. The term "delivery order" means any document or writing entitling, or intended to entitle, any person therein named, or his assigns, or the holder thereof, to the delivery of any goods, wares, or merchandise of the value of forty shillings or upwards lying in any dock or port, or in any warehouse in which goods are stored or deposited on rent or hire, or upon any wharf, such document or writing being signed by or on behalf of the owner of such goods, wares, or merchandise, upon the sale or transfer of the property therein.

88. The term "warrant for goods" means any document or writing, being evidence of the title of any person therein named, or his assigns, or the holder thereof, to the property in any goods, wares, or merchandise lying in any warehouse or dock, or upon any wharf, and signed or certified by or on behalf of the person having the custody of such goods, wares, or merchandise.

89. The duty upon a delivery order or warrant for goods may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the instrument is made, executed, or issued.

90. The duty upon a delivery order is, in the absence of any special stipulation, to be paid by the person to whom the order is given, and any person from whom a delivery order chargeable with duty is required may refuse to give it, unless or until the amount of the duty is paid to him.

91. (1.) Every document or writing in the nature of a delivery order is to be deemed to have been given upon a sale of, or transfer of the property in, goods, wares, or merchandise of the value of forty shillings or upwards, unless the contrary is expressly stated therein; and every person who—

- (a.) Untruly states, or knowingly or willingly allows it to be untruly stated, in any such document or writing, either that the transaction to which it relates is not a sale or transfer of property, or that the goods, wares, or merchandise to which it relates are not of the value of forty shillings;
- (b.) Makes, signs, or issues any delivery order chargeable with duty, but not being duly stamped;

- (c.) Knowingly or wilfully, either himself, or by his servant or any other person, procures or requires or authorises the delivery of, or delivers, any goods, wares, or merchandise mentioned in any delivery order which is not duly stamped, or which contains to his knowledge any false statement with reference either to the nature of the transaction, or the value of the goods, wares, or merchandise, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

(2.) But no delivery order is, by reason of the same being unstamped, to be deemed invalid in the hands of the person having the custody of, or delivering out, the goods, wares, or merchandise therein mentioned, unless such person is proved to have been party or privy to some fraud on the revenue in relation thereto.

92. Every person who makes, executes, or issues, or receives or takes by way of security or indemnity, any warrant for goods not being duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

As to Duplicates and Counterparts.

93. The duplicate or counterpart of an instrument chargeable with duty (except the counterpart of an instrument chargeable as a lease, such counterpart not being executed by or on behalf of any lessor or grantor,) is not to be deemed duly stamped unless it is stamped as an original instrument, or unless it appears by some stamp impressed thereon that the full and proper duty has been paid upon the original instrument of which it is the duplicate or counterpart.

As to Exchange or Escambion and Partition or Division.

94. Where upon the exchange of any real or heritable property for any other real or heritable property, or upon the partition or division of any real or heritable property, any consideration exceeding in amount or value one hundred pounds is paid or given, or agreed to be paid or given, for equality, the principal or only instrument whereby such exchange or partition or division is effected is to be charged with the same ad valorem duty as a conveyance on sale for such consideration, and with such duty only; and where in any such case there are several instruments for completing the title of either party, the principal instrument is to be ascertained, and the other instruments are to be charged with duty according to the provisions of the seventy-sixth and seventy-seventh sections of this Act.

As to Grants of Honours and Dignities.

95. (1.) Where two or more honours or dignities are granted by the same letters patent to the same person, such letters patent are to be charged with the proper duty in respect of the highest in point of rank only.

(2.) Where any honour or dignity, honours or dignities, is or are granted to any person or persons in remainder, the letters patent are to be charged with such further duty in respect of every remainder as would have been payable for an original grant of the same honour or dignity, honours or dignities.

As to Leases, &c.

96. (1.) An agreement for a lease or tack, or with respect to the letting of any lands, tenements, or heritable subjects for any term not exceeding thirty-five years, is to be charged with the same duty as if it were an actual lease or tack made for the term and consideration mentioned in the agreement.

(2.) A lease or tack made subsequently to, and in conformity with, such an agreement duly stamped, is to be charged with the duty of sixpence only.

97. (1.) Where the consideration, or any part of the consideration, for which any lease or tack is granted or agreed to be granted, does not consist of money, but consists of any produce or other goods, the value of such produce or goods is to be deemed a consideration in respect of which the lease or tack or agreement is chargeable with ad valorem duty, and where it is stipulated that the value of such produce or goods is to amount at least to, or is not to exceed, a given sum, or where the lessee is specially charged with, or has the option of paying after, any permanent rate of conversion, the value of such produce or goods is, for the purpose of assessing the ad valorem duty, to be estimated at such given sum, or according to such permanent rate.

(2.) A lease or tack or agreement made either entirely or partially for any such consideration, if it contains a statement of the value of such consideration, and is stamped in accordance with such statement, is, so far as regards the subject matter of such statement, to be deemed duly stamped, unless or until it is otherwise shown that such statement is incorrect, and that it is in fact not duly stamped.

98. (1.) A lease or tack, or agreement for a lease or tack, or with respect to any letting, is not to be charged with any duty in respect of any penal rent, or increased rent in the nature of a penal rent, thereby reserved or agreed to be reserved or made payable, or by reason of being made in consideration of the surrender or abandonment of any existing lease, tack, or agreement of or relating to the same subject matter.

(2.) No lease made for any consideration or considerations in respect whereof it is chargeable with ad valorem duty, and in further consideration either of a covenant by the lessee to make, or of his having previously made, any substantial improvement of or addition to the property demised to him, or of any covenant relating to the matter of the lease, is to be charged with any duty in respect of such further consideration.

(3.) No lease for a life or lives not exceeding three, or for a term of years determinable with a life or lives not exceeding three, and no lease for a term absolute not exceeding twenty-one years, granted by an ecclesiastical corporation aggregate or sole, is to be charged with any higher duty than thirty-five shillings.

(4.) No lease for a definite term exceeding thirty-five years granted under the "Trinity College (Dublin) Leasing and Perpetuity Act, 1851," is to be charged with any higher duty than would have been chargeable thereon if it had been a lease for a definite term not exceeding thirty-five years.

(5.) No lease or tack, or agreement for a lease or tack, in Scotland, of any dwelling-house or tenement, or part of a dwelling-house or tenement, for any definite term not exceeding a year, at a rent not exceeding the rate of ten pounds per annum, is to be charged with any higher duty than one penny.

99. The duty upon an instrument chargeable with duty as a lease or tack for any definite term less than a year of—

(1.) Any dwelling-house or tenement, or part of a dwelling-house or tenement, at a rent not exceeding the rate of ten pounds per annum;

(2.) Any furnished dwelling-house or apartments;

Or upon the duplicate or counterpart of any such instrument, may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the instrument is first executed.

100. (1.) Every person who executes, or prepares or is employed in preparing, any instrument upon which the duty may, under the provisions of the last preceding section, be denoted by an adhesive stamp, and which is not, at or before the execution thereof, duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of five pounds.

(2.) Provided that nothing in this section contained shall render any person liable to the said penalty of five pounds in respect of any letters or correspondence.

As to Letters of Allotment, Scrip Certificates, and Scrip.

101. Every person who executes, grants, issues, or delivers out any document chargeable with duty as a letter of allotment, letter of renunciation, or scrip certificate, or as scrip, before the same is duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

As to Letters or Powers of Attorney and Voting Papers.

102. (1.) Every letter or power of attorney for the purpose of appointing a proxy to vote at a meeting, and every voting paper, hereby respectively charged with the duty of one penny, is to specify the day upon which the meeting at which it is intended to be used is to be held, and is to be available only at the meeting so specified, or any adjournment thereof.

(2.) The said duty of one penny may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the instrument is executed.

(3.) Every person who makes or executes, or votes or attempts to vote, under or by means of any such letter or power of attorney or voting paper, not being duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

(4.) Every vote given or tendered under the authority or by means of any such letter or power of attorney or voting paper, not being duly stamped, shall be absolutely null and void.

(5.) And no such letter or power of attorney or voting paper shall on any pretence whatever be stamped after the execution thereof by any person.

103. A letter or power of attorney for the sale, transfer, or acceptance of any of the Government or Parliamentary stocks or funds, duly stamped for that purpose, is not to be charged with any further duty by reason of containing an authority for the receipt of the dividends on the same stocks or funds.

104. A writing under hand only containing an order, request, or direction from the owner or proprietor of any stock to any company or to any officer of any company, or to any banker, to pay the dividends or interest arising from such stock to any person therein named, is not chargeable with duty as a letter or power of attorney.

As to Mortgages, &c.

105. The term "mortgage" means a security by way of mortgage for the payment of any definite and certain sum of money advanced or lent at the time, or previously due and owing, or forborne to be paid, being payable, or for the repayment of money to be thereafter lent, advanced, or paid, or which may become due upon an account current, together with any sum already advanced or due, or without, as the case may be;

And includes—

Conditional surrender by way of mortgage, further charge, wadset, and heritable bond, disposition, assignation, or tack in security, and eik to a reversion of or affecting any lands, estate, or property, real or personal, heritable or moveable, whatsoever:

Also any deed containing an obligation to infeft any person in an annual rent, or in lands or other heritable subjects in Scotland, under a clause of reversion, but without any personal bond or obligation therein contained for payment of the money or stock intended to be secured:

Also any conveyance of any lands, estate, or property whatsoever in trust to be sold or otherwise converted into money, intended only as a security, and redeemable before the sale or other disposal thereof, either by express stipulation or otherwise, except where such conveyance is made for the benefit of creditors generally, or for the benefit of creditors specified who accept the provision made for payment of their debts in full satisfaction thereof, or who exceed five in number:

Also any defeasance, letter of reversion, back bond, declaration, or other deed or writing for defeating or making redeemable or explaining or qualifying any conveyance, disposition, assignation, or tack of any lands, estate, or property whatsoever, apparently absolute but intended only as a security:

Also any agreement, contract, or bond accompanied with a deposit of title deeds for making a mortgage, wadset, or any such other security or conveyance as aforesaid of any lands, estate, or property comprised in such title deeds, or for pledging or charging the same as a security:

And also any deed whereby a real burden is declared or created on lands or heritable subjects in Scotland.

106. A security for the transfer or retransfer of any stock is to be charged with the same duty as a similar security for a sum of money equal in amount to the value of such stock; and a transfer, assignment, disposition, or assignation of any such security, and a reconveyance, release, discharge, surrender, re-surrender, warrant to vacate, or renunciation of any such security, shall be charged with the same duty as an instrument of the same description relating to a sum of money equal in amount to the value of such stock.

107. (1.) A security for the payment or repayment of money to be lent, advanced, or paid, or which may become due upon an account current, either with or without money previously due, is to be charged, where the total amount secured or to be ultimately recoverable is in any way limited, with the same duty as a security for the amount so limited.

(2.) Where such total amount is unlimited, the security is to be available for such an amount only as the ad valorem duty impressed thereon extends to cover.

(3.) Provided that no money to be advanced for the insurance of any property comprised in any such security against damage by fire, or for keeping up any policy of life insurance comprised in such security, or for effecting in lieu thereof any new policy, or for the renewal of any grant or lease of any property comprised in such security upon the dropping of any life whereon such property is held, shall be reckoned as forming part of the amount in respect whereof the security is chargeable with ad valorem duty.

108. A security for the payment of any rent-charge, annuity, or periodical payments, by way of repayment, or in satisfaction or discharge of any loan, advance, or payment intended to be so repaid, satisfied, or discharged, is to be charged with the same duty as a similar security for the payment of the sum of money so lent, advanced, or paid.

109. No transfer of a duly stamped security, and no security by way of further charge for money or stock, added to money or stock previously secured by a duly stamped instrument, is to be charged with any duty by reason of containing any further or additional security for the money or stock transferred or previously secured, or the interest or dividends thereof, or any new covenant, proviso, power, stipulation, or agreement in relation thereto, or any further assurance of the property comprised in the transferred or previous security.

110. (1.) Where any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments are mortgaged alone by means of a conditional surrender or grant, the ad valorem duty is to be charged on the surrender or grant, if made out of court, or the memorandum thereof, and on the copy of court roll of the surrender or grant, if made in court.

(2.) Where any copyhold or customary lands or hereditaments are mortgaged, together with other property, for securing the same money or the same stock, the ad valorem duty is to be charged on the instrument relating to the other property, and the surrender or grant, or the memorandum thereof, or the copy of court roll of the surrender or grant, as the case may be, is to be charged with duty as if the surrender or grant were not made upon a mortgage, but such last-mentioned duty shall not exceed the said ad valorem duty.

111. An instrument chargeable with ad valorem duty as a mortgage is not to be charged with any other duty by reason of the equity of redemption in the mortgaged property being thereby conveyed or limited in any other manner than to, or in trust for, or according to the direction of, a purchaser.

112. The exemption from stamp duty conferred by the Act of the sixth and seventh years of King William the Fourth, chapter thirty-two, for the regulation of benefit building societies, shall not extend to any mortgage to be made after the passing of this Act, except a mortgage by a member of a benefit building society for securing the repayment to the society of money not exceeding five hundred pounds.

113. The term "foreign security" means and includes every security for money by or on behalf of any foreign or colonial state, government, municipal body, corporation, or company, bearing date or signed after the third day of June one thousand eight hundred and sixty-two (except an instrument chargeable with duty as a bill of exchange or promissory note).

- (1.) Which is made or issued in the United Kingdom;
- (2.) Upon which any interest is payable in the United Kingdom;
- (3.) Which is assigned, transferred, or in any manner negotiated in the United Kingdom.

114. Every person who in the United Kingdom makes, issues, assigns, transfers, or negotiates, or pays any interest upon, any foreign security not being duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

115. The Commissioners may at any time, without reference to the date thereof, allow any foreign security to be stamped without the payment of any penalty, upon being satisfied, in any manner that they may think proper, that it was not made or issued, and has not been transferred, assigned, or negotiated within the United Kingdom, and that no interest has been paid thereon within the United Kingdom.

As to Notarial Acts.

116. The duty upon a notarial act, and upon the protest by a notary public of a bill of exchange or promissory note, may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the notary.

As to Policies of Insurance.

117. (1.) The term "insurance" includes assurance, and the term "policy" includes every writing whereby any contract of insurance is made, or agreed to be made, or is evidenced; and, except as herein-after mentioned, this Act does not apply to policies of sea insurance.

(2.) A policy of sea insurance made or executed out of, but being in any manner enforceable within, the United Kingdom, is to be charged with duty under the Act of the thirtieth year of Her Majesty's reign, chapter twenty-three, and may be stamped at any time within two months after it has been first received in the United Kingdom on payment of the duty only.

118. Every person who—

- (1.) Receives, or takes credit for, any premium or consideration for any contract of insurance, and does not within one month after receiving, or taking credit for, such premium or consideration, make out and execute a duly stamped policy of such insurance;
- (2.) Makes, executes, or delivers out, or pays or allows in account, or agrees to pay or allow in account, any money upon or in respect of, any policy which is not duly stamped,

shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

119. (1.) The duties imposed by this Act upon policies of insurance may be denoted by adhesive stamps, or partly by adhesive and partly by impressed stamps.

(2.) When the whole or any part of the duty upon a policy of insurance is denoted by an adhesive stamp, such adhesive stamp is to be cancelled by the person by whom the policy is first executed.

(3.) In default of such cancellation, the person making the insurance shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

As to Receipts.

120. The term "receipt" means and includes any note, memorandum, or writing whatsoever whereby any money amounting to two pounds or upwards, or any bill of exchange or promissory note for money amounting to two pounds or upwards, is acknowledged or expressed to have been received or deposited or paid, or whereby any debt or demand, or any part of a debt or demand, of the amount of two pounds or upwards, is acknowledged to have been settled, satisfied, or discharged, or which signifies or imports any such acknowledgment, and whether the same is or is not signed with the name of any person.

121. The duty upon a receipt may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the receipt is given before he delivers it out of his hands.

122. A receipt given without being stamped may be stamped with an impressed stamp upon the terms following; that is to say,

- (1.) Within fourteen days after it has been given, on payment of the duty and a penalty of five pounds;
 - (2.) After fourteen days, but within one month, after it has been given, on payment of the duty and a penalty of ten pounds,
- and shall not in any other case be stamped with an impressed stamp.

123. If any person—

- (1.) Gives any receipt liable to duty and not duly stamped;
 - (2.) In any case where a receipt would be liable to duty refuses to give a receipt duly stamped;
 - (3.) Upon a payment to the amount of two pounds or upwards gives a receipt for a sum not amounting to two pounds, or separates or divides the amount paid with intent to evade the duty,
- he shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

As to Settlements.

124. Where any money which may become due or payable upon any policy of insurance, or upon any security not being a marketable security, is settled or agreed to be settled, the instrument whereby such settlement is made or agreed to be made is to be charged with ad valorem duty in respect of such money:

Provided as follows:

- (1.) Where, in the case of a policy of insurance, no provision is made for keeping up the policy, the ad valorem duty is to be charged only on the value of the policy at the date of the instrument;
- (2.) If in any such case the instrument contains a statement of such value, and is stamped in accordance with such statement, it is, so far as regards such policy, to be deemed duly stamped, unless or until it is shown that such statement is untrue, and that the instrument is in fact insufficiently stamped.

125. (1.) An instrument chargeable with ad valorem duty as a settlement in respect of any money, stock, or security is not to be charged with any further duty by reason of containing provision for the payment or transfer of the same money, stock, or security.

(2.) Where any money, stock, or security is settled or agreed to be settled by a person who has only a reversionary interest therein, and the instrument whereby such settlement is made or agreed to be made contains a covenant by the person entitled in possession to the interest or dividends of such money, stock, or security for the payment, during the continuance of such possession, of any annuity or yearly sum not exceeding interest at the rate of four pounds per centum per annum upon the amount or value of such money, stock, or security, such instrument shall not be charged with any duty in respect of such covenant.

126. (1.) Where several instruments are executed for effecting the settlement of the same property, and the ad valorem duty chargeable in respect of the settlement of such property exceeds ten shillings, one only of such instruments is to be charged with the ad valorem duty.

(2.) Where a settlement is made in pursuance of any previous agreement or articles upon which any ad valorem settlement duty exceeding ten shillings has been paid in respect of the same property, such settlement is not to be charged with any ad valorem settlement duty.

(3.) In each of the aforesaid cases the instruments not chargeable with ad valorem duty are to be charged with the duty of ten shillings.

As to Share Warrants.

127. If a share warrant is issued without being duly stamped, the company issuing the same, and also every person who, at the time when it is issued, is the managing director or secretary or other principal officer of the company, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

As to transfers of Shares in Cost Book Mines.

128. (1.) The duty upon a request or authority to the purser or other officer of a mining company conducted on the cost book system to enter or register the transfer of any share or part of a share of the mine, and the duty upon a notice to such purser or officer of any such transfer, may be denoted by an adhesive stamp, which is to be cancelled by the person by whom the request, authority, or notice is written or executed.

(2.) Every person who writes or executes any such request, authority, or notice, not being duly stamped, and every purser or other officer of any such company who in any manner obeys, complies with, or gives effect to any such request, authority, or notice, not being duly stamped, shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds.

An Act for consolidating and amending the Law relating to the Management of Stamp Duties.

(10th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows; that is to say,

1. This Act may be cited as "The Stamp Duties Management Act, 1870," and shall come into operation on the first day of January 1871.

2. In the construction and for the purposes of this Act the following words and terms have the meanings hereby assigned to them, unless it is otherwise provided, or there be something in the context repugnant thereto:

(1.) "The Commissioners" means the Commissioners of Inland Revenue:

- (2.) "The chief office" means the chief office of Inland Revenue:
- (3.) "Head offices" means the head offices of Inland Revenue in Edinburgh and Dublin:
- (4.) "Duty," "duties," mean the stamp duty and stamp duties from time to time chargeable by law:
- (5.) "Material" means and includes every sort of material upon which words or figures can be expressed:
- (6.) "Write," "written," and "writing," include every mode in which words or figures can be expressed upon material:
- (7.) "Instrument" means and includes every written document:
- (8.) "Die" means and includes any plate, type, tool, or implement whatever used under the direction of the Commissioners for expressing or denoting any duty, or the fact that any duty or penalty has been paid, or that an instrument is duly stamped, or is not chargeable with any duty, and also any part of any such plate, type, tool, or implement:
- (9.) "Forge," "forged," mean and include counterfeit, counterfeited:
- (10.) "Stamp," "stamps," mean as well stamps impressed by means of a die as adhesive stamps:
- (11.) "Stamped" is applicable as well to instruments and material impressed with stamps by means of a die, as to instruments and material having adhesive stamps affixed thereto:
- (12.) "Executed," "execution," with reference to instruments not under seal, mean signed, signature:
- (13.) "Person" includes corporation, company, and society.

3. The duties shall be under the care and management of the Commissioners, who shall have all necessary powers and authorities for carrying this Act into execution, and shall observe and obey in relation thereto the directions of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury.

4. Where by any Act heretofore passed reference is made to the enactments relating to stamp duties in force at the time of the passing of such Act, such reference shall after the passing of this Act be read and construed as a reference to this Act, instead of the said enactments.

5. The Commissioners may, at their discretion, grant a licence to any person to deal in stamps at any place or places in the United Kingdom to be named in such licence, and every person to whom any such licence is granted shall enter into a bond (which shall be exempt from stamp duty) to Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, in a penal sum of one hundred pounds, with a condition that such licensed person does not sell or offer for sale or exchange, or keep or have in his possession for the purpose of sale or exchange, any stamps other than such as he has purchased or procured at the chief office or at one of the head offices, or from some person duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or duly licensed to deal in stamps: Provided that one licence and one bond only shall be required for any number of persons in copartnership, and any such licence may at any time be revoked by the Commissioners.

6. Every licence to be granted as aforesaid is to specify the proper Christian name and surname and place of abode of the person to whom the same is granted, and is to contain a true description of every house or shop in or at which he is by such licence authorized to deal in stamps; and such person shall not be thereby authorized or entitled to deal in stamps in or at any house, shop, or place not specified and described in his licence.

7. (1.) Every person who—

(a.) Not being duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or duly licensed to deal in stamps, deals in any manner in stamps in any part of the United Kingdom;

(b.) Being duly licensed to deal in stamps, deals in any manner in stamps at any house, shop, or place not specified and described in his licence, shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of twenty pounds:

(2.) If in any proceeding for recovery of the said penalty of twenty pounds it appears that any stamp which has been sold or exchanged, or offered for sale or exchange, is forged, although the same may not have been so alleged in the information or pleading, the said penalty of twenty pounds shall be doubled, and judgment shall be given against the offender for the sum of forty pounds, and the special matter shall be stated in the judgment as the cause of such increase of penalty:

(3.) If on any such proceeding any issue is tried by a jury in which the selling or exchanging, or offering for sale or exchange, of any stamp, is in question, the jury shall be required to say whether such stamp is forged or not:

(4.) Provided that nothing in this section contained shall exempt any person from the legal consequences of selling, uttering, or having in possession any forged stamp, knowing the same to be forged.

8. Every person who is licensed to deal in stamps shall cause to be painted at full length, in Roman capital letters, one inch at least in height, and of a proper and proportionate breadth, on some conspicuous place on the outside of the front of every house or shop in or at which he is licensed to deal in stamps, and so that the same may be at all times plainly and distinctly visible and legible, his Christian name and surname, together with the words "Licensed to sell stamps," and shall continue such names and words so painted as aforesaid during all the time that he continues licensed as aforesaid, and for every neglect or omission in any of such matters shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds.

9. If any person who is not duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or duly licensed to deal in stamps, writes, paints, or marks, or causes or procures to be written, painted, or marked, or permits or suffers to continue written, painted, or marked, upon any part of his house or shop, either in the inside or on the outside thereof, or upon any board or any material whatever exposed to public view, and whether the same be affixed to his house or shop or not, any word or words importing or signifying, or intended to import or signify, that he is a dealer in stamps, he shall forfeit the sum of ten pounds for every day on which such offence is committed or continued.

10. (1.) If any person licensed to deal in stamps dies or becomes bankrupt, or if the licence of any person to deal in stamps expires or is revoked, and any such person at the time of his death or bankruptcy, or at the expiration or revocation of his licence, has in his possession any stamps, such person, or his executor or administrator, or the trustee under his bankruptcy, may, within three months after the expiration or revocation of such licence, or next after such death or bankruptcy, as the case may be, bring or send such stamps to the chief office or to one of the head offices:

(2.) The Commissioners may in any such case pay to the person bringing or sending any stamps the amount of the duty thereon, deducting therefrom the proper discount:

(3.) Provided that the person who brings or sends such stamps makes proof to the satisfaction of the Commissioners—

(a.) That the same were actually in the possession of the person so dying or becoming bankrupt, or whose licence has expired or been revoked, for the purpose of sale, at the time when such person died or became bankrupt, or when such licence expired or was revoked;

(b.) That such stamps were purchased or procured by the person to whom such licence was granted at the chief office or at one of the head offices, or from some person duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or duly licensed to deal in stamps.

11. (1.) If any person, whether licensed to deal in stamps or not, hawks or carries about, or offers for sale or exchange, any stamps, he shall forfeit the sum of twenty pounds, over and above any penalty to which, if unlicensed, he may be liable for dealing in stamps without a licence; and it shall be lawful for any person, without any other warrant than this Act, to apprehend any person so offending, and take him or cause him to be taken before a justice of the peace having jurisdiction where the offence is committed, who shall hear and determine the matter; and if the offender does not immediately on his conviction pay the said penalty of twenty pounds, he shall be committed to prison for any period not less than one month nor more than three months, unless the penalty be sooner paid:

(2.) All stamps which are found in the possession of any such offender shall be forfeited, and shall be taken possession of by the justice, and delivered to the Commissioners, to be disposed of as they think fit:

(3.) If the offender is not apprehended and proceeded against in the manner herein-before mentioned, the said penalty of twenty pounds is to be recoverable in the same manner as any other penalty hereby imposed.

12. Notwithstanding anything in this Act contained, it shall be lawful for any person in the service or employment of the Post Office, without any other licence or authority than this Act, to sell postage stamps at any place, and to carry postage stamps about for sale.

13. Upon the sale of stamps such discount shall be allowed to the purchasers thereof as the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury shall direct.

14. Subject to such regulations as the Commissioners may think proper to make, and to the production of such evidence by affidavit or otherwise as the Commissioners may require, allowance is to be made by the Commissioners for stamps spoiled in the cases herein-after mentioned; (that is to say,)

(1.) The stamp on any material inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, obliterated, or by any means rendered unfit for the purpose intended, before any instrument written thereon is executed by any party, and for which stamp no money or other consideration has been paid or given to the attorney, solicitor, or other person employed to transact the business intended to have been carried into execution thereby, or to the person by whom the same was written:

(2.) Any adhesive stamp which has never been used or affixed to any material, but which has been inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled or rendered unfit for use :

- (3.) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note, signed by or on behalf of the drawer or intended drawer, but not delivered out of his hands to the payee or intended payee, or any person on his behalf, or deposited with any person as a security for the payment of money, or in any way negotiated, issued, or put in circulation, or made use of in any other manner whatever, and which being a bill of exchange has not been accepted by the drawee, and provided that the material on which any such stamp is impressed does not bear any signature intended as or for the acceptance of any bill of exchange to be afterwards written thereon :

- (4.) The stamp used or intended to be used for any bill of exchange or promissory note signed by or on behalf of the drawer thereof, but which from any omission or error has been spoiled or rendered useless, although the same, being a bill of exchange, may have been presented for acceptance or accepted or indorsed, or, being a promissory note, may have been delivered to the payee, provided that another completed and duly stamped bill of exchange or promissory note is produced identical in every particular, except in the correction of such error or omission as aforesaid, with the spoiled bill or note :

- (5.) The stamp used for any of the following instruments, that is to say,

(a.) The presentation to an ecclesiastical benefice not followed by institution :

(b.) An instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found to be absolutely void in law from the beginning :

(c.) An instrument executed by any party thereto, but afterwards found unfit by reason of any error or mistake therein for the purposes originally intended :

(d.) An instrument executed by any party thereto, but which by reason of the death of any person by whom it is necessary that it should be executed, without having executed the same, or of the refusal of any such person to execute the same, or to advance any money intended to be thereby secured, cannot be completed so as to effect the intended transaction in the form proposed :

(e.) An instrument executed by any party thereto which for want of the execution thereof by some material and necessary party, and his inability or refusal to sign the same, is in fact incomplete and insufficient for the purpose for which it was intended :

(f.) An instrument executed by any party thereto, which by reason of the refusal of any person to act under the same, or by the refusal or non-acceptance of any office thereby granted, totally fails of the intended purpose :

(g.) An instrument executed by any party thereto, which for want of enrolment or registration within the time required by law becomes null and void :

(h.) An instrument executed by any party thereto, which becomes useless in consequence of the transaction intended to be thereby effected being effected by some other instrument duly stamped :

(i.) An instrument executed by any party thereto which is inadvertently and undesignedly spoiled, and in lieu whereof another instrument made between the same parties and for the same purpose is executed and duly stamped :

Provided as follows :

- (1.) That in the case of an executed instrument,

(a.) The instrument is given up to be cancelled :

(b.) The application for relief is made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, except where from unavoidable circumstances any instrument for which another instrument has been substituted cannot be given up to be cancelled within the aforesaid period, and in that case within six months after the date of execution of the substituted instrument, and except where the spoiled instrument has become void for want of enrolment or registration, and in that case within six months next after it has so become void, and except also where the spoiled instrument has been sent abroad, and in that case within six months after it has been received back in any part of the United Kingdom :

(c.) No action has been brought or suit commenced in which the instrument could or would have been given or offered in evidence :

- (2.) That in the case of stamped material, not having any executed instrument written thereon, and of an adhesive stamp not affixed to any material, the application for relief is made within six months after the stamp has been spoiled as aforesaid.

15. When any person has inadvertently used for an instrument liable to duty a stamp of greater value than was necessary, or has inadvertently used any stamp for an instrument not liable to any duty, the Commissioners may, on application made within six months after the date of the instrument, or, if it is not dated, within six months after the execution thereof by the person by whom it was first or alone executed, and upon the instrument, if liable to any duty, being restamped with the proper duty, cancel and allow as spoiled the stamp so misused.

16. In any case in which allowance is made for spoiled or misused stamps the Commissioners may give in lieu thereof other stamps of the same denomination and value, or if required, and they think proper, stamps of any other denomination to the same amount in value, or, at their discretion, the same value in money, deducting the proper allowance on the purchase of stamps of the like description.

17. When any person is possessed of a stamp which has not been spoiled or rendered unfit or useless for the purpose intended, but for which he has no immediate use, the Commissioners may, if they in their discretion think fit, repay to him the amount or value of such stamp in money, deducting the proper discount, upon his delivering up the stamp to be cancelled, and proving to their satisfaction that it was purchased by him with a bona fide intention to use it, and that he has paid the full value thereof without any deduction (except only the amount of such discount), and that the stamp was so purchased within the period of six months next preceding the application at the chief office or at one of the head offices, or from some person duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps or duly licensed to deal in stamps.

18. Any person who does, or causes or procures to be done, or knowingly aids, abets, or assists in doing, any of the acts following, that is to say,

- (1.) Forging a die or stamp;
- (2.) Making an impression upon any material with a forged die;
- (3.) Fraudulently cutting, tearing, or in any way removing from any material any stamp, with the intent that any use should be made of such stamp or of any part thereof;

- (4.) Fraudulently mutilating any stamp, with intent that any use should be made of any part of such stamp;
- (5.) Fraudulently fixing or placing upon any material or upon any stamp, any stamp or part of a stamp which, whether fraudulently or not, has been cut, torn, or in any way removed from any other material, or out of or from any other stamp;
- (6.) Fraudulently erasing or otherwise either really or apparently removing from any stamped material any name, sum, date, or other matter or thing whatsoever thereon written, with the intent that any use should be made of the stamp upon such material;
- (7.) Knowingly selling or exposing for sale or uttering or using any forged stamp;
- (8.) Knowingly, and without lawful excuse (the proof of which lawful excuse lies on the person accused) having in possession any forged die or stamp, or any stamp or part of a stamp which has been fraudulently cut, torn, or otherwise removed from any material, or any stamp which has been fraudulently mutilated, or any stamped material out of which any name, sum, date, or other matter or thing has been fraudulently erased or otherwise either really or apparently removed, is guilty of felony, and upon being convicted shall be liable to be subjected to penal servitude for the term of his natural life or for any term not less than five years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years.

19. On information given before any justice of the peace upon oath that there is just cause to suspect any person of being guilty of any of the offences aforesaid, such justice may, by a warrant under his hand, cause every dwelling-house, room, workshop, outhouse, or other building or place belonging to or occupied by the suspected person, or where he is suspected of being or having been in any way engaged or concerned in the commission of any such offence, or of secreting any forged die or stamp, or any machinery, implements, or utensils applicable to the commission of any such offence, to be searched, and if upon such search any of the said several matters and things are found the same may be seized and carried away, in order that they may be produced in evidence against any offender, and shall afterwards, whether produced in evidence or not, by order of the court or judge before whom such offender is tried, or in case there shall be no such trial, by order of some justice of the peace, be delivered over to the Commissioners, to be defaced or destroyed or otherwise disposed of as they may think fit.

20. (1.) Upon information given to the Commissioners that there is reasonable cause to suspect that any person appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or being or having been licensed to deal in stamps, has in his possession any forged stamps, the Commissioners may by warrant under their hands authorise any person to enter between the hours of nine in the morning and seven in the evening into any dwelling-house, room, shop, warehouse, outhouse, or other building of or belonging to any such suspected person; and if on demand of admittance, and notice of such warrant, the door of any such dwelling-house, room, shop, warehouse, outhouse, or other building, or any inner door thereof, is not opened, then such authorized person may break open the same respectively, and search for and seize any stamps that may be found in any such place as aforesaid, or elsewhere in the custody or possession of such suspected person.

(2.) All constables and other peace officers are hereby required, upon the request of any person acting under such warrant, to aid and assist in the execution thereof.

(3.) Any person who—

(a.) Refuses to permit any such search or seizure to be made as aforesaid;

(b.) Assaults, opposes, molests, or obstructs any person employed or acting in the execution or under the authority of any such warrant, or aiding or assisting in the execution thereof; and every constable or peace officer who, upon any such request as aforesaid, refuses or neglects to aid and assist in the execution of any such warrant as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds.

21. (1.) The person who is intrusted with the execution of any such warrant as aforesaid shall, if required, give to the person in whose custody or possession any stamps are found and seized an acknowledgment of the number, particulars, and amount of the stamps so seized, and shall permit such last-mentioned person, or any person employed by him, to mark such stamps before the removal thereof:

(2.) If the person in whose custody or possession any stamps are so found and seized is or has been a licensed dealer in stamps, he shall be entitled to claim and receive in money from the Commissioners the amount of such of the stamps so seized as may be found to be genuine (deducting therefrom the proper discount), and also to receive the value of the material whereon the same may be impressed according to the rates at which material of the like quality and description is sold by the Commissioners, or, if the Commissioners think fit, such of the stamps so seized as may be found to be genuine may be returned to the person from whose custody or possession the same have been taken, with such reasonable amends as the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may think fit to award.

22. If any forged stamps are found in the possession of any person appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or being or having been licensed to deal in stamps, such person shall be deemed and taken, unless the contrary is satisfactorily proved, to have had the same in his possession knowing them to be forged, and with intent to sell, use or utter them, and shall be liable to all penalties and punishments imposed or inflicted by law upon persons selling, using, uttering, or having in possession forged stamps knowing the same to be forged.

23. (1.) Any justice of the peace having jurisdiction in the place where any stamps are known or supposed to be concealed or deposited, may, upon reasonable suspicion that the same have been stolen or fraudulently obtained, issue his warrant for the seizure thereof, and for apprehending and bringing before himself or any other justice within the same jurisdiction the person in whose possession or custody such stamps may be found, to be dealt with according to law:

(2.) If such person omits or refuses to account for the possession of such stamps, or is unable satisfactorily to account for the possession thereof, or if it does not appear that the same were purchased by him at the chief office or at one of the head offices, or from some person duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps or duly licensed to deal in stamps, such stamps of which no account or no satisfactory account is given, or which do not appear to have been so purchased as aforesaid, shall be forfeited to Her Majesty, her heirs or successors, and shall be accordingly condemned by such justice and delivered over to the Commissioners; and any stamps so condemned shall be kept by the Commissioners for the space of six months, and afterwards cancelled and destroyed, or disposed of as the Commissioners think fit:

(3.) Provided, that if at any time within six months after such condemnation any person makes out to the satisfaction of the Commissioners that any stamps so condemned were stolen or otherwise fraudulently obtained from him, and that the same were purchased by him at the chief office or one of the head offices, or from some person duly appointed to sell and distribute stamps, or duly licensed to deal in stamps, such stamps may be delivered up to him.

24. Whenever the Commissioners determine to discontinue the use of any die, and provide a new die to be used in lieu thereof, and give public notice thereof in the London, Edinburgh, and

Dublin Gazette, then from and after any day to be stated in the notice (such day not being within one month after the same is so published) such new die shall be the only lawful die for denoting the duty chargeable in any case in which the discontinued die would have been used if it had not been so discontinued; and every instrument first executed by any person, or bearing date after the day so stated, and stamped with the discontinued die, shall be deemed to be not duly stamped:

Provided as follows:

- (1.) If any instrument stamped as last aforesaid, and first executed after the day so stated at any place out of the United Kingdom, is brought to the Commissioners within fourteen days after it has been received in the United Kingdom, then upon proof of the facts to the satisfaction of the Commissioners the stamp thereon shall be cancelled, and the instrument shall be stamped with the same amount of duty by means of the lawful die, without the payment of any penalty:
- (2.) All persons having in their possession any material stamped with the discontinued die, and which by reason of the providing of such new die has been rendered useless, may at any time within six months after the day mentioned in such notice send the same to the chief office or either of the head offices, and the Commissioners may thereupon cause the stamps on such material to be cancelled, and the same material, or, if the Commissioners think fit, any other material, to be stamped with the new die, in lieu of and to an equal amount with the stamps so cancelled.

25. Every person who by any writing in any manner defaces any adhesive stamp before it is used shall forfeit the sum of five pounds: Provided that any person may with the express sanction of the Commissioners, and in the manner and in conformity with the conditions which they may prescribe, write upon an adhesive stamp before it is used for the purpose of identification thereof.

26. (1.) Penalties incurred under this Act are to be sued for by information in the Court of Exchequer, in England in the name of the Attorney General for England, in Scotland in the name of the Lord Advocate, and in Ireland in the name of the Attorney General for Ireland, and may be recovered with full costs of suit.

(2.) The Commissioners may, at their discretion, mitigate or stay or compound proceedings for any penalty, and reward any person who may inform them of any offence against this Act, or assist in the recovery of any penalty.

27. Any affidavit or statutory declaration to be made in pursuance of or for the purposes of this Act may be made before any of the Commissioners, or any officer or person authorised by them in that behalf, or before any person appointed to administer oaths in Chancery in England or Ireland, or before any person commissioned to take affidavits by the Court of Session in Scotland, or any justice of the peace or notary public in any part of the United Kingdom, or at any place out of the United Kingdom before any person duly authorised to administer oaths there.

The Inland Revenue Repeal Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title and commencement of Act.
 2. Enactments in schedule repealed.
 3. Interpretation of "the whole Act."
Schedule.
-

An Act for the repeal of certain Enactments relating to the Inland Revenue.
(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient that the enactments described in the schedule to this Act should be repealed to the extent and in manner herein-after appearing :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as "The Inland Revenue Repeal Act, 1870," and shall come into operation on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

2. The enactments described in the schedule to this Act are hereby repealed, subject to the exceptions in the said schedule mentioned: Provided that this repeal shall not affect the past operation of any enactments hereby repealed, or the sufficiency or insufficiency of the stamp duty upon any instrument executed or signed, or the validity or invalidity of anything done or suffered before the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one; nor shall this repeal interfere with the institution or prosecution of any proceeding in respect of any offence committed, or any penalty or forfeiture incurred against or under any enactment hereby repealed.

3. The expression "the whole Act," when used in the said schedule with reference to any Act which has been already in part repealed, means the whole Act so far as it has not been repealed.

CHAP. 100.

The Greenwich Hospital Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title and construction.
2. Section 51. of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 89. repealed, and other provisions substituted.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the repayment to the Consolidated Fund of money expended for the benefit of Greenwich Hospital.

(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient that the amount expended out of money provided by Parliament for the benefit of Greenwich Hospital should be repaid out of the revenue of Greenwich Hospital to the Consolidated Fund, so far as may be, quarterly instead of yearly:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as The Greenwich Hospital Act, 1870, and this Act and the Greenwich Hospital Acts, 1865 and 1869, shall be construed as one Act and may be cited together as The Greenwich Hospital Acts, 1865 to 1870.

2. Section fifty-one of the Greenwich Hospital Act, 1865, is hereby repealed, and in place thereof the following words shall be deemed to be section fifty-one of that Act, and may be hereafter printed as forming portion thereof in place of the section hereby repealed, and The Greenwich Hospital Act, 1865, shall be construed as if section fifty-one thereof had been originally expressed in the following words; that is to say,

Her Majesty's Paymaster General shall, under the direction of the Admiralty, pay from the Greenwich Hospital income account into the receipt of Her Majesty's Exchequer as soon as may be after the first of April, first of July, first of October, and first of January in every year, a sum about equal to one fifth of the total amount of money provided by Parliament for the purposes of the Greenwich Hospital Acts, 1865 and 1869, during that year, and as soon as may be after the receipt by the Admiralty of the certificate furnished by the Comptroller and Auditor General of the amount expended in the said year out of money so provided, the sum (if any) by which the amount stated in such certificate exceeds the amount of the four quarterly sums paid within the said year in pursuance of this section.

If the amount stated in such certificate is less than the amount of the said four quarterly sums, Her Majesty's Paymaster General shall forthwith, under the direction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, pay the sum by which it is so less out of the growing produce of the Consolidated Fund to the credit of the Greenwich Hospital income account.

CHAP. 101.

Pensions Commutation Act (1869) Amendment.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Amendment of section 6. of 32 and 33 Vict. c. 32.

An Act for amending the Sixth Section of the Pensions Commutation Act, 1869.
(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by the sixth section of the Pensions Commutation Act, 1869, it is provided that "the Commissioners for the Reduction of the National Debt, with the consent of the Treasury, may

" pay the amounts awarded as commutations of " pensions out of any funds for the time being " in their hands under the authority of the Act " of the twenty-fourth year of the reign of Her " present Majesty, chapter twenty-four, and the " Act of the session of the twenty-sixth and
" twenty-seventh years of the same reign, chapter
" eighty-seven, or either of such Acts:"

And whereas chapter fourteen, intituled "An Act to grant additional facilities for depositing small savings at interest, with the security of the Government for due repayment thereof," ought to be substituted for chapter twenty-four in the said section :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. Section six of the Pensions Commutation

Act, 1869, shall be construed as if the words "chapter fourteen" were and had at and from the date of the passing of such last-mentioned Act been inserted therein in the place of "chapter twenty-four," and Her Majesty's printers shall in all copies of the Pensions Commutation Act, 1869, which may be printed after the passing of this Act, insert the words "chapter fourteen" in the place of the words "chapter twenty-four" in section six of the said Pensions Commutation Act.

CHAP. 102.

The Naturalization Oath Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Regulations as to oaths of allegiance.
2. Penalty on making false declaration.
3. Construction and short title of Act.

An Act to amend the Law relating to the taking of Oaths of Allegiance on Naturalization. (10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the taking of oaths of allegiance under the Naturalization Act, 1870 :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. The power of making regulations vested in one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State by the Naturalization Act, 1870, shall extend to prescribing as follows :

- (1.) The persons by whom the oaths of allegiance may be administered under that Act:
- (2.) Whether or not such oaths are to be subscribed as well as taken, and the form in which such taking and subscription are to be attested:
- (3.) The registration of such oaths :
- (4.) The persons by whom certified copies of such oaths may be given :
- (5.) The transmission to the United Kingdom for the purpose of registration or safe keeping or of being produced as evidence of any oaths taken in pursuance of the said Act out of the United Kingdom, or of any copies of such oaths, also of copies of entries of such oaths contained in any register kept out of the United Kingdom in pursuance of this Act :

- (6.) The proof in any legal proceeding of such oaths :
- (7.) With the consent of the Treasury, the imposition and application of fees in respect of the administration or registration of any such oath.

The two last paragraphs in the eleventh section of the Naturalization Act, 1870, shall apply to regulations made under this Act.

2. Any person wilfully and corruptly making or subscribing any declaration under the Naturalization Act, 1870, knowing the same to be untrue in any material particular, shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be liable to imprisonment with or without hard labour for any term not exceeding twelve months.

3. This Act shall be termed the Naturalization Oath Act, 1870, and shall be construed as one with the Naturalization Act, 1870, and may be cited together with that Act as the Naturalization Acts, 1870.

CHAP 103.

Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Continuance of Acts in schedule.
Schedule.

An Act to continue various expiring
Laws. (10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS the several Acts mentioned in column one of the schedule to this Act are, to the extent specified in column two of that schedule, limited to expire at the times specified in respect thereof in column four of the said schedule:

And whereas it is expedient to continue such Acts, to the extent specified in column two of the said schedule and the Acts amending the same, in so far as they are temporary in their duration, for the times mentioned respectively in column five of the said schedule:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited as the Expiring Laws Continuance Act, 1870.

2. The Acts mentioned in column one of the schedule to this Act, in so far as they are temporary in their duration, shall, to the extent in column two of the said schedule mentioned, be continued until the times respectively specified in column five of the said schedule, and any enactments amending or affecting the enactments continued by this Act shall, in so far as they are temporary in their duration, be continued in like manner.

The Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title.
2. Where compromise proposed Court of Chancery may order a meeting of creditors, &c. to decide as to such compromise.
3. Interpretation.
4. Act and Companies Act to be read together.

An Act to facilitate compromises and arrangements between creditors and shareholders of Joint Stock and other Companies in Liquidation.

(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to amend the law relating to the liquidation of joint stock and other companies :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as "The Joint Stock Companies Arrangement Act, 1870."

2. Where any compromise or arrangement shall be proposed between a company which is, at the time of the passing of this Act or afterwards, in the course of being wound up, either voluntarily or by or under the supervision of the Court, under the Companies Acts 1862 and 1867, or either of them, and the creditors of such company, or any class of such creditors, it shall be lawful for the Court, in addition to any other of its powers, on the application in a summary way of any creditor or the liquidator, to order that a meeting of such creditors or class of creditors shall be summoned in such manner as the court shall direct, and if a majority in number representing three fourths in value of such creditors or class of creditors present either in person or by proxy at such meeting shall agree to any arrangement or compromise, such arrangement or compromise shall, if sanctioned by an order of the Court, be binding on all such creditors or class of creditors, as the case may be, and also on the liquidator and contributories of the said company.

3. The word "Company" in this Act shall mean any company liable to be wound up under "The Companies Act, 1862."

4. This Act shall be read and construed as part of "The Companies Act, 1862."

CHAP. 105.

Truck Commission Act, 1870.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Short title of Act.
2. Extent of Act.
3. Appointment of Commissioners.
4. Vacancy in offices of Commissioners.
5. Payment of Commissioners.
6. Powers of Commissioners.
7. Indemnity to witnesses.
8. Penalty for false swearing, &c.
9. Expenses.
10. Protection to persons appointed to conduct inquiries.
11. Service of a summons.
12. Protection to persons publishing true accounts of evidence.
13. Limitation of actions.

An Act for appointing a Commission to inquire into the alleged prevalence of the Truck System, and the disregard of the Acts of Parliament prohibiting such system, and for giving such Commission the powers necessary for conducting such Inquiry.

(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS an Act was passed in the session held in the first and second years of the reign of King William the Fourth, chapter thirty-seven, intituled "An Act to prohibit the payment in " certain trades of wages in goods or otherwise " than in the current coin of the realm," and the object of such Act is, as its title imports, to prohibit throughout Great Britain the payment in certain trades of wages in goods or otherwise than in money, which payment of wages in goods is commonly called the truck system :

And whereas it is alleged that in certain parts of Great Britain the provisions of the said Act, and divers other provisions in Acts passed for the prevention of the said truck system, are systematically disregarded, and it is expedient that inquiry should be made by Commissioners to be appointed by Parliament into the truth of the said allegations, with power to such Commissioners to suggest any improvement to be made in the law in respect of the matters aforesaid :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. This Act may be cited as the "Truck Commission Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall not extend to Ireland.

3. Charles Synge Christopher Bowen, esquire, barrister-at-law, and Alexander Craig Sellar, esquire, advocate, shall be Commissioners for the purpose of inquiring into and reporting to one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State, upon the operation of the above-mentioned Act, and of all other Acts or provisions of Acts prohibiting the truck system, with power to investigate any offences against such Acts which have occurred within the period of two years immediately preceding the passing of this Act, and to make such report on the subject of the truck system, and of the existing laws in relation thereto, as they shall deem proper and useful.

Any report made in pursuance of this Act shall be laid before Parliament within one calendar month next after such report is made if Parliament be then sitting, or if Parliament be not then sitting, then within one calendar month next after the then next meeting of Parliament.

4. As often as any vacancy occurs in the office of any Commissioner acting under this Act by reason of such Commissioner dying, resigning, declining or becoming incapable to act, one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State may from time to time fill up such vacancy.

5. There shall be paid to each of the said Commissioners out of moneys to be provided by Parliament such remuneration for their services under this Act as the Commissioners of the Treasury may direct, and the said Commissioners may employ such secretary, clerks, and other officers at such salaries, to be paid out of moneys to be provided by Parliament, as may be approved of by the said Commissioners of the Treasury.

6. The Commissioners shall have for the purposes of this inquiry to be instituted by them in pursuance of this Act all such powers, rights, and privileges as are vested in any of Her Majesty's superior courts, or in any judge thereof, or in the Court of Session in Scotland, or any judge thereof, on the occasion of any action or suit, in respect of the following matters :

- (a.) The enforcing the attendance of witnesses, and examining them on oath, affirmation, or otherwise, as they or he may think fit :
- (b.) The compelling the production of documents :
- (c.) The punishing persons guilty of contempt :
- (d.) The ordering an inspection of any real or personal property :

And a summons under the hand or hands of one or more of the Commissioners may be substituted for and shall be equivalent to any form of process capable of being issued at law in any action or suit for enforcing the attendance of witnesses, or compelling the production of documents.

Any warrant of committal to prison issued for the purpose of enforcing the powers conferred by this section shall be under the hand of one or more of the Commissioners, and shall specify the prison to which the offender is to be committed, and shall not authorise the imprisonment of any offender for a period exceeding three months.

For the purposes of this Act the Commissioners or either of them shall have power to enter and view any premises.

All superintendents of police, chief constables, headboroughs, gaolers, constables, and bailiffs shall and they are required to give their aid and assistance to the said Commissioners in the execution of their office.

The gaoler or other chief officer of any prison refusing to receive into his prison any prisoner committed thereto in pursuance of this Act shall incur a penalty not exceeding five pounds, to be recovered summarily for every day during which such refusal continues.

Every examination of witnesses under this Act shall be conducted in public, and due notice shall be given of the time and place of holding the same, but with power to the Commissioners to adjourn any meeting from any one place or time to another as occasion may require.

Any one Commissioner may hold inquiries for the purpose of this Act sitting alone, and exercise singly all the powers which by this Act may, when the two Commissioners are sitting together, be exercised by both or either of them, except only the power of punishing persons guilty of contempt, which power shall not be exercised by one Commissioner sitting alone, unless by order of one of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State.

7. Any person examined as a witness in an inquiry under this Act who in the opinion of the Commissioners makes a full and true disclosure touching all the matters in respect of which he is examined, shall receive a certificate under the hand of such Commissioners stating that the witness has upon his examination made a full and true disclosure as aforesaid; and if any civil or criminal proceeding be at any time thereafter instituted against such witness in respect of any matter touching which he has been so examined, the tribunal before which such proceeding is instituted shall, on the production and proof of the certificate, stay the proceeding, and may in its discretion award to such witness any costs he may have been put to by the institution of the proceeding; provided that no evidence taken under this Act shall be admissible against any person in any civil or criminal proceeding whatever, except in the case of a witness who may be accused of having given false evidence before the Commissioners conducting the inquiry under this Act.

8. Every person who, upon examination upon oath or affirmation in any inquiry under this Act, wilfully gives false evidence, shall be liable to the penalties of perjury.

9. The reasonable expenses incurred by any person who may be summoned to appear to give evidence in any inquiry under this Act, according to a scale to be approved by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, may be allowed and paid to such person upon a certificate under the hands or hand of both or one of the Commissioners conducting the inquiry under this Act, and shall be deemed to be expenses incurred by the Commissioners for the purposes of their Commission, and, together with all incidental expenses of the inquiry directed by this Act, shall be paid by the said Commissioners of the Treasury out of moneys provided by Parliament.

10. The Commissioners in conducting an inquiry under this Act shall have such and the like protection and privileges, in case of any action brought against them for any act done or omitted to be done in the execution of their duty, as is now by law given by any Act or Acts now or hereafter to be in force to justices acting in execution of their office.

11. Service upon any person of a summons under this Act may be made by leaving the summons at his usual or last known place of abode or of business.

12. No person shall be liable to any suit, action, indictment, or proceeding by reason of his publishing a true account of any evidence taken by the Commissioners or of any report of the Commissioners.

13. No action shall be brought against any of the Commissioners appointed to conduct an inquiry under this Act, or any other person whomsoever, for any thing done in the execution of his duty under this Act, unless such action be brought within six calendar months next after the doing of such thing.

CHAP. 106.

Sanitary Act (Dublin) Amendment.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Public Works Loan Commissioners may advance to town council a sum not exceeding 350,000l. for purification of Liffey, &c.
2. Application of moneys raised under this Act.
3. Repayment of advances.
4. Payment of expenses incurred in the execution of Act.
5. Arrears may be enforced by appointment of a receiver.

An Act to amend the Sanitary Act, 1866, so far as relates to the city of Dublin.
(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS under the provisions of the Sanitary Act, 1866, the right honourable the lord mayor, aldermen, and burgesses of the city of Dublin, acting by the town council of the said city, are the sewer authority within the said city for the purposes of the said Act and of the Sewage Utilization Act, 1865, and are also the nuisance authority for executing the Nuisance Removal Acts, as the same are made applicable to Ireland by the said Sanitary Act, 1865:

And whereas for the purpose of carrying the said Acts into effect it is necessary that the River

Liffey should be made pure and the main drainage of the said city should be perfected, and that the works necessary for the purposes aforesaid should be executed, and that to defray the expenses which will be incurred in the execution of the said works the Public Works Loan Commissioners, as defined by the Public Works Loan Act, 1853, should advance to the said town council moneys to the amount, upon the security and in the manner by this Act authorised :

And whereas for the purposes aforesaid it is necessary to amend the Sanitary Act, 1866 :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows ; (that is to say,)

1. The Public Works Loan Commissioners, as defined by the Public Works Loan Act, 1853, may, if they think fit, advance to the said town council of the city of Dublin, upon the security of the rate or fund out of which expenses incurred by the said town council as the sewer and nuisance authority within the said city under the Sanitary Act, 1866, may be defrayed, any sum or sums of money not exceeding in the whole three hundred and fifty thousand pounds, to be applied by the said town council in the execution of the works necessary for the purpose of purifying the said River Liffey and completing the main drainage of the said city of Dublin.

2. The said town council of the city of Dublin shall apply all moneys raised under the authority of this Act in payment of the expenses incurred in the execution of the said works necessary for the purification of the River Liffey and the completion of the said main drainage of the said city of Dublin and incident thereto, and to or for no other purpose whatsoever.

3. Notwithstanding anything in the Public Works Loan Act, 1853, contained to the contrary, all moneys advanced under the authority of this Act shall be repaid in manner following ; (that is to say,)

So long as any principal money or interest shall remain unpaid the said town council of the city of Dublin shall, in every year, from the date of each advance, pay to the said

Public Works Loan Commissioners such annual sum as shall be equivalent to the sum of five per cent. per annum upon amount of such advance, and such annual sum shall be applied first in payment of interest on the amount remaining unpaid in respect of such advance at the rate of four per cent. per annum, and next in or towards discharge of the principal of such advance :

Every such annual sum shall be paid in two equal half-yearly instalments, the first of such instalments to be paid six months after the date of the advance in respect of which the same shall be payable.

4. The expenses incurred by the said town council of the city of Dublin in carrying this Act into effect, and in repaying all moneys advanced under the authority of the same, shall be deemed to be expenses incurred by the said town council in carrying into effect the said Sanitary Act, 1866, and the Nuisance Removal Acts, and shall be paid out of the same rate or fund and in like manner in every respect.

5. In case the said town council shall not pay any such half-yearly payment as aforesaid within thirty days after the same shall be due, the said Public Works Loan Commissioners may, in addition to any other remedies, enforce payment of the same by the appointment of a receiver, and it shall be lawful for such receiver to apply to the Court of Queen's Bench in Ireland for a writ of mandamus to compel the said town council to make and cause to be levied such rate or rates as they are authorised to make for the purposes of the Sanitary Act, 1866, and the Nuisances Removal Acts, of such amount as shall be sufficient to make good any deficiency in the funds applicable to the payment of such interest, and so from time to time ; and the said court is hereby authorised, on cause duly shown, to order and direct such writ of mandamus to issue, and if and when the same shall be made peremptory, the town council shall and they are hereby authorised and required to make or cause to be levied such rate or rates of such amount, or as near thereto as may be, as shall be sufficient to pay the amount due, and the costs and expenses attending the recovery of the same.

An Act for taking the Census of England.

WHEREAS it is expedient to take the census of England in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. One of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall have the care of superintending the taking of the census, and shall cause to be prepared and printed, for the use of the persons to be employed in taking it, such forms and instructions as he shall deem necessary, and the Registrar General shall issue all such forms and instructions to the persons for whose use they shall be intended; and all the expenses which shall be incurred by authority of such Secretary of State, with the consent of the Commissioners of the Treasury, under this Act, shall be paid out of such moneys as shall be provided by Parliament for that purpose.

2. Every registrar's sub-district in England shall be formed into enumerator's divisions according to instructions to be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State, who shall cause a sufficient number of copies of such instructions to be sent to every registrar of births and deaths in England; and the registrars, with all convenient speed, shall divide the several sub-districts into enumerator's divisions according to such instructions, and subject in each case to be revised by the superintendent registrar, and to the final revision and approval of the said Registrar General.

3. The several registrars of births and deaths in England shall make and return to their respective superintendent registrars a list containing the names and places of abode of a sufficient number of persons, duly qualified according to instructions to be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State, to act as enumerators within their several sub-districts, and such persons, when approved of by the superintendent registrar, shall be appointed by him enumerators for taking the census, subject nevertheless to the approval of the said Registrar General; and the registrar, with the approval of the superintendent registrar, shall assign a division to each enumerator, and shall distribute to the several enumerators in his sub-district the forms and instructions which shall have been issued for that purpose by the Registrar General, and shall personally ascertain that each enumerator thoroughly understands the manner in which the duties required of him are to be performed.

4. Schedules shall be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State for the purpose of being filled up by or on behalf of the several occupiers of dwelling-houses as herein-after provided, with particulars of the name, sex, age, rank, profession or occupation, condition, relation to head of family, and birthplace of every living person who abode in every house on the night of Sunday the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and also whether any were blind, or deaf and dumb, or imbecile or lunatic; and the registrars in England shall in the course of the week ending on Saturday the first day of April in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one leave or cause to be left at every dwelling-house within their respective sub-districts one or more of the said schedules for the occupier or occupiers thereof or of any part thereof, and upon every such schedule shall be plainly expressed that it is to be filled up by the occupier of such dwelling-house, (or where such dwelling-house is let or sub-let in different stories or apartments, and occupied distinctly by different persons or families, by the occupier of each such distinct story or apartment,) and that the enumerator will collect all such schedules within his division on the Monday then next following; and every occupier of any dwelling-house, or of any distinct story or apartment in any dwelling-house, with or for whom any such schedule shall have been left as aforesaid, shall fill up the said schedule to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, so far as relates to all persons dwelling in the house, story, or apartment occupied by him or her, and shall sign his or her name thereunto, and shall deliver the schedule so filled up, or cause the same to be delivered, to the enumerator when required so to do; and every such occupier who shall wilfully refuse or without lawful excuse neglect to fill up the said schedule to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, or to sign and deliver the same as herein required, or who shall wilfully make, sign, or deliver, or cause to be made, signed, or delivered, any false return of all or any of the matters specified in the said schedule, shall forfeit a sum not more than five pounds nor less than twenty shillings.

5. The enumerators shall visit every house in their respective divisions, and shall collect all the schedules so left within their division from house to house, so far as may be possible, on Monday the third day of April in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and shall complete such of the schedules as upon delivery thereof to them shall appear to be defective, and correct such as they shall find to be erroneous, and shall copy the schedules, when completed and corrected, into books to be provided them for that purpose, and shall add thereunto an account, according to the best information which they shall be able to obtain, of all the other persons living within their division who shall not be included in the schedules so collected by them.

6. Every enumerator shall also take an account of the occupied houses, and of the houses then building and therefore uninhabited, and also of all other uninhabited houses within his division, and shall also take an account of all such particulars herein-before mentioned, and none others, according to the forms and instructions which may be issued under this Act; and in the book into which he shall have copied the householders schedules and other particulars, as herein-before directed, each enumerator shall distinguish the several parishes within his division, or such parts thereof as shall be within his division, and shall also distinguish those parishes or parts of parishes within his division which are within the limits of any city or borough returning or contributing to return a member or members to serve in Parliament, or of any incorporated city or borough, or of any town within the jurisdiction of a local board, or of any commissioners intrusted by a local Act with draining, cleansing, lighting, or improving the town, or of any ecclesiastical district, or of any area prescribed in that behalf by the instructions, and shall deliver such book to the registrar of the sub-district, together with the householders schedules collected by him, and shall sign a form or declaration to the effect that the said book has been truly and faithfully filled up by him, and that to the best of his knowledge the same is correct, which form of declaration shall be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State, and issued by the Registrar General with the forms and instructions aforesaid.

7. The registrar to whom such enumerators books shall be delivered shall examine the same, and shall satisfy himself that the instructions in each case have been punctually fulfilled, and if not shall cause any defect or inaccuracy in the said book to be supplied so far as may be possible; and when the books shall have been made as accurate as is possible the registrar shall deliver them to the superintendent registrar of his sub-district, and thereafter shall transmit the householders schedules to the Registrar General.

8. The superintendent registrar shall examine all the books which shall be so delivered to him, and shall satisfy himself how far the registrars have duly performed the duties required of them by this Act, and shall cause any inaccuracies which he shall discover in such books to be corrected so far as may be possible, and shall return on or before the first day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, or such other day as may be fixed by the Registrar General, all the books which shall have been delivered to him to the Registrar General for the use of such Secretary of State.

9. The Secretary of State shall cause an abstract to be made of the said returns; and such abstract shall be printed, and laid before both Houses of Parliament within twelve calendar months next after the first day of June in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, if Parliament be sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within the first fourteen days of the Session then next ensuing.

10. The master or keeper of every gaol, prison, or house of correction, workhouse, hospital, or lunatic asylum, and of every public or charitable institution, which shall be determined upon by the said Registrar General, shall be the enumerator of the inmates thereof, and shall be bound to conform to such instructions as shall be sent to him by the authority of one of the said Secretaries of State for obtaining the returns required by this Act, so far as may be practicable, with respect to such inmates.

11. The overseers of the poor in every parish in England, and the constables, tithingmen, headboroughs, or other peace officers for such parishes, and the relieving officers in any union or parish not in union with a board of guardians acting under the provisions of an Act passed in the fifth year of King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the amendment and better administration of the laws relating to the Poor in England and Wales," or the Acts amending the same, shall be bound to act as enumerators under this Act within their respective parishes and unions, if required so to act by one of the said Secretaries of State, and where they shall so act shall be entitled to allowances as enumerators under the provisions of this Act; and every such overseer, relieving officer, constable, tithingman, headborough, and other peace officer who shall refuse or wilfully neglect so to act, and duly to perform the duties required of the said enumerators by this Act, shall for every such offence forfeit a sum not more than ten pounds nor less than five pounds.

12. The Secretary of State shall obtain, by such ways and means as shall appear to him best adapted for the purpose, returns of the particulars required by this Act with respect to all persons who during the said night of Sunday the second day of April were travelling or on shipboard, or for any other reason were not abiding in any house of which account is to be taken by the enumerators and other persons as aforesaid, and shall include such returns in the abstract to be made by him as aforesaid.

13. One of the said Secretaries of State shall cause to be prepared a table of allowances to be made to the several enumerators, registrars, superintendent registrars, and other persons in England employed in the execution of this Act; and such table, when approved by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament on or before the first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, if Parliament be sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within the first fourteen days of the session then next ensuing.

14. The superintendent registrar of every district in England shall within one calendar month next after the taking of the census certify to the said Registrar General the total amount of the allowances to which he, and the registrars, enumerators, and other persons in that district, are respectively entitled according to the said table.

15. The Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury shall, through the Registrar General, pay to each superintendent registrar, out of the moneys provided by Parliament for that purpose, the whole amount of the allowances to which the said superintendent registrar, and the registrars, enumerators, and other persons in each district, are severally entitled according to the said table; and each superintendent registrar shall pay over to the registrars in his district the allowances to which they the said registrars are entitled, and shall also pay over or cause to be paid over to the enumerators and other persons in his district the allowances to which they are severally entitled according to the said table; and the receipts to be given by the enumerators and other persons and registrars for payment of their said allowances shall be delivered to the superintendent registrar, who shall transmit the same, together with the receipt for his own allowance, to the Registrar General: Provided always, that no such payment shall be made to any enumerator or other person who shall be required to act as an enumerator under this Act, but upon production of a certificate under the hand of the registrar that the duties required of such enumerator or other person acting as enumerator by this Act have been faithfully performed, and the like certificate shall be required under the hand of the superintendent registrar with respect to the registrar before any payment shall be made to the registrar, and the like certificate under the hand of the said

Registrar General with respect to the superintendent registrar before any payment shall be made to the superintendent registrar.

16. Every superintendent registrar and registrar, and every enumerator and other person who is bound under this Act if required to act as enumerator, making wilful default in any of the matters required of them respectively by this Act, or making any wilfully false declaration, shall for every such wilful default or false declaration forfeit a sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than two pounds.

17. The enumerators and other persons employed in the execution of this Act shall be authorised to ask all such questions as shall be directed in any instructions to be prepared by or under the direction of the said Secretary of State which shall be necessary for obtaining the returns required by this Act; and every person refusing to answer or wilfully giving a false answer to such questions or any of them shall for every such refusal or wilfully false answer forfeit a sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than twenty shillings.

18. All penalties imposed by this Act shall be recovered in a summary manner before two justices of the peace having jurisdiction in the county or place where the offence is committed in the manner prescribed by law in this behalf.

19. In the construction of this Act the term pariah means a place for which a separate poor rate is or can be made, and has in the metropolis the same meaning as in "The Metropolis Management Act, 1855," and the words "dwelling-house" shall include all buildings and tenements of which the whole or any part shall be used for the purpose of human habitation.

An Act for taking the Census in Scotland.
(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS it is expedient to take the census of Scotland in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one :

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. One of Her Majesty's Principal Secretaries of State shall have the care of superintending the taking of the census of Scotland, and shall cause to be prepared and printed, for the use of the persons to be employed in taking it, such forms and instructions as he shall deem necessary, and the Registrar General for Scotland shall issue all such forms and instructions to the persons for whose use they shall be intended; and all the expenses which shall be incurred by authority of such Secretary of State, subject to the sanction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, under this Act, shall be paid out of such moneys as shall be provided by Parliament for that purpose.

2. The Registrar General for Scotland shall send a printed copy of this Act to the sheriff of every county in Scotland, and to the chief magistrate of every royal burgh, and of every parliamentary burgh having magistrates, in Scotland.

3. Every registrar's district in Scotland shall be formed into enumerators divisions according to instructions to be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State, who shall cause a sufficient number of copies of such instructions to be sent to every registrar of births, deaths, and marriages in Scotland; and the registrars, with all convenient speed, shall divide the several districts into enumerators divisions according to such instructions, and subject in each case to be revised by the sheriff of the county or the magistrates of the burgh, as the case may be.

4. The several registrars of births, deaths, and marriages in Scotland shall make and return to the sheriff of the county, or to the chief magistrate of the burgh, as the case may be, a list containing the names and places of abode of a sufficient number of persons, duly qualified according to instructions to be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State, to act as enumerators within their several districts, and such persons, when approved of by the sheriff or magistrates, shall be appointed by the registrar, by any writing under his hand, enumerators for taking the census; and the registrar, with the like approval, shall assign a division to each enumerator, and shall distribute to the several enumerators in his district the forms and instructions which shall have been issued for that purpose by the Registrar General, and shall personally ascertain that each enumerator thoroughly understands the manner in which the duties required of him are to be performed.

5. Schedules shall be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State for the purpose of being filled up by or on behalf of the several occupiers in dwelling-houses as herein-after provided, with particulars of the name, sex, age, rank, profession or occupation, condition, relation to head of family, and birthplace of every living person who abode in every house on the night of Sunday the second day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and also whether any were blind, or deaf and dumb, or imbecile or lunatic, and also whether any, and how many, of such persons, being of the age of from five to thirteen years, were in regular attendance at school, or were in the receipt of education at home under tutors or governesses, and the registrars in Scotland shall in the course of the week ending on Saturday the first day of April in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one leave or cause to be left at every dwelling-house within their respective districts one or more of the said schedules for the occupier or occupiers thereof or of any part thereof, and upon every such schedule shall be plainly expressed that it is to be filled up by the occupier of such dwelling-house, (or where such dwelling-house is let in different stories or apartments, and occupied distinctly by different persons or families, by the occupier of each such distinct story or apartment,) and that the enumerator will collect all such schedules within his division on the Monday then next following; and every occupier of any dwelling-house, or of any distinct story or apartment in any dwelling-house, with or for whom any such schedule shall have been left as aforesaid, shall fill up the said schedule to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, so far as relates to all persons dwelling in the house, story, or apartment occupied by him or her, and shall sign his or her name thereunto, and shall deliver the schedule so filled up, or cause the same to be delivered, to the enumerator when required so to do; and every such occupier who shall wilfully refuse or without lawful excuse neglect to fill up the said schedule to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, or to sign and deliver the same as herein required, or who shall wilfully make, sign, or deliver, or cause to be made, signed, or delivered, any false return of all or any of the matters specified in the said schedule, shall forfeit a sum not more than five pounds nor less than twenty shillings.

6. The enumerators shall visit every house in their respective divisions, and shall collect all the schedules so left within their division from house to house, so far as may be possible, on Monday the third day of April in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and shall complete such of the schedules as upon delivery thereof to them shall appear to be defective, and correct such as they shall find to be erroneous, and shall copy the schedules, when completed and corrected, into books to be provided them for that purpose, and shall add thereunto an account, according to the best information which they shall be able to obtain, of all the other persons living within their division who shall not be included in the schedules so collected by them.

7. Every enumerator shall also take an account of the occupied houses, and of the houses then building and therefore uninhabited, and also of all other uninhabited houses within his division, stating the number of rooms, including the kitchen, if any, as a room, having a window or windows, not being windows with a borrowed light, in each dwelling-house, and shall also take an account of all such particulars herein-before mentioned, and none other, as by the forms and instructions which may be issued under this Act they may be directed to inquire into; and in the book into which he shall have copied the householders schedules and other particulars, as herein-before directed, each enumerator shall distinguish the several parishes and places maintaining their own poor within his division, or such parts thereof as shall be within his division, and shall also distinguish those parishes and places or parts of parishes and places within his division which are within the limits of any city or burgh returning or contributing to return a member or members to serve in Parliament, or any royal burgh or any burgh in which either of the General Police and Improvement Acts, thirteenth and fourteenth Victoria, chapter thirty-three, or twenty-fifth and twenty-sixth Victoria, chapter one hundred and one, has been adopted, and shall deliver such book to the registrar of the district, together with the householders schedules collected by him, and shall sign a form or declaration to the effect that the said book has been truly and faithfully filled up by him, and that to the best of his knowledge the same is correct so far as may be known, which form of declaration shall be prepared by or under the direction of such Secretary of State, and issued by the Registrar General with the forms and instructions aforesaid.

8. The registrar to whom such enumeration book shall be delivered shall examine the same, and shall satisfy himself that the instructions in each case have been punctually fulfilled, and if not shall cause any defect or inaccuracy in the said book to be supplied so far as may appear possible; and when the books shall have been made as accurate as is possible the registrar shall deliver them to the sheriff of the county or the chief magistrate of the burgh, as the case may be, as herein-after provided.

9. The sheriff of every county and the chief magistrate of every royal or parliamentary burgh in Scotland shall appoint a time or times, which shall not be earlier than the eighth nor later than the twenty-second day of April one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, for the registrars of districts within their respective jurisdictions to attend at their respective offices, or such other places as they may appoint, with the returns to be made under this Act, of which times and places intimation shall be given to the registrars in such manner as shall be directed by the sheriffs and magistrates respectively, who shall then and there receive from the registrars the returns to be made as aforesaid, and cause every registrar to make a declaration to the effect that the said account has been truly and faithfully taken, and that to the best of his knowledge the same is correct; and the sheriffs and magistrates, if they see cause, may examine the registrars touching any of the matters to which the returns relate, and shall thereafter direct the clerks of their respective jurisdictions to endorse the same (if not previously endorsed) with the name of the county and district thereof wherein the parish or place therein mentioned is situate, or otherwise (where any of the said sheriffs shall think proper) they shall direct the registrar to verify the said returns before any justice of the peace of their respective counties, and thereafter to transmit the same previously to the said twenty-second day of April in any convenient manner to the said sheriffs, who shall direct the same to be endorsed as aforesaid.

10. The sheriffs of counties and the chief magistrates of royal or parliamentary burghs in Scotland shall, on or before the third day of May one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, transmit the several original enumeration books by them received from the registrars (together with a list of the parishes and places within their respective counties and burghs from whence no returns have been made to them) to the office of the Registrar General for Scotland for the use of the Secretary of State: Provided always, that the Registrar General may empower the said sheriffs or chief magistrates, or any of them, on a special application to that effect, to retain the said enumeration books for any period not later than the fifteenth day of May of the said year.

11. The Secretary of State shall cause an abstract to be made of the said returns; and such abstract shall be printed, and laid before both Houses of Parliament within twelve calendar months next after the first day of June in the year one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, if Parliament be sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within the first fourteen days of the session then next ensuing.

12. The master or keeper of every gaol, prison, or house of correction, workhouse, hospital, or lunatic asylum, and of every public or charitable institution, which shall be determined upon by the said Registrar General, shall be the enumerator of the inmates thereof, and shall be bound to conform to such instructions as shall be sent to him by the authority of one of the said Secretaries of State for obtaining the returns required by this Act, so far as may be practicable, with respect to such inmates.

13. The Secretary of State shall obtain, by such ways and means as shall appear to him best adapted for the purpose, returns of the particulars required by this Act with respect to all houseless persons, and all persons who during the said night of Sunday the second day of April were travelling on shipboard, or for any other reason were not abiding in any house of which account is to be taken by the enumerators and other persons as aforesaid, and shall include such returns in the abstract to be made by him as aforesaid.

14. One of the said Secretaries of State shall cause to be prepared a table of allowances to be made to the several enumerators, registrars, sheriff clerks, town clerks, and other persons in Scotland employed in the execution of this Act; and such table, when approved by the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament on or before the first day of March one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, if Parliament be sitting, or if Parliament be not sitting, then within the first fourteen days of the session then next ensuing.

15. The sheriff of every county and the chief magistrate of every royal or parliamentary burgh in Scotland shall, within one calendar month next after the taking of the census, certify to the said Registrar General the total amount of the allowances to which the registrars, enumerators, sheriff clerks, town clerks, and other persons are respectively entitled according to the said table.

16. The sheriffs of counties and the chief magistrates of royal or parliamentary burghs in Scotland shall grant to the sheriff clerks and town clerks respectively, and the several registrars, enumerators, or other persons employed in the execution of this Act, such allowances as shall have been certified as herein-before provided, together with any necessary expenses incurred by them or any of them in the execution of this Act, and shall order payment thereof to be made by the collector of the land tax for the county or other place out of any money in his hands, and such collector shall pay the same accordingly; and the receipts to be given by the registrars, enumerators, and other persons for payment of their said allowances shall be delivered to the sheriff clerk or town clerk, as the case may be, who shall transmit the same, together with the receipt for his own allowance, to the Registrar General: Provided always, that no such payment shall be made to any enumerator or other person who shall be required to act as an enumerator under this Act, but upon production of a certificate under the hand of the registrar that the duties required of such enumerator or other person acting as enumerator by this Act have been faithfully performed, and the like certificate shall be required under the hand of the sheriff or chief magistrate, as the case may be, with respect to the registrar, before any payment shall be made to him.

17. Every registrar, and every enumerator and other person who shall be required to act as enumerator, so appointed as aforesaid, making wilful default in any of the matters required of them respectively by this Act, or making any wilfully false declaration, shall for every such wilful default or false declaration forfeit a sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than two pounds.

18. The enumerators and other persons employed in the execution of this Act shall be authorised to ask all such questions as shall be directed in any instructions to be prepared by or under the direction of the said Secretary of State which shall be necessary for obtaining the returns required by this Act; and every person refusing to answer or wilfully giving a false answer to such questions or any of them shall for every such refusal or wilfully false answer forfeit a sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than twenty shillings.

19. All offences committed in contravention of this Act shall be prosecuted, and all penalties imposed by this Act shall be recovered in a summary manner, under the provisions of "The Summary Procedure Act, 1864," and every such penalty shall be paid, one half to the informer, and the other half to the collector of the land tax for the county or place for which the judge before whom the penalty is recovered shall have acted, to be by him applied in aid of the expenditure under this Act.

20. The term "sheriff" shall include "sheriff substitute," and the term "dwelling-house" shall include all buildings and tenements of which the whole or any part shall be used for the purpose of human habitation.

An Act to abolish certain Real Actions in the Superior Courts of Common Law in Ireland, and further to amend the Procedure in the said Courts; and for other purposes.

(10th August 1870.)

BE it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows; (that is to say,)

1. This Act shall commence and take effect on the second day of November one thousand eight hundred and seventy.

2. This Act shall apply to Ireland only.

3. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Common Law Procedure Amendment Act, Ireland, 1870."

4. No writ of Right of Dower, or writ of Dower unde nihil habet, and no plaint for freebench or dower in the nature of any such writ, and no Quare impedit, shall be brought after the commencement of this Act in any court whatsoever; but where any such writ, action, or plaint would now lie, either in a superior or any other court, an action may be commenced by "writ of summons and plaint" issuing out of the Superior Courts of Common Law at Dublin, in the same manner as the writ of summons and plaint in an ordinary action, and in such form as the judge of the said courts respectively shall from time to time think fit to order.

The service of the writ, appearance of the defendant, proceedings in default of appearance, pleadings, judgment, execution, and all other proceedings and costs upon such writ, shall be subject to the rules and practice which the judges of the said courts respectively shall from time to time make and prescribe, and which rules and practice shall be the same, as nearly as may be, as the proceedings in an ordinary action commenced by writ of summons and plaint.

In order to enable the said superior courts and the judges thereof respectively to make rules and regulations, and to frame writs of summons and plaint, and proceedings for the purpose of giving effect to the provisions of this section, the two hundred and thirty-third and two hundred and fortieth sections of "The Common Law Procedure Amendment Act (Ireland), 1853," shall be incorporated with this section, as if those provisions had been severally herein repeated.

5. Where in any action of contract brought or commenced in any of the superior courts of common law at Dublin the claim endorsed on the summons and plaint does not exceed forty pounds, or where such claim, though it originally exceeded forty pounds, is reduced by payment, an admitted set-off, or otherwise, to a sum not exceeding forty pounds, it shall be lawful for the defendant in the action, within eight days from the day upon which the summons and plaint shall have been served upon him, if the whole or part of the demand of the plaintiff be contested, to apply to the court in which the action is brought, or to any judge of the said superior courts in chamber, for an order that such action should be tried in the civil bill court or one of the civil bill courts in which the action might have been commenced; and on the hearing of such application the judge shall, on proof that sufficient notice thereof has been given to the plaintiff or his attorney, unless there be good cause to the contrary, order such action to be tried in such civil bill court at the sessions to be named in such order, and thereupon the plaintiff shall lodge the original summons and plaint, which, if filed, shall be taken off the file for that purpose and delivered to the plaintiff, and the order with the clerk of the peace of the county mentioned in the order, and the cause and all proceedings therein, shall be heard and taken in such civil bill court as if the action had been originally commenced in such court; and the costs of the parties in respect of proceedings subsequent to the order of the judge of the superior court shall be allowed according to the scale of costs in use in the civil bill courts, and the costs of the proceedings previously had in the superior court shall be allowed according to the scale in use in such latter court.

6. Any person against whom an action for malicious prosecution, illegal arrest, illegal distress, assault, false imprisonment, libel, slander, seduction, or other action of tort may be brought in any of the superior courts of common law at Dublin, may, within eight days from the day upon which the summons and plaint shall have been served upon him, apply to the court in which the action is brought, or to any judge of the said superior courts in chamber, (having previously made and filed in the proper office an affidavit, setting forth that the plaintiff has no visible means of paying the costs of the defendant should a verdict not be found for the plaintiff,) for an order that unless the plaintiff shall, within a time to be therein mentioned, give full security for the defendant's costs to the satisfaction of the master of the said court, or satisfy the judge that he has a cause of action fit to be prosecuted in the superior court, all proceedings in the action shall be stayed, or in the event of the plaintiff being unable or unwilling to give such security, or failing to satisfy the judge as aforesaid, that the cause be remitted for trial in the civil bill court of the division of the county in which the defendant usually resides, at the sessions to be named in such order, and on the hearing of such application the judge shall, on proof that sufficient notice thereof has been given to the plaintiff or his attorney, and if he is satisfied of the truth of the statements in such affidavit, make such order accordingly; and where any such cause shall be remitted for trial in manner aforesaid the plaintiff shall lodge the original summons and plaint, which, if filed, shall be taken off the file for that purpose and delivered to the plaintiff, and the order with the clerk of the peace of the county named in the order, and thereupon the said cause shall be deemed to be and shall be within the jurisdiction of the civil bill court named in such order, and the said court shall have all and the same powers and jurisdiction with respect to the said cause as if the same had been originally within the jurisdiction of the said court and had been commenced by process in the said court; and the costs of the parties in respect of the proceedings subsequent to the order of the judge of the superior court shall be allowed according to the scale of costs in use in the civil bill courts, and the costs of the proceedings in the superior court shall be allowed according to the scale in use in such latter court.

7. In this Act—

The term "clerk of the peace" shall include the acting or deputy clerk of the peace, registrar, or other officer of the county, or recorders courts lawfully discharging the duties of the clerk either in a county, county of a city, or county of a town:

The word "county" shall include a county of a city, a county of a town, a town, a city, a borough, and a riding of a county.

An Act to provide for the administration of the Law relating to Matrimonial Causes and Matters, and to amend the Law relating to Marriages, in Ireland.

(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by "The Irish Church Act, 1869," after reciting that it was expedient that the union created by Act of Parliament between the Churches of England and Ireland as then by law established should be dissolved, and that the Church of Ireland, as so separated, should cease to be established by law, it was enacted that on and after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one the said union created by Act of Parliament between the Churches of England and Ireland should be dissolved, and that the said Church of Ireland, in the said Act referred to as "the said Church," should cease to be established by law; and it was further enacted that on and after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one all jurisdiction, whether contentious or otherwise, of all the ecclesiastical, peculiar, exempt, and other courts and persons in Ireland at the time of the passing of the said Act having any jurisdiction whatsoever exercisable in any cause, suit, or matter, matrimonial, spiritual, or ecclesiastical, or in any way connected with or arising out of the ecclesiastical law of Ireland, should cease, and that on and after the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one the Act of the session of the twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter fifty-four, should be repealed, and that on and after the last-mentioned day the ecclesiastical law of Ireland, except in so far as relates to matrimonial causes and matters, should cease to exist as law; and by the said Act it was provided that nothing in any Act, law, or custom should prevent the bishops, the clergy, and laity of the said Church so disestablished as aforesaid, and herein-after in this Act referred to as "the said Church," by such representatives, lay and clerical, and to be elected as they the said bishops, clergy, and laity should appoint, from meeting in general synod or convention, and in such synod or convention framing constitutions and regulations for the general management and good government of the said Church, and property and affairs thereof, and the future representation of the members thereof in diocesan synods, general convention, or otherwise, and also that if at any time it should be shown to the satisfaction of Her Majesty that the bishops, clergy, and laity of the said Church, or the persons who for the time being might succeed to the exercise and discharge of the episcopal functions of such bishops, and the clergy and laity in communion with such persons, had appointed any persons or body to represent the said Church, and to hold property for any of the uses or purposes thereof, it should be lawful for Her Majesty by charter to incorporate such body, with power, notwithstanding the statutes of mortmain, to hold lands to such extent as was in the said Act provided, but not further or otherwise, and also that the Commissioners appointed by said Act might vest in the said representative body such churches as therein provided:

And whereas it is expedient to make provision in regard to suits which may be pending on the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and for the enforcing of decrees and orders made before the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, and for the due administration of the law in respect of matrimonial causes and matters, and to amend the law relating to marriages in Ireland:

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows:

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Matrimonial Causes and Marriage Law (Ireland) Amendment Act, 1870."

2. This Act shall commence and have effect on the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one.

3. This Act shall apply to Ireland only.

4. In this Act—

The term "bishop of the said Church" shall include any person who for the time being may succeed to the exercise and discharge of the episcopal functions of any person who at the passing of the said Irish Church Act was a bishop thereof:

The term "clergy and laity of the said Church" shall include clergy and laity in communion with bishops of the said Church:

The term "Protestant Episcopalian" shall mean a member of any of the churches following; (that is to say,)

The said Church, the Church of England, the Episcopal Church of Scotland, and any other Protestant Episcopal Church.

PART I.

Matrimonial Causes and Matters.

5. All suits and proceedings in causes and matters matrimonial which, upon the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, shall be pending in any ecclesiastical court in Ireland, shall be transferred to, dealt with, and decided by the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters herein-after mentioned, as if the same had been originally instituted in the said Court, subject to the following qualification:

If on the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one any cause or matter which would be transferred to the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters under the enactment herein-before contained shall have been heard before any judge having, at the time of such hearing, the same jurisdiction in relation to such cause or matter, and be then standing for judgment, such judge may, at any time within six weeks after the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, give in to one of the registrars attending the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters a written judgment thereon, signed by him; and a decree or order, as the case may require, shall be drawn up in pursuance of such judgment, and every such decree or order shall have the same force and effect as if it had been drawn up in pursuance of a judgment of the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters on the day on which the same was delivered to the registrar.

6. Any decree or order of any ecclesiastical court of competent jurisdiction made before the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one in any cause or matter matrimonial may be enforced or otherwise dealt with by the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters herein-after mentioned in the same way as if it been originally made by the said Court under this Act.

7. From and after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, all jurisdiction now vested in or exercisable by any ecclesiastical court or person in Ireland in respect of divorces a mensâ et thoro, suits of nullity of marriage, suits for restitution of conjugal rights or jactitation of marriage, and in all causes, suits, and matters matrimonial, except in respect of marriage licences, shall belong to and be vested in Her Majesty, and such jurisdiction shall be exercised in the name of Her Majesty in a court of record, to be called the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters.

8. The judge of the Court of Probate shall be the judge of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, and shall have full authority to hear and determine all matters arising therein.

9. In case the Lord Chancellor of Ireland, in pursuance of the provisions of "The Probates and Letters of Administration Act (Ireland), 1867," shall request a judge of one of the superior courts of law in Ireland to sit for the judge of the Court of Probate, and exercise his powers, then such judge may also sit as judge of the Court of Matrimonial Causes and Matters, and exercise all the powers of the judge of the said Court.

10. The Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters shall hold its sittings in the court from time to time appointed for the hearing of causes in the Court of Probate in Ireland.

11. The Lord Chancellor shall direct a seal to be made for the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, and may direct the same to be broken, altered, and renewed at his discretion; and all decrees and orders, or copies of decrees or orders of the said Court, purporting to be sealed with the said seal, shall be received in evidence without further proof thereof.

12. The registrars and other officers of the principal registry of the Court of Probate shall be also the registrars and officers of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, and shall attend the sittings of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, and assist in the proceedings thereof, and discharge in connexion therewith such duties as the judge of the said Court shall direct; and the principal registry of the Court of Probate shall also be the registry of the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters.

13. In all suits and proceedings the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters shall proceed and act and give relief on principles and rules which, in the opinion of the said Court, shall be as nearly as may be conformable to the principles and rules on which the ecclesiastical courts of Ireland have heretofore acted and given relief, but subject to the provisions herein contained, and to the rules and orders to be made by the said Court under this Act.

14. It shall be lawful for the judge of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters for the time being to sit in chamber for the despatch of such part of the business of the said Court as can in the opinion of the said judge with advantage to the suitors be heard in chamber, and such sittings shall from time to time be appointed by the said judge.

15. It shall be lawful for the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters to cause any question of fact arising in any suit or proceeding in said Court, on the application of either party to such suit or proceeding, to be tried by a special or common jury before the Court itself, or by means of an issue to be directed to any of the superior courts of common law in the same manner as an issue may now be directed by the Court of Chancery; and where the Court shall refuse to cause such question to be tried by a jury such refusal shall be subject to appeal as herein provided.

16. When the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters orders a question of fact to be tried before itself by a jury the Court may make all such rules and orders upon the sheriff or any other person for procuring the attendance of a special or common jury for the trial of such question as may now be made by any of the superior courts of common law at Dublin, and may also make any other orders which to such Court may seem requisite; and every such jury shall consist of persons possessing the like qualifications, and shall be struck, summoned, balloted for, and called in like manner, as if such jury were a jury for the trial of any cause in any of the said superior courts; and every jurymen so summoned shall be entitled to the same rights and subject to the same duties and liabilities as if he had been duly summoned for the trial of any such cause in any of the said superior courts; and every party to any such proceeding shall be entitled to the same rights as to challenge and otherwise as if he were a party to any such cause; and generally for all purposes of or auxiliary to the trial of questions of fact by a jury before the Court itself, and in respect of new trials thereof, and also for all purposes in relation to or consequential upon the direction of issues, the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters shall have the same jurisdiction, powers, and authority in all respects as belong to any superior court of common law or to any judge thereof, or to the High Court of Chancery or any judge thereof, for the like purposes.

17. When any such question is so ordered to be tried by a jury before the Court itself such question shall be reduced into writing in such form as the Court shall direct, and at the trial the jury shall be sworn to try the said question, and a true verdict to give thereon according to the evidence; and upon every such trial the Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters shall have the same powers, jurisdiction, and authority as belong to any judge of any of the said superior courts sitting at Nisi Prius.

18. The judge of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, with the approbation of the Lord Chancellor and Lord Justice of Appeal in Chancery, shall make, and, when made, may add to, rescind, amend, or alter, rules and regulations with respect to the following matters:

1. The procedure and practice in matrimonial causes and matters, which procedure and practice may be the same as nearly as may be as the procedure and practice of the Court of Probate:
2. The scale of costs and fees to be charged upon any proceedings in such matrimonial causes and matters, subject nevertheless to the sanction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury as to the amount of fees to be charged.

Any rules and regulations, and every addition, alteration, or amendment to, in, or of the same, made in pursuance of this section, shall be deemed to be within the powers conferred by this Act, and shall be of the same force as if enacted in this Act.

The judge of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters shall cause a copy of any rules relating to fees to be changed, and every addition, reduction, alteration, or amendment to, in, or of such rules to be published in the Dublin Gazette, and no other fees than those specified and allowed in such rules shall be demanded or taken.

19. No fee payable under this part of this Act shall be received in money, but the same shall be received by a stamp denoting the amount of the fee which otherwise would be payable.

20. All the provisions of sections one hundred and five, one hundred and six, and one hundred and seven of the Probates and Letters of Administration Act (Ireland), 1857, relating to stamps and fees, and to the punishment of fraudulent acts or practices relating thereto, shall be deemed to apply and shall apply to stamps and fees authorized to be taken by this part of this Act, or any rules made in pursuance thereof, and to the punishment of fraudulent acts or practices relating thereto, in like manner in every respect as if the said last-mentioned stamps and fees were authorized to be taken by the said Act.

21. All persons admitted to practise as advocates or proctors respectively in any ecclesiastical court in Ireland, and all barristers, attorneys, and solicitors entitled to practise in the superior courts at Dublin, shall be entitled to practise in the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters.

22. All letters patent (if any), records, deeds, processes, acts, proceedings, books, documents, or other instruments or papers relating to marriages or to any matters or causes matrimonial, shall, within two months after the said first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, be transmitted by the respective judges, registrars, or other officers of the several ecclesiastical courts in Ireland, or other the persons then having the custody or possession of the same, to the principal registry of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters.

23. Subject to such rules and regulations as may be established as herein provided, the witnesses in all proceedings before the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, where their attendance can be had, shall be sworn and examined orally in open court: Provided that parties, except as herein-before provided, shall be at liberty to verify their respective cases in whole or part by affidavit, but so that the deponent in every such affidavit shall, on the application of the opposite party or by direction of the Court, be subject to be cross-examined by or on behalf of the opposite party, orally in open court, and after such cross-examination may be re-examined orally in open court by or on behalf of the party by whom such affidavit was filed.

24. The said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters shall have the same powers to compel the attendance of witnesses and the production of documents, and for that purpose to issue writs of Subpœna and Subpœna duces tecum, and also the same powers to issue commissions for the examination of witnesses, and to give orders in respect of such examinations, and to enforce the same, as are now vested in and capable of being exercised by the Court of Probate.

25. All persons wilfully deposing or affirming falsely in any proceeding before the said Court shall be deemed to be guilty of perjury, and shall be liable to all the pains and penalties attached thereto.

26. Any person considering himself aggrieved by any final or interlocutory decree or order of the said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters may appeal therefrom to the Court of Appeal in Chancery, and thence to the House of Lords: Provided always, that no appeal from any interlocutory order of the said Court shall be made without leave of the said Court first obtained, but on the hearing of an appeal from any final decree all interlocutory orders complained of shall be considered as under appeal as well as the final decree.

27. The said Court for Matrimonial Causes and Matters, on the hearing of any suit, proceeding, or petition under this Act, and the Court of Appeal in Chancery and the House of Lords, on the hearing of any appeal under this Act, may make such order as to costs as to such Court, Court of Appeal, or House respectively may seem just: Provided always, that there shall be no appeal on the subject of costs only.

28. There shall be paid to the officers of the Court of Probate in Ireland, by way of remuneration for any additional duties by this Act imposed upon them, such annual sums by way of additional salaries respectively as the Lord Lieutenant may direct and the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury may approve, and all such sums shall be paid by the said Commissioners out of moneys to be provided by Parliament for that purpose.

29. The jurisdiction heretofore exercised by the Archbishop of Armagh, the master of the faculties, or other the commissary or commissaries of the said archbishop, in reference to the admission of public notaries, shall, from and after the first day of January one thousand eight hundred and seventy-one, be vested in and exercised by the Lord Chancellor of Ireland.

30. Whereas it was intended by the forty-fifth section of the Irish Church Act, 1869, to provide compensation for all loss of emoluments connected with ecclesiastical jurisdiction, whether arising from suits or from marriage licences or fees for admission of public notaries; and whereas doubts have arisen as to whether the officers of the Court of Faculties of the Archbishop of Armagh are included in the said section; be it therefore enacted, that "the Commissioners of Church Temporalities in Ireland" shall be at liberty, if it appear to them just, to make compensation to the officers of the said Court of Faculties out of the same funds and within the same limit as to amount as are by said Act provided in respect of officers of the diocesan courts.

31. All rules and regulations to be made under this part of this Act concerning procedure and practice, and fees to be charged in any proceedings under this part of this Act, and all alterations thereof to be from time to time made, shall be laid before both Houses of Parliament within one month after the making thereof, if Parliament be then sitting, or, if Parliament be not then sitting, within one month after the commencement of the then next session of Parliament.

PART II.

Amendment of Marriage Law.

32. Marriage between persons both of whom are Protestant Episcopalians may be solemnized in any of the churches or chapels following:

1. In any church or chapel in which at the time of the passing of this Act marriages may be solemnized according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland, and in which Divine Service, according to the rites of the said Church as herein-before defined, shall continue to be performed: or,
2. In any church or chapel which, after the passing of this Act, shall be licensed for the celebration of marriages in manner by this Act provided.

33. The provisions following shall apply to all marriages solemnized in any of the said churches or chapels:

1. The ceremony of marriage shall be preceded by—
 - (1.) Publication of banns in any church or chapel in which a marriage may be solemnized under the provisions of this Act, which publication shall be made in the manner and according to the rules at the time of the passing of this Act in force in Ireland in relation to the publication of banns in parish churches and chapels of the United Church of England and Ireland; or by

- (2.) Licence or special licence granted in manner by this Act provided; or by
- (3.) Certificate from the registrar to be granted by him in like manner and subject to the like conditions as such certificate may, at the time of the passing of this Act, be granted:

2. The several provisions contained in the Act passed in the session of the seventh and eighth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter eighty-one, and in the Act passed in the session of the twenty-sixth year of the said reign, chapter twenty-seven, and which at the time of the passing of this Act are applicable to persons in Holy Orders of the United Church of England and Ireland, and relate to the celebration of marriages by them, shall (except so far as the same are expressly altered or varied by this Act) apply to and be in force with respect to the celebration of marriages by any clergyman having authority to officiate, or who shall be permitted by such clergyman to officiate, in any aforesaid church or chapel in which marriage may be solemnized under the provisions of this Act, save only that such marriages may be celebrated at any time between the hours of eight o'clock in the forenoon and two o'clock in the afternoon.

34. Every bishop of the said Church may from time to time, by writing under his hand, subject to the approval of the Lord Lieutenant or other general governor or governors of Ireland, license any church or chapel for the celebration of marriages in any district within his episcopal superintendence to be named in such licence between persons one or both of whom shall reside within the limits of such district; and every such bishop shall, as soon as may be after the granting of each such licence, certify the granting thereof to the Registrar General of Marriages in Ireland, and shall send a copy of such licence to the said Registrar General, who shall keep the same with the other records of his office: Provided always, that a person who shall have dwelt for fourteen days prior to the ceremony within the limits of the district shall be deemed to reside therein.

35. Every bishop of the said Church may, by writing under his hand, nominate persons to issue licences for marriages, and, by the same or other writings, define in and for what districts within the episcopal superintendence of such bishop such persons are respectively to issue the same, and in and for the district at the time of the passing of this Act known as the exempt jurisdiction of Newry and Morne the person at the time of the passing of this Act holding the office of vicar-general of the said exempt jurisdiction shall have power to issue licences for marriage, and shall continue so to do until the said district is included within the episcopal superintendence of some bishop of the said church; and every such licence shall be held to authorize marriage in any churches and chapels situate within such districts respectively in which marriages may be solemnized under the provisions of this Act, and which shall be specified in such licences, whenever both of the parties shall be Protestant Episcopalians, and resident within such districts; and such licences shall be in the form No. I. in the schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect; and for every such licence such person shall be entitled to have for his own benefit, of the party requiring the same, such fee not exceeding the sum of five shillings as may from time to time be appointed in that behalf by any general synod or convention of the bishops, clergy, and laity of the said Church; and in any case in which such person shall refuse to grant such licence, the person applying for the same shall be entitled to appeal to the bishop by whom such person shall have been so appointed, or his successor, who shall thereupon either confirm the refusal or direct the grant of the licence; and every person so appointed shall four times in every year, on such days as shall be appointed by the registrar general, make a return to the registrar general of every licence granted by him since his last return, and of the particulars stated concerning the parties: Provided always, that no such person shall grant any such licence until he shall have given security by his bond in the sum of one hundred pounds to the registrar general for the due and faithful execution of his office.

A licence for marriage shall not be granted by any such person until seven days after notice shall have been given by one of the parties who shall have dwelt for not less than seven days then next preceding in the district named in that notice, under his or her hand, in the form No. II. in the schedule (A.) to this Act annexed, or to the like effect, to such person, and such person shall forthwith send a copy of such notice to the clergyman officiating at the places of worship where the parties intending marriage have been in the habit of attending.

Every person so appointed shall file and keep with the records of his office every such notice, and shall also forthwith enter a true copy of such notice fairly in a book to be for that purpose furnished to him by the Registrar General, to be called "The Marriage Notice Book," which book shall be open at all reasonable times, without fee, to all persons desirous of inspecting the same, and for entering every such notice the person so appointed shall be entitled to have such fee, not exceeding one shilling, as may be from time to time appointed in that behalf by any such general synod or convention as aforesaid over and above the accustomed fee for granting the licence.

Whenever a marriage shall not be had within three calendar months after the notice shall have been so given to the person so appointed as aforesaid, the notice, and any licence which may have been granted thereupon, shall be utterly void.

Before any licence for marriage shall be granted by any such person one of the parties intending marriage shall appear personally before him, and shall make and subscribe an oath or make affirmation, which oath or affirmation such person is hereby authorized to administer, that he or she believeth that there is not any impediment of kindred or alliance or other lawful hindrance to the said marriage, and that one of the said parties hath for the space of fourteen days immediately before the day of the grant of such licence had his or her usual place of abode within the district attached in manner herein provided, for the purpose of celebration of marriages, to the church or chapel in which such marriage is to be solemnized, and that they are both of the full age of twenty-one years, or when either of the parties shall be under the age of twenty-one years, that the consent of the person or persons whose consent to such marriage is required by law has been obtained thereto, or that there is no person having authority to give such consent, or that such person is a widower or widow, as the case may be.

36. When both the parties about to contract marriage are Protestant Episcopalians, any bishop of the said Church may grant special licences to marry at any convenient time in any place within his episcopal superintendence.

37. Special licences to marry at any convenient time at any place in Ireland may be granted to parties about to contract marriage by any of the persons following; (that is to say,)

The moderator of the General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in Ireland:

The moderator of the Remonstrant Synod of Ulster:

The moderator of the Presbytery of Antrim:

The moderator of the Northern Presbytery of Antrim:

The moderator of the Synod of Munster:

The moderator of the Eastern Reformed Presbyterian Synod:

The moderator of the United Presbyterian Presbytery of Ireland:

The moderator of the Secession Church in Ireland:

The moderator of the Reformed Presbyterian Synod of Ireland:

The chairman of the Congregational Union of Ireland:

The president or head of the Methodist or Wesleyan Church:

The president or head of the Methodist New Connexion Church:

The president or head of the Association of the Baptist Churches in Ireland:

The clerk to the yearly meeting of the Society of Friends in Ireland:

Provided always, that the parties to whom any such special licence is granted are both members of the same church as the moderator, chairman, president, head, or clerk granting such special licence.

38. A marriage may, notwithstanding anything to the contrary herein-before in this Act contained, be lawfully solemnized by a Protestant Episcopalian clergyman between a person who is a Protestant Episcopalian and a person who is not a Protestant Episcopalian, and by a Roman Catholic clergyman between a person who is a Roman Catholic and a person who is not a Roman Catholic, provided the following conditions are complied with:

1st. That such notice is given to the registrar and such certificate is issued as at the time of the passing of this Act is required by the Act passed in the session of the seventh and eighth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter eighty-one, as amended by the Act passed in the session of the twenty-sixth year of the said reign, chapter twenty-seven, in every case of marriage intended to be solemnized in Ireland according to the rites of the United Church of England and Ireland, with the exception of marriages by licence or special licence, or after publication of banns:

2d. That the certificate of the registrar is delivered to the clergyman solemnizing such marriage at the time of the solemnization of the marriage:

3d. That such marriage is solemnized in a building set apart for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the religion of the clergyman solemnizing such marriage, and situate in the district of the registrar by whom the certificate is issued:

4th. With open doors:

5th. That such marriage is solemnized between the hours of eight in the forenoon and two in the afternoon in the presence of two or more credible witnesses.

39. There shall be repealed so much of an Act of the Parliament of Ireland passed in the nineteenth year of the reign of King George the Second, chapter thirteen, as provides that a marriage between a Papist and any person who hath been or hath professed himself or herself to be a Protestant at any time within twelve months before such celebration of marriage, if celebrated by a Popish priest, is to be void; but any marriage solemnized by a Protestant Episcopalian clergyman between a person who is a Protestant Episcopalian and a person who is not a Protestant Episcopalian, or by a Roman Catholic clergyman between a person who is a Roman Catholic and a person who is not a Roman Catholic, shall be void to all intents in cases where the parties to such marriage knowingly and wilfully intermarried without due notice to the registrar, or without certificate of notice duly issued, or without the presence of two or more credible witnesses, or in a building not set apart for the celebration of divine service according to the rites and ceremonies of the religion of the clergyman solemnizing such marriage.

40. No Protestant Episcopalian clergyman and no Roman Catholic clergyman shall be subject to any punishment, pain, or penalty whatever for solemnizing a marriage in pursuance of and in accordance with the provisions of this Act.

41. Section three of the Act of the session of the twenty-sixth and twenty-seventh years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter twenty-seven, shall be amended in manner following; (that is to say,)

Where the marriage is intended to be contracted in the office of the registrar, and where there is not any minister of the church, chapel, or place of public worship which the parties to the marriage, or either of them, usually attend, and where the parties to the marriage are not Jews or members of the Society of Friends, the registrar shall proceed as follows: he shall cause a copy of the notice given to him to be published, at the expense of the parties intending marriage, once at least in two consecutive weeks next after he has received such notice in some newspaper circulating in the district in which such marriage is intended, or if there is not any newspaper circulating in such district, then in some newspaper circulating in the county in which such district is situate; any registrar neglecting or refusing to publish such notice in manner aforesaid shall be liable to a penalty of forty pounds, recoverable in like manner as penalties under the said Act.

42. Except where the provisions of the Acts passed in the session of the seventh and eighth years of the reign of Her Majesty, chapter eighty-one, and in the session of the twenty-sixth year of the same reign, chapter twenty-seven, are expressly altered by or are at variance with this Act, nothing herein contained shall alter, repeal, or affect the provisions of the said Acts respectively; and this Act shall, except as aforesaid, be considered as incorporated with the said Acts, and be construed together with the same.

ABSTRACT OF THE ENACTMENTS.

1. Rating qualification and closing hours of beerhouses within townships where separate poor rate is or can be made.
2. Restricted application of Act.
3. Short title.

An Act to make provision in relation to certain Beerhouses not duly qualified according to Law.

(10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS in misapprehension of the provisions of an Act passed in the third and fourth years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter sixtyone, licences and certificates for the sale of beer and cider have been granted in respect of houses not duly qualified as by the first section of the said Act is required:

Be it enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, as follows :

1. A dwelling-house, if situated within a township for which a separate poor rate is or can be made, or within a hamlet for which a separate poor rate is or can be made, shall, for the purpose of determining by reference to population, in accordance with the first and fifteenth sections respectively of the said Act, the rating qualification and the closing hour applicable to such house as a house for the sale of beer or cider, be deemed to be within such township or hamlet, as the case may be, and not within any larger area of which such township or hamlet forms a part.

2. This Act shall apply exclusively to houses in respect of which licences under Acts to permit the general sale of beer and cider by retail in England are in force at the time of the passing of this Act, and to such houses so long only as such licences or any renewal thereof shall remain in force.

3. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Beerhouse Act, 1870."

Schedule.

An Act to amend the Act of the first and second years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, chapter thirty-three, in part, and to afford facilities for obtaining Loans for the erection, enlargement, and improvement of Glebe Houses, and for the acquirement of lands for Glebes, in Ireland. (10th August 1870.)

WHEREAS by an Act passed in the session of Parliament held in the first and second years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act for the extension and "promotion of public works in Ireland," it was amongst other things enacted, that it should and might be lawful for the Commissioners of Public Works acting in the execution of the said Act to make loans or advances for works on security, by writing obligatory alone, upon the terms and conditions in the said Act mentioned :

And whereas it is expedient to afford facilities for obtaining loans for the erection, enlargement, and improvement of glebe houses, and for the acquirement of lands for glebes, in Ireland :

And whereas for the purposes aforesaid it is expedient to amend the said recited Act, and to authorise the said Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland to make loans to the amount, upon the security, and in the manner by this Act authorised :

Be it therefore enacted by the Queen's most Excellent Majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the Lords Spiritual and Temporal, and Commons, in this present Parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same :

1. This Act may be cited for all purposes as "The Glebe Loan (Ireland) Act, 1870."

2. In this Act—

The term "ecclesiastical person" means and includes any archbishop, bishop, clergyman, priest, curate, or minister of any religious denomination whatsoever :

The term "work" means the erection, enlargement, or structural improvement of any dwelling-house for any ecclesiastical person having spiritual charge, as regards members of his own denomination, of any parish or district in which such work is executed, or permanently officiating in any church or chapel within such parish or district:

The term "glebe" means any piece or parcel of land, not exceeding in the whole ten acres, occupied or to be occupied by any ecclesiastical person while having spiritual charge of any parish or district in respect of which such glebe shall be purchased or acquired.

3. It shall be lawful for the Commissioners of Public Works in Ireland, during the continuance of this Act, with the sanction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, out of moneys issued to them or to be issued to them in pursuance of the provisions of the several Acts in the schedule to this Act annexed mentioned, to make loans to any person or persons of such sums as the said Commissioners of Public Works may think right and proper, upon the security and subject to the conditions by this Act authorised, for all or any of the purposes following; (that is to say,)

1. The execution of any work.

2. The purchase of any glebe.

3. The discharge of any debt due and incurred before the passing of this Act in the purchase of any dwelling-house for any ecclesiastical person having spiritual charge, as regards members of his own denomination, of the parish or district in which such dwelling-house is situate, or permanently officiating in any church or chapel within such parish or district, or in the purchase of any glebe.

4. The person or persons to whom such loans shall be granted for the execution of any work shall previously expend, secure, or deposit, in such manner as the said Commissioners of Public Works shall direct, a sum equal to not less than one third of the estimated cost of the construction of the proposed work; and no person or persons shall, for the purpose of purchasing any glebe or discharging any debt incurred before the passing of this Act in the purchase of any glebe, be granted by way of loan a sum greater than two thirds of the purchase money to be paid or already paid for such glebe.

5. The repayment of every loan which shall be made under the provisions of this Act for the purpose of executing any work, or discharging any debt incurred before the passing of this Act in the purchase of any dwelling-house for any ecclesiastical person as aforesaid, shall be secured by mortgage, bond, or otherwise, as the said Commissioners of Public Works, with the approval of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, may think right; and every such security other than a mortgage shall be entered into by at least three persons, the sufficiency and solvency of which persons shall be made out to the satisfaction of the said Commissioners of Public Works, and shall be subject to such conditions as the said Commissioners of Public Works, with such approval as aforesaid, shall deem to be proper.

6. Every loan which shall be made under the provisions of this Act for the purchase of any glebe or the discharge of any debt incurred before the passing of this Act in the purchase of any glebe shall be repaid by the payment of an annual rentcharge of the amount and for the time hereinafter mentioned, and every such glebe shall be deemed to be and shall be well charged with the payment of such rentcharge, and that in priority of all charges and incumbrances whatsoever, save and except quitrents and rentcharges in lieu of tithes, and also save and except all charges prior in date, if any, existing under or by virtue of any of the Acts mentioned in the schedule to this Act annexed; and all the provisions of the Act passed in the tenth and eleventh years of the reign of Her present Majesty, chapter thirty-two, as to the recovery of rentcharges payable thereunder, shall extend and apply to the recovery of rentcharges charged under the provisions of this Act upon glebes.

7. Every loan which shall be made under the provisions of this Act shall be repaid by the payment to Her Majesty of an annual sum of five pounds for every one hundred pounds of such loan from time to time advanced, and so on in proportion for any lesser amount, and to be payable for the term of thirty-five years, to be computed from the date of the advance in respect of which the said annual sum shall be charged, such annual sum to be paid by equal half-yearly payments on the fifth day of April and tenth day of October in every year during the said term of thirty-five years, with such apportionment, if any, as may be necessary in respect of the first and last of such payments: Provided always, that the amount of such annual sum may, by agreement, and with the sanction of the Commissioners of Her Majesty's Treasury, be increased to such amount as will repay the sum so advanced sooner than the said period of thirty-five years hereinbefore appointed.

8. No mortgage, bond, obligation, security, contract, agreement, or other instrument whatsoever executed under the provisions of this Act, nor any memorial thereof for registration, shall be liable to any stamp duty whatever.

9. From and after the passing of this Act sections thirty-seven and thirty-eight of the Act of the first and second years of the reign of His late Majesty King William the Fourth, chapter thirty-three, shall be and the same are hereby repealed.

10. The provisions of this Act, except the next preceding section, shall continue in operation until the first day of September one thousand eight hundred and seventy-five, and no longer.
